BENJAMIN DULFORD: DISINFORMATION SPECIALIST
Canadian-born Benjamin Fulford, formerly of Forbes, lives in Japan and has developed quite a presence on the Internet over the past few years; in 2007, he surprised many when he secured an exclusive interview with David Rockefeller, which can be viewed in four parts on YouTube. Of late, he has also published videos and information about Leo Zagami, who claims to be a representative of the Vatican, as well as a member of the Knights Templar, and the Italian Illuminati

Mr. Fulford, an established connoisseur of disseminating libel, was recently ordered to pay Stephen L. Herman – Voice of America's South Asia bureau chief – damages after he admitted to willfully publishing false claims about Herman; the purported civil libel action, in Japanese, is attributed to the jurisdiction of the Tokyo District Court, and can be viewed online. Beginning on page 25 of the aforementioned document, a passage in English reads as follows:

'I, Benjamin Fulford, am author of a book entitled 'The Real Identity of Uncovered 'Rulers of the Dark' (the 'Book'), and our company Fusosha Publishing Inc., is a publishing company of the Book and I, Matsuki Katagiri, am the publisher of the Book. On Page 91 of the Book, it was stated that 'There are CIA spies among foreign correspondents' and 'one of such spies is Steven Herman, a foreign correspondent for the Voice of America'. However, these statements contradict the facts. We hereby express our heartfelt apology to Mr. Steven Herman for the fact that with these statements we have hurt Mr. Steven Herman's reputation'.

Over the past few hours and days, Fulford has willfully propagated a hodgepodge of truly viscious lies about Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, in addition to other members of the British Royal Family. In the past 24 hours, he has published ridiculously bizarre claims, such as:

• Japanese Prime Minister Yukio Hatoyama is her "slave" – meaning that he is functionally operating under the control of the British Monarchy.

• Her Majesty "has offered to turn over Japanese sovereignty to the Chinese by 2011".

• "Queen Elizabeth's father, King George VI, was also Adolph Hitler's half-brother (not father as initially reported) according to Emily Elizabeth Catherine Josephine Mary Windsor-Cragg, [illegitimate] daughter of Edward VIII Duke of Windsor".

• James Hewitt – who himself previously denied these allegations – is Prince Harry's father. Hewitt has been quoted by the BBC as saying, "I can absolutely assure you that I am not".

Intending to cause undue – and demonically sadistic – distress to Britain's Head of State, Fulford has also recently published far worse claims, including that Queen Elizabeth II "made a secret pact with Hitler and the Nazis" and that she was "also in on the 911 attacks".

These unbelievable claims are, at the very least, preposterous, as Her Majesty's own reign did not even begin until 1952 – many years after World War II ended – and furthermore, she would have only been a teenager during the period referenced, which also substantiates that she would have no place in making international political agreements with evil individuals.

Fulford has a directly measured audience of over 100,000 people worldwide every month, and his postings are found on alternative, New Age, anti-Christian news websites like Fourwinds10.com, which reaches nearly 130,000 people around the globe each month, and Rumormillnews.com, which reaches at least 85,000 in the United States.

The operator of Fourwinds10.com, said to be Patrick H. Bellringer – likely a pen name only – has previously been reported to have made a death threat against Queen Elizabeth II.

He also publishes a barrage of rubbish, including anti-Christian nonsense, claiming that he is in contact with spirits like "Aton" and "Hatonn" that know the real story behind our existence.

Over at Rumormillnews.com, site publisher Rayelan Allen has allowed "News Agents" to publish that England is secretly controlling US Social Security funds, and Allen has even written a book about Diana, Princess of Wales, in which she states that the deceased Princess was murdered for the purposes of creating a new world religion. She also claims to be affiliated with the Knights Templar – among countless other assertions.

These malicious websites form a network of propaganda against the British Monarchy and its public; they are causing web surfers to believe outright lies and distortions about many prominent individuals – not just in the United Kingdom, but worldwide.

As the global economy continues to suffer, anger is building, and the disinformation that these people are generating will only add fuel to the fire; out of respect to God, and for the sake of the whole of humanity, these operations must be terminated immediately, and their owners must be held to account for every single piece of libellous claptrap they have generated.

"Now as Jannes and Jambres [two Old Testament know-alls: Ed.] resisted Moses, so these also resist the truth, men corrupted in mind, reprobate concerning the faith. But they shall proceed no farther: for their folly shall be manifest to all men, as theirs also was". – 2 Timothy 3:8-9.

PARTIAL LIST OF CIA AND DVD CONTROLLED DISINFORMATION AGITPROP WEBSITES:
Some of these are redundant and/or no longer effective. The list was originally published by the Irish website www.breakfornews.com run by Mr Fintan Dunne. A related list was published in the Editor's study The New Underworld Order, published by Edward Harle Limited, London and New York [2007], available from THIS website [see Edward Harle Limited segment]. A few more sites have been added. If these sites now all turn on the Editor of this service in unison or piecemeal, the accuracy of this assessment will of course immediately be reconfirmed.

They'll probably do it: generally speaking, they are THAT stupid!

*Operated by: (1) Commander J. Forrest Sharpe, of Light in the Darkness Publications, Vienna, VA. Our US military and 'special' sources state that: 'Sharpe is active duty submarine service fleet', i.e. Office of Naval intelligence (ONI); (2) D. L. O'Huallachain, who covers for the Vatican. These reports typically begin with the ignorant fantasy: 'Rumors circulating in the Kremlin today'. As we have pointed out, the Kremlin doesn't 'DO' rumours. Another Story Story...

Below is a snip from Christopher Story's October 30 Report:

"GERMAN ARRESTS MASK MAJOR BUSH SYNDICATE BUST"

http://www.worldreports.org/news/240_germa..._syndicate_bust

I'll comment after the snip.

(snip)

Finally, given the fact that the Sorcha Faal operation continues to disseminate reports beginning with 'Rumours circulating in the Kremlin today', it would appear either that some people can't read, or that they specifically CHOOSE to be deceived:

'If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch'.

In this case, the blind are not being led by people without the gift of sight: they are being led by an Office of Naval Intelligence operative based in Vienna, VA, and his Irish associate.

We have exposed Sorcha Faal several times but it has made no difference – given that one of the signals indicating that one is dealing with an operative, which will be exposed in our forthcoming report on the methodology of US operatives, is that THEY DO NOT RESPOND NORMALLY, and pay little or no attention to external indicators, as they are working to a secret agenda that is not revealed to the intended target audience.

So, we repeat the exposure of the Sorcha Faal deception that was again featured with the report dated 27th October 2009, just in case a few more prospective victims of this operation would care to avoid being deceived any further.

• The fact that some content of this ONI deception may occasionally appear to be plausible DOES NOT NEUTRALISE THE FACT THAT IT IS A CYNICAL U.S. AGITPROP OPERATION:

Perpetrated by: (1) Commander J. Forrest Sharpe, of Light in the Darkness Publications, Vienna, VA. Our US military and 'special' sources state that:

'Sharpe is active duty submarine service fleet', i.e. Office of Naval intelligence (ONI); (2) D. L. O'Huallachain, who covers for the Vatican.

These reports typically begin with the ignorant fantasy: 'Rumors circulating in the Kremlin today'.

As we have pointed out, the Kremlin doesn't 'DO' rumours.

Despite our exposures of this deception operation in the past, they have continued behaving as though they had never been exposed.

THE NEUTRALISATION OF OUR ASSOCIATE'S COMPUTER AFTER VIEWING RUMORMILLS.COM

In response to our earlier mention of this matter, and in the light of some 'explanations' from that website, it is hereby confirmed that the associate was viewing the article by Representative Ron Paul, that was posted on the site, on why the Federal Reserve should be audited.

Our associate has confirmed that he was half way through reading the article when the entire computer was wiped and he was left with a plain white screen.

He also reports serious problems arising from unwanted popups associated with the same website.

• It was not a problem with rumormills.com, as was suggested, but rather with rumormillnews.com.

AN AGENT FOR THE WEBSITE 'EXPLAINS'. UNFORTUNATELY, HER ARGUMENTS ARE FALSE

Secondly, we have received an email from one of the agents on this website, who has been in touch with us before.

This lady states, very politely, that: 'I can vouch for the fact that RMN is NOT an Alphabet Agency Psy-Ops Government controlled operation'.

Our response was and is this:

• Whether the website is or is not directly or knowingly so controlled is NOT the issue.

On the contrary, if it is serving the purposes for which the controlled websites exist, then it is neither here nor there whether it is controlled, knows it is controlled, or isn't controlled or doesn't know it is controlled, or all of the above.

This is because, far from enhancing the sum of understanding, this website 'creates the cacophonous sound... as decidedly different opinions appear daily'.

• In other words, this source (and we have withheld the lady's name and pseudonym: but if the Editor is challenged, WE WILL REVEAL THEM, obviously) OPENLY ADMITS HERE that this US website's product is a 'cacophonous sound'.

FACT: Cacophony, from the Greek, means 'BAD' or 'EVIL' 'NOISE'.

• So the website is HAPPY to be the wanton purveyor of EVIL NOISE?

• In what way could EVIL NOISE contribute to EVER GREATER UNDERSTANDING OF COMPLEX ISSUES, especially in an environment that is characterised by CONTROLLED LIES, DIVERSIONARY PLOYS, NEW AGE CLAPTRAP, DELIBERATE AGITATION AND PROPAGANDA, and other familiar abominations with which American minds are being poisoned?

On the contrary, this model presupposes that the outcome WILL INDEED BE cacophany and open-ended confusion.

WHO is the author of CONFUSION AND LIES?

You should know the answer to that question, by now.

Moreover, as the Editor of this service pointed out to this agent-lady in reply, the situation is actually MUCH WORSE than we've already described.

(end snip)

(Comment)

Let me see if I have this right. Story is the only one capable of understanding complex issues, and RMN is "an evil noise".

If the Editor is challenged, he will bring the wrath of God down on everyone involved??

What? Now Story has a patent on Free Speech too? I think not.

Methinks he complains w-a-a-a-a-y too much, and the underlying cause of the veracity of the complaint is a mystery to me, because the last time I checked, Christopher Story and RMN were batting on the same team.

I suspect an underlying nerve has been touched, of which "the Editor" is not comfortable.

Truth comes in many different forms. Facts come from one action taken - with descriptions of the action taken provided in different ways by different people.

Everyone sees truth differently, but no one except the participant in the action has a monopoly on facts.

For one journalist to prescribe to another what the other must believe - is ludicrous.

(The Obama white house tried that, along with many other Marxist communists - but neither of those groups will take home any gold stars for intelligence.)

While Christopher Story lets his journalistic arrogance get the best of him, I can only say "Chris, you don't want to go there."

Think about it. You need all the support, and credibility you can muster. Dumping on the posters and agents of RMN is not a wise choice.

You have your sources, and RMN agents have theirs. If you want freedom, you must be willing to let others be free.

Unfortunately for all of us, the more false premises 'cooked up' - the less credibility there is for the one doing the cooking.

You might ask the folks at 'Casper' about the results of going down that road.

My own conclusion (not the conclusion of RMN) but my own - is this:

I contend there was no such issue with anyone's computer being "compromised" after reading the post on "Ron Paul's Auditing the Fed" on RMN.

If that were the case, HUNDREDS reading the SAME POSTING would have seen their computers "wiped", as Story claims.

How many other readers have experienced this problem - or reported it to the RMN staff? None? One?

If the day in question was October 26, 27, or 28, 2009 - just how many articles were available on the first page the RMN Reading Room pertaining to that subject?

I contend Story is trying to 'divide and conquer' the posters, readers, and agents at RMN, and negate the credibility of RMN - using Fulford et al as an excuse to do so.

IMO, this is not a wise move on Story's part. I personally have followed Story for years, and still maintain a lot of respect for what he has accomplished.

That being said, I am also extremely disappointed with the approach he is taking toward those who disagree with him in this instance - even toward those who are pulling for him.

Story implies to his readers, that because Fulford, 'Sorcha Faal', Heneghan, or other seemingly propaganda laden posts appear on RMN, that RMN endorses the content of each post as completely factual.

RMN readers and posters are definitely not Kool-aid drinkers. They are capable of discernment.

By the same token, RMN is NOT 'the world according to Story's agenda".

RMN is much more than dissonance. RMN is not the agenda of one man.

It would, however, be in Story's own best interest to retain RMN as an ally.

As I said previously, Story makes it very clear that he has a solid understanding of the methods used for controlling thought.

"In order to create a convincing debate pertaining to an issue, it is important to have a good understanding of the issue, before organizing the debate".

Story's reasons for slamming RMN are NOT because of the lame analysis of "cacophonous sound" he speaks of, but for different reasons we are not privy to.

Whatever his reasoning, one thing is clear - if you sneak up behind a lion and bite down on its' tail, you better be prepared to defend yourself.

Have you ever witnessed a situation where a person is caught in a fabrication, convicted in front of their peers, or in public, and the crowd looks at them as if to say;

"It's your move. So, now what do you have to say?"

Did you witness, at that moment, the fabricator begin to talk a-mile-a minute - thinking and speaking as quickly as they possibly can, to facilitate those within earshot into "buying their version" of the prevarication the fabricator invented - all the while, the contrivers eyes are darting from side to side?

"They made my friends computer crash! And - and - and besides that - they have pop-ups! Yeah, pop-ups!"

I'll let the reader be the judge as to which stage of development that demeanor germinates from.

Remember when Poof said: "Oh yeah, don't get all woozy woozy because some English gent speaks all flowery and sounds very truthful..."

Edward Harle Limited publishes 'politically incorrect' books on intelligence, international affairs, corruption of governance, the World Revolution, True Christianity and the key global issues that are rocking our civilisation. 'Political incorrectness' is a Soviet revolutionary control mechanism, elaborated by mind-control operatives from the Leninist literature, including The Fundamentals of Marxism-Leninism. Accordingly, our intelligence books disregard fashionable, numbing PC-ness; rather, they seek answers to the most important questions of our era. These books are all 'fresh' classics - in the sense that they are intended to review the problems of the world in depth, and to enjoy an extended shelf-life - and will remain in print indefinitely. The company's name reflects the two middle names of the Editor and Publisher, Mr Christopher Edward Harle Story FRSA, who is a former occasional adviser to Lady Thatcher. Edward Harle Limited is operated independently of all outside interests in order to realise the full potential of intelligence analysis and objectivity in an era of managed news, disinformation, revolutionary offensives and Leninist 'One World' ideology.

At this site, someone has quoted a lot of Heneghan's latest dubious work on Christopher Story, Tim White and Alex Jones.
http://whatsgoingon-rosaleen.blogspot.com/...-mi6-agent.html
I have dealt with those Heneghan assertions about Story in the Heneghan thread recently. I do however wish to make note of something a user posted comment contained. No real proof, just another person who has come to similar conclusions about Story that others apparently have reached.

Christopher Story's statement that NESARA is apparently removed from the equation, is clearly redundant and finished is exactly what the Bush/Clinton Cabal want you to believe. They have fought NESARA from its inception , and created the 9/11 terrorist attack on the U.S. to stop its implementation. This leads one to question Story's motives Is he speaking as an ignorant or inadequate journalist or is he pushing this "line of propaganda" to assist the Bush/Clinton Cabal?

Based upon knowing Mr. Story a few years, and in person, I can state unequivocally that his sources are utterly reliable.

Re the Wanta scam, no question Mr. story was purposely subject to a black ops wherein his reputation & credibility were utilized by the Bush DVD mafia who ultimately made a "deal" with Wanta. Thusly, supporting Wanta coupled with Mr. Story's "Paulson is dead" proviso were so off the mark that, no doubt, it has residually robbed Mr. Story of credibility. regardless, he has since corrected said analysis and in back on track.

As for NESARA, it's not that Mr. Story denies same does not exist, but just that it was a scam from day one, with "Casper & Co." feeding the news beast so the NESARA recipients don't pick up their guns in rebellion as opposed to wishing and hoping that "casper & Co." are truthful when, in reality, they are 100% disinformation agents.

Also, not that Heneghan has NEVER commented upon Mr. Stor's in-hand documented evidence of Heneghan's involvement with Wanta as a front beard, a bagman ...

Thanks for your comment. I was not intending to call into question either Christopher Story's integrity as an intelligence gathering journalist or the importance and value of his revelations.
While he presents himself online as a freelance journalist who once worked for the Thatcher government, he has tremendous credibility and comes across as exceptionally courageous in taking the risk of naming names. What I am drawing attention to though, is the fact that as an agent for MI6, he is no longer free to tell the full truth but must necessarily taylor his truths to fit his client's interests.
I was actually thinking about the Madeleine McCann case went I decided to post this story. I find it difficult to understand how Clarence Mitchell and Cristopher Story, both of whom are MI6 agents, have totally different opinions as to who is responsible for the child's kidnap. I also wonder why they don't get together and share information instead of Clarence Mitchell conning a salary out of the McCanns for doing sweet damn all to find the child.

"No, I am not MI6 or MI anything. But I AM a loyal subject of Her Majesty, and proud of it. Her Majesty, who has served our country and the world impeccably throughout her very long reign, is the one remaining upholder of the Rule of Law left. - Christopher Story"

So not only does Story need to read Greg Hallet's work, but he also needs to check this book out.

In this book, Knuth reveals that a huge body of work on the Laws of England show how the sovereign or the monarch is not bound by the laws that Parliament drafts and passes. Let's take a sample from Knuth's book. On page 27, he says the following:

> QUOTE
> Referring to "Great Britain, Banking In" in the Encyclopedia Americana, it appears that the Bank of England is not subject to any control by any governmental agency of Britain, and that it is above al government, despite the fact that it is privately owned and its directors are nominated by its proprietors. In the Enyclopedia Britannica of 1891 it is termed "a great Engine of Government." It is obvious that this privately owned foreign institution is now in grave financial difficulties with its loans and bonds and mortgages disavowed all over the world, and that is is being bolstered by huge funds being syphoned into it out of the treasury of the United States. (See footnote)

And here is the footnote.

The 1943 edition of the Encyclopedia Americana (Vol. 13) makes this stunningly significant statement of the Bank of England, that full partner of the American Administration in the conduct of the financial affairs of all the world: "...Its weakness is the weakness inherent in a system which has developed with the smallest amount of legislative control... its capital is held privately, and its management is not in any way directly or indirectly controlled by the state. On the other hand, during its whole history, it has been more or less under the protection of the state; its development has been marked by successive loans of its capital to the state in return for the confirmation or extension of its privileges, and it still continues to exercise powers and owe responsibilities delegated by the state...The bank of England is controlled by a governor, deputy-governor and a court of 24 directors who are elected by the proprietors on the nomination of the directors..." (This is a description of a privately owned structure of government, sovereign in its own right, and over and above the laws of England. A status admittedly attained by bribing dishonest officials of the Government of the British Isles through the years to gradually extinguish the freedom and rights of the people.)

That the nature of this strange bank is actually that of a secret holding company of colossal size is indicated by a reference in "England's Money Lords Tory M.P." by Simon Haxey, to (page 158) Lancastshire Steel Corporation, subsidiary of the Bank of England.

The sovereign is so protected that the Parliament can't even vote to indict them on anything or charge them with treason for example. Knuth quotes The Lord of Halsbury's multi volume work LAWS OF ENGLAND.

Vol 6 page 388:
Nor can the Crown by proclamation or otherwise, make or unmake any law on its own authority apart from Parliament, except in colonies to which representative instututions have not been granted. (This excepts only England, Canada, Australia, Union of South Africa and New Zealand, who between them have only 13% - almost the total white population of 68,000,000 of the Empire - of the people of the British Empire from the utterly absolute and autocratic rule of the Crown, THE Bank and THE City).

Vol 23, page 307 par. 642:
An executive or administrative act of a subject, though in the first instance done without the authority of his Sovereign, will have all the effect of an Act of State if subsequently ratified. (This provides the facilities to make the law afterwards to fit the case, as developed by Prof. Edwin J. Clapp in "Economic Aspects of the War" published 1915 as having been the procedure in the matter of the American ship Wilhelmina)

Vol 23, page 307 par. 643:
The Sovereign can do no wrong, and no legal proceedings can be brought against him...

Vol 23, page 307 par. 650:
The official acts of every state or potentate whose independence has been recognized by the Crown, and of their authorized agents, are Acts of State. No action can be brought in respect of such acts, even where the agent is a British subject, and where in carrying out the Act of the State, he is committing an offense against British Law...

> This gives a fair outline of the adroit and dexterious machinery of government which is able to adjust itself to any situation and clothe it with a veil of justice and right, and which provides the tool to make the 435,000,000 colored people of the British Empire its utterly voiceless subjects.

And another one,
Vol 6, page 388 article 582:
The Crown is therefore a necessary party to legislation, and neither the House of Parliament, whether acting alone or in conjunction with the other House, has a pwoer of legislation without the Crown...The Sovereign is regarded in law as being incapable of thinking wrong, or meaning to do an improper act. Apart from the legislative authority, which is vested in Parliament subject to certain concurrent rights of the Crown, the law of the constitution clothes the person of the Sovereign with supreme Sovereignty and pre-eminence.

> It is claer from the above that the representatives of the people in the House of Commons, and the House of Lords, are utterly lacking in any legislative initiative and that their function in such matters subject to certain concurrent rights of the Crown is largely one of silent submission, and this is in accord with the conclusions of Prof. George Burton Adams. It clearly appears that while the Sovereign and the mystical Crown are not one, the virtues and authorities ostensibly vested in the person of the Sovereign pertain with full weight as to the Crown; and an act of the Crown is not subject to question in Parliament as the "King Can Do No Wrong." This provides the ideal machinery of government for the absolute rule of the Crown, and the world dictatorship of International Finanace of The City; and the nature of this strange structure of government is further evident in this passage from the Encyclopedia Americana - Vol 13. (Great Britain - English Judaism): "...the Crown, as chief partner in the Jewish money lending business...to secure its share of the gains..."

Finally this book of Knuth's also talks about the Pilgrims. This goes back to the Majesty's British Intelligence network and their front Jews like Rothschilds who in turn have frontmen like Rhodes, Milner, Rockefeller, etc. The American elite are connected to the British elite.

New British Intelligence Document Confirms Osama bin Laden's Death
by Tom Heneghan
International Intelligence Expert

Tuesday November 24, 2009

P.P.S. It should come as no surprise that internet gossip columnist Christopher Story has finally stopped trying to co-mingle the funds under the trusteeship of Ambassador Leo Wanta aka the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols with the funds that are tied to a financial dispute between former illegal White House occupant George W. BushFRAUD and the Queen of England.

P.P.P.S. We can also reveal that U.S. Treasury investigators have absolute proof that the noted CIA proprietary account Marvelous Investments Ltd. (MIL) was hijacked from the administrative control of American patriot Ambassador Leo Wanta when noted East German DVD agent and Hillary Clinton confidant Eva Telege aka Teleke aka Teleki forged Wanta's signature.

Now keep in mind that given what Story has already revealed about Marvelous Investments and how Heneghan is in fact involved with this crooked group, his claim that Wanta's signature was forged is likely a lie. Notice also how Heneghan is spelling Teleki's name correctly some time after Story busted Heneghan on it and a rumormillnews reader commented on why Heneghan deliberately did this.

Story said earlier that Heneghan 'gave the game away' by mentioning the 6.2 trillion. In the whole Wanta fiasco, Wanta was supposedly to be the legal owner of some roughly 27.5 or 25.7 trillion dollars. 4.5 trillion of which were supposed to be headed for the American treasury. Story's work also basically was summarized by another reporter earlier as such:

"The Global Settlements to Ambassador Leo Wanta, the recipients in the G-7 and/or G-8, and consequently The U.S. Treasury, were held up again, as usual, which prompted British and Chinese heads of state to lock down the funds they provided to guarantee that the settlements would take place. These collateral funds had been necessarily put up by H.M. The Queen, and the Chinese, amounting to about 6.2 Trillion, and 7.8 Trillion equaling about 14 Trillion total."

So in other words, the funds were blocked but apparently the Queen and Chinese are either putting up money to make up for what can't be put into the American treasury due to American crooks, or they are funding some sort of operation to get the original 4.5 trillion of Wanta's into the treasury. Heneghan from his October 20 report seemed to confirm this a little bit when he said,

"It should be noted that former White House occupant BushFRAUD was given a $6.2 TRILLION loan by his business partner, British NAZI Queen Elizabeth II, in order to have BushFRAUD implement the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols.

BushFRAUD and his daddy, along with their business partners, Bill and Hillary Clinton, proceeded to STEAL the money and then lost it in illicit trading made through the Galleon Group hedge fund tied to their secret trading platforms in India and Pakistan.

Now Queenie Pooh wants her money back from her business partner BushFRAUD who refuses to give it to her.

So now you see, folks, why Christopher Story and Michael Cottrell are attacking American Patriot Ambassador Leo Wanta, along with the late President of France, Francois Mitterrand, because the $6.2 TRILLION are under the administrative control of Ambassador Leo Wanta, NOT the British Monarch or George W. BushFRAUD.

It is the U.S. and French Treasuries that are due these funds NOT the British. "

So Heneghan says this is the Queen's money, this 6.2 trillion that Bush took and isn't giving back. But then Heneghan seemingly contradicts himself as says that this 6.2 trillion belongs to the American treasury. Isn't that the original 4.5 billion that is supposed to be Wanta's that belongs to the American treasury? I think so. But then if we go back to what was said in 2008 about how the Queen and the Chinese put up some funds because the original Wanta funds were continually blocked, then perhaps that is why Heneghan is saying that this 6.2 trillion is for the American people and not the Queen's since according to Story and both Heneghan, that money was to compensate for the non repatriated funds. Thus, we can see Heneghan say,

"Christopher Story has finally stopped trying to co-mingle the funds under the trusteeship of Ambassador Leo Wanta aka the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols with the funds that are tied to a financial dispute between former illegal White House occupant George W. BushFRAUD and the Queen of England."

But hold on. Story isn't co-mingling anything. He has specifically stated that this money comes from the Queen and is her property while you Heneghan are saying that this money, this 6.2 from the Queen belongs to the American treasury, given what was summarized in that italicized clip from 2008. If anything Heneghan, you are co-mingling things and confusing the issue. What surprises me Heneghan is that you attack the British all the time and then basically side with Story when you act like the Queen is trying to fix the American money system. Which is hogwash!

The way I see it, Heneghan and Story are both deluded if they ever think-thought that Wanta would ever do anything. At least Story figured out the Wanta thing was a hoax. I bet Heneghan is still pissed off at Story's largely correct exposure of the Snake Hill deception that Wanta is hiding behind.

In the acknowledgments his book "The European Union Collective" Christopher Story says:

" Among those others who have influenced my thinking most profoundly, I must mention first of all the late and dearly loved Dr Malachi Martin,..."

Dr Malachi Martin was a important Jesuit priest and well known author.

The Jesuits feeding disinfo AGAIN !!

BEWARE !!

Dear Brother Ricardo,

Avro Manhattan was an English Knight of Malta involved with British Intelligence. He helped ex-Jesuit Alberto Rivera escape London and was later converted to Christ by the preaching of Ian Paisley---according to David Daniels of Chick Publications. My concern is that AM never exposed Spellman in the JFK assassination and he never exposed the Vatican control of the British government. He always gave creedence to the pope's Cold War Hoax and the Airborne Nuclear War Hoax. I think he was an agent of Rome until the day he died.

Concerning Malachi Martin, he advocated the lie that there were three superpowers struggling for world dominion between themselves---as though these three powers were real enemies. They were the papacy, the US and the USSR. This is absloutely bogus and MM knew that the Black Pope controlled all three powers during WWII and thereafter. He was a Jesuit of supreme inside knowledge and remained a Jesuit until the day of his murder. He must have went too far.

Sincerely in faith,

Brother Eric

Wanta Protocol Update
plus the Latest on TigerGate

by Tom Heneghan
International Intelligence Expert

Sunday December 13, 2009

UNITED STATES of America - It can now be reported that the final implementation of the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols remains in suspension as we head towards the end of the year.

The current Obama Administration has been taking the same legal position as the former BushFRAUD Administration took, using the UN-Constitutional Patriot Act to block the final implementation of the Protocols aka keeping $6.2 TRILLION from being returned back to the U.S. Treasury.

Obama is still refusing to release a secret audit that was recently conducted concerning the U.S. Federal Reserve that fingers the Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate for utilizing the 9/11 tragedy, along with the UN-Constitutional Patriot Act, to enable the U.S. Federal Reserve to LOOT THE U.S. TREASURY.

Note: President Obama has recently proposed a commission that would be used for the purpose of COVERING UP the massive Federal Reserve misconduct that was involved in the massive THEFT OF THE U.S. TREASURY aka the QUAD TRILLION dollars worth of toxic asset derivatives that have turned U.S. financial banking institution into zombies, with the back end of the derivatives aka the cash proceeds from their sales still parked in offshore hedge funds.

Do not be fooled by Obama's new found populace rhetoric. Actions will speak louder than words.

Just as the BushFRAUD Administration used the 9/11 Commission as a firewall to COVER UP the 9/11 'Black Op' attacks on the American People that the BushFRAUD Administration had PRE knowledge of, it is clear that the Obama Administration now wants to create a commission to COVER UP the criminal activities of the Federal Reserve.

Remember, folks, these commissions dating back to the Warren Commission, which was used to COVER UP the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, are designed to supersede the authority of the U.S. Congress aka the elected representatives of the American People to do their Constitutional duty when it comes to oversight of serious matters that we have just discussed.

P.S. President Obama has just ordered the Internal Revenue Service to begin to pursue offshore hedge funds that have alleged hidden wealth and are allegedly subject to taxation.

Message to President Obama:

You can begin your reform of the IRS by allowing American Patriot Ambassador Leo Wanta to pay his taxes on the old AmeriTrust account (a national security account originally set up in Switzerland), and bring back $6.2 TRILLION to the U.S. Treasury.

President Obama, why don't you just let Ambassador Leo Wanta pay his taxes, stop this Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate occupation that has wrecked our country, and if you are looking for someone to tax you might want to start with Warren Buffett and his crooked British-linked Berkshire Hathaway hedge fund, which contributed to the destruction of the U.S. Banking system.

The American People are NOT going to tolerate 'BAILING OUT' Warren Buffett so he can finance the hi-speed U.S. rail project that American Patriot Ambassador Leo Wanta could finance at NO U.S. Taxpayer expense.

We at the Unhived Mind back in 2007 were on to their tricks and so they had to change their gameplan. That was the old Unhived Mind that was hacked in 2008 resulting in this new one.

It took a while to figure out this whole Heneghan-White-Wanta-Story thing but eventually, these idiots show themselves up. It's especially useful to use our knowledge and tricks to play them off each other and then they just really expose themselves. Heneghan came back to the cloak with Lenny Bloom in 2008 for a bit only after Oxley began posting the odd Heneghan article on his site in February and March 2008. Lenny Bloom (Nelson thall) took the bait and brought back Heneghan to the cloak to please us. It was so obvious. On that show Heneghan said that yes the Vatican rules the royal crowns of Europe. Funny how in June 2007, he attacked Eric Phelps for saying the very same thing.

Tim White is no angel either but he is to be commended for the work he has compiled on Thall, Heneghan, Webb, Szymanski, Turner, May and Gore. It was in fact yours truly who brought White's work to Oxley's site years ago in the first place. And boy did Heneghan ever get pissed off and panicked. Rumor has it Heneghan actually tried to join Oxley's site but Oxley caught on and booted him. Check the Heneghan thread in AGENTS.

I checked and yes, there have been no new briefings.

In the second report, Story has some interesting words about Wanta and the basically phony Pricincipality of Snake Hill thing.

QUOTE

LEO WANTA REPORTED TO US TO BE IN JAIL
Turning now to the preceding report [16th December], the closing item referenced the fact that the Swiss had determined that a certain well-known figure would not be paid. The Editor withheld the individual's name, but can now confirm that we were referring to Lee/Leo Wanta (as no doubt many will have readily deduced).

At about 2.00pm on 16th December, the Editor was informed that Leo/Lee Wanta is reportedly in jail – which, of course, explains why the Swiss have determined that he is not to be paid.

Actually, that is back to font: the Swiss enforcers, MI-6 and the Chinese (who have reportedly been aggravated by Wanta's interventions and intrigues), have procured the removal of Wanta from the scene in part so as to close down the constant swirl of intrigue surrounding the dead issue of the previously intended diversion of payment to Mr Wanta – including, but not confined to, the entirely fake CIA 'Principality of Snake Hill' route, with its fake virtual 'Central Bank of Snake Hill' that could conceivably have been activated with the connivance of the US Federal Reserve and the Federal Reserve Inter Bank Settlement Fund, and the cooperation perhaps of another corrupt institution external to the United States.

But we think Wanta may be in jail for weightier reasons than that, including such felonies as Fraud in the Inducement, concerning which we and others have extensive documentation.

Ancient 'Wanta material' suddenly posted on another website appears to be a crude operation to cover up the fact that Wanta is reported to be in jail.

PAULSON ARRESTED AND HAULED OFF TO BERMUDA
Next, our (confirmed) report that Henry M. Paulson Jr. had been hauled off to Bermuda, so that he is held within the British jurisdiction, presupposed that Paulson had been arrested, like Geithner. This must be the case: so logic suggests that Paulson has had his passport confiscated and, as a prisoner of the British authorities, (a) has been fully removed from the scene so that he cannot interfere any further with the Settlements; and (B) since Paulson authorised and presided over the stealing or diversion of the $6.2 trillion LOAN funds provided by the British Monarchical Power pro bono publico to finance the transparent, taxable on-the-books Dollar Refunding Programme, he will face the severest legal consequences in accordance with the priorities of the British authorities.

TREATMENT OF GEITHNER SO FAR LOST ON WEAK PANETTA
Thirdly, our (confirmed) revelation that the US Treasury Secretary was arrested at the meeting held at 3.00pm on Tuesday 15th December 2009, was relieved of his driver's license and of his passport, and suffered the indignity of having a monitoring device placed on his person, sent a message to all concerned that this continued intransigence will not be tolerated – a message which, however, has not yet been received at the headquarters of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The background to this further sour twist is that Mr Leon Panetta, the current Director of Central Intelligence (DCI), previously ran the trading programs for George H. W. Bush Sr., as also did Rahm Emanuel at a certain earlier stage.

At about 3.00pm on Wednesday 16th December, the Editor was informed that Leon Panetta had refused to sign off on the releases on the instructions of the private citizen traitor, George H. W. Bush [see above]. The reason given for this is that as the Bush Crime Family and the 'Box Gang' are not going to be paid the 2% on the currency boxes which have been taken out of their control and destroyed, as referenced in the preceding report, Panetta is blocking the releases: period.

That implies that Panetta, as head of the Intelligence Power, believes that he is invulnerable and immune to the consequences of his behaviour – exactly the same mentality that has resulted in the jailing of Mr Wanta, the modified arrest of Geithner, and the arrest and removal of his predecessor, Mr Paulson, to Bermuda, where the British jurisdiction applies and where he can be dealt with in accordance with that jurisdiction.

So what we observe following this development is that the corrupt US Intelligence Power is directly and explicitly holding the United States, which it is supposed to be protecting, and the entire world to ransom – which is precisely what we have been saying for longer than we can remember. The current head of the CIA is a known weakling who takes instructions from an ageing predecessor.

Edit: An update from Story on Wanta. The text has been altered.

QUOTE

...Actually, that is back to front: the Swiss enforcers, MI-6 and the Chinese (who have reportedly been aggravated by Wanta's interventions and intrigues), have required the removal of Wanta from the scene in part so as to close down the constant swirl of intrigue surrounding the dead issue of the previously intended diversion of payment to Mr Wanta – including, but not confined to, the entirely fake CIA 'Principality of Snake Hill' route, with its fake virtual 'Central Bank of Snake Hill' that could conceivably have been activated with the connivance of the US Federal Reserve and the Federal Reserve Inter Bank Settlement Fund, and the cooperation perhaps of another corrupt institution external to the United States. In fact Wanta is wholly removed from the scene anyway: SEE BELOW.

Wanta may revisit jail for weightier reasons than the above, including such felonies as Fraud in the Inducement, concerning which we and others have extensive documentation.

Ancient 'Wanta material' suddenly posted on another website appears to be a crude operation to cover up the fact that Wanta was reported to have been thrown in jail.

• WANTA UPDATE: At 8.45 am on 17th December sources explained to us that Mr Wanta had been ordered to hand over certain documents and had refused or failed to do so, whereupon he was arrested and incarcerated. As of this date, we are told that he is out of jail. By way of elaboration:

• Wanta was visited in Wisconsin by President Barack Obama, as Wanta was required to hand over the authority, to a successor President, that had been given to him by President Reagan. We think that he may have been reluctant to do this, which may be a reason why he revisited the US GULAG. At all events, the Wanta operation has been closed down, and his role, redundant anyway for many years, is terminated altogether. Diversionary operations to 'revive Wanta' are whistles in the wind.

Stick this up your ass Christopher Story. Your precious maritime law ruling Queen has been busted. Not only does the British influence on Chinese banking show itself here, but Oxley has also talked about the Jesuits controlling China as well. You do realize Story that criminal activity of the Bushes that you harp on about, and money from running illegal drugs helps keep the American economy afloat right (albiet, afloat enough to steal a little bit more and consolidate a bit more wealth from the hands of the people before total destruction)? And calling in loans or acting on some lien that may or may not exist will help crash America's economy right? That's what the British and the Romans have always wanted. Total control. Stick your propaganda. We're not taking you seriously you Royal mouthpiece. Why don't you go and hang around some more Jesuits like Malachai Martin and get them to teach you about exposing the real power movers in the NWO? Hahahaha. - AntiSionist.

Elizabeth also controls URAINIUM just as De Beers controls the diamond trade, but she does it through direct ownership. Think it through. Check out where it is mined and she owns the land or controls the companies one way or another.

The more you know about the Royal holdings the more you shake your head in amazement.

She does control Canada and not long ago shut down government.

When you understand the Opium Wars, and when did the British leave? Why is a London banker on China's second largest bank board. It doesn't make sense unless he is there to "suggest" what they should do (his job), but do you see how it could work? The Crown/The CIty learned you control countries through the banks...loans. British loans brought down the Ottoman Empire and they also sent the Egypt's Suez Canal construction project into receivership via debt, the Brit's took it over...Egypt instead of making money lost everything thanks to the British London bankers...Dubai, it's rumored that Prince Charles has money there...loans perhaps? LAND FOR DEBT, LAND FOR DEBT, LAND FOR DEBT.

Are we in trouble? China is buying everything in site to spend their/our dollars...they are replacing their dollars with THINGS, GOODS, EVERYTHING that will help support and grow their country and personal wealth. Obviously there is a small elite in China that run and make money from these dealings just as there is a tiny super wealthy ruling minority in Mexico (where the world's richest man lives), just as does the Queen in Britain and Canada etc. Do the Russian oligarchs also come to mind, and Putin who seems to be tolerating their influence after a good show at resisting them early on.

The wealthy know that value comes from land...owning land as it produces, it is the only thing that produces. Why did Bush buy 100,000 acres in Paraguay with gas and water, Ted Turner would own the US if he were allowed to buy it as some states have said no more, he owns the Nebraska farm land that sits over the Midwest largest aquifer and Buffett owns the land in Texas it also covers, between the two! Why do the Rockefeller's own huge, thousands of acres of farm land and bilk the tax payers/us through farm subsidies? Even the Rev. Moon owns more land in Paraguay than Bush and they do business together! The rich buy land, but they never sell, why? True wealth is in the land and God isn't making any more, just like water front property.

Why do you think the banks are foreclosing? They own the land with funny money they put on their books out of thin air...understand fractional banking...what isn't being said is just like in the depression the banks and the rich are consolidating...I'd like to know what the big bonuses are being spent on, on Wall Street...land you think? They know the stock market is nothing more than Las Vegas on the coast a fast poker game for the stout of heart and insiders play ground where they gather at the CFR to water and make deals.

Just a gentle reminder that land is king and with carbon taxes which will control what comes from the land, they control it all...as you know, of course.

Remember the military "control the land in Afghanistan" where 95% of the world's poppy fields (land) is located and with cheap labor...and completely control of the traffic. The Brit's (Queen) and NATO are guarding the South where they are located...Opium War? The business is making money on the serfs backs and there is never enough, never, like a fire the elite need to be constantly feed more, and more, and more...it's all about control and we can assume based on history their mind set is, 'IT'S MINE you unworthy animal useless eater, get off my land a.k.a. mother earth.' How many slaves need to die? True?

Today is the best day of your life live it as though it is your last. Be happy, love others, and give thanks.

Till the morrow.

Keep in mind I'm dyslexic and doing the best I can with what I have to work with.

CHRISTOPHER STOY and TOM HENEGAN are "both" dead wrong.. DURHAM HOLDING TRUST, TIAS 12087 was never a part of what is offered by same to "slander" Durham Holding Trust and that which is called the NESARA.

NESARA the structuring of the Purpose and Intent of Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087 is the Purpose and Intent defined in the Articles of Durham Holding Trust.

This is the purpose for the 'attempting' to discredit Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087.

Mr. Story and Mr. Henegan posted the following involving Durham Trust.. it is incorrect.

The following is what was brought to my attention by a Reader.

In the current posting created by Christopher Story, about 2/3rds of the way down in a long essay, we find the following paragraph:

Among the cast of characters following Henry L. Stimson and Bill Donovan who shaped the CIA's obsessive orientation towards Mammon from the outset were William Casey, whose legacy at the US Export Import Bank has ensured that this institution has remained heavily involved in dubious intelligence community financial operations ever since; Allen Dulles (ditto: Bank of New York, now BoNY Mellon); General Olmsted (International Bank of Washington; Financial General Bancshares and the criminal money-laundering Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) CIA bank); Paul Helliwell and William Colby (Castle Bank, HouseHold Bank, Mercantile Bank; and the Nugan Hand International Bank, used for laundering drugs from the 'Golden Triangle' founded in Sydney in 1973 by the Australian lawyer Frank Nugan (thought to have been a Mafia operative) and the former US Green Beret Michael Jon Hand, who had operated as an assassin, controlling multiple assassination squads in Northe rn Laos under Operation Phoenix); General Earl Cocke (Black Eagle Trust, or Fund; Durham Trust; Driscoll Trust; Synergy Trust; Pilgrim Investments {Jorge Bush); Martwell Investments (Marc Rich, a.k.a. the long-range DVD operative Hans Brand); and Project Hammer – the operation to bring down the Soviet Union so that Soviet oil and gas resources could be brought under the control of US and Western investors); Henry Morgan and Spencer Morgan (Morgan Stanley, JP Morgan Chase: Chase Manhattan); and George B. Moore (First National City Bank: Citibank, which wound up with over 116,000 tonnes of the stolen Yamashita/Marcos gold).

The following e-mail was sent to you via The Rumor Mill News Reading Room from Christopher Story

Christopher Story writes:
Re: VKD RESPONDS: 'STORY MENTIONS BOTH NESARA ....

There is no intent to discredit anybody. The mention of Durham Trust is taken from a public domain document believed by the Editor to be reliable. It was included in a summary that I posted recently. I am not interested in the subject and have happily deleted the reference from our website.

V.K. Durham, CEO
Durham Holding Trust Responds:

How generous of you Christopher.. Especially after you noticed the world "Durham Trust" was involved in MONEY LAUNDERING and illegal activities involving the following, to wit;

Among the cast of characters following Henry L. Stimson and Bill Donovan who shaped the CIA's obsessive orientation towards Mammon from the outset were William Casey, whose legacy at the US Export Import Bank has ensured that this institution has remained heavily involved in dubious intelligence community financial operations ever since; Allen Dulles (ditto: Bank of New York, now BoNY Mellon); General Olmsted (International Bank of Washington; Financial General Bancshares and the criminal money-laundering Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) CIA bank); Paul Helliwell and William Colby (Castle Bank, HouseHold Bank, Mercantile Bank; and the Nugan Hand International Bank, used for laundering drugs from the 'Golden Triangle' founded in Sydney in 1973 by the Australian lawyer Frank Nugan (thought to have been a Mafia operative) and the former US Green Beret Michael Jon Hand, who had operated as an assassin, controlling multiple assassination squads in Northern Laos under Operation Phoenix); General Earl Cocke (Black EagleTrust, or Fund; Durham Trust; Driscoll Trust; Synergy Trust; Pilgrim Investments {Jorge Bush); Martwell Investments (Marc Rich, a.k.a. the long-range DVD operative Hans Brand); and Project Hammer - the operation to bring down the Soviet Union so that Soviet oil and gas resources could be brought under the control of US and Western investors); Henry Morgan and Spencer Morgan (Morgan Stanley, JP Morgan Chase: Chase Manhattan); and George B. Moore (First National City Bank: Citibank, which wound up with over 116,000 tonnes of the stolen Yamashita/Marcos gold).

Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087 is here to 'remedy' those 'wrongs' that is why our sub trust Deo ju Vante paid the U.S. and American Continental Debt in the amount of $6.5 Trillion Dollars "Gold Bullion" Equity Collateral.

And yes.. NESARA is based upon the Articles of Trust and Purpose and Intent of Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087.

You can use anything about the Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087 as long as it is "true."

We were not involved in any way with the before-mentioned.

V.K. Durham, CEO Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087 responds.. why I'm responding..to a braying jackass I'll never know.

Story's 'hate' materials are coming from a disgruntled FBI AGENT who thought AL GORE should have won the presidency, and is very angry trying to destroy everyone and everything.. even to the point of latching on to Independent Investigative Journalist who are willing to put out their rabid nonsense.

It is supposed Mr. Story and his "Disinformation Agents [FBI assocaited] who used to provide certain information such as "shoot outs in New York" and "shoot outs in New Orleans" during the Katrina problems.. and other such 'notorious and outrageous disinformation' containing so much rabid hate materials [and these guys are U.S. Citizens] much like a poisionus snake blinded when it sheds it's skin.. it will strike out at anyone or anything that moves..

Mr. Story would perhaps like to associate Durham Holding Trust, Tias 12087 with those mentioned in the quoting.. as it would take the heat, or lighten the load off BCCI BANKING IN THE "OFF LEDGERING OF PRIVATE BANKING" AT THE U.S. AND U.K. FEDERAL RESERVE, THE BRITISH MINT and PETRO DOLLAR GROUP ..

Did you pay attention to the article which I posted WHERE'S THE "GOLD".. WHEN THE DUST SETTLES ON THIS ONE IT WILL BE VERY INTERESTING AS TO WHO "STOLE WHAT!" http://www.rumormillnews.com/cgi-bin/forum.cgi?read=161769

Mr. Story is losing his credibility when he and his 'Rogue FBI Informants' post nonsense such as that posted to day regarding "PLANELOADS OF FOREIGN AUTHORITIES DESCEND ON U.S." Why aren't they decending on the U.K.? Why aren't they getting it on with Tony Blair and G.W. Bush?

Christopher knows why.. as well as I..

The gentleman should provide hard, un-deniable, irrefutable 'documentation'... instead of the Disinformation from disgruntled FBI Agents who are mad as hell because AL GORE did not get the presidency.. in the future come up with new materials instead of that 'old stuff' out of the 'bottles' .. and I'm not talking about "genis" either. Here I thought merrit could be found in Mr. Story's articles further giving some consideration and thinking Mr. Story had some mettle! Can't be right all the time.

Re: C.STORY 9:00 a.m. Update - DEADLINE MISSED....

Hi Hobie:

There is something exceedingly wrong with this short update.

In it Story specifically mentions that there are 72 enforcers and then continues stating "...although there are many more..."

It is a well known fact that the number 72 is a Masonic/Satanic number.

No, I have no idea as to why Story mentioned/used that number when, in light of his further comments, he just as well could have mentioned 73 or 74 or even 85 for the number of enforcers.

It may seem trivial, but dealing with these people, a detail such as this can not be considered trivial.

If that was a number given to him by one of his sources, he would do well to check into that because it would probably be too much of a coincidence for it to have appeared by chance.

RE: The significance of 72

Dear Hobie,

I looked all over the web for the significance of 72 in Masonic code. It appears to be an indirect indicator of the 6 pointed star (i.e. the Pentagon has 2 72 angles and all the angles within the pentagon shape, if connected with straight lines, form a 6 pointed star (often used in black magic).
source: http://www.mt.net/~watcher/dualism.html

There were other interesting facts about 72 from the masons. Evidently, Solomon was said to have bound 72 Goetian Spirits. The 72nd of these spirits or demons was Andromalius. This spirit or demon, said to actually have been an ET by some, had the following responsibilities:

"It is really an extremely intelligent and powerful force that is now at work in this world of woe.

"Legend has it that if you are honest Andromalius is not to be feared. You should tremble, however if you are a thief, liar or cheat, which probably describes a lot of people on this planet. Andromalius is dedicated to the punishment of thieves wherever he finds it and to the return of the victims' valuables."
source: http://www.timboucher.com/tattoos/occult_tattoo_links.html, under Goetian spirits

Christopher has made reference to the gnostic Christians in the past. The information about Andromalius is probably from the gnostic gospels. I think that it is likely that is what he was signalling---not the Pentagon, but I could be wrong.

Re: Reader MK: 'Re: THE SIGNIFICANCE OF 72'

Hi Hobie:

Yes, 72 is the number of degrees of the interior angle of a pentagon and also figures prominently in the pentagram. Also it is reputed to represent the number of letters in the true name of God in the Satanic/Kabbalistic writings, in addition to the meanings reader MK found, and other meanings, I'm sure.

But more than any meaning that C. Story may ascribe or not to that number (if any), what would seem important to me is what meaning the person who gave him that number ascribes to it, and that is why I suggested that maybe Mr. Story should check on the bona fide of this particular source.

Hobie, you are also right; for all we know it may have been the number of available seats on one of those seven airplanes, in which case it would turn out to be an amazing coincidence, but wierder things happen every day, I guess.

Anyway, it may just turn out to be that we are all just grasping at straws, but I thought it curious enough to mention, especially since the end of all this seems to be near according to many of the messengers.

Best Regards,

J.Y.

Now of course I'm not including the later discussions on rumormillnews about the alleged occult significance of it. I am using it here given something Tom Heneghan is saying about 72 people arriving on American soil. Very interesting. Toys Out of the Attic: Protocols Update
Part 1 of 2
by Tom Heneghan
International Intelligence Expert
Sunday December 20, 2009

UNITED STATES of America - It can now be reported that major missile strikes are under way in the nation of Yemen designed to eliminate alleged Al Qaeda terrorists who have been classified by the National Security Agency (NSA) and elements of Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) as major national security risks.

These attacks were directly ordered by the Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate by current dysfunctional U.S. Secretary of State loser Hillary Rodenhurst Clinton and her old Iran-Contra business partner, current U.S. Secretary of Defense and daddy Bush stooge Robert Gates.

The attacks were ordered WITHOUT the direct knowledge of President Barack Obama, who was in Copenhagen, Denmark at the time at a global warming conference, where the President was actually negotiating the final details for the implementation of the noted Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols with French President Nicolas Sarkozy.

The missile attacks in Yemen are part of an overall U.S.-Israeli Mossad-NSA Delta Force team code name "Apocalyptic" whose aim is to eliminate former U.S.-CIA-NSA assets in Yemen who had a role in the 9/11 "Black Op" attacks on America.

These NSA assets were in direct communication with elements of British and Canadian Intelligence PRE 9/11 and some of them may actually be the identified alleged hijackers who were named as the orchestrators of the 9/11 attacks.

All of this is happening, folks, while 300 members of the Pakistani government have been placed under house arrest, which may be an NSA precursor to a U.S. government-sponsored "False Flag Black Op" directed by the "Apocalyptic" group, which is a black op designed to FAKE Osama bin Laden's aka CIA employee Tim Osman's death before New Years Eve.

The timing of an attempt to FAKE Osama bin Laden's death [he is already dead, folks] coincides with a massive financial world war that is currently under way that is spiraling out of control as the year 2009 nears its end.

This, of course, coincides with the final implementation of the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols, which is due to be implemented on New Years Eve.

Accordingly, the Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate may be trying to end run this process by finally declaring Osama bin Laden dead [through the use of a False Flag Black Op], zero out the CIA custodial accounts tied to Tim Osman aka Osama bin Laden and thus, accordingly, try to co-mingle funds involved in the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocol implementation.

Note: For years the Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate [using the TREASONOUS illegal Patriot Act] has illegally laundered the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocol funds through CIA custodial accounts tied to the old Mujahideen, who were used to fight the Soviet occupation that was taking place in the 1980s in Afghanistan.

Clearly the final implementation of the Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocol funds is creating a race against the clock.

P.S. We can now reveal that six (6) weeks ago the Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate met at FBI Division 5 Gestapo headquarters in Denver, Colorado to discuss and implement a domestic NAZI-style program on U.S. soil, which, as we speak, is targeting the American People aka patriotic whistleblowers who wish to return the American People to Constitution Rule.

Attending this meeting were both Bushes, daddy and his son, BushFRAUD, along with both Bill and Hillary Clinton, Secretary of Defense Robert Gates, and two semi-retired Generals Richard V. Secord and John K. Singlaub, both generals who were Iran-Contra-Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate bagmen.

Both Secord and Singlaub are dangerous "BLACK OPS" specialists tied to FBI Division 5 Denver, Colorado GESTAPO, as well as the noted MKULTRA E-Systems mind control factory headquartered in Dallas, Texas.

The MKULTRA E-Systems company is also tied to the formation of seventy-two (72) units currently operating on American soil, which is designed to harass, intimidate and even murder American citizens aka patriotic whistleblowers who love their country and want their Constitution back.

The 72 units known as the "IE" units have a tie in to the old Blackwater Associates mercenary group that have engaged in political assassinations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

AntiSionist - December 22, 2009 05:46 AM (GMT)

According to Story, he is not MI-6 and he in fact been threatened by them? Do we believe him? Or do we assume he's just a misled guy who foolishly thinks there is a 'empathetic' elite called the British whereas Tom Heneghan considers Al Gore to be like that instead? The fact that he implies the Queen wanted to help repatriate some Wanta funds to save America because she respects 'the rule of law' is absurd when you investigate maritime law, which Story apparently never has bothered to look in to. - AntiSionist

WANTA 'SNAKE HILL' EXPOSURE: FRAUD AND TERRORISM
BUSH MURDER OF 'RUSTY' HERMANN IN A VA HOSPITAL ELABORATED
Tuesday 17 November 2009 00:01

A THREAT FROM WANTA AGAINST THE EDITOR OF THIS SERVICE
Before we revert to the Principality of Snake Hill fraud and intimidation, and its implications for the (non)-integrity of Wanta and Henry, we have three more matters to dispose of: (1) ANOTHER threat against the Editor; (2) The gold bars 'tungsten' report; and (3) Information from a US legal source directly working in and with the US military at Fort Hood, Texas:

(1): THREAT AGAINST THE EDITOR OF THIS SERVICE
A person called Kay Higgins, associated with Wanta, sent the Editor an email dated 7th November 2009 at 15:10 UK time, containing egregious and ignorant old falsehoods such as that 'you proudly boast of being a member of MI-6' which is the precise reverse, of course, of the truth – as has been made crystal clear to everyone except those with cloth-ears: on the contrary, the Editor has been publishing independently on his own account since 1970 and has never had any involvement with MI-6: indeed, they attempted, according to the veteran British journalist, Gordon Thomas in 2004 and 2005, to thwart our investigations at one stage, as we reported on several occasions.

The email contained the following threat [the n'th received by the Editor of this service]:

'I have it on great authority that you will be taken care of and you can decide what that may mean at your own discretion'.

Under the US Misprision of Felony Statute, and for the information of US Law Enforcement, it is a criminal offence to issue threats. This woman's coordinates were given to us in the email as: Kay Higgins, skhiggins1@netzero.net; Ameritrust; RR2, Elk City, OK 73644, United States: 580-309 2272. Since the utterer of the threat is known to be an associate of Wanta's and stated that 'I have it on great authority that…', Higgins allowed herself, foolishly, to be used to utter the threat in question.

Here Christopher Story with American and British intelligence contacts is speaking on something called Operation Stillpoint. You will see what it is. And then Tom Heneghan replies accusing Story of being a British Intelligence agent who is helping the Queen to loot the US treasury once again. In my view, these two are doing a similar dance. Heneghan thinks Wanta will save America while Story has it that the Queen and Interpol are going to save America from the Bush-Clinton crime syndicates. Both are making errors in judgement. PENDING SMKM/CMKX CASE AGAINST THE S.E.C. WILL BE THE BIGGEST FRAUDULENT FINANCE LAWSUIT IN HISTORY: MASSIVE SCAMMING PLATFORM RUN BY BUSH JR.'S S.E.C.

• BELATED CHRISTMAS MESSAGE ON TEMPTATION: The Editor is most appreciative of the many kind emails from all over the world received in response to the late Christmas essay posted on 4th January. It appears that the enemies of the Lord took violent exception to the appearance of this straightforward literate New Testament essay, because their response has been to make idiots of themselves by leaving satanic rituals, including the complete initiation of a young woman victim to the worship of satan, on our voicemail. Naturally such stupidities have no effect, and neither do the foolish curses which the posting evoked from these deluded and lost cowards. However such evil behaviour calls for an appropriate response and so, before beginning the shattering report that follows, we append below the verses from the Gospel of John that apply to this situation:

‘For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life‘.

‘For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved’.

‘He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God’.

‘And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil’.

‘For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh he to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved’.

‘But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God’. Gospel of John, Chapter 3, verses 16-21.

NEW REPORT STARTS HERE:

OPERATION STILLPOINT TO 'TAKE DOWN' THE UNITED STATES
We are now in a position to tear part of the veil away from the secret stage on which saboteurs operating from WITHIN US Government structures have been systematically, over a prolonged period of years, seeking to do nothing less than seize the assets of the entire United States and its people, in a mad revolutionary offensive to convert the country into a fiefdom controlled by a small clique of arrogant maniacs.

This will require patience on the part of the reader, as historical references will be necessary in order to bring this scandalous state of affairs to life, and to expose what has been going on.

The last time an attempt was made by the Fifth Column buried inside the Intelligence Power and scattered around other structures was in 1984, with the previous Dollar Refunding Operation.

A FIVE-PHASE, LONG-RANGE SUBVERSION OPERATION
In essence and in outline, the secret offensive against the United States and its people directed from within by subversives headed by George Bush Sr. and his controller-handler, Dr Henry 'Heinz' Kissinger, and micromanaged by Bush Sr.'s criminal financier Dr Alan Greenspan, with embedded participation of Leo/Lee Wanta, involved the following intended stages:

• Stage 1:
Developing myriad Ponzi schemes and giga-thefts, of infinite variety, and BY ANY MEANS, in order to procure 'base money' for open-ended unreported, off-balance sheet, untaxed leveraging and hypothecation operations.

• Stage 2:
Maximising the potential for the accumulation of trillions of fiat dollars by means of such financial sorcery, both for personal self-enrichment purposes and in order to accumulate a colossal fund of fiat 'money' from Fraudulent Finance operations, ready for Stage 3.

• Stage 3:
Deliberately inducing the collapse of the US financial system and economy to facilitate Stage 4:

• Stage 4:
Mobilising the colossal accumulated portfolio of Fraudulent Funds, stashed offshore and untaxed, with a view to buying up collapsed US assets across the board, so that the entire economy wound up in the hands of the controlling saboteurs.

• Stage 5:
The ELIMINATION of commercial banking and its replacement by the US Treasury's Direct Account.

The codename for this operation, directed from within the deeply compromised and penetrated US Government structures, was, and remains to this day, OPERATION STILLPOINT.

This offensive against the United States directed from WITHIN the US official structures, despite setbacks, including the recovery (for which we were partly responsible) of the British Monarchical Power's gold diverted with inside connivance at the Bank of England on 29th-30th March 2007, was STILL on course for completion but was knocked decisively off-course following the 'lockdown' of the $14.0+ trillion of sovereign funds, including the $6.2 trillion of funding provided on LOAN for the G-7-approved on-balance sheet Dollar Refunding Programme on 10th-12th September 2008. These funds were simply regarded by the criminal Paulson Treasury as candidates for diversion and exploitation, rather than for application for the purposes intended by the owners of the funds.

OPERATION STILLPOINT NEUTRALISED BY EVENTS IN DECEMBER 2009
OPERATION STILLPOINT was finally DEFEATED with the confirmation, application and decisive consequences of the sovereign lenders' Writ of Execution, followed by imposition of the massive Lien against the US Treasury for $47 trillion which the defrauded parties, the Chinese authorities and the British Monarchical Power, had to execute on or about 6th December 2009.

However, notwithstanding that OPERATION STILLPOINT has been destabilised, degraded, collapsed and is in the process of being dismantled – and the Republic therefore prospectively rescued at the last moment from what was intended by its sworn enemies – certain operatives, including Leon Panetta, Timothy Geithner, Mrs Hillary Clinton, former Vice President Richard B. Cheney and, at the bottom of the pile of snakes, Wanta, have had a problem getting used to the NEW PARADIGM, whereby the subversives engaged in the systematic sabotage of the ongoing US financial restitution operations (in order to 'rescue' OPERATION STILLPOINT), have now been placed not only firmly on the defensive, but in a bind from which they cannot extricate themselves (even though their arrogance remains such that they imagine that they can).

OPERATION STILLPOINT, re-invoked in sterile fashion by Wanta in November 2007 to trigger the domino effect, was put together by the traitors George Bush Sr. and Dr Alan Greenspan. When the exposures and the September 2008 'lockdown' stymied the Paulson Treasury, strenuous efforts were made to saddle (intended) President Obama with a team of colleague-snakes who could be relied upon to revive, perpetuate and conclude OPERATION STILLPOINT beyond Stage 2. This team of traitors is now under intense pressure, as indeed are ALL personnel within and beyond the US official structures who have participated in these unending criminal operations, serving the interests of enemy foreign powers, to bring the United States and its people to their knees

CRUCIAL MEASURES TO BACK UP THE $47 TRILLION LIEN ON THE TREASURY
As indicated, patience on the part of the reader is necessary because we first have to address the present situation, which is explosive and historically unprecedented. Specifically:

• INTERPOL'S DIPLOMATIC IMMUNITY AND HABEAS CORPUS:
For the purposes of surmounting this crisis, and FOR NO OTHER PURPOSE, contrary to the ignorant knee-jerk chatter on many websites, President Barack Obama promulgated Executive Order 13524 on 16th December 2009, which amended Executive Order 12425 dated 16th June 1983 (amended by the Executive Order 12971 dated 15th September 1995) so as 'to extend the appropriate privileges, exemptions, and immunities of the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL)'.

• The effect of President Obama's Executive Order of 16th December 2009 is to grant INTERPOL full immunity from search and arrest or seizure of all INTERPOL properties including the agency's own personnel, thereby providing INTERPOL with de facto diplomatic immunity.

This is a truly historic development, because it means that for the purposes of resolving this crisis HABEAS CORPUS IS SUSPENDED. The last time this happened was under President Lincoln.

The US Government has surrendered its authority to an international organisation charged with investigating corruption inside the US Government's own structures. The United States has not been sovereign since the Lien Holders had to proceed with executing their Lien on or about 6th December 2009, but will of course resume its sovereign status on satisfaction of the Lien.

With Habeas Corpus suspended for the purposes strictly of procuring compliance with the Writ of Enforcement and the huge Lien against the US Treasury and thus the (legitimate) Settlements, the heavily armed status of INTERPOL and other foreign enforcement personnel that are operating under diplomatic cover to bring this crisis to resolution on behalf of the injured parties, the myriad Ponzi victims of the Syndicate's schemes, the United States, the American people and the Rest of the World, can be more readily appreciated.

• ALL MONEY SABOTEURS = ECONOMIC TERRORISTS
As revealed in our 28th December report, on the basis of information divulged to us on 26th December 2009, the US Department of Justice within the Executive Branch has implemented a fundamental POLICY CHANGE, having determined in December, against the background of the execution of the Lien for $47 trillion against the US Treasury, that:

• ALL individuals and entities within the US jurisdiction that have participated in the stealing, diversion and conversion of funds belonging to others, INCLUDING past and present officials within the US Government and its structures, WILL BE INVESTIGATED AND PROSECUTED FOR ECONOMIC TERRORISM perpetrated against the United States and the American people (and the Rest of the World). Specifically:

• ANYONE, whether officials in, or formerly in Government, whether CEOs of financial institutions or lower-ranking bankers, partners in 'involved' US law firms, all intermediaries and intelligence operatives and others who have been engaged in obstructing the Settlements process by ANY MEANS AND AT ANY TIME IN THE PAST, and who have, by their actions, contributed to the DELAY, are being treated forthwith as ECONOMIC TERRORISTS – by the US justice system itself.

• Perpetrating ECONOMIC TERRORISM will be, and is, to be treated as TREASON by virtue of the fact that it entails DECLARING ECONOMIC WARFARE AGAINST THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND ITS PEOPLE, AND AIDING AND ABETTING THE ENEMIES OF THE UNITED STATES.

• The penalty for TREASON IN TIME OF WAR is summary execution.

• This decision PRECISELY REFLECTS what we have been proclaiming in this column for the past three years. We are informed that the US Justice Department has at long last understood what we have been saying, and has been galvanised by the horrendous implications for the $47 trillion Lien on the US Treasury and its decisive ramifications, into adopting the foregoing as RIGID OFFICIAL POLICY from which no deviation will be permitted.

• It follows that the US Attorney General and all the State Attorneys General are obliged to act vigorously on the basis of the POLICY CHANGE, or they themselves can and will be arrested for obstruction of justice by INTERPOL personnel and then extradited to a jurisdiction such as the British jurisdiction for defying obligations imposed on them by International Law.

• It should NOT be assumed that this POLICY CHANGE arises because of a change of heart at the US Department of Justice (resulting for instance from reading our reports). On the contrary:

• This POLICY CHANGE is a direct consequence of the situation arising from the implementation of the Lien and the drastic enforcement measures that are being taken inside the United States by the international cadres and 'men in suits' referenced in recent reports. President Obama's Executive Order Amending Executive Order 12425 dated 16th December and publicised by the Office of the Press Secretary, White House, on 17th December 2009 [see above], to 'extend the appropriate privileges, exemptions, and immunities to the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL)' is associated with this POLICY CHANGE at the US Department of Justice.

• Finally, since this is, as reiterated, an official POLICY CHANGE, its full implementation is NOT dependent upon finalisation of the Settlements. This reality should quickly lodge itself inside the brains of the official and financial sector criminal financiers and thieves, who face investigation and prosecution ANYWAY. Obviously, if they persist with their obstruction, thefts and diversionary operations, they will be increasing their chances of being summarily executed for treason.

• EVERYBODY INVOLVED IN DEFRAUDING THE UNITED STATES IS TO BE TARGETED:
Although this fact is confirmed above, it was REITERATED with further emphasis to this service on 3rd January that EVERYBODY, without exception, who has been involved and remains involved in defrauding the United States and the American people is going to be investigated.

CHANGE OF ATTITUDE NOTED IN CERTAIN QUARTERS
This development has almost immediately resulted in a previously unheard-of 'sudden amendment' of the 'attitudes' and visibility of certain parties that are known to this service and to its advisers. People inside the structures are stunned and are scurrying for whatever shelter they think may protect them from the consequences of their corrupt activities. Furthermore, the same applies to certain collaborating parties outside the United States.

Members of the US Congress and officials at the Departments of State, Justice and in the White House, as well as within the vast Intelligence Power's structures, the Pentagon and elsewhere, and in foreign governments and their structures, are reported to be quote 'falling over themselves' to avoid the axes that are falling from the sky, taking aim at their necks. Never have so many officials in the United States and other countries been so scared of what lies in store – for them personally.

• Stony silence on these developments:
No doubt alert readers will have observed that no substantive notice of the above, after we had reported it all on 28th December 2009, was taken by certain websites which purport to exist to enlighten the US public but which in reality specialise in maximising the potential for confusion in order to sustain the orchestrated but collapsing smokescreeen behind which these abominations, and OPERATION STILLPOINT, were being perpetrated.

This silence provides prima facie evidence that the US websites in question have indeed been involved, as we have suggested in the past, in the massive orchestrated agitprop and cover-up operation that has had to be mounted by the compartmentalised sleaze cadres to obfuscate the systematic treachery against the United States, which is without historical precedent in terms of the scale of this operation.

• President Obama's private hell:
Faced with this unprecedented state of affairs, President Barack Obama's backbone appears to have been stiffened, given the extremes of treachery seen within his own Cabinet and among his colleagues. In a revealing caption on 2nd January 2010, The Daily Telegraph noted: 'President Obama looked weary after repeated interruptions to deal with the aftermath of the syringe bomber plot' [sic, as incorrectly assumed by the caption writer]. 'An aide insisted that the 48-year-old found his holiday "rejuvenating", but his graying hair and drawn look seemed to tell another story'.

Some of the factors causing Mr Obama's hair to turn white – which can happen to people wracked by anxiety and stress – are summarised below. But first:

THE PENDING CMKM/CMKX LAWSUIT AGAINST THE S.E.C.:
THE BIGGEST FRAUDULENT FINANCE SUIT IN HISTORY
Lawyers acting for CMKM (CMKX) investors have prepared an immense class action lawsuit against the Securities and Exchange Commission and its Commissioners individually and severally claiming compensation in respect of 3.5 billion legitimate shares, seeking release of all the funds that have been collected (DTCC) for the sole benefit of CMKM/CMKX shareholders… for damages in excess of $3.87 trillion, based on allegations that the S.E.C. invented 2.25 trillion of PHANTOM SHARES in CMKM/CMKX stock, which were exploited and traded illegally given that the phantom shares were of course fraudulent and that stock did not, therefore, exist legally – scooping vast illicit scamming profits which were stashed off-balance sheet – in a colossal Ponzi operation perpetrated by the S.E.C. itself in collaboration with George H. W. Bush. George W. Bush, and other Bush Crime Family associates. THIS WILL BE THE BIGGEST OFFICIAL FRAUD CASE IN WORLD HISTORY.

When filed, this lawsuit will almost certainly be the development that will crack the immense edifice of systemic and deliberately subversive official corruption wide open and force it into the public domain once and for all – because the so-called 'mainstream' media wil surely be obliged, given the unprecedented size of this lawsuit, to pay attention to this one.

Of course, they will probably immediately get the wrong end of the stick, assuming ('under advice') that this was 'just another giga-scam' – rather than in reality a further component (albeit a scam without any historical precedent) of the orchestrated offensive perpetrated FROM WITHIN THE U.S. OFFICIAL STRUCTURES against US capitalism and the financial system masterminded by George H.W. Bush and his crime associates and financial technicians: OPERATION STILLPOINT.

And who features among the 'partners' of George Bush Sr. within the former Barrington Investment Group, now Deutsche AG, under the control of the DVD's primary banker, Dr Joseph Ackermann, CEO of Deutsche Bank? Why, the former Leninist President of the Soviet Union, M.S. Gorbachëv.

• Are you beginning to get the picture?

• Recall that German long-range 'Black' counterintelligence, the heirs of the Abwehr (DVD), and Soviet 'Black' intelligence (fronted these days by Soviet Military Intelligence, GRU, for which 'Prime Minister' Vladimir Vladimirovich Putin is the public face), work together at high levels against 'the Main Enemy' – and have always done so. In this connection, the 'successors' to the KGB (FSB) are in charge of the Russian Federation's outward-facing stance for international public consumption. The FSB operates a presentational policy which is the dialectical (Leninist) opposite of the secret ongoing responsibility and commitment of the GRU to preserve the integrity of the Leninist Party-State and its structures, which went 'underground' with the 'changes' of 1989-92.

THE CASE THAT WILL CRACK THE CRISIS WIDE OPEN
US authorities were reported to us on 3rd January 2010 to be so worried about this huge pending CMKM/CMKX lawsuit, which had been submitted in outline as a 'proffer' to them in advance, that frantic efforts were allegedly being made as this report was being prepared, to locate the $3.87 trillion 'needed' to 'shut the CMKX people up'.

CMKM/CMKX was originally set up from within the CIA as yet another Bush Crime Syndicate-related Ponzi scheme, to finance OPERATION STILLPOINT (like everything else).

Under the original criminal scheme, the Securities and Exchange Commission was to serve (and did serve) as another trading platform for the Bush subversion operation. Originally, the intention had been to conduct this illicit phantom trading op. through the Federal Financing Bank (FFB), a special entity within the US Treasury which has been used over the years for 'smoke and mirrors' financial obfuscation purposes, and also to provide the Secretary of the Treasury with up to $15 billion of prospective 'borrowing space' (as allowed to the FFB by Statute) when Congress delays the raising of the Statutory Debt Limit, as it does every few years or so in order to remind the US Executive Branch that the Congress is supposed to control the purse strings; but that plan was abandoned when it was found that the FFB was subject to 'too many restrictions' which would be inconsistent with the underlying criminal intent.

Ironically, Congress won't need to raise the Statutory Debt Limit – which is essentially now the sole remaining substantive whip that it can wield to force the Executive to recognise that it controls expenditure – with the start-up of the Dollar Refunding Programme, given that the tax accruals due to the US Treasury arising from the eight weekly trades will in due course obviate the necessity for the Statutory Debt Limit to be raised at all.

• This insight provides a possible explanation, beyond endemic corruption, for the resistance to overall resolution that has been the hallmark of the US Legislature over the years.

MASSIVE PONZI SCAM RUN FROM WITHIN BUSH'S S.E.C.
So the S.E.C. – which is responsible for monitoring the honesty and integrity of securities trades – was itself used as cover to establish and operate an off-balance sheet trading platform which was to be employed to clean up vast accruals by illicit means. This mechanism followed the standard intelligence deception principle that the most effective cover to operate from is from within the entity that is charged with monitoring and exposing the criminal activity to be perpetrated. It's called a form of 'sib' operation.

Under George W. Bush, between June 2004 and 28th October 2005, it is alleged that no less than 2.25 trillion of phantom CMKM/CMKX stock were sold into the stock market under this S.E.C. cover – which has to rank as by far the most brazen Ponzi scam in world history: and one, furthermore, that was set up and perpetrated by and from within the US official structures with the specific intention of 'screwing' the investing public, notably the investors in CMKM/CMKX shares.

Of course, the S.E.C. has no right or legitimate power to allow or approve phantom trades to be conducted by its own personnel or on its behalf on an illicit trading platform – an obscenity which calls into question the validity of all its current and former lawsuits against myriad lesser market perpetrators since this unprecedented official Bush-developed financial aberration started.

On the contrary, we would expect market defendants convicted of dodgy dealing to be instructing their lawyers on the basis of this staggering emerging evidence that the Securities and Exchange Commission is itself a criminal enterprise.

Eventually, the illicit CMKM/CMKX proceeds from the PHANTOM SHARE trades were brought back into the Bush-CIA Crime Syndicate's orbit via Tyler, Texas (Bush territory).

The reason that the CMKM/CMKX investors have legitimacy and standing is that, following an earlier lawsuit, the investors' case as Ponzi victims, was upheld – so that they are now in the driving seat, even though the original scheme was a CIA front operation.

This state of affairs TERRIFIES multiple perpetrators across the board, and needs to be considered in the context of the CHANGE OF POLICY at the US Department of Justice and INTERPOL's de facto diplomatic immunity and the consequent implications for Habeas Corpus.

CIVIL WAR WITHIN THE INTELLIGENCE POWER
Not surprisingly, it has become evident, and we are specifically informed, that civil war has broken out within the main flank of the corrupted Intelligence Power.

This was to be expected, given that OPERATION STILLPOINT has been disrupted and that the Bush Syndicate is in the process of being 'taken down' – although, unbelievably, Bush Sr. and Barbara were still NOT in custody as of 5th January 2010.

Tensions have erupted between the discredited Bush-DVD Syndicate penetration cadres and elements within the CIA who range from professionals disgusted at the behaviour of their agency (begging the question: they went along with it, so they haven't a leg to stand on), and operatives who find their noses out of joint for whatever reason (such as non-fulfillment of Pay Orders, which cannot now be fulfilled because they involved financial corruption) may apply. The tensions duly erupted into bloodshed during the holidays.

Specifically, the 'Black Ops' specialists, probably directed inter alia by senior CIA operative Mrs Hillary Clinton who disappeared into Afghanistan and the region during the Christmas and New Year period, have been working overtime to develop new terror 'false flag' operations, of which the Northwest Airlines Flight 253 near abomination was one example – in time to try, against the odds, to abort the derailing and closedown of OPERATION STILLPOINT – which the stupid 'Black Ops.' people don't appear to have realised is HISTORY. As previously mentioned these liars, deceivers and dealers in murder and the 'Black arts' are exceedingly stupid at all times.

On New Year's Day, The Times (London) and other 'mainstream' media reported the furious response of Afghani security chiefs to the cold-blooded murders of at least eight children and teachers during a night raid in Eastern Afghanistan – an outrage that triggered justified mass protests across Afghanistan at the barbarity of these assassinations. The high Afghani officials demanded that the United States must hand over the gunmen who perpetrated these atrocities.

The Afghan National Security Council (modelled along US and Soviet lines), chaired by President Karzai, demanded that 'those responsible for the deaths of those innocent youths must be handed over to the Afghan Government'. Mr Karzai's office elaborated: 'International forces entered the area and killed ten youths, eight of them school students inside two rooms in a house, without encountering any armed resistance'.

The local headmaster, Rahman Jan Ehsas, told The Times that 'seven of the children were handcuffed before they were shot. A local farm labourer and a shepherd boy were also killed'.

Although (inevitably) a Western official commented that 'there's no doubt that there were insurgents in there, and there may well have been an insurgent leader in the house', he added:

'But that doesn't justify executing eight children who were all enrolled in local schools'.

'C.I.A. ASSASSINS EXECUTED BY ORDER FROM WASHINGTON' IN ANOTHER COVER-UP
All reports on this incident have so far missed the point, which is illuminated by the sequel – namely that following this massacre, a 'suicide attacker' killed eight US civilian operatives.

[Although we are informed that no less than 13 CIA operatives were present at the same time in the remote location – an unbelievable breach of basic security standards].

• These killings took place at a CIA base, Camp Chapman, in Khost, on the Afghan-Pakistani border. Those killed were the CIA 'Black Ops' personnel who perpetrated the murders of the children and teachers – to escalate Afghani and Islamic tension generally, in pursuit of an emergency agenda intended to smother inter alia the takedown of OPERATION STILLPOINT.

You don't believe this? Then let us share some special intelligence with you – obtained, indeed, from intelligence sources. These eight 'Black Operations' murderers were themselves liquidated on orders from Washington (probably approved at the highest level, certainly the National Security Council), not as retribution for what they did of course, but because the Afghani authorities were calling (see above) for these US demoniacs to be handed over to the Afghani authorities so that they would appear in Court – unleashing further appalling publicity for the Americans and the CIA, to be splashed around the world's 'mainstream' media.

The Afghans wanted these US bandits under their authority; so the order was placed by US officials for these men to be executed. In other words, yet another CIA-sponsored 'Black Ops.' abomination ended in failure and the murder of Americans by the US Government's own structures – illustrating both the extreme desperation of the Intelligence Power as it is split apart by its internal rivalries and the ongoing but incomplete purge of the Fifth Column saboteurs, and the mental retardation of the out-of-control Fifth Column fools inside the Agency and its subsidiaries and 'privatised' cadres who are recklessly plotting these sabotage outrages.

C.I.A. SPIN-DOCTOR TRIES TO OBFUSCATE THE SITUATION
On 4th January 2010, Bruce Riedel, a so-called 'former' CIA office and now a 'White House adviser, suddenly surfaced to promulgate, for public consumption, an obfuscation 'line' to the effect that the 'suicide attacker' who made certain that the eight (CIA) operatives were duly horizontalised was a Jordanian double agent sent to 'hunt down top Al-Qaeda leaders', according to The London Times [5th January 2010]. Mr Riedel even obliged the media with the wholly unnecessary detail of the full-blown name of this now dead attacker: Humam Khalil Abu-Mulal al-Balawi. His intelligence 'handler', Ali bin Zeid, was said to have been killed, along with seven (not eight) CIA operatives.

Riedel elaborated with unnecessary and contradictory detail:
'The officer was also a member of the Hashemite Royal Family, which is part of the reason the King and Queen [of Jordan] attended his funeral, and why he is now being remembered [in Jordan] as a national hero'. (This has indeed been separately confirmed to us).

Spin-doctor Riedel added: 'The bomber allegedly [sic] was sent by [al-Qaeda's supposed 'Number Two'] Ayman al-Zawahiri himself, to conduct the attack'.

No sir. These executions of CIA operatives were ordered from Washington to cover up the latest mad attempt by the stupid demoniacs in the Fifth Column to try to sabotage the de facto takedown of OPERATION STILLPOINT which is happening in 'real time' – threatening the continued unhealthy hegemony of the corrupt and evil US Intelligence Power in the process.

WHITE HOUSE WISES UP TO THE INTERNAL TREACHERY:
On 5th January, Webster G. Tarpley, a respected veteran reporter, published an analysis in which he supported our KNOWLEDGE (which is based on intelligence obtained prior to his report) that operations are being and have been run FROM WITHIN THE US OFFICIAL STRUCTURES to try to destabilise President Obama at this critical stage.

However no-one reporting on these matters has yet understood that the underlying rationale for these treasonous operations has to do with the preservation of the Intelligence Power's collapsing control hegemony, and the stunted mentality of corrupted cadres and their handlers who have not yet wrapped their minds round the reality that OPERATION STILLPOINT is being dismantled.

Of course the problem here is that hardly anyone, even within the compartmentalised elements engaged in these futile and desperate late terrorism operations perpetrated against their own nation, Government and people (not to mention 'collateral damage' abroad, which none of them care about), know or have known of the existence of the OPERATION STILLPOINT plot.

(Which also, incidentally, illuminates the folly of those who persist in fomenting the fallout from the orchestrated, partisan campaign against President Barack Obama, which in fact masks the SAME underlying intent – to rescue the desperate American Intelligence Power from its fate, along with OPERATION STILLPOINT, a FOREIGN-inspired long-range deception offensive targeting the US component of the 'Main Enemy'. So, in persisting with this behaviour, these people are actually, or have been, participating, consciously or unwittingly, in the massive Fifth Column programme to destroy and 'take down' the United States. Which is the reverse of what most of these people want. 'Those whose clothing is made of esparto grass shouldn't stand too close to the fire').

OBAMA KICKS BUTT AFTER RETURNING FROM HAWAII
For, make no mistake: President Obama has been 'kicking butt' ever since his return from Hawaii. He has realised, not least, that he has no alternative, if he himself wishes to avoid abrupt arrest by INTERPOL for OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE (which is what he was told on 4th January 2010). At the same time, in any case, his first year in office has been completely wasted due to the subversive activities of the high-level saboteurs in his Cabinet and entourage, who were largely foisted upon him – by the recalcitrant, penetrated Intelligence Power.

He needs the money for his programmes (of which one can hardly approve BUT THAT'S NOT THE POINT at this juncture); and he needs the money for the bankrupt US States, and because THIS IS A MID-TERM ELECTION YEAR.

Most of all, he needs resolution so that the poisonous venom of this crisis is finally squeezed out of the system – and so that the axes that are cascading from the sky on numerous brazen, corrupt necks, fall where they are now destined to fall. He's had enough.

RICHARD WOLF ALLUDES TO ROGUE OPS. INSIDE THE STRUCTURES
Mr Tarpley cited the report by Richard Wolf on a cable network programme, and we'll let the author speak for himself – correcting him, or elaborating briefly, at the end of these excerpts:

'Washington, DC: 5th January 2010: Officials in the Obama White House are now considering the possibility that the Christmas Day attempt by Nigerian terrorist Umar Farouk Mutallab to blow up an airliner about to land in Detroit was deliberately and intentionally facilitated by unnamed networks inside the US intelligence community. This was the gist of a report by Richard Wolf delivered in this evening's edition of cable network's MSNBC's Countdown program, hosted by Keith Olbermann….

'Wolf attributed his account to top officials in the Obama White House. The intentional sabotage of US antiterrorist screening procedures would explain why Mutallab had been able to use his US visa, escape interrogation and special searches, and board the flight, even though he was clearly festooned with every red flag in the annals of airport security.

If Wolf's report is accurate [of course it is, as far as it goes: Ed.], these Obama officials may well be pulling on a thread which could begin to unravel the entire secret structure of illegitimate power which has afflicted this country – in this case, the apparatus which manufactures terrorist incidents for political purposes of mass manipulation, dictatorship, and war'.

'Wolf offered two possible explanations cited by his White House sources [sic] for the intentional sabotage of security procedures. The first was a "turf war" inside the intelligence community, with one agency seeking to hoard information and deny it to others'.

'The second was the intention to 'embarrass some leading figures', presumably referring to partisan animus or other resentments against Obama and his top appointees'.

Unfortunately, Mr Tarpley, has not been reading our reports – or he would have grasped by now the real reasons for these various grievous intelligence aberrations. But at least we now have a respected US journalist who understands extremely well that the United States' and the world's problems originate FROM WITHIN THE U.S. GOVERNMENT'S OWN STRUCTURES – an enormous leap forward which, as he puts it, suggests 'that all the naïve cover stories are about to collapse in a shock of recognition that networks infesting the US Government do indeed actively create and produce terrorist events for their own evil purposes. We need more mole detectors at the NSC, CIA, State Department, and Pentagon – not more harassment of the traveling public'.

Surely one of the most perceptive, incisive, and deadly accurate bullseyes that we have ever had the honour to report.

WHITE HOUSE PENETRATIONS 'SENT MESSAGES TO OBAMA'
The scandalous state of affairs which has surfaced following the arrival at a White House State Dinner for the Indian Prime Minister of an uninvited couple, Tareq and Michaele Salahi, has been further aroused with the latest revelation – noted inter alia by Sally Quinn in a Washington Post report on 6th January 2010 – that a third uninvited individual, Carlos Allen, also gate-crashed the State Dinner, passing himself off as a member of the Indian delegation. Ms. Quinn demanded that the White House Social Secretary, Desirée Rogers, a socialite from Chicago, should be made to resign over these incidents.

Once again we have a correspondent who appears to have got the wrong end of the stick. Quinn links the continued presence at the White House of Ms. Rogers to indications that Rahm Emanuel has finally seen the writing on his own wall, and is believed to be considering running for the post of Mayor of Chicago in the current year's upcoming mid-term elections.

She bases this on indications that Emanuel is said to have told unnamed personnel that the rôle of White House Chief-of-Staff is 'an 18-month job' and that he is now considering running for Mayor of Chicago. Since Rogers is reported to be 'a major social and political player in the Windy City', Ms. Quinn 'thinks laterally in the wrong direction' and wonders whether Rogers hasn't been sacked because of Mr Emanuel's political ambitions.

It's interesting how these American journalists just get it plain wrong because they don't educate themselves in the affairs of the 'Black' Intelligence Community.

So, since we ourselves are somewhat educated in this discipline, let us reinterpret the meaning of these three White House intrusions. Knowing the perverted and otiose mentality of these stupid operatives, it is clear to us that the purpose of the White House intrusions was to impress upon Mr Obama that he isn't safe ANYWHERE – even inside the White House itself.

In other words, the intrusions were intended to send a message to the President of the United States, from the angered criminalised Intelligence Power, along the familiar lines of: 'Do what we want or we'll make sure that you'll cease to be vertical'.

FURTHER ACTIONS TAKEN AGAINST THE BUSHSNAKES
On 3rd January, we were informed that George Bush Sr. and Barbara Bush have been prevented from touching any money and interfering with banking codes. Furthermore, a very knowledgeable source elaborated: 'All the money accumulated by (CHENEY'S) Halliburton has been removed, and Bush 41 and Bush 43 have been deprived of all their stolen money as well.

It also transpired that the Bushes were running two additional sets of phony books through false groups – one of which was called 'Halleluiah Trail', and another, run out of Europe, containing the name 'Horizon'. The operators of these fraudulent Ponzi schemes were ordered to reveal and then to disgorge funds held in custody; and when they demurred or stalled, or denied that they held the funds, the operatives concerned were arrested (between New Year's Day and Sunday 3rd January).

Of critical importance, too, is the fact that the Chinese authorities and the Swiss are refusing point blank to pay ANYTHING at all to the Bushes and their criminal associates.

• That of course means that, as has been plain for months, Wanta, who has 'worked for' Bush all along [see below], gets nothing either.

In summary, the Bush-CIA-DVD's 'Black Ops.' Intelligence grabitisation OPERATION STILLPOINT Syndicate is being DISMANTLED in 'real-time'. It began with the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) 'sib' operation, financing wars and destabilisation operations all over the place, creating maximal confusion – from which money was always to be made.

Though lubricated by the Bush-CIA's criminal drug-trafficking operations and CIA 'Black' money derived from innumerable Ponzi schemes and arms manufacturing, as well as by CIA corporations specialising in fraud such as Cheney's Halliburton with its scamming departments run from within the CIA and the Pentagon simultaneously, the entire edifice of the Octopus is in free-fall – a reality that its personnel cannot accept, so that they are being arrested, horizontalised or all of the above.

OTHER RELEVANT DEVELOPMENTS SINCE WE LAST REPORTED
Indeed, rearguard resistance continued right through the preparation of this report.

Therefore, the next segment of this report addresses miscellaneous interim developments since we last reported, of which the most important are the following:

• The ongoing audit by foreign personnel ('men in suits') of the Federal Reserve, led by Chinese, British and Swiss auditors, continued, we understand, throughout the holiday period. Enforcement personnel remained in place at the Fed to ensure that Settlement funds were/are not diverted in accordance with the Federal Reserve's normal corrupt procedures.

• During the review period, this service made repeated enquiries as to whether all avenues enabling corrupt diversions of funds into the hands of the Bush-DVD Crime Nexus had been closed. These enquiries were repeatedly answered in the affirmative: in other words, as stated elsewhere, scope for the Bush Syndicate to steal funds appears indeed to have been completely sealed off – indicating that the takedown of OPERATION STILLPOINT is substantive.

• International Monetary Fund:
Under the direction of the former French Finance Minister, M. Dominique Strauss-Kahn, corrupt operations appear to have been brought under control. It is now clear that his predecessor, the Spaniard, De Rato, left after two years in charge, under a cloud. Given George Bush Sr.'s extensive use of Spain as a receiving platform for drug-trafficking proceeds and other exotic illicit funds – and the fact, which we alone publicized, that the Bank of Spain ordered the Bush operatives out of their jurisdiction in 2007, giving them two days' notice (whereupon the corrupt Bush funds were reported to us to have wound up with the Vatican Bank, controlled by the German-Jewish Pope, Dr Ratzinger, and Dr Tietmeyer, the former president of the Bundesbank) – it is rather clear now that De Rato had to be kicked out of the Fund because of alleged engagement with the Bush Crime Syndicate in connection with OPERATION STILLPOINT.

DIARY OF EVENTS FOLLOWING 28TH DECEMBER 2009

• 28th December: The Editor was reliably informed that 'a lot of people got busted' during the past couple of days. As this information came from a figure with rather unsavoury contacts, and similar unconfirmed suggestions to the same effect were received from other sources, we believe this statement to have been accurate.

• 29th December: Between 12 and 14 corrupt bankers were reported to us to have been arrested in London on this date. In Paris, the top Trustee attended at Banque Paribas for the funds release procedure as planned but was subsequently reported to have encountered resistance from Paribas bankers and ended up, as reported to us, 'shouting and screaming' at the bankers.

We were also told that the Paris Trustee's fees were to be paid directly inter alia by President Sarkozy. A key Dallas-based Trustee was reported to be sick in bed with a fever temperature of 102 degrees and was reported to us to have been replaced, having also been identified as 'dragging his feet'. Although one source denied the above, we ourselves established that INTERPOL had indeed intervened in Paris to replace a senior Trustee, while a key Trustee was detained at a US operations centre and replaced, after he had been engaged in alleged delaying tactics.

• 30th December: Informed sources told us that they were 'expecting a lot more arrests'.

• 30th December: The funds were 'dropped down', i.e., made available gross, at midnight. Funds payable to top Trustees will have been taxed at the Treasury, with the gross amounts payable to Trustee recipients and distributors paid without tax being deducted.

• NOTE: This is a complex area which cannot be fully explained at this stage. On the one hand, it was IMPERATIVE for the gross funds to be made available within 2009 – so that taxes could be taken off the top for crediting within the calendar year 2009 and therefore available for use by the Government on the books within Fiscal Year 2010 – which we know from three sources took place.

Indeed, as indicated, a key broker/Trustee confirmed to us in writing on 1st January at 20:24 pm UK time that he was advised on 30 December by sources in both Europe and the United Kingdom that his taxes had already been deducted. On the other hand, double taxation is illegal, so the amounts that Trustees were to distribute had to be paid out gross – preventing the Obama Government from receiving the sizeable taxation accruals required on-balance sheet IMMEDIATELY, as the US Government is 'skint' due to the year that has been wasted in further attempts to revitalise the dying Fraudulent Finance carousel and to rescue OPERATION STILLPOINT pending the decisive action that had to be taken by the defrauded sovereign powers that became the Lien Holders.

Overall, however, the position is that the refusal of Banque Paribas to honour the top Trustee's instructions in respect of funds that we know have been taxed, represented a MAJOR BANK FRAUD under international banking and criminal law, for which the French bankers in question could have suffered literally ANY fate at the hands of INTERPOL – from summary execution, to their immediate incarceration or extradition to appropriate jurisdictions for judicial processing. The key Paris-based Trustee was also required to pay four countries which had floated certain bonds.

• 1st January 2010: It was reported to us that, focusing in part on preventing corrupt bankers and operatives diverting funds back to the Bush 'Black Ops.' Syndicate, INTERPOL had placed teams at both ends of certain Settlements transactions – especially given the endemic corruption within the Federal Reserve, where the Chairman, Dr Bernanke, features among the highest-level operatives within the US official structures who is vulnerable to being targeted under the POLICY CHANGE implemented at the US Department of Justice and in light of the necessary freedom of operation afforded INTERPOL following President Obama's Executive Order dated 16th December 2009.

• The main portions of taxes on the Settlement money were reported to us to have been taken out of the gross amount on 30th- 31st December 2009, so that they are applicable for tax purposes in calendar 2009, meaning that the proceeds are available to the Government now. At 8: 24pm on New Year's Day, we also received, in response to an earlier enquiry to a senior Settlements recipient, confirmation from both US and European sources that 'my taxes were taken off the top on or before 31st December in order for them to be credited to Fiscal 2009. I got that word Wednesday 12/30/09'.

Note: However given that 'Line-Item' payments were not implemented within calendar 2009, as should have occurred (indeed, had been promised for before Christmas), taxes cannot legally be removed from such gross payments in that context, since they are not payable until 15th April 2011; and payment is therefore expected by certain parties in full. Prior deduction of taxes in the current fiscal and calendar years from such payees' amounts would indeed represent major BANK FRAUD and would be eligible for legal action under RICO (three times damages). Put another way, taxes cannot be charged on the basis of constructive receipt: only on the basis of economic receipt.

• 1st January: The Texas firm of lawyers, Troutman Sanders – used in the past by the George Bush Syndicate – was reported to be engaged in breaking down the funds for delivery and distribution. As previously noted, when we were originally informed about this law firm's involvement with the distributions, we couldn't believe what we were being told. However for reasons not yet explained, we were told 'that's the way it's got to be'.

We pointed out that under the new dispensations [see above], any partner within that firm who may be dumb enough to continue functioning as though no fundamental discontinuity from the 'Black Operations' norm had taken place, would be extremely foolish in view of the fact that the penalty for treason in time of war is summary execution. Finally, we were advised that Troutman Sanders was being closely monitored and watched.

• 1st January: About 30 arrests of bankers and organised corruption participants were reported from both Europe and the United States (no further details). It is believed that INTERPOL had made preplanned arrangements to 'set arrestees up' in order to have them arrested 'in flagrante'.

Certainly INTERPOL has been monitoring ALL PHONE CALLS. Nothing at all can be discussed by any relevant party that is not monitored and recorded. Furthermore, INTERPOL personnel were working non-stop to ensure that the funds are secure and performing constant unexpected spot checks at all institutions involved in the transfers.

• 1st January: It was reported to us at 5:20pm UK time that Leon Panetta, the Director of Central Intelligence (CIA), who had been doing his best as late as 3rd January to block the Settlements, is now the target of an investigation and was quote 'physically cornered' unquote on this date not least because it was (correctly) suspected that he was intending to interfere with the Settlements process. We were later advised that Leon Panetta is indeed in severe trouble (as reported on 28th December 2009) and is among a number of highest-level Government figures who are candidates for being 'taken down'. At press date, Panetta was still in place, but 'on notice'.

• 4th January 2010: An arrest list was issued by INTERPOL for a large number of people 'standing in the way' of resolution to be taken into custody. When we made further enquiries, we established that Bench Warrants were issued on this date for service on 137 individuals in the United States. These people will be or are being arrested and taken into custody by US Marshals. Their passports, IDs and driving licenses, etc, will have been removed in the process.

Self-evidently, these arrests implied that those concerned had continued to be associated with OPERATION STILLPOINT sabotage activity designed to disrupt the Settlements payouts. However given that ALL WHO STAND IN THE WAY, from the highest to the lowest, will be investigated and prosecuted [see above], it could also have been the case that these people were on the arrest list anyway, and that with their return to their offices and desks, and the with reopening of the Courts following the long weekend, matters proceeded as had been planned by INTERPOL earlier.

• 4th January: Michael C. Cottrell received a death threat from telephone number 717-294 3687. The FEMALE voice said: 'Is this roadkill?' When they do stupid things like this, they simply advertise that we have trodden on their nerves. [Join the club, Michael].

[Following the Editor's posting of his belated Christmas Message on 4th January, our voicemail received THREE renditions of a satanic mass, including the initiation of a young woman into the worship of Satan: see at the top of this report. The harsh American male voice wasn't satisfied, evidently, with his first attempt, so he did it again – twice. This (and subsequent similar pathetic satanic assaults by the same means) indicates that, of course, the LAST thing these nutcases ever expected was a Biblically literate essay appearing on this website, which usually has to do with vexing worldly matters. The imprecations were full of hatred and venom against Jesus Christ. See the relevant passage from the Gospel of John appended at the top of this report. How shocked and infuriated these fools must be to be made aware that there are still those who are not ashamed to proclaim Jesus Christ, whether they like it or not, and that this is being done on a website that has become – thanks exclusively to YOUR support – widely read, as this crisis unfolds].

• 4th January: The senior Trustee in Paris was required to attend at Banque Paribas (allegedly one of the most corrupt banks in the world, reported to have held or to hold about 3,000 Bush Sr.-linked accounts) between 2:00am and 4:00am European time [8:00am and 10:00am EST], from which (given the huge accumulation of Bush accounts) the distribution must begin.

Bankers at the institution refused to release the funds, and shortly afterwards were arrested by INTERPOL personnel. The refusal of the French bankers to fulfil their obligations represented MAJOR BANK FRAUD [see above] under international banking and criminal law, given that taxes have been taken off the top (which we know from THREE sources, one of which came, as noted, from a Trustee to us IN WRITING).

Moreover this state of affairs represented an IMMENSE CRISIS for President Sarkozy if he or any of his colleagues were involved – as the President of France, like the President of the United States [see below] can be arrested, just like any other participant in the sabotage operations, for blocking the Settlements under the wide powers wielded both in the United States and of course abroad by INTERPOL under the jurisdiction of the World Court.

Before Christmas, we learned that French official sources had finally acknowledged that 'what has to be done has to be done' – which, being translated, meant that Paris had at long last realised and accepted that the Dollar Refunding Programme WILL be run out of London, as we have stated, and that they have to drop their typically sterile French envy of the fact that (as they see it) the British have 'got the better of them'.

In reality, all that has happened is that the British Monarchical Power has had to assert its power and right to obtain restitution for the grotesque violations perpetrated by the American criminal financiers against the sovereign LOAN money – for which the former US Treasury Secretary, Henry M. Paulson, has been reported by us to have been physically removed to British jurisdiction in Bermuda, where he will face the consequences of his serially corrupt behaviour.

Following the arrests of the French bankers in Paris, we understand that Banque Paribas suddenly started to cooperate – the reasoning, presumably, of bank officers remaining in situ being that it would be rather stupid to repeat the mistake of their arrested colleagues. For this reason alone, we gathered after midnight UK time in the early morning of 5th January 2010 that payment may have proceeded to the United States, with a senior Trustee operating out of Dallas able to carry out his distribution responsibilities at last. [See later information].

• 4th January: At 21:37pm UK time we learned that the US news media had confirmed that the President had returned to Washington from his vacation and that he had at once summoned (the recalcitrant) Director of Central Intelligence, Mr Panetta to the Oval Office. With President Obama having returned to the White House from his fraught vacation in Hawaii, it was reported to us that the President was 'kicking butt' – an activity that he had no choice but to undertake, given that if he demurred, he would be considered a co-conspirator and would be arrested himself.

Specifically, we were advised on 'special' authority that Mr Obama was explicitly confronted and informed that if he was found to have been involved with the sabotage operations that continued up to Christmas and throughout the holiday period, he himself would be arrested like those for which Bench Warrants were issued on the same date [see above]. The President responded that he had had nothing to do with the delays that occurred over the holidays.

• 4th January: Whether that was true or not (and it 'needed' to be accurate because if it wasn't, Mr Barack Obama would cease to be President of the United States), we were informed on this date that Timothy Geithner – despite his previous arrest, the removal of his passport and his driving license and the monitor attached to him, and despite severe earlier humiliations [see below] – had remained right in the thick of sabotage operations during the holidays and afterwards.

The same reportedly applied to the Comptroller of the Currency, John C. Dugan. One informant suggested to us that Mr Geithner was 'sick in the head', but our hypothesis was that he is the subject of multiple blackmailing operations.

We were advised that Geithner had been re-arrested and that the Comptroller of the Currency, John C. Dugan, said also to have been involved in money sabotage, was also reported to us to have been arrested, although this had not been confirmed to us by late on 6th January UK time.

• 4th January: Some of those arrested on 4th January were reported to us to have been cuffed and shipped to Europe (as happened late in 2007), to face justice in appropriate jurisdictions or under the jurisdiction of the World Court.

• 5th January: It was pointed out to us that prominent Republicans have or had been standing in the way of the Settlements. We knew that this must have been the case because of the anti-Obama barrage orchestrated by parties connected with the GOP for the past 13 months, to the exclusion of all else. This has been a major ongoing agitprop operation – the underlying purpose being hidden from view. On the surface, the objective has been to paint Obama as a crypto-Communist with mafia associations and all sorts of other dark failings and skeletons in his cupboard – as though his mass-murderer Republican predecessor (who is reported by monitoring sources to have been reduced to walking his dog at Crawford, TX, with a pooper-scooper, his wife Laura now living apart from him and only appearing for public consumption when her presence is considered 'essential'), had no blemishes and skeletons at all. But in reality, the underlying purpose of this ongoing orchestrated anti-Obama offensive has been to try to wrench the CIA's destructive Fraudulent Finance paradigm from oblivion in general, and to rehabilitate OPERATION STILLPOINT in particular.

It is unclear what these Republicans, who haven't understood this crisis, think they are doing continuing with their antagonistic sabotage stance, given the advent of the NEW PARADIGM summarised above. Perhaps these corrupt operatives imagine that they really are above the law, and have – like Geithner up to 4th January – simply not woken up to the reality that the ground has shifted so violently under their feet that they are wandering in a wilderness without life support.

• 5th January: It was confirmed [and reconfirmed by several further sources] that the 'lead Trustee' in Paris was finally paid out at midnight Paris time 4th/5th January, as a consequence of which the 160 country payees were finally also paid out.

Given multiple high quality confirmations, this information is considered reliable. However these developments did not occur until others standing in the way had been arrested or 'taken out'.

• 6th January: 'Downstream' resistance persisted, at least during the morning in the United States. Those still attempting sabotage are either so compartmentalised and spaced out that they haven't grasped what has happened, or else they STILL thought that they could 'get away with it'. We were emphatically assured that 'THEY CAN NOT'.

We were also tipped off that the legal firm Troutman Sanders, which is or was required to make distributions, had been put on notice that if a single deviation from Pay Orders and instructions were to take place within their firm, THE ENTIRE FIRM WOULD BE TAKEN OVER BY INTERPOL, while agents within the structures failing to pay out payee funds lodged with the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, in particular, would suffer the same fate without further warning.

'LONG AFTER THE HORSE HAS BOLTED' CORNER
The following instances of reality catching up with people who should have known better, and officials 'coming late to the party', have been greeted with a mixture of astonishment, mirth and quiet cynicism in this office. Specifically:

1: FINRA HAS JUST STARTED LOOKING INTO CDOs:
The Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA) was reported on 30th December by The Times, London, to have 'STARTED [sic] an investigation into synthetic Collateralised Debt Obligations [CDOs]' and has 'several investigations into so-called 'authentic CDOs' – begging the obvious question: so, there are unauthentic CDOs?

The report continued: 'The Securities and Exchange Commission' – the self-same regulator which is exposed above as having illegally traded PHANTOM SHARES on an illicit secret platform in the market, and is accordingly IN NO POSITION TO DO ANY REGULATING UNTIL IT HAS REGULATED ITSELF, at the very least – 'is also thought to be looking into the complex instruments created by the banks and sold to investors, such as pension funds'.

Our first predictable comment is: on what planet have these officials been vegetating for the past decade and more? Our second predictable observation is this: OF COURSE! Given the double-mindedness norm underlying all this wall-to-wall duplicity, it was NO PROBLEM for the S.E.C. to be 'regulating' with its left hand (or going through the motions of doing so) while illegally trading the phantom stock and scamming the market with its right hand!

THEREFORE, neither is it a problem here for FINRA and the Securities and Exchange Commission suddenly to embark upon 'investigations' into the Fraudulent Finance gimmicks developed by the criminal financial enterprises they were quote 'regulating' unquote. Why not? When everyone is double-minded, what's the problem?

• FINRA, the Financial Industry Regulatory AUTHORITY, is a menace and should be disbanded.

An 'Authority' IS NOT AN ENFORCEMENT AGENCY: it is just a toothless 'watchdog' which does little watching. It was deliberately established as a toothless entity relating to the state of affairs in the United Kingdom, where the marketing of securities is NOT PROPERLY REGULATED, as is supposed to be the case in the United States under the 1933 and 1934 Securities Acts. It 'replaced' NASD Inc. (the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc.) which wielded drastic enforcement powers under the Malone Act [see the Legal Notes, below]. When 'NASD became FINRA', so that discipline was deliberately relaxed, FINRA became its own trading platform, furthering the hidden destructive intent underlying OPERATION STILLPOINT.

The SUDDEN initiation of an investigation into synthetic Collateralised Debt Obligations (CDOs) at this late stage has everything to do with a belated attempt by FINRA officials to protect themselves from the axes falling out of the sky given the CHANGE OF POLICY at the US Department of Justice, rather than with an intention to do its job properly. In any case, we have long since exposed these fraudulent transactions: all FINRA needs to do is to READ WHAT WE HAVE PUBLISHED.

Christine Selb, writing for The Times from New York, elaborated:

‘To create a synthetic CDO, banks acted as the buyers of the underlying CDSs (Credit Default Swaps). This meant that the banks were betting that insured debts would default and the CDSs would pay out, while their clients, confident at the time in the exponential rise of the housing market, were betting that they would not have to pay out'.

'The banks have argued that taking the short side of the deal was a legitimate way of hedging against other exposure they had in the housing market'.

‘However, an article in The New York Times last week intimated that Goldman Sachs had stuffed synthetic CDOs with toxic CDSs and sold the instruments to unwitting institutional investors, while knowing that their short bets would swiftly pay out'.

'The paper said that some synthetic CDOs created by Goldman Sachs went bad within five months of being created by the institution. On its website, Goldman Sachs published a lengthy rebuttal to the allegations published in the New York Times'.

‘The bank said that it had lost $1.7 billion on residential mortgages in 2008 and asserted that it had created the synthetic CDOs to meet demand from clients, who were told that Goldman Sachs would take a short position against them'.

'“The buyers of synthetic mortgage CDOs were large, sophisticated investors”, the bank said. “They did not rely on the issuing banks in making their investment decisions”'.

• In other words, they believed that the name Goldman Sachs stands for integrity and probity (having of course failed to pay attention and to read on this website all about the serial criminal finance activities, thefts and diversions perpetrated by that arch-crook, Henry M. Paulson, Goldman Sachs’ former CEO); so if they boobed, that was their problem, not Goldman's.

• We now reveal that it was a Goldman Sachs compliance officer who told the Editor that the price of a synthetic ‘structured product’ is ‘what somebody is prepared to pay for it’.

2: THE GOLDMAN SACHS ‘CONTROVERSY’:
In The New York Times’ article, former Goldman employees and debt experts claimed that the bank knew that the CDOs it was designing and selling were highly risky. The Daily Telegraph [dated 30th December 2009] was more specific:

‘The sources claimed that rather than warning clients of the dangers, Goldman spent millions of dollars “short-selling” the instruments, reaping vast rewards when they imploded’.

‘Sylvain Raynes, an expert in structured finance at R & R Consulting, told The New York Times: “The simultaneous selling of securities to customers and shorting them is the most cynical use of credit information that I have ever seen”'.

‘When you buy protection against an event that you have a hand in causing, you are buying fire insurance on someone else’s house, and then committing arson”'.

• FACT: In other words, it is being stated here that the securities in question were marketed with criminal intent. Given the CHANGE OF POLICY at the US Department of Justice, it should follow that certain Goldman Sachs executives (and at other institutions involved in this obviously nefarious scamming activity) may be having sleepless nights: except that these people are so arrogant that they NEVER imagine that they can be caught out.

• This may no longer be a reliable assumption on their part.

• FACT: We exposed the corruption and fraud embedded in ‘structured finance’ back in 2008, both on this website and in International Currency Review – subscribers to which journal include large multinational financial institutions all over the world. Yet only now – long after a thousand horses have bolted out of the stable – has this started, belatedly, to become an issue.

• Maybe these people are suffering pain at last.

This state of affairs conforms to another Story’s Law:
‘Investigative journalists are hated when they investigate but are proved right years later when the timely nature and fact of their investigations, ignored at the time, has been forgotten’.

3: SHENZHEN NANSHAN POWER VS. GOLDMAN SACHS:
A state-owned Chinese thermal power generator is refusing to pay $80 million lost on two hedging contracts in a long-running dispute with Goldman Sachs, claiming that Western investment banks developed 'extremely complicated' derivative 'products' that were manifestly quote 'impossible to understand' unquote (on purpose of course).

On New year's Day, the Chinese entity revealed that J. Aron and Company, the commodities arm of Goldman Sachs, had threatened to sue it for more than $80 million compensation for termination of the contracts in October 2008 – shortly after the financial sector imploded due to the 'lockdown' of the $14.0+ sovereign 'real' money on 10th-12th September 2008. The Chinese thermal generating firm said, in a statement to its local stock exchange: 'We will not accept the demand by J. Aron for all the losses and related interests'.

In the face of the prospect of very large losses in October 2008, the Chinese securities regulator ordered the state-owned Shenzhen to cancel its agreement with J. Aron, which the regulator said that the thermal power firm had not been authorised to enter into. The regulator, China's Assets Supervision and Administration Commission (SASAC), is supporting Shenzhen in this dispute.

Specifically, Le Wei, SASAC's Vice-Chairman, said that foreign investment banks had 'maliciously' sold derivatives contracts that were 'intentionally complex and highly leveraged' to Chinese state-owned corporations. The banks had 'fraudulently peddled' the contracts with 'evil intentions'.

Accurate. See OPERATION STILLPOINT below, and our prior exposures of the Fraudulent Finance offensive. Interestingly, no foreign bank has yet dared to bring a legal action to pursue payments due under such Fraudulent Finance contracts. They can't – unless they are anxious to face public humiliation and terminal reputational damage. Which means that the criminal financial enterprises know perfectly well that they have been engaged in Fraudulent Finance.

4: MORGAN STANLEY SUED OVER A CDO:
On Christmas Eve, Morgan Stanley was at the receiving end of a lawsuit filed by a Virgin Islands-based pension fund over a $1.2 billion 'authentic CDO' (a package of debts, such as mortgages, sorted into tranches of varying levels of risk and sold to investors seeking the income stream from the debt repayments, according to the misleading prospectus).

The pension fund, which filed its suit in Federal Court, has accused the bank of stuffing the CDO with low-quality 'assets' which Morgan Stanley (like Goldman Sachs: see above) was simultaneously shorting. It is quite difficult to imagine anything more duplicitous than this formula.

5: FALCONE IN LEGAL CONTROVERSY
Philip Falcone, mentioned in an earlier report in this series, who made vast sums shorting sub-prime mortgages as head of Harbinger Capital, was ordered by a Delaware Judge at the end of last year to answer accusations of fraud and civil conspiracy. The allegations relate to a takeover battle dating back to 2006. Falcone also bet heavily against HBOS in 2009.

In fact, both Falcone brothers are caught up in this.

6: HR 4173: THE WALL STREET REFORM AND CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT:
Rather than reiterate the work of others, we append as an Addendum at the foot of this report, the text of a Bloomberg report dated 30th December 2009 by David Reilly. Essentially, it reveals that the US House of Representatives is a corrupt sham, making a mockery of representative government and willfully adding, in spades, to America's problems. Rather like our House of Common Idiots.

DOCUMENTED EXPOSURE OF OPERATION STILLPOINT
As stated at the top of this report, we will now expose and desconstruct OPERATION STILLPOINT – the five-phase criminal offensive against the United States and the American people which these reports have been leading up to, and which it has proved possible by using the methodology we have employed as these investigations have developed, to reveal.

• BRIEF PROLOGUE:
HOW THE EDITOR 'RODE THE BEAST'
The Editor started work on this investigation after attending a meeting in Washington DC in June 2002 convened by a controlled entity ostensibly concerned with 'managing' the plight of the 9/11 bereaved. During that event, an agent handed out about 30 portfolios containing copies of Federal Reserve print-outs and other banking documents detailing corrupt financial payments of immense proportions, including illicit transfers to George H. W. Bush when he was President of the United States, which is of course illegal – together with authorisations by Dr Alan Greenspan, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and who turns out to have served as George H. W. Bush Sr.'s master criminal finance technician.

All the portfolios handed out by the US agent were immediately placed into the hands of CIA operatives who had packed the meeting at the last moment for the precise purpose of blocking distribution of the documents – with the exception of one portfolio that was handed over to a representative from Vanity Fair (which never touched the information, thus missing the biggest story in modern world history), while another portfolio containing the 'smoking gun' documents were later obtained by the Editor of this service.

To cut an extremely long story (which will be recounted elsewhere) short, the Editor became aware that Leo/Lee Wanta, subject of coverage in the late Claire Sterling's book 'Thieves' World' [Simon & Schuster, New York, ISBN 0-671-74997-8, 1994], might well provide answers to questions raised as a consequence of the Editor's fieldwork. The Editor therefore targeted Wanta and, on a certain date in May 2004, arrived at his doorstep in a remote Wisconsin location. Mr Wanta opened the door and granted the Editor an interview lasting three hours.

Thereafter, the Editor made his developing website platform available to Wanta, who has a reputation for being the most proficient deception artist in existence – on the 'open' principle (admittedly fraught with risks) that if 'trust' was placed in Wanta, it might be reciprocated (an assessment that flew in the face of the odds: but that was part of the risk).

Starting in the spring of 2006, we therefore began to highlight the curious arrangement (since established to have been a White House/US Treasury ruse) whereby $4.5 trillion of funds were repatriated from safekeeping at the People's Bank of China (originally facilitated by the Chinese intelligence operative Howie Kwong Kok) to finance the intended Dollar Refunding Programme – not to compensate Wanta for his earlier intelligence 'work' in helping to ransack the Soviet Union with the assistance of Soviet insiders and other crooks, and for his periodic imprisonment under the Clinton Administration (President Clinton procured, by devious conspiratorial means involving the Governor of Wisconsin, to have Wanta arrested on largely trumped-up charges, as we later exposed, and incarcerated: whereupon Clinton stole the United Nations' contract Number 5, which had been awarded to Wanta: see below).

To summarise the key point here, it is now deduced that the $4.5 trillion was made available by the Chinese authorities TO FINANCE THE REFUNDING – but that when it was realised that Wanta didn't know what he was doing (and would, if left to handle the Refunding, abuse his responsibility so that the world would have experienced an even more catastrophic blow-up than actually occurred in 2007-09) – the Bush/Paulson Treasury (spearheaded by the operative Henry M. Paulson) revamped OPERATION STILLPOINT, as described below, instead of Wanta handling the Refunding (not least because of immense opportunities for private illicit, untaxed profit in the process). In other words, they realised after the funds were transferred, that Wanta would mess everything up. And how right they were – judging by the confused twists and turns in the virtual projects that he told the Editor (in a Staten Island Hotel in November 2007) that he was intending to finance.

The Editor's calculation all along was that if he followed the Wanta trail, a degree of truth would eventually emerge. We then found ourselves caught up in his campaign to procure economic receipt of the $4.5 trillion, running a campaign of exposure via this website which Wanta more or less commandeered – sending the Editor faxed instructions, which are held in our files – while we generally provided him with a publicity platform that he otherwise lacked.

Moreover, on the same principle, the Editor rashly LENT Wanta $35,000 of his own private funds (obtained from the successful sale of a central London private house) for a period of two years at 7% arms' length interest – at the suggestion of Wanta through Steven Goodwin, a CIA-approved Wanta Attorney based in Richmond, VA. The purpose of this loan was to provide the restitution funds, plus other fees, demanded by the Wisconsin Court as the price for the ending of Wanta's extended probation (which was scheduled to end on 28th November 2010).

After a delay lasting for more than 4 months, while authorities debated what on earth to do given this 'unanticipated wildcard development' (as lending Mr Wanta money for this purpose, we later discovered, had been forbidden to Agency and other personnel; and in any case Wanta did not repay the loan on the due date (11th June 2007 or at any time since, so has stolen the loan funds – which he has also done, we have subsequently learned, with certain other monies), the Wisconsin State Department of Corrections was finally left with no alternative but to award Wanta an Absolute Discharge from his Wisconsin Court-ordered probation, effective 14th November 2005.

After the $4.5 trillion was brought over from Beijing in May 2006 and the money was not deposited for Wanta's account(s), we started the de facto exposure campaign on behalf of Leo Wanta, which continued until it had to be abruptly terminated in March 2008.

This happened because Wanta had been consorting and deliberating behind our backs with the Bushes, Cheney, et al., contrary to the stance he had maintained in dealings with us – and because we received warnings from others that we were being used. In fact this came as no surprise to the Editor, who had understood from the outset that he might be riding the beast, and that the beast would in all probably shake him off his back. Which is what happened.

Now in the course of this operation, and for two years prior to meeting Wanta in person, the Editor obtained a large portfolio from the public domain of documents, and learned an immense amount about corrupt intelligence operations which could not have been obtained other than by the use of methodology such as is summarised above.

In other words, this represented nothing less than an unwitting de facto penetration of criminal intelligence for international investigative journalism purposes, guided by the Editor's instinctive understanding that the investigations would eventually hit pay-dirt.

What we didn't know was the exact nature of the beast that the Editor was riding. It will now be exposed. We were actually inadvertently, from June 2006 to March 2008, assisting the progress of OPERATION STILLPOINT, without realising it. But in conformity with the Editor's perception that the truth would be more than likely to emerge, Wanta made a number of serious mistakes in the second half of 2007 and the first quarter of 2008, which saved the situation: and indeed, looking back, the Editor has a strong sense of having been guided throughout.

OPERATION STILLPOINT IN WANTA'S OWN WORDS
We begin with a communication from Wanta to President Barack Obama dated 25th December 2009. We will then proceed on the same basis as in the report dated 26th November 2009. That report carried the following introductory observations which have to be replicated here for clarity:

• We publish herewith detailed intelligence the implications of which will surely be clear to 'the interested' and to close students of the prevailing unprecedented global criminal finance crisis, and on which we will make no further comment and will answer no questions.

• This is the SECOND 'delivery' of such intelligence. It is based on a sworn and signed Affirmation document dated 3rd January 2010, obtained by this service at 10:02pm UK time on that date.

The documented NUMBERED FACTS given below are referenced thus : (7), (18), etc, by the Notes and References at the foot of the report above the Addendum. With the exception of the Wanta letter to the President, all the data presented hereafter are sourced from the signed Affirmation document provenanced from impeccable sources.

ON THE DAY OF THE ATTEMPTED AIRCRAFT BOMBING
Leo Wanta sent a communication to The Office of the President, The Hon. Barack Obama, The White House, West Wing , from Ambassador Leo Emil Wanta, dated 25 December 2009 – the very day when a terrorist attempted to blow up the Northwest Airlines aircraft – requesting 'Urgent Confirmation' under 'Security Code: 'STILLPOINT', carrying the following messages:

• 'Partial proof of funds to lawfully [sic] pay my Civil Repatriation Income Taxes of US Dollar 1.565 Trillion NOW' [referencing further pages of historical material also sent with the communication];

• 'Merry Christmas to our Great Nation'. [Reiteration of Wanta's overdone 'patriotic card', identified in our exposures of the Principality of Snake Hill fraud: see the report dates immediately below]

Mr Obama was of course in Hawaii with his family at the time.

This communication, which was also disseminated via the Internet, was delivered on a letterhead of The Principality of Snake Hill – a fraudulent virtual entity that does not exist, as of course we have long since proved [see our reports dated 20th September, 22nd October, and 17th November 2009]. It seems to us that communicating with the Head of State on a fraudulent letterheading is fraud or considerably worse: after all, the Head of State is entitled to receive only the truth.

If the Head of State is lied to and deceived, to whom should he or she appeal in order to be told the truth, the Man in the Moon?

Could this communication have had ANYTHING at all to do with possible precautionary obfuscation of the allegation, already publicised by this service, that the Wanta corporation named Marvelous Investments Limited financed al-Qaeda? Such an hypothesis might 'explain' the hasty, reckless, self-defeating use of the discredited Principality of Snake Hill letterheading, and Mr Leo Wanta's invocation of the defunct 'Security code: STILLPOINT', as well as the reality that President Obama was vacationing in Hawaii, a fact that was in the public domain and that Wanta would have known – so that, therefore, sending the communication to the President on a fraudulent letterhead at the wrong address on Christmas Day was manifestly anomalous.

At the risk of tedious repetition, we repeat herewith the statement from the Australian Embassy, Dublin, informing our Irish colleague. Richard Sharpe, of the self-evident fact of the non-existence of the Principality of Snake Hill [the use of 'snake', i.e., serpent, in the name and virtual image for this fabrication being, we presume, NOT ACCIDENTAL. It is extraordinary how these people openly advertise their allegiance to the Evil One, isn't it?].

Ms. Brenda Farrell, of the Australian Embassy in Dublin, confirmed on 23rd September 2009 to one of the Editor's private associates (Richard Sharpe) that there is no Principality in Australia:

"Austremb Dublin" <Austremb.Dublin@dfat.gov.au> wrote:

Secondly, OPERATION STILLPOINT is being dismantled, and is dead, as explained in this report.

However, Leo Wanta chooses not to recognise either of these realities. This represents a clear example of the blindness induced by arrogance: about which more could be said, but won't be, because we must proceed with the exposure of OPERATION STILLPOINT – the five-phase criminal project to take down the United States and seize the assets of the nation and its people.

GORBACHEV: WORLD REVOLUTION EMINENCE GRISE IN THE WOODWORK
Recall former Soviet President Gorbachëv's involvement with the Bush Crime Syndicate inter alia via his participation in Deutsche AG (the former Barrington Investment Group). Finally, bear in mind that it has transpired that Wanta has been 'working for' George H. W. Bush Sr. all along, facilitating his financial activities – even while still languishing on probation and confined within the State of Wisconsin up until the Editor's private (stolen) LOAN funds procured his release from such Court confinement effective 14th November 2005, and subsequently

And before we begin the exposure, recall also the following:

(a) ALL involved in this financial corruption are to be investigated and prosecuted, there being no exceptions; and:

(B) The enhanced powers of INTERPOL and the de facto suspension of Habeas Corpus in the context of THIS CRISIS and for no other reason.

EVIDENCE ON OPERATION STILLPOINT PROVIDED BY WANTA ON 28TH SEPTEMBER 2006
The exposure begins with information provided by Leo/Lee Wanta in September 2006 [passages and words in square brackets that have been inserted here by the Editor for clarification do not appear in the underlying signed and sworn Affirmation document]:

• (1); On 28th September, between approximately 12:05pm EDT and 12:13 EDT, Affirmation source placed a phone call to Leo/Lee E. Wanta, [then] Chairman and sole owner of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., in the course of which Wanta advised source of the following:

• (2): That the US Treasury system is going to be reorganized, by changing 'debt to legal tender', and that this 'debt' will be paid off using 'securitized debt as legal tender'.

• (3): That the US Dollar used internationally will cease to be issued by the Federal Reserve, but will instead be issued by the US Treasury under Henry M. Paulson Jr. [the former CEO of Goldman Sachs, who was summoned by George Bush Jr. from Wall Street to replace John Snow as Treasury Secretary shortly after the $4.5 trillion was received from the People's Bank of China].

• (4): That the US Treasury will monetize all Federal Reserve and Federal Government debt and will eliminate Personal Income Tax.

• (5): That interest earned on the bonds (debt) will remain with the US Treasury at 6% per annum, and will not be earned via the commercial banks and the Federal Reserve [see below].

• (6): That the US Congress will issue US Dollar [bills], and that [the monetary aggregate] M-3 will not reflect any Federal Reserve Notes.

• (7): That there will be no [official or other] borrowing from banks, since all lending will be initiated from within the US Treasury.

• (8): That the US Treasury will reclaim power to create the US Dollar and ELIMINATE THE BANKING SYSTEM.

• (9): That "refunding" of the US Dollar/US banks and the Federal Reserve Banks will no longer be necessary. [On the contrary] the US Treasury becomes the only Central Bank for the United States of America, with Hank Paulson the ONLY Central Banker for the United States of America.

• (10): That all debt will reside in US Treasury Direct Accounts and US Treasury Depository Accounts.

• (11): That [accordingly] the US Dollar will be weak [on the foreign exchange markets] and on a short-term basis [so that] Chinese products will increase in price.

• (12): That “everybody” (meaning inter alia, the French and the Iraqi authorities) agrees that there will be no “terrorists”, and that the 'old Federal Reserve Notes' will become the new US Dollar with NO TREASURY BONDS: ONLY TREASURY DIRECT ACCOUNTS.

• (13): And that: This programme is codenamed: OPERATION STILLPOINT.

[End of the first batch of special intelligence].

• NOTE: This is/was the underlying long-range subversion programme. The NESARA fictions are/were CIA disinformation ploys to deflect any attention from OPERATION STILLPOINT and to ensure that if it leaked, it would be swamped by NESARA-type confusion, stirred up to fever pitch if 'necessary' by websites specialising in the maximising of the fog of confusion.

• Wanta ‘worked/works with’ the Bush-CIA-DVD control and criminal finance syndicate, which is how he, as a key latent player in this massive takedown operation – which was to follow the takedown of the Soviet Union – obtained this information.

As noted, his Christmas 2009 communication to President Obama, a copy of which we hold, and which is written in Wanta’s own handwriting, is labelled: ‘Security Code: STILLPOINT’.

Other signed/unsigned Wanta documents obtained from and in the public domain, and from Wanta himself, and held in our own archive, are likewise labelled OPERATION STILLPOINT, stretching back many years – which PROVES that OPERATION STILLPOINT has been ‘live’ under the control of Bush Sr. since the Reagan era (1983-84), although it was 'activated' in earnest in 1991.

• We can now go further: it is almost certain that the intended ‘takedown’ of the United States and the ‘takedown’ of the Soviet Union represented two (dialectical) components of one gigantic DVD-linked operation, quite possibly a revolutionary Metabridge (CIA-DVD-Mossad and MI-6) offensive to ‘remodel the whole world’ to conform with a ‘New (Non-Cold War) Paradigm’ dreamed up by the cack-handed but irredeemably arrogant financial manipulators served by these agencies.

We will now proceed to demonstrate that OPERATION STILLPOINT was still ‘live’ as late as 6th December 2009, when the Chinese parties and the British Monarchical Power (namely, the Lien Holders) executed their Lien for $47 trillion on the US Treasury, which finally killed OPERATION STILLPOINT – which the Geithner Treasury, in some turmoil, had been making every effort to resuscitate – stone cold dead.

• But the earlier continued ‘non-dead’ status of OPERATION STILLPOINT IS THE EXPLANATION for why the Settlements have been blocked and sabotaged for years.

And as current and recent data [see above] demonstrate, it is clear now that compartmentalised cadres in the key countries (France, Britain, even Germany, even China to some extent, and the United States), and the equally de facto compartmentalised bankers and intermediaries, have not been kept up to speed by their cowed handlers with the fact that the ground had shifted violently beneath their feet – so that they have continued behaving as though OPERATION STILLPOINT was still ‘live’ (even though few of them would have had knowledge of it or of the overall picture).

This, then, explains the continued resistance and sabotage AFTER THE EXECUTION OF THE LIEN, why INTERPOL had to be given its de facto diplomatic immunity in the United States, why the US Department of Justice was compelled at long last to CHANGE ITS POLICY (i.e., to start doing its job), why Bench Warrants had to be served, for instance, on 137 individuals on 4th January 2010 – and all the other atrocious developments that we have had to try to report as this massive crisis has juddered towards resolution or catastrophe.

NAMES OF ELECTED AND APPOINTED U.S. OFFICIALS IMPLICATED IN OPERATION STILLPOINT ACCORDING TO THIS DOCUMENTED EVIDENCE
The following sequence contains information obtained in November 2009. When considered in the context of what we now know about OPERATION STILLPOINT and that the execution of the Lien by the injured sovereign plaintiffs on or about the 6th December 2009 threw the continued de facto hegemony of the Bush-directed sabotage operations designed to sustain OPERATION STILLPOINT into disarray, we can see how very close we came to the implementation by default of OPERATION STILLPOINT – which, having been torpedoed on 10th-12th September 2008, the Paulson Treasury sought, on behalf of the Intelligence Power under Bush Sr.’s hegemony, to restart under President Obama, with Hillary Clinton in the driving seat at the State Department (given that the Bushes and Clintons ‘work together’ on behalf of the Fifth Column element of the Intelligence Power).

Moreover this documented evidence DIRECTLY IMPLICATES, in addition to Wanta, the following operatives frequently mentioned in these reports, who must now be concerned, if they have not been arrested, that they will face the consequences of their sabotage behaviour under the NEW POLICY at the Department of Justice – and given the supremacy, with its diplomatic immunity, of INTERPOL: former President Bush Sr., Henry M. Paulson Jr. (held in Bermuda, according to our own published information), former President Clinton, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, the US Treasury Secretary, Timothy Geithner, Leon Panetta (CIA DCI), the former Fed Chairman Dr Alan Greenspan, Rahm Emanuel (Obama's Chief of Staff, who hopes to 'escape' as prospective Mayor of Chicago), and the DVD's leading banker, Dr Joseph Ackermann.

BACK-UP OFFICIALLY-SOURCED EVIDENCE DATED NOVEMBER 2009
Specifically:

• (14): On 2nd November 2009, between approximately 6:05pm EST and 6:18 pm EST, Affirmation source placed a telephone call to a special contact, who advised source of the following:

• (15): That [as previously reported by this service] former President G. W. Bush ordered Henry M. Paulson, the former US Treasury Secretary, to contact BOTH former President Bill Clinton and the current Secretary of State, Mrs Hillary Clinton, [instructing them] to get in touch with the current Secretary of the Treasury, Timothy Geithner [this job was allocated to former President Clinton] and the Director of Central Intelligence [CIA], Leon Panetta [this was to be Mrs Clinton's task] to order them to STOP RELEASE of the 'Settlement funds'.

[The purpose of this manoeuvre, which of course replicated innumerable earlier sabotage operations – but the main difference here is that we have DOCUMENTED INFORMATION TO REPORT – was to prevent the collapse of OPERATION STILLPOINT].

• (16): That President Obama [is sick of this nonsense which is bedevilling his Presidency and] definitely wants the Settlements 'done now'.

• (17): That [as the matter is expressed in the Affirmation document] 'the Chinese officially have "had it with 41" [George Bush Sr.] now'.

• (18): On 3rd November 2009, between approximately 7:14pm EST and 7:16pm EST, Affirmation source placed a telephone call to a special contact, who advised as follows:

• (19): Secretary of the Treasury Geithner was visited by enforcement people at 11:30am EST, and at 1:03pm he 'O.K'd' the release.

[As you will have seen, we now know that Geithner, despite the severe pressures and humiliations that have been visited upon him] was STILL interfering as late as 4th January 2010].

• (20): That the Chinese wanted their 'obligations fulfilled' [sic].

• INSERTED NOTE: cf. a belated French official 'acceptance' that 'what has to be done has to be done', in the context of the British Monarchical Power obtaining restitution and the US Dollar Refunding proceeding from London – something the French are believed to have resisted but which they cannot prevent: so they appear to have finally had to adopt a sensible, pragmatic attitude here, realising that the German 'case', being tied hand and foot to the Bush criminal CIA Syndicate 'Black Ops' dimension, is severely degraded by association with the Bush OPERATION STILLPOINT (to take down the United States component of the 'Main Enemy') – which the French were assisting through their links to Germany under the 1963 Treaty of the Elysée, of indefinite duration, which provides that both countries must reach an analogous position in respect of all matters relating to external affairs.

In other words, the French appear suddenly or belatedly to have realised, following the execution of the Lien, that they were in danger of 'going down with Bush and Germany'. If they continued their obstructive behaviour, that is what would happen.

• (21): On 4th November 2009, between approximately 2:45pm EST and 2:47pm EST, Affirmation source placed a phone call to a special source, who advised as follows:

• (22): That two critical arrests were about to be made.

• (23): That another confrontation with Treasury Secretary Geithner is necessary.

• (24): That Secretary of State Mrs Clinton has instructed the State Department personnel NOT to transfer any money/funds to ANYONE. [However, as you may well recall from our report dated 28th December 2009, four of Mrs Clinton's senior State Department personal aides were arrested on 17th December accused of wire fraud, a felony which, on conviction, entitles the recipient to 20 years in jail. These operatives had been surreptitiously moving money, on the instructions of Mrs Clinton, who, as Secretary of State, is in charge of 'international economic development'.

The arrest of these four operatives resulted in the immediate collapse of the Copenhagen false-flag 'Climate Change' summit, because the funds were to have been illegally transferred to kick-start remittances to country participants under cover of the 'Climate Change' gobbledygook, to finance hidden leveraged financial trading operations under the domestic and international radar, invigorating the fake, criminalised 'Climate Change' compartment of Fraudulent Finance.

So, when Mrs Clinton intervened to block transfers as revealed to source on 4th November, she was being selective. She intended, on behalf of the Syndicate etc, to have the funds diverted for the foregoing purpose.

• (25): On 5th November 2009, between approximately 6:50pm EST and 6:51pm EST, Affirmation source received a telephone call from a special contact, who advised as follows:

• (26): That both Leon Panetta, the CIA's Director of Central Intelligence, and Treasury Secretary Geithner, had again been confronted after they delayed and/pr stopped release of the Settlements.

• (27): That Treasury Secretary Geithner was now 'so shaken' that he was on 'suicide watch', supervised by members of enforcement teams.

• (28): That Former Treasury Secretary Paulson, the former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Greenspan and President Obama's [White House] Chief of Staff, Rahm Emanuel, had been ordered to STAND DOWN – that is to say, to cause no further delays or interference.

• (29): That despite all of the above, the CEO of Deutsche Bank, Dr Joseph Ackermann [the DVD's chief banker] and George H. W. Bush, have both stated that the Settlement funds will be kept by them UNTIL JANUARY 2010. WHICH IS PRECISELY WHAT HAPPENED.

• Therefore, OPERATION STILLPOINT was STILL functioning into December 2009. It is thought that the reason that the funds only started being released on 5th January (despite Bench Warrants, arrests, horizontalisations, confrontations and other forms of necessary pressure) MAY (but we don't know whether this is true or not), reflect the possibility that Settlements funds were placed out of reach in some manner. ANOTHER possibility, which might begin to explain the mystery of why the Bushes and Clintons and their associates haven't been jailed in front of the TV cameras, is that ALL these parties routinely play dialectical double games, to confuse onlookers.

But this is just speculation on our part at this point.

OVERALL ASSESSMENT AND CONCLUSION
From the above, which is based on sworn and affirmed documentation from impeccable sources of course, it can be seen that while OPERATION STILLPOINT has again been frustrated – this time as a consequence of the Lien on the US Treasury in the sum of $47 trillion, the de facto suspension of Habeas Corpus in the context of INTERPOL's new US diplomatic status, and the drastic associated CHANGE OF POLICY at the US Department of Justice – the saboteurs successfully delayed, as was revealed to sources in November, release of the funds until January 2010.

Moreover notwithstanding that all funds held by the Bushsnakes, and all access to codes, have been/were removed from their control, and notwithstanding the waves of arrests, which assumed dramatic proportions early in this New Year, these Fifth Column criminals nevertheless succeeded in holding the Obama Government, the United States, the American people, and the whole world to ransom up to the time of posting.

And here we need to report a further dimension. This is such a HUGE SUBVERSION OPERATION, which has been ongoing for so long (since early Reagan) that it has been suppressed on several past occasions, only to resurface again later in a different format. The first wave of the offensive occurred in the first Reagan term, with the previous Dollar Refunding operation [not discussed here], in 1984. Other OPERATION STILLPOINT initiatives, based on exploiting the consequences of the orchestrated Savings and Loan scams handled with the underworld (which was the second wave), were closed down in 1989.

In 1992, money raised from international banks, as revealed from the original 'FINs' documents obtained by the Editor of this service following that conference in Washington, DC, in June 2002, was then diverted to Bush Sr. and many of his outlets, under Dr A. Greenspan's say-so (and we published all this data in International Currency Review, with comprehensive facsimiles of the documents in question).

Those proceeds – on which interest of 7.5% per annum has been chargeable for a 20-year period (therefore ending in 2012), when the 200+ banks from which the funds were raised will require their principal back – was stolen and used for yet more leveraging, hypothecation and illicit, off-balance sheet, untaxed Ponzi operations, the proceeds of which were stashed offshore.

After President Clinton had procured the arrest in Switzerland of Wanta, and his incarceration, he stole Mr Wanta's United Nations contract Number Five, mandating the issuance of unsubordinated senior Medium-Term Notes, the proceeds of which were likewise used to further the objectives of OPERATION STILLPOINT and for bribery, corruption and self-enrichment purposes.

Meanwhile myriad Ponzi schemes were systematically proliferated involving the ransacking of investors – the most gigantic, revealed for the first time in this report, being the illicit floating of 2.25 trillion of PHANTOM CMKM/CMKX STOCK, for which the fleeced investors now require the corrupt Securities and Exchange Commission to cough up $3.87++ trillion. This of course makes the Madoff and Stanford operations look like petty crimes by comparison. We are advised directly by the lawyers concerned that the filing of this class action lawsuit against the S.E.C. is held pending satisfaction of the Settlements in general, and immediate payment out of Court of the $3.87++ trillion due to the fleeced and scammed CMKX/CMKX private investors in particular.

Each time that one of the tentacles of the Octopus (= OPERATION STILLPOINT) has been wrenched from the putrid creature, it either sprouts another tentacle, or else maximises the potential for a different tentacle to achieve the outcomes that have been aborted or frustrated elsewhere. For instance, in order to achieve the total corruption of the Federal Reserve System, given the 'need' to develop 'other products' such as the synthetic 'structured' products and sub-prime operations developed in the 1990s, the US Federal Reserve 'needed' to become both the regulator and the purchaser – on the same 'sib' model, essentially, as the illicit trading operations of the Securities and Exchange Commission revealed in this report.

But when this nexus of criminal finance operations was finally faced up to, and challenged by the exasperated international community, spearheaded by the 160 countries (which were finally paid out on 5th January 2010) and by the primary aggrieved sovereign owners of the loan funds stolen and diverted by the OPERATION STILLPOINT criminals holding high office, past and present, the entire edifice of corruption started to collapse – bringing the Bush Crime Family down, sending the CIA, the State Department and other US Government structures into internal strife and turmoil, and sharply truncating the survival prospects of the Bush Crime Family's Clinton-CIA associates.

DELUSIONS OF AUTHORITY WHICH DOES NOT EXIST
As Wanta's communication sent to President Obama on Christmas Day makes clear, he still thinks he has authority under STILLPOINT. In fact he asserts this categorically in communications, also supposedly provenanced from the fraudulent Principality of Snake Hill, to others (for instance, in a communication to a third party on 6th January 2010). In reality he's gone through the Looking Glass and is walking upside down on the ceiling, imagining things. Like Cheney, he may be going nuts – which is what eventually happens to people whose lives revolve around deceiving others.

• He is probably in a bound situation which precludes him from switching his 'legend'.

Certainly it would have been a catastrophic error to have entrusted him with ANY new financial responsibility: after all, he can't even be bothered to explain politely, by letter, to a stranger who bailed him out of his probation at a cost of $35,000, why he has taken no steps to repay what he should have paid back on 11th June 2007, with interest. So, if he can't be trusted with a mere $35,000, how could he possibly have been trusted with vastly larger sums of money?

• This point, we have had confirmed to us, was taken decisively on board some time ago.

In any case, all who 'worked for' the Bush Crime Syndicate are out in the freezing cold. For ever.

OPERATION STILLPOINT is dead and buried – thank the Lord Almighty.

The United States has AGAIN been saved from the ravages of the foreign-inspired Fifth Column that has burrowed deep into the fabric of its arrogant and criminalised Intelligence Power – now bitterly split between the rival collapsing Bush-DVD cadres and operatives who are believed to be slightly (but only slightly) less brain-dead – in the sense that at least they agree that the United States should not be destroyed by a malicious foreign penetration of enemy serpents from within. Of course they should have stamped on the serpents long ago: but that's a separate issue.

The pressing reality, looking ahead, is that all who have been associated with this sabotage and betrayal of the United States and the American people are now officially ECONOMIC TERRORISTS.

So, finally, whatever messy developments may ensue, there is indeed now a glimmer of hope that the corrupted Intelligence Power can be PURGED OF THE SNAKES IN ITS MIDST – not least given that as the corrupt fiat money spigot is progressively or immediately, as a consequence of these developments, denied to the greedy US Intelligence Power, the purge will have to continue.

THE U.S. INTELLIGENCE POWER: A MENACE TO THE WHOLE WORLD
The fundamental problem, as we have previously reiterated, is that this crisis is also bound up with the perverse intent of the arrogant Intelligence Power to hold onto its hegemony over the entire US Government, developed because of its access to endless supplies of 'Black' fiat money, and thanks to its 'power of penetration'. The behaviour of Leon Panetta right up to this end-game and beyond, confirms this assessment without a shadow of doubt.

What these exposures and parallel developments may thus have achieved is the decisive blow that the CIA and its subsidiaries will suffer as their free-wheeling access to limitless illicit funds through Fraudulent Finance is discontinued. That would be the most far-reaching outcome of all.

ADDENDUM:
HR 4173: THE WALL STREET REFORM AND CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT

By David Reilly, Bloomberg: 30th December 2009:
To close out 2009, I decided to do something that I bet no member of Congress has done – actually read from cover to cover one of the pieces of sweeping legislation bouncing around Capitol Hill.

Hunkering down by the fire, I snuggled up with H.R. 4173, the financial-reform legislation passed earlier this month by the House of Representatives. The Senate has yet to pass its own reform plan. The baby of Financial Services Committee Chairman Barney Frank, the House bill is meant to address everything from Too-Big-To-Fail banks to asleep-at-the-switch credit-ratings companies to the protection of consumers from greedy lenders.

I quickly discovered why members of Congress rarely read legislation like this. At 1,279 pages, the 'Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act' is a real slog. And yes, I ploughed through all those pages. (Memorandum to Chairman Frank: "ystem" at line 14, page 258 is missing the first "s").

The reading was especially painful since this reform sausage is stuffed with more gristle than meat. At least, that is, if you are a taxpayer hoping the bailout train is coming to a halt.

If you're a banker, the bill is tastier. While banks opposed the legislation, they should cheer for its passage by the full Congress in the New Year. There are huge giveaways insuring that the Government will again rescue banks and Wall Street if the need arises.

NUGGETS GLEANED
Here are some of the nuggets I gleaned from days spent reading Frank's handiwork:

• For all its enormous size, the bill doesn't once mention the words Too Big To Fail, the main issue confronting the financial system. Admitting you have a problem, as any schoolchild knows, is the crucial first step toward recovery.

• On the contrary, the bill supports the biggest banks. It authorises Federal Reserve Banks to provide as much as $4 trillion in emergency funding the next time Wall Street crashes [thereby indicating that the Legislature confidently expects this to happen: – Ed.]. So much for all that talk of 'no more bailouts'. That is more than twice what the Fed pumped into markets this time around. The size of the fund makes the bribes in the Senate's health-care bill look minuscule.

• Oh, hold on, the Federal Reserve and the US Treasury Secretary can't authorize these funds unless 'there is at least a 99 percent likelihood that all the funds and interest will be paid back'. [presupposing that such a calculation in advance is possible – Ed.]

• Too bad that the same models that were used to foresee the housing meltdown will probably be used to predict this likelihood as well.

MORE BAILOUTS IN PROSPECT
• The bill also allows the Government, in a crisis, to back financial firms' debts. Bondholders can therefore sleep easy: there are more bailouts to come.

• The legislation does create a Council of Regulators to spot risks to the financial system and the big financial firms. Unfortunately, this group is to be made up of folks who missed the problems that led to the current crisis.

• Don't worry, though: this time regulators will have 'better tools'. Six months after being created, the Council will report to Congress on 'WHETHER setting up an electronic database' would be a help. Maybe they'll even get round to using that Internet thingy.

• This group, among its many powers, can restrict the ability of a financial firm to trade for its own account. Perhaps this section should be entitled, 'Goldman Sachs Group, Inc., we're looking at you'.

MANAGING BONUSES

• The bill also allows regulators to 'prohibit any incentive-based payment arrangement'. In other words, bankers' bonuses are still in play. Maybe Bank of America Corporation and Citigroup, Inc. shouldn't have rushed to pay back Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) funds.

• The bill kills off the Office of Thrift Supervision, a toothless watchdog. Well, kill may be too strong a word. Because that agency and its employees will be folded into the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency [whose chief has allegedly been engaged in sabotaging the Settlements: see above – Ed]. Further proof that government never really disappears.

• Since Congress isn't cutting jobs, why not add a few more? Accordingly, the bill calls for more than a dozen agencies to create a new position called 'Director of Minority and Women Inclusion'. People in these new posts will be presidential appointees.

I thought Too Big To Fail banks were the pressing issue. Turns out it's diversity, and patronage.

• Not that the House is entirely sure of what the issues really are – at least, judging by the two dozen or so studies that the bill authorizes. About a quarter of these studies relate to credit-rating companies, an area in which the legislation falls short of meaningful change. Sadly, these studies don't tackle tough questions like whether we should just do away with ratings altogether. Here's a tip: Do the studies, then write the legislation.

CONSUMER PROTECTION
• The bill isn't all bad, though. It creates a brand new Consumer Financial Protection Agency, the brainchild Elizabeth Warren, who is currently head of a panel overseeing the TARP. And the first director gets the cool job of designing a SEAL for the new agency. My suggestion: Warren riding a fiery chariot while hurling lightning bolts at Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke.

• Best of all, the bill contains a provision that, in the event of another Government request for emergency aid to prop up [its pals in] the financial system, debate in Congress be limited to just 10 hours. Anything that can get Congress to shut up can't be all bad.

Even better would be if legislators actually tackle the real issues stemming from the financial crisis, end bailouts and, for the sake of my eyes, write far, far shorter bills.

• Comment by the Editor:
I like his dry, witty cynicism. Verdict: Excellent analysis. But nothing like rude enough.

LIST OF U.S. STATUTES, SECURITIES REGULATIONS AND LEGAL PRINCIPLES OF WHICH THE CRIMINALISTS, ASSOCIATES AND ALL THE MAIN FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS REMAIN IN BREACH:

LEGAL TUTORIAL: The Steps of Common Fraud:

Step 1: Fraud in the Inducement: "… is intended to and which does cause one to execute an instrument, or make an agreement… The misrepresentation involved does not mislead one as the paper he signs but rather misleads as to the true facts of a situation, and the false impression it causes is a basis of a decision to sign or render a judgment". Step 2: Fraud in Fact by Deceit (Obfuscation and Denial) and Theft:

• "ACTUAL FRAUD. Deceit. Concealing something or making a false representation with an evil intent [scanter] when it causes injury to another…". Source: Steven H. Gifis, 'Law Dictionary', 5th Edition, Happauge: Barron's Educational Series, Inc., 2003, s.v.: 'Fraud'.

• "THE TORT OF FRAUDULENT DECEIT… The elements of actionable deceit are: A false representation of a material fact made with knowledge of its falsity, or recklessly, or without reasonable grounds for believing its truth, and with intent to induce reliance thereon, on which plaintiff justifiably relies on his injury…". Source: Steven H. Gifis, 'Law Dictionary', 5th Edition, Happauge: Barron's Educational Series, Inc., 2003, s.v.: 'Deceit'.

Step 3: Theft by Deception and Fraudulent Conveyance:

THEFT BY DECEPTION:

• "FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT… The hiding or suppression of a material fact or circumstance which the party is legally or morally bound to disclose…".

• "The test of whether failure to disclose material facts constitutes fraud is the existence of a duty, legal or equitable, arising from the relation of the parties: failure to disclose a material fact with intent to mislead or defraud under such circumstances being equivalent to an actual 'fraudulent concealment'…".

• To suspend running of limitations, it means the employment of artifice, planned to prevent inquiry or escape investigation and mislead or hinder acquirement of information disclosing a right of action, and acts relied on must be of an affirmative character and fraudulent…".

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE:

• "FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE… A conveyance or transfer of property, the object of which is to defraud a creditor, or hinder or delay him, or to put such property beyond his reach…".

• "Conveyance made with intent to avoid some duty or debt due by or incumbent or person (entity) making transfer…".

NON-U.S. INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION CD AVAILABLE: FAR BETTER THAN NORTON ETC
It has now been established that the National Security Agency (NSA) works with/controls Microsoft, Norton, McAfee, and others, in pursuit of the Pentagon's vast BIG BROTHER objective, directed from the 'highest' levels (not the levels usually referred to) which seek to have every computer in the world talk direct to the Pentagon or to NSA's master computers.

This should come as no real surprise since the cynical spooks even assert this 'in-your-face' by advertising 'INTEL INSIDE', which says exactly what it means. More specifically, NSA have made great strides in this direction by having a back door built into Microsoft VISTA. Certain computers, especially those labelled with the logo of the 'fully collaborating' firm Hewlett Packard, have hard-core setups which facilitate the remote monitoring and controlling of personal computers by NSA, Fort Meade. We now understand that if you are using VISTA* you MUST NOT enable 'file and printer sharing' under any circumstances. If you say 'YES', so to speak, to 'file and printer sharing', your computer becomes a slave at once to NSA's master computers. DO NOT ENABLE SHARING.

Unfortunately, this abomination is so far advanced that this may not be the only precaution that needs to be taken. As long as Microsoft continues its extensive cooperation with NSA and the NSC (National Security Council), the spying system which assists the criminalised structures, and thus hitherto the Bush-Clinton 'Box Gang' and its connections, with their fraudulent finance operations, NSA may be able to steal data from your computer. The colossal scourge of data theft is associated with this state of affairs: data stolen usually include Credit Card data, which the kleptocracy regards as almost as good as real estate for hypothecation purposes. Even so, you can make life very much more problematical for these utterly odious people by NOT USING U.S.-sourced so-called Internet Security and anti-virus software. Having been attacked and abused so often, we offer a solution.

We use a proprietary FOREIGN Internet Security program which devours every PC Trojan, worm, scam, porn attack and virus that the National Security Agency (NSA) throws at us. We are offering this program (CD) to our clients and friends, at a premium. The program comes with our very strong recommendation, but at the same time, if you buy from us, you will be helping us finance ongoing exposures of the DVD's World Revolution and the financial corruption that has been financing it.

The familiar US proprietary Internet Security programs are by-products of US counterintelligence, and are intended NOT to solve your Internet security problems, but to spy on you and to report what you write about, to centralised US electronic facilities set up for the purpose. You can now BREAK FREE from this syndrome while at the same time helping us to MAINTAIN THE VERY HEAVY PRESSURE UPON THE CRIMINALISTS WE HAVE BEEN EXPOSING, by ordering this highest quality FOREIGN (i.e., non-US) INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION that we have started advertising on this website. This offer has been developed in response to attacks we have suffered from the NSA nerds who appear to have a collective mental age of about five years, judging by their output.

• To access details about the INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION, just press THE LIVE LINK YOU HAVE JUST READ, or else press SERIALS in the red panel below. This opens up our mini-catalogue of printed intelligence publications. Scroll right down to the foot of that section, where you will see details of this service. When you buy this special product, you will also, as we clearly state above, be paying a special premium by way of a donation to help us finance these exposures.

The premium contains a donation for our exposure work and also covers our recommendation based on the Editor's own experience that this INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION will make your Internet life much easier. The program has an invaluable 'Preview before downloading' feature.

• It is suitable for PC's but not Mac computers. As with all such programs, the License is renewable at a modest fee annually. This is done on-line in the usual way [with the supplier direct].

Before we go any further, here are two emails we'd like you to read:

(1): From a respected and very well-connected source in the United States:
8th January 2010 at 20:35 UK time:

'Hi Chris. Just heard from a good source and he's saying that your latest Update' [7th January 2010] 'is right on'.

(2)*: From A. Clifton Hodges, of Hodges and Associates, the firm of lawyers filing the CMKM/CMKX class action lawsuit against the Securities and Exchange Commission and its Commissioners joint and severally, referenced in our report dated 7th January 2010, in response to a 'belt and braces' request from the Editor for written confirmation that he was content for us, as we had been advised earlier, to 'trailer' the class action suit in our report dated 7th January. This email was received by us at 19:56 on 04 January 2010 UK time:

Mr Story
Thank you for your carefulness. For the record, you have my authorization to publish the CMKX trailer, and any other additional information that may illuminate it. I believe in what is being done and am anxious to assist in any reasonable way possible….

Sincerely, A Clifton Hodges
PS: Please keep up the fine job you and your associates are performing, I am happy to lend a hand if I can be useful.

* This is appended in order to 'correct' those, including an arrogant fellow in Paris who told the Editor to do his 'due diligence', who have purported to 'correct' the Editor's information on the CMKM/CMKX exposure.

* Quite apart from the stupidity of that, it stands to reason (if such critics are capable of logic) that we would not publish information of such far-reaching significance, if it were not accurate and properly provenanced. We've being doing this stuff for NEARLY FOUR DECADES.

MISPRISION OF FELONY: U.S. CODE, TITLE 18, PART 1, CHAPTER 1, SECTION 4:
'Whoever, having knowledge of the actual commission of a felony cognizable by a court of the United States, conceals and does not as soon as possible make known the same to some Judge or other person in civil or military authority under the United States, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both'.

• FOR SEVERAL YEARS WE HAVE CARRIED THIS RUBRIC AT THE FOOT OF EACH REPORT:

• Please be advised that the Editor of International Currency Review and associated intelligence services cannot enter into email correspondence related to this or to any of the earlier reports.

• BOOKS: Edward Harle Limited has so far published FIVE intelligence titles: The Perestroika Deception, by Anatoliy Golitsyn; Red Cocaine, by Dr Joseph D. Douglass, Jr.; The European Union Collective, by Christopher Story; The New Underworld Order, by Christopher Story; and The Red Terror in Russia, by Sergei Melgounov. All titles are permanently in stock. We sell books DIRECT.

• Globalist hegemony ideology and practice are comprehensively debunked in the Editor's study entitled The New Underworld Order, which can be ordered via the books section of this website. If you want to see what may well happen if the angle of decline steepens much further, you could do worse than also order a copy of The Red Terror in Russia, by the contemporary Russian eyewitness Sergei Melgounov, another Edward Harle Limited book available direct from this website. Also, the Editor's study entitled The European Union Collective, which proves that the EU is a long-range strategic entrapment operation to reduce European countries to satrap status within a German empire using economic strategy for relentless economic warfare purposes, can be bought here.

• Please Make a Donation, if you feel able to do so, to help finance Christopher Story's ongoing global financial corruption investigations. Your assistance will be very sincerely appreciated and will make a real difference, hastening the OVERDUE resolution of the worst financial corruption and linked financial fallout in world history. NEW REPORT STARTS HERE:

DEVELOPMENTS SINCE OUR REPORT DATED 7TH JANUARY 2010
We will now deal with developments that have transpired since we reported on 7th January 2010: that report should be borne in mind in absorbing what follows.

It can be accessed by pressing ARCHIVE.

Two over-arching developments have been observed:

• First, $1.3++ trillion was transferred on 7th January 2010 to ‘Alexandria’ [see below], that is to say to the Central Intelligence Agency. Ostensibly these funds were for ‘taxes’, but in reality they would appear to have been STOLEN by the White House and the US Intelligence Power (at 10:20pm EST].

• All of a sudden, on 8th January, NOBODY KNOWS ANYTHING. Contacts who have been veritable fountains of detailed information for years have miraculously NO INFORMATION, and haven’t a clue what is happening. This applies to Gold Badges and others who should know better.

• Now, we were’nt born yesterday, so we begin by asking the following question:

• How is it possible that, immediately following the transfer of $1.3++ trillion – a development WHICH WAS TRACKED IN REAL-TIME BY OUR CONTACTS AND HAS BEEN DEFINITIVELY VERIFIED – that THE FOLLOWING DAY, nobody has any idea why the releases have not been completed? This reeks of a typical White House/ C.I.A. stitch-up ORDERED FROM THE TOP.

COLLECTIVE AMNESIA FOLLOWS THE C.I.A.'S LATEST MASSIVE THEFT
This sudden outbreak of COLLECTIVE AMNESIA affects all sources of intelligence RIGHT ACROSS THE BOARD. What are we to assume? That these sources ALL CAUGHT SWINE 'FLU (remember it??) simultaneously? That, all of a sudden, they're ALL suffering from Alzheimer's?

Hardly. No, what we DO ASSUME, as we were'nt born last week, is that, ARMED WITH THIS NEWLY STOLEN MONEY, the Intelligence Power under Mr Leon Panetta has 'made it worth their while' for these intelligence and Trustee sources to suffer from amnesia simultaneously.

WE ACCUSE LEON PANETTA OF STEALING $1.3++ TRILLION
We therefore accuse Leon Panetta POINT BLANK of stealing $1.3++ trillion on the instructions of George Bush Sr. and Barbara Bush and of making arrangements to pay off all who are supposed to know better, and who purport to have been manoeuvring to clear up this mess – including Gold Badges and others who will be named, if this matter deteriorates any further.

WHY HAVENT ANY OF THE TOP LEVEL CRIMINALS BEEN REMOVED?
And WHO is Leon Panetta's boss? Stand up, Barack Hussein Obama, the elected official who is responsible for getting this done. Mr Obama, here are our questions to you, Sir:

(1): Why have you not fired Leon Panetta?

(2): Why have you not fired Mrs Hillary Clinton?

(3): Why have you not fired that liar, Timothy Geithner?

(4): What double game are you playing, and why do you imagine for one moment that you are going to get away with further duplicity with impunity?

In this connection, we would like to point out that knee-jerk responses on certain websites to our reference in the report dated 7th January to Mr Obama, and the rôle of Republicans, were ignorant fantasies. Mr Obama is, whether you or anyone else likes it or not, a central figure in this crisis. We don't care whether he's Father Christmas, Brigitte Bardot or Frankenstein. It doesn't matter what his politics are for THIS PURPOSE, either; and neither are sterile partisan politics RELEVANT IN THE FOCUSED CONTEXT that we are addressing.

• Get real, you knee-jerkers.

Now, if Mr Obama, an operative, is playing dirty double games, you can be certain of one thing: it will ALL come out in the wash. Or rather, the dirty linen will be revealed for all to see, and smell.

And do not be surprised if this latest abomination escalates further, as the desperate, cornered, terminally corrupt Intelligence Power seeks to cling on to its usurped and illegitimate hegemony over the Executive Branch of the US Federal Government, and virtually everything else.

This crisis will not 'go away', we are now being informed, until every single one of these rats has been taken out and given the treatment due to traitors in time of war.

• POSSIBLE EXPLANATION FOR OBAMA'S APPARENT CONDUCT:
It is likely that the three penetrations of the White House event for the Indian delegation that was featured in our report dated 7th January 2010, in which we indicated that these penetrations were almost certainly intended to send Mr Obama a message along the lines of 'DO WHAT WE WANT, OR YOU'LL CEASE TO BE VERTICAL', scared the President to such an extent that he caved in to the will of the snakes, serpents and rats in his putrid criminalist entourage. VERY LIKELY INDEED.

EVENTS MONITORED ON 7TH AND 8TH JANUARY

On 7th January, we learned as follows:

• INTERPOL brought in more personnel in planes over last weekend (2nd-3rd January) to handle the arrests and enforcement operations, in the face of the feckless, institutionalised weakness and double-dealing of dupicitous American colleagues.

•Mrs Barbara Bush, who has signatures controlling accounts and documentation even though the Bush Crime Family have reportedly been 'cleaned out' financially, has been interfering BIG TIME. Is there a problem, by any chance, just because this perpetrator is FEMALE? Surely not, in an era that has taken leave of its senses because of the mania for 'equality', to such an extent that it places women in the military front line?

• Several senior bankers were ELIMINATED. We were informed that these horizontalisations took place in the United States, London (where the corruption can be smelled from 60 miles away, where the Editor is sitting) and Paris.

• On making further enquiries, the Editor was informed that, at least in the US context, a CENTRAL BANKER or bankers suffered this fate. When we probed even further and learned of the parallel INTERPOL operation in London, we deduced that this may have referred to a horizontalisation at the Bank of England: however that, for the time being, is unconfirmed speculation on our part.

• The following countries were reportedly NOT PAID [see preceding report]: Greece, Iceland, Italy and Spain. What do these countries have in common? Answer: They were/are all Bush Crime Family laundry hidey-holes. They are being suitably punished by the enforcers.

• The Bush Sr.-linked Trustee named Doug Glascow in Texas, who was required to attend at a bank in Dallas, was reported to us first of all to have informed contacts that he could not attend at the bank because he was sick. However separately, we were told, he informed another party or parties that he had been involved in a car crash. BAD MOVE.

According to our sources, INTERPOL then obtained the police records for the location of the purported car wreck; and as no such car crash incident had been reported, the Trustee was accused of lying and was arrested.

The price of such antics at this late stage includes the penalty applicable to Economic Terrorists in time of war – plus, en route, the forfeiting of all assets.

It was on the basis of THIS EVENT, that all the usually well-informed sources bamboozled us and everyone else all day on 8th January with their collective amnesia – the pretext being that since Glascow had been 'removed' (as reported), 'how could we know what was happening, as he was responsible for signing off for the subsequent payments'.

• The only problem with that alibi was that the law firm behind him had/has power to 'sign off' in Glascow's absence (as reported to us). But see below when we come to that issue.

• The so-called 'Connecticut Trustee' (see report dated 28th December 2009) was reported to us to have been distorting information for public consumption, and had been advised that if he didn't finish his work in accordance with his responsibilities, he will, like Glascow, forfeit everything he owns – not to mention suffering investigation and prosecution which, under the CHANGE OF POLICY at the US Department of Justice, has dire implications, as we have reported.

• On 8th January, we learned as follows:

• Friday 8th January was repeatedly described to us as being 'AN ABSOLUTELY CRITICAL DAY'.

• It was reconfirmed that Mrs Barbara Bush has been interfering.

• It was elaborated to us that Mr Glascow had attempted to divert monies to Mrs Barbara Bush.

• The Dallas Trustee, Glasgow, was supposed (despite the information about what happened on 7th January) to have signed off at 7:00am on 8th January. But he couldn't, as he had been removed from the scene, according to the preceding day's information. As indicated, that then provided the various informants with a pretext for suddenly 'knowing nothing'.

• An unknown number of US Treasury officials were arrested on the morning of 8th January.

• A well-informed US source told us:
'A lot of people won't be around on Monday if it hasn't been done today'. Later the same source elaborated: 'They are going to have to take down a lot of people'.

• An unconfirmed report to us stated that Dr Joseph Ackermann, CEO of the DVD's favourite banker, Deutsche Bank, had been confronted and 'dealt with'. We cannot confirm this at this time. But it's certainly imperative. He's holding the world to ransom: see: OPERATION STILLPOINT.

• We were informed that our report exposing OPERATION STILLPOINT quote 'didn't just hit a nerve, it severed it'. Specifically, we were informed that people hadn't realised that Stage 1 of OPERATION STILLPOINT embraced the myriad Ponzi schemes, of which Madoff, Stanford and CMKM/CMKX are the primary examples, and all the scams from which many of our readers have suffered so badly. This includes ALL the Ponzi programs specialising in stealing the principal.

• FACT: Notwithstanding that 'today [Friday, 8th January] is the crucial day', the releases did not take place. How do we know this? Because certain parties who would have been appropriately informed received no information, under the blanket cover provided by the sudden epidemic of convenient collective amnesia.

THE TROUTMAN SANDERS LLP DIMENSION
In the preceding reports we referenced the Atlanta-based firm of Troutman Sanders LLP as having been instructed to break down and make disbursals, according to our sources. This has not been denied. The Administrative leadership of this firm is as follows:

On both 7th and 8th January 2010, it was emphasised to us by several sources that if a single penny were misrouted or misappropriated, then (a) the key personnel would be arrested and (B) the firm's doors would have to be closed and it would cease to be in business come next week.

• Will this firm be in business next week?

• Is INTERPOL doing it's job adequately?

• Is President Obama protecting Panetta, Mrs Clinton, Geithner, and the other scumbags, as would appear to be the case as NONE OF THESE PEOPLE HAVE BEEN SACKED despite the fact that this is by far the worst crisis to face the United States of America for decades, and probably – if matters continue in prevailing mode – in the whole of its tawdry history?

• If Obama is protecting these people, is he not then quite plainly a co-conspirator, so that he cannot be exempted from arrest and takedown, as we were advised he was warned on his return from his vacation in Hawaii?

• Is INTERPOL vigorously addressing the theft by the CIA of $1.3++ trillion and:

• Is it not high time that INTERPOL took on the task of distributing the funds directly itself, as none of these corrupt US bankers, office holders and operatives can be trusted?

• FACT: The arrival of $1.3++ trillion in 'Alexandria' on 7th January may have been routed through the Tysons Corner office of the firm of lawyers mentioned above. It's located within what London property agents call 'a stone's throw' of the Central Intelligence Agency's Langley base (sorry, we mean: the George Bush Center for Intelligence).

• As no doubt you all know, the following characters are rushing, all of a sudden, for the exits – having 'considered their options' over the holiday period: Senator Christopher Dodd (Stalin's Grandson); Senator Bryan Dorgan; Bill Ritter, Governor of Colorado; and John Cherry (who has abandoned his campaign for the Governorship of Michigan).

The words 'heat' and 'kitchen' spring to mind here.

• FACT: We are informed [see above] that certain people have been quote 'taken out and shot' on both sides of the Atlantic. Some days ago, sources with somewhat unsavoury connections said: 'It's going to get bloodier'. IT IS GETTING BLOODIER.

• That's the way it looks from London tonight.

• PERSONAL NOTE: The Editor and his wife will be attending their second grandchild's christening in Cambridge this weekend, so the Editor will be out of his private office from 2:00pm on Saturday 9th January until late on Sunday evening 10th January. The christening's more important.

LIST OF U.S. STATUTES, SECURITIES REGULATIONS AND LEGAL PRINCIPLES OF WHICH THE CRIMINALISTS, ASSOCIATES AND ALL THE MAIN FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS REMAIN IN BREACH:

LEGAL TUTORIAL: The Steps of Common Fraud:

Step 1: Fraud in the Inducement: "… is intended to and which does cause one to execute an instrument, or make an agreement… The misrepresentation involved does not mislead one as the paper he signs but rather misleads as to the true facts of a situation, and the false impression it causes is a basis of a decision to sign or render a judgment". Source: Steven H. Gifis, 'Law Dictionary', 5th Edition, Happauge: Barron's Educational Series, Inc., 2003, s.v.: 'Fraud'.

Step 2: Fraud in Fact by Deceit (Obfuscation and Denial) and Theft:

• "ACTUAL FRAUD. Deceit. Concealing something or making a false representation with an evil intent [scanter] when it causes injury to another…". Source: Steven H. Gifis, 'Law Dictionary', 5th Edition, Happauge: Barron's Educational Series, Inc., 2003, s.v.: 'Fraud'.

• "THE TORT OF FRAUDULENT DECEIT… The elements of actionable deceit are: A false representation of a material fact made with knowledge of its falsity, or recklessly, or without reasonable grounds for believing its truth, and with intent to induce reliance thereon, on which plaintiff justifiably relies on his injury…". Source: Steven H. Gifis, 'Law Dictionary', 5th Edition, Happauge: Barron's Educational Series, Inc., 2003, s.v.: 'Deceit'.

Step 3: Theft by Deception and Fraudulent Conveyance:

THEFT BY DECEPTION:

• "FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT… The hiding or suppression of a material fact or circumstance which the party is legally or morally bound to disclose…".

• "The test of whether failure to disclose material facts constitutes fraud is the existence of a duty, legal or equitable, arising from the relation of the parties: failure to disclose a material fact with intent to mislead or defraud under such circumstances being equivalent to an actual 'fraudulent concealment'…".

• To suspend running of limitations, it means the employment of artifice, planned to prevent inquiry or escape investigation and mislead or hinder acquirement of information disclosing a right of action, and acts relied on must be of an affirmative character and fraudulent…".

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE:

• "FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE… A conveyance or transfer of property, the object of which is to defraud a creditor, or hinder or delay him, or to put such property beyond his reach…".

• "Conveyance made with intent to avoid some duty or debt due by or incumbent or person (entity) making transfer…".

NON-U.S. INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION CD AVAILABLE: FAR BETTER THAN NORTON ETC
It has now been established that the National Security Agency (NSA) works with/controls Microsoft, Norton, McAfee, and others, in pursuit of the Pentagon's vast BIG BROTHER objective, directed from the 'highest' levels (not the levels usually referred to) which seek to have every computer in the world talk direct to the Pentagon or to NSA's master computers.

This should come as no real surprise since the cynical spooks even assert this 'in-your-face' by advertising 'INTEL INSIDE', which says exactly what it means. More specifically, NSA have made great strides in this direction by having a back door built into Microsoft VISTA. Certain computers, especially those labelled with the logo of the 'fully collaborating' firm Hewlett Packard, have hard-core setups which facilitate the remote monitoring and controlling of personal computers by NSA, Fort Meade. We now understand that if you are using VISTA* you MUST NOT enable 'file and printer sharing' under any circumstances. If you say 'YES', so to speak, to 'file and printer sharing', your computer becomes a slave at once to NSA's master computers. DO NOT ENABLE SHARING.

Unfortunately, this abomination is so far advanced that this may not be the only precaution that needs to be taken. As long as Microsoft continues its extensive cooperation with NSA and the NSC (National Security Council), the spying system which assists the criminalised structures, and thus hitherto the Bush-Clinton 'Box Gang' and its connections, with their fraudulent finance operations, NSA may be able to steal data from your computer. The colossal scourge of data theft is associated with this state of affairs: data stolen usually include Credit Card data, which the kleptocracy regards as almost as good as real estate for hypothecation purposes. Even so, you can make life very much more problematical for these utterly odious people by NOT USING U.S.-sourced so-called Internet Security and anti-virus software. Having been attacked and abused so often, we offer a solution.

We use a proprietary FOREIGN Internet Security program which devours every PC Trojan, worm, scam, porn attack and virus that the National Security Agency (NSA) throws at us. We are offering this program (CD) to our clients and friends, at a premium. The program comes with our very strong recommendation, but at the same time, if you buy from us, you will be helping us finance ongoing exposures of the DVD's World Revolution and the financial corruption that has been financing it.

The familiar US proprietary Internet Security programs are by-products of US counterintelligence, and are intended NOT to solve your Internet security problems, but to spy on you and to report what you write about, to centralised US electronic facilities set up for the purpose. You can now BREAK FREE from this syndrome while at the same time helping us to MAINTAIN THE VERY HEAVY PRESSURE UPON THE CRIMINALISTS WE HAVE BEEN EXPOSING, by ordering this highest quality FOREIGN (i.e., non-US) INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION that we have started advertising on this website. This offer has been developed in response to attacks we have suffered from the NSA nerds who appear to have a collective mental age of about five years, judging by their output.

• To access details about the INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION, just press THE LIVE LINK YOU HAVE JUST READ, or else press SERIALS in the red panel below. This opens up our mini-catalogue of printed intelligence publications. Scroll right down to the foot of that section, where you will see details of this service. When you buy this special product, you will also, as we clearly state above, be paying a special premium by way of a donation to help us finance these exposures.

The premium contains a donation for our exposure work and also covers our recommendation based on the Editor's own experience that this INTERNET SECURITY SOLUTION will make your Internet life much easier. The program has an invaluable 'Preview before downloading' feature.

• It is suitable for PC's but not Mac computers. As with all such programs, the License is renewable at a modest fee annually. This is done on-line in the usual way [with the supplier direct].

COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY JUDGMENT, AND FOR DAMAGES FOR VIOLATION OF CIVIL RIGHTS

(JURY TRIAL DEMANDED)

COME NOW Plaintiffs DAVID ANDERSON, LT. COL.; NELSON L. REYNOLDS, LT. COL.; SHEILA MORRIS; PATRICK CLUNEY; ROBERT HOLLENEGG; ALLAN TREFFRY; and REECE HAMILTON, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated, who, for causes of action herein allege:

INTRODUCTION:

1. This action for declaratory judgment and for damages for violations of the Plaintiffs' civil rights under Bivens v. Six Unknown Agents of the F.B.I., 403 U.S. 388 (1971), against Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission, arises out of actions and failures to act occurring over the period from January 1, 2006 to date by Defendants CHRISTOPHER COX, an individual; MARY L. SCHAPIRO, an individual; CYNTHIA A. GLASSMAN, an individual; PAUL S. ATKINS, an individual; ROEL C. CAMPOS, an individual; ANNETTE L. NAZARETH, an individual; TROY A. PAREDES, an individual; LUIS A. AGUILAR, an individual; ELISSE B. WALTER, an individual; KATHLEEN L. CASEY, an individual; and other government agents whose names are not now known to the Plaintiffs.

2. These Defendants, acting in the course and scope of their employment by the United States of America as duly authorized Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission, a federal agency, through their acts and omissions knowingly, consciously, wrongly, without compensation and without due process of law have effected a taking of property from each of the named Plaintiffs and all who are similarly situated.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE:

3. This action for declaratory relief and damages is predicated on the provisions of the Constitution and Statutes of the United States, the legal and equitable jurisdiction of this Court, the principles of common law, and this Court's concurrent and pendant jurisdiction.

4. This Court has jurisdiction over the Plaintiffs' claims under Article III of the United States Constitution and the Fifth Amendment thereto. This Court has jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' property rights under the foregoing citations and, in addition, pursuant to Title 28 U. S.C., Section 1331 and the case law precedent of Bivens v. Six Unknown Agents of the F.B.I., 403 U.S. 388 (1971).

5. Venue is proper in this Court under Title 28 U.S.C., Section 1391(e)(1)/(2). Defendants are all past or current Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission and therefore agents of the United States Government, and a substantial part of the property, and the acts related to such property subject to Plaintiffs' claims, occurred or was situated in this Central District of California at all times relevant.

THE PARTIES:

12. Plaintiff REECE HAMILTON, a business owner/partner resides in the County of Los Angeles, State of California, owns more than One Billion shares of stock in CMKM Diamonds, Inc., and at all times relevant to the allegations set forth herein, was a citizen of the United States.

13. Defendants CHRISTOPHER COX, Chairman 2005-2009, MARY L. SCHAPIRO, Chairman 2009-2010, CYNTHIA A. GLASSMAN Commissioner 2002-2006, PAUL S. ATKINS, Commissioner 2002-2008, ROEL C. CAMPOS, Commissioner 2002-2007, ANNETTE L. NAZARETH, Commissioner 2005-2008, TROY A. PAREDES, Commissioner 2008-2010, LUIS A. AGUILAR Commissioner 2008-2010, ELISSE B. WALTER Commissioner 2008-2010 and KATHLEEN L. CASEY, Commissioner 2008-2010: are and, at all referenced times mentioned herein were, acting as individuals and as Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission, an agency of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, and acting within the course and scope of their employment. These Defendants are the real parties in interest in the claims set forth herein.

14. Other employees and servants of the Securities and Exchange Commission are also liable for damages under the causes of action set out in this Complaint. However, the names of these employees and servants are not now known to Plaintiffs, who thereby names them herein as DOES 1 through 10. When the names of these employees and servants become known, Plaintiffs reserve the right to amend this Complaint to add the names of these DOE Defendants.

FACTUAL CONTENTIONS APPLICABLE TO ALL CAUSES OF ACTION:

15. In November and December, 2002, CYBER MARK INTERNATIONAL INC., a public company domiciled in Nevada, reverse-merged with Casavant Mineral Claims, which then held mineral claims to more than 600,000 acres within Saskatchewan, Canada, increased authorized capital from 500,000,000 to 10,000,000,000 common shares, cancelled all preferred shares, and changed its name to CASAVANT MINING KIMBERLITE INTERNATIONAL, INC. (CMKI); as of February 3, 2003, 7,241,653,404 shares were issued and outstanding.

16. During the succeeding months CMKI declared a 2 for 1 stock split and filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission: Form 15 exemption claim, July, 2003; Certificate of Amendment to Articles of Incorporation changing its name to CMKM DIAMONDS, INC. (CMKM), February 5, 2004; Certificate of Amendment to Articles of Incorporation raising its authorized capital to 500,000,000,000 common shares @ $0.001 par value, March 1, 2004; Certificate of Amendment to Articles of Incorporation correcting the par value of common shares as of December 26, 2002 to $0.0001 par value, July 13, 2004; Certificate of Amendment to Articles of Incorporation raising its authorized capital to 800,000,000,000 common shares @ $0.0001 par value, July 13, 2004.

17. During the summer and fall of 2004: New York Attorney Roger Glenn was retained by the company; the number of acres upon which CMKM held claims increased to over 1.2 Million acres; claims development activity was pursued by the company; and a shareholders appreciation party was planned to be celebrated in Las Vegas, Nevada to thank the shareholders, to give them an opportunity to meet company personnel, and to announce an agreed upon merger with another public company, U.S. CANADIAN MINERALS INC. On the eve of the party celebration, the Securities and Exchange Commission placed an order on CMKM preventing any public disclosure of anticipated mergers or other development information.

18. In early 2005, CMKM announced the addition of Robert A. Maheu to the Board of Directors who shortly thereafter became the co-chairman of the Board; CMKM announced a new “corporate strategy plan to dramatically and comprehensively transform” the company for generation of consistent, long-term growth and profitability for the shareholders; CMKM filed an amended Form 15 on February 17, 2005 reinstating the company to a public reporting status; and on March 3, 2005 was notified by the Securities and Exchange Commission of a temporary suspension of trading of the company’s stock (Pink Sheets-CMKX) based upon, inter alia, concerns over the “adequacy” of publicly available information.

19. On March 16, 2005 the Securities and Exchange Commission instituted a public administrative proceeding pursuant to Section 12 (j) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 against CMKM to determine whether the company was required to file periodic reports under Section 12(g) and whether CMKM failed to comply with Section 13(a), and rules there-under, by failing to so file. CMKM responded on April 11, 2005 admitting that CMKM had a duty to file public reports and alleging various grounds of mistake, malpractice and other affirmative defenses to the factual allegations.

20. From March 17, 2005 through April 29, 2005 CMKM traded publicly in the US under the trading symbol “CMKX,” a total of 551,756,751,833 shares, an average share volume of more than 17 billion shares per day, reaching a maximum on April 21, 2005 of 94,654,588,201 shares. These figures do not include foreign trades nor trades made on an ex-clearing basis such as those disclosed by Jefferies & Company , Inc. on May 6, 2005: between March 25, 2004 and September 21, 2004 Jefferies traded 111,780,681,204 shares of CMKX stock on an ex-clearing basis.

21. On May 10, 2005 the Section 12 (j) administrative proceeding was conducted in a United States Central District of California courtroom; the Administrative Law Judge, Honorable Brenda P. Murray entered her decision on July 12, 2005 finding the facts to be as alleged by the Securities and Exchange Commission. CMKM then filed a Petition for Review which was granted, and a briefing schedule set.

22. On October 20, 2005: Robert A. Maheu resigned as a member and co-chairman of the CMKM Board of Directors; Urban Casavant agreed to remain as the sole officer and Director of CMKM until the affairs of CMKM were wound up to ensure all shares and other assets of CMKM were properly distributed to its stockholders; CMKM entered into an agreement with Entourage Mining Ltd. pursuant to which CMKM assigned its 50% interest in United Carina Resources Corp. to Entourage for 15,000,000 shares of stock, sold its 36% interest in Nevada Minerals, Inc. claims to Entourage for 5,000,000 shares of stock, and made a joint agreement with 101047025 Saskatchewan Inc. and Entourage whereby certain claims were transferred and CMKM became entitled to receive 30,000,000 shares of stock; CMKM's other agreements with United Carina Resources Corp. and Nevada Minerals Inc. were terminated.

23. On October 21, 2005 CMKM approved formation of a Task Force consisting of Robert A.
Maheu, Donald J. Stoecklein and Bill Frizzell for the purpose of assisting CMKM and Mr. Maheu, as "designated Trustee, to conduct an orderly and verifiable pro rata liquidating distribution of any Entourage Mining Ltd. shares…and any other available assets of CMKM;" the SEC Petition for Review was withdrawn by CMKM on October 21, 2005 and a Securities and Exchange Commission Order de-registering CMKM subsequently was formally entered on October 28, 2005. CMKM had 703,518,875,000 shares of common stock issued and outstanding on that date.

24. On November 4, 2005 CMKM established a web site (CMKMTaskForce.com) for the purpose, inter alia, of advising all shareholders to request physical share certificates evidencing their ownership interest in CMKM as one means of establishing that they were bona fide shareholders of the company. The company intended at that time to wind up its affairs and distribute the 50 million shares of Entourage Mining Ltd. stock and any other assets, including previously unpaid dividends, to the bona fide shareholders. The web site set forth procedures to be followed and established a means of registering all bona fide shareholder certificates prior to December 31, 2005; certificates evidencing 43,309,298,585, shares had been registered at that time.

25. A frequently asked question (FAQ) page was added to the web site on the evening of November 4, 2005 and in response to a question about the degree of naked shorting of CMKM stock, the Task Force indicated that "Credible information indicates the number of naked short shares is potentially as high as 2 Trillion shares".

26. The Task Force issued a press release on January 19, 2006 discussing a reduction in total shares of Entourage Mining Ltd. stock to be distributed to CMKM shareholders from 50 Million shares to 45 Million shares as a result of a reduction in mining claims involved.

The Task Force also discussed issues involving difficulties obtaining physical share certificates being experienced by shareholders; accordingly the deadline date for registration of shares was extended to March 15, 2006.

The Task Force was provided a new "cert list" by First Global Stock Transfer showing certs issued "and active" on January 13, 2006; ADP Services also provided information to the Task Force. This data reflected a sample of 25,021 certificates representing 350,000,000,000 plus shares of stock and a total of more than 67,000 additional certificates to be counted.

27. On March 16, 2006 the Task Force issued a public release that "…we received a visit in our office [in Tyler, Texas] by an E-Trade rep today. This rep personally hand delivered copies of approximately 4000" certificates. Further information regarding on-going discussions with the DTCC and other brokerage houses was also provided.

28. The Task Force provided additional information on March 20, 2006, extending the time for registration of certificates to May 15, 2006, advising the shareholders that Urban Casavant and his immediate family would not participate in the share distribution, and advising that a printed notice to stock holders would be published in at least one nationally circulated United States newspaper.

29. On May 25, 2006 the Task Force received a second batch of 1,200 share certificates from AmeriTrade, having received some 1,000 share certificates a week earlier. AmeriTrade's cover letter indicated that several hundred more certificates would be delivered within "the next few days." The deadline for registering certificates of May 15, 2006 had not been extended, although the Task Force continued to advise shareholders that they should obtain their certificates and that the Task Force would honor any bona fide shareholder at the time of asset distribution. By late Fall, 2006, the Task Force had received and counted copies of certificates from more than 39,000 shareholders, evidencing more than 635 Billion shares.

30. Kevin West was hired pursuant to a written agreement by CMKM during the summer of 2006 to assist in winding up the affairs of the company and, more specifically, coordinating the share certificate pull. After serving nearly a year as Interim CEO, Kevin West was appointed Chairman of the Board on March 29, 2007 after which Urban Casavant stepped down as sole director, president, secretary and treasurer of CMKM Diamonds, Inc. Mr. West soon thereafter appointed Bill Frizzell as CMKM General Counsel and provided instructions for the filing of a number of lawsuits to attempt to recover moneys and other assets which had been wrongfully taken from the company.

31. During the period of June 1, 2004 through October 28, 2005 a total of 2.25 Trillion “phantom” shares of CMKM Diamonds Inc, was sold into the public market through legitimate brokers, illegitimate brokers and dealers, market makers, hedge funds, ex-clearing transactions and private transactions. The sales of the majority of such shares were at all times known to the Securities and Exchange Commission, including Defendants herein.

32. At some date prior to June 1, 2004 the Securities and Exchange Commission in concert with the Department of Justice of the United States, together combined with Robert A. Maheu and others to utilize CMKM Diamonds, Inc. for the purpose of trapping a number of widely disbursed entities and persons who were believed to be engaged in naked short selling of CMKM Diamonds Inc. stock and cellar boxing the company.

The Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Justice, with assistance from the Department of Homeland Security, believed and developed evidence that said short sellers were utilizing their activities to illegally launder moneys, wrongfully export moneys, avoid payment of taxes, and to support foreign terrorist operations. To fulfill the plan to criminally trap such wrongdoers, the Securities and Exchange Commission, with assistance from the Departments of Justice and Homeland Security:

(a) Assisted in and approved the retention of Roger Glenn, an ex-SEC trial attorney and drafter of Sarbanes-Oxley, to join CMKM Diamonds Inc. for the purpose of verifying claims value, increasing authorized shares of stock to 800,000,000,000, and supervising from the inside of the company;

(B) Encouraged the company to expand its promotional activities, assisted in the set up of the “racing activities” of the company, and underwrote a substantial portion of the cost of such activities;

© Consented to, facilitated, and supported the sale of certain company claims to several foreign corporations;

(d) Consented to, facilitated, and supported the conferences between Robert A. Maheu and his associates on the one hand, and the wrongdoing short sellers on the other, all for the purpose of settling the potential liability of said wrongdoers with consent of the U. S. Government and a representation of no criminal prosecution for such illegal sales;

(e) Consented to, facilitated, and supported the declaration of dividends payable by the company to each common shareholder of CMKM Diamonds, Inc.

(f) Consented to, facilitated, and supported the distribution of shares of CIM, a private company owned by Urban Casavant, as a stock dividend, including consent and approval of distribution of said shares to holders of more than 1.4 Trillion shares of CMKM Diamonds, Inc. common stock.

33. During the period from November, 2004 through April, 2005, CMKM Diamonds, Inc. negotiated the sale of some of its Saskatchewan, Canada, mineral claims to three Chinese domiciled corporations with the advice and consent, inter alia, of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Proceeds from the consummation of such sales were placed into a frozen trust for disbursal at a later time.

34. During the period from March, 2004 through August, 2006, on behalf of CMKM Diamonds, Inc. Robert A. Maheu, with assistance from others, negotiated a settlement with the illegitimate brokers, dealers, market makers, hedge funds, and other persons and entities that had engaged in naked short selling of CMKM Diamonds Inc. stock and cellar boxing the company. In exchange for a U. S. Government promise of no prosecution for such sales, the wrongdoers each promised to pay negotiated amounts to a frozen trust for disbursal at a later time.

35. Plaintiffs herein are informed and believe, and based thereon allege, that other moneys have been collected for the benefit of the shareholders of CMKM Diamonds, Inc. from the Depository Trust & Clearing Corporation, from the United States Government, and from the sale of additional assets including consent to enter into joint venture agreements with other companies holding mineral claims in Saskatchewan, Canada. Plaintiffs herein are further informed and believe, and based thereon allege, that said moneys, collected for the benefit of shareholders have also been placed in a trust or are otherwise now held in trust by the Depository Trust & Clearing Corporation and the United States Treasury.

36. Plaintiffs herein are informed and believe, and based thereon allege, that at all times mentioned, the Securities and Exchange Commission reserved unto itself the sole and absolute discretion to determine when moneys collected pursuant to the scheme set forth above would and could be released for distribution.

37. Demand for release of said moneys has been repeatedly presented to the Securities and Exchange Commission without result. Agents and employees of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Justice have represented repeatedly that the release of moneys for distribution was imminent, and/or would occur within several weeks, and/or would occur within less than a month. Each of said representations have been made knowing them to be false, and at the specific direction of the named Defendants. These actions of withholding distribution of said moneys, without compensation and without due process of law, amount to a taking of the property of the individual Plaintiffs and of all similarly situated.

38. At all times mentioned herein, the Defendants acted with deliberate indifference or reckless disregard for the Constitutional and other rights of all Plaintiffs, or with the intention and knowledge that they were violating Plaintiffs' Constitutional or other rights or to cause them other injuries, losses and damage.

39. As a result of the Defendants' misconduct, each of the named Plaintiffs and all of those similarly situated, have been denied their Constitutional rights, including, but not limited to, their Fifth Amendment right to be secure in their property, free from taking without just compensation and without due process of law, and have suffered injuries and property loss in excess of Three Trillion Dollars.

CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS:

40. Plaintiffs bring this action individually, and on behalf of all others similarly situated, and in the public interest.

41. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of a class of persons who were and are bona fide shareholders in CMKM Diamonds, Inc., a public company directly supervised by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

42. Plaintiffs are members of said class, have a claim typical of the claims of all members of said class, and will fairly and adequately represent the interests of the members of said class.

43. The members of said class are so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable.

44. All of the class members are wholly identifiable from documents known to be in the possession of Defendants and of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

45. The claims of the members of said class present common issues of fact and law which predominate over any questions affecting only individual members of the class.

46. The defenses available to defendants to the claims of the members of the class present common issues of fact and law which predominate over any questions affecting only individual members of the class.

47. The prosecution of separate actions by the individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for defendants.

48. Adjudications with respect to individual members of said class would, as a practical matter be dispositive of the interest of other members not parties to the individual adjudications or would substantially impair or impede the right and/or ability to protect their interest.

49. Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to said class thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief with respect to the class as a whole.

50. Unless ordered by this court, Defendants will continue their illegal and wrongful conduct, and repeated actions by individual class members will be required to obtain relief; and thereby the remedies available at law are inadequate.

51. For all of the above reasons, a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the claims alleged herein.

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION (FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF AGAINST ALL DEFENDANTS):

52. Plaintiffs incorporate as though fully set forth herein, all of the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 39 above.

53. Plaintiffs allege that an actual controversy exists in this jurisdiction, in that it is the Plaintiffs' contention that:

(a) The Defendants are, or in the past were, Commissioners of the SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, an agency of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. At all relevant times herein, said Defendants were acting as individuals and in their official capacity as agents of the SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION.

(B) On and after January 1, 2006, the Defendants, acting alone and acting in concert with each other, and acting without just cause, did consciously, knowingly, intentionally and wrongfully cause certain acts and omissions to proceed in such manner as to hinder, delay, and ultimately prevent the distribution of moneys held for the benefit of Plaintiffs, and all similarly situated, said moneys being payable to each said person on a per share basis.

© The Defendants, and each of them, acted in their individual and their official capacities with deliberate or reckless disregard for the Constitutional and other rights of Plaintiffs and all similarly situated or with malicious intent and with the knowledge that their acts and omissions violated and denied the Constitutional and other rights of Plaintiffs and all similarly situated, or that their acts would cause said Plaintiffs and all similarly situated other injuries.

(d) The Defendants, and each of them, did unlawfully and wrongfully cause certain acts and omissions to proceed in such manner as to hinder, delay, and ultimately prevent the distribution of moneys held for the benefit of Plaintiffs and all similarly situated, even though the Defendants knew that said persons had a vested interest and Constitutional right to receive said moneys in a timely, unfettered and unconstrained manner.

(e) The Defendants, and each of them, knew that Plaintiffs and all similarly situated had a vested interest and Constitutional right to receive said moneys in a timely, unfettered and unconstrained manner when they committed the acts and omissions set forth above, causing each said person to be deprived of property without just compensation and without due process of law.

54. The Defendants, and each of them, contend to the contrary. Therefore, it is necessary and proper for this Court at this time to determine and declare the validity of the contentions of the parties as set forth above.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION (FOR VIOLATION OF THE PLAINTIFFS' CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS AGAINST DEFENDANTS COX, SHAPIRO, GLASSMAN, ATKINS, CAMPOS, NAZARETH, PAREDES,AGUILAR, WALTER, and CASEY):

55. Plaintiffs incorporate as though fully set forth herein all of the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 51, above.

56. Defendants, by committing the above-mentioned acts and omissions, violated and denied the Plaintiffs' Constitutional rights, and those of all similarly situated, including, but not limited to, their Fifth Amendment right to be secure in their property, free from taking without just compensation and without due process of law.

57. Defendants, and each of them, acted and failed to act with the intent to deny the Constitutional rights of Plaintiffs and of all those similarly situated, or with the intentional or callous disregard or deliberate indifference to those rights. The above described acts of the Defendants, all charged with securities law enforcement as Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in violation of the Constitutional rights of Plaintiffs and of all those similarly situated, were not intended to be exempt from liability.

58. As a result of the Defendants' acts, Plaintiffs and all those similarly situated have suffered injuries and property loss in excess of 3.87 Trillion Dollars in an exact amount to be determined at the time of Trial. Because Defendants' actions were intentional or done with callous disregard or deliberate indifference to the Constitutional and other rights of all Plaintiffs, this Court should award punitive damages against each individually named Defendant.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs seek judgment as follows:

1. For a declaratory judgment, pursuant to Title 28 U.S.C., Sections 2201 and 2202, which determines and declares the validity of the contentions of the parties set forth in Paragraphs 52 to 54, above;

2. For a judgment for compensatory, general and special damages in the amounts prayed for in the Second Cause of action set forth above;

3. For a judgment for punitive damages in an amount sufficient to punish and to make examples of these Defendants, and to deter these Defendants and others from engaging in similar conduct;

4. For an award of reasonable attorney's fees, expenses and costs of suit incurred herein; and:

5. For such other and further relief as this Court deems just and proper.

U.S. Treasury LOOTED Again! Ponzi Scheme Update
by Tom Heneghan
International Intelligence Expert
Saturday January 09, 2010

UNITED STATES of America - It can now be reported that a major security breach involving U.S. Treasury and Federal Reserve banking codes took place last Wednesday on January 6, 2010.

A financial security code involving secret U.S. CIA proprietaries were leaked by a foreign-based United Kingdom website referencing "Operation Stillpoint" and the future of the U.S. Republic.

Folks, there is NO "Operation Stillpoint"!

It is a financial code that is used to protect U.S. Treasury funds.

It is now clear that this PRE-meditated leak of the financial code "stillpoint" was part of an overall scam involving British Intelligence and its collaborators inside the U.S. intelligence community that facilitated the THEFT of $1.3 TRILLION of U.S. Treasury funds.

The funds are currently parked in secret accounts in the nation of Pakistan.

We can now also divulge that the United Kingdom-based website also uses biblical verse, which are also secret codes for facilitating entry into the U.S. national security accounts protected by "stillpoint".

The funds were transferred from a Bank of America branch in Charlotte, North Carolina after being moved out of a secret account in Alexandria, Virginia.

Once again we can round up the usual suspects that were involved in this heist.

They include the usual suspects, sociopath and satanist, former President George Herbert Walker Bush, his deranged son, nation wrecking, Constitution shredding, cocaine snorting, election stealing, U.S. Treasury embezzling, homosexual in-the-closet, AWOL war criminal George W. BushFRAUD, their business partners, daddy Bush's little bitch, Bill Clinton, and his mentally ill wife, dysfunctional Secretary of State, loser and lesbian in-the-closet Hillary Rodenhurst Clinton.

Other participants included CIA Director Leon Panetta, noted Clinton financer (former Clinton Administration Chief of Staff and current University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill President) Erskine Bowles, along with noted Bush-Clinton-Crime Family Syndicate neo Nazi 'black ops' specialist Colonel Dana Wilcox.

Guess who, folks, was in charge of the overall operation to once against LOOT the U.S. Treasury. None other than the PRO Nazi British Queen Elizabeth II.

These funds were taxes due the U.S. Treasury tied to the noted Wanta-Reagan-Mitterrand Protocols.

The THEFT of $1.3 TRILLION was done right under the nose of CIA puppet president Barack Hussein Obama who has been told that if he does not go along with this TREASON he will be immediately scandalized by the Bush-Clinton Crime Family Syndicate-NSA-Mossad controlled U.S. media and removed from office.

Note: We have yet to see a real authentic birth certificate proving Obama was actually born in the United States.

Title: Email correspondence with Christopher Story

Halvor - August 28, 2010 08:42 AM (GMT)

I have decided to post some emails that ran between myself and Christopher Story back in January of this year. They contain the entirety of communications between us. Only the emails from Story are included as mine are quoted fully in them.

Thank you very much. You may not be aware of this but the family name STORY is 'Styri' or something similar and comes originally from the Sandinavian/Danish invasions of the 9th/10th centuries. STORY is based in Newcastle upon Tyne. STOREY is based in Cumbria.

When I was 21 I had an indelible image in my mind of the 'steppe' and of pine forests. I thought that Canada was like that, which was the primary reason why I originally emigrated to Canada. I now realise that this 'ancient image' was probably a very odf folk-memory which is somehow handed down through the generations. Lateral thinking here!

You may also be interested in the fact that yesterday, after I had been out for about an hour and a half, I came back to the office in late afternoon and there were three messages on the voicemail. They were satanic readings from the United States, clearly responding to the Christmas message. The third one was a complete satanic initiation ceremony in which the odious violent male voice was initiating a young woman into allegiance to Satan and cursing Jesus Christ. I promise you this is what happened.

Of course this had absolutely no effect on me, but quite clearly the belated Christmas message has had an effect on the Dark Forces. I surmise that the reason for this is that the website NEWS panel deals with issues affecting the world and the last thing they expect is for a literate Biblical essay focusing on Jesus Christ to appear amid this material. That is a very serious challenge for them, as the website penetrates everywhere given that, by default, I am the only experienced journalist in the world who is following this story (which is also the biggest in the world).

In other words, what I am saying is that the essay gave them a very severe kick in the teeth, when they least expected it. Their reaction in going to the length of filling my voicemail with a COMPLETE satanic initgiation ceremony indicates a degree of desperation. Whether they imagine that they can curse me by this means or not, I have no idea. But I am protected from such cursing: do they think they can degrade the protection ?

Incidentally we have also been plagued on the phone every day by some creeps calling themselves 'the Great Dark Lords' since February 2008. Also sick American.

I did actually post a Christmas message on 26th December 2008 as well. But obviously the website is much more powerful now, so they are rattled. Interesting, isn't it? What happens when we stand up for The Lord. They are amazed because they really imagine that He has been forgotten, thanks to them. So they get a nasty shock when something like this happens.

In view of what you say, I thought you'd be interested in the above!

Very best for 2010. CS.

I have realised that you may be sharing my correspondence with others. If you were intending to do so, please DO NOT DO SO.

Also, most of this is in my 2007 book The New Underworld Order[www.edwardharle.com] which took 5 years to write and publish. Regards, CS.

Dear Christopher,

I was inspired to creative a Facebook group called RELIGION - NOT SPIRITUALITY

Its description is as follows:

"Spirituality has been turned into a means in itself, as opposed to a first stage in our reintegration in a society powered by, informed by and subordinate to GOD."

"In this insiduous way the Luciferian faction has taken control of the spiritual development of the entire New Age movement. This is truly the epitome of 'Wickedness in High Places'."

"Of course this immense deception has been tremendously facilitated by the equally immense deception of false religions which rightly have turned most sincere spiritual seekers away from what they perceive as "religion". But remember, the word 'religion' denotes a re-establishing of our original relationship with our creator, and the vast majority of organizations that call themselves religions are in fact usurpers controlled by Satan."

Apart from your article and our correspondence I read today an insiduous piece of New Age propaganda (http://projectavalon.net/forum/showthread.php?p=216515&posted=1#post216515) which, however well written, is yet another Satanic/Luciferian stab at the inevitable reintegration between lost souls and their source and creator.

If you have or in the future shall open a Facebook account, I hope you will join this group.

Sincerely,
Halvor

P.S. I have Cc.-ed this mail to Leo Zagami whose integrity I cannot attest, but who's well-being and friendship I care about.

It is not Biblical to say that there are four 'Satans'. Untrue in the context intended. See Job. Only one Satan is 'going to and fro across the earth'. If you are using sources OTHER THAN SCRIPTURE you are in serious danger of error.

Quite a lot of people do this. Scripture is self-contained and requires no back-up from other sources. That is to court error.

Belial and Satan are interchangeable. And no, I have not made a mistake.

Regards, CS.

I have only today opened a famous grimoire, perhaps the most famous, called "The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage" in English translation by the well-known occultist Samuel Liddell MacGregor Mathers. In the first volume it reads about Belial "HE infamous Belial hath no other desire than that of obtaining the power of hiding and obscuring the True Divine Wisdom, so that he may have more means of blinding simple men and of leading them by the nose; so that they may always remain in their simplicity, and in their error, and that they may not discover the Way which leadeth unto the True Wisdom;"

I never wrote a word of my Wicked Pedia biography.

I have only been publishing for 40 years.

If what I publish is all lies I would be in jail or dead, and neither woudl I be received with courtesy by US immigration on my frequent trips to the United States, the laest being on 11th December 2009.

Can you get this trash removed?

When I tried to amend the existing inaccuracies, they were restored. I regard Wikipedia as a CIA information control operation. It's lethal. But if you can do anything that would be appreciated.

I am completely in agreement that we must not become involved in polemics.

What you may not know, however, is that the head-on attack on Casper has 'released' precise information about what fourwinds is. It's a CIA 'pod'. This has been revealed as a direct consequence of my operation to deal with the cruelties and cynicism perpetrated by the CIA Casper operation against the 320000 Ponzi victims. The reason they target me is (a) that they were never expecting any opposition at all and (b) that the Queen is forcing the issue. They bracket me with the Queen which is ludicrous as I have no connection apart from being 100% loyal to HMQ.

Therefore, mindless polemics is out.

But targeted offensives where necessary that floor them, are appropriate. As they were attacking me I went for their weak spot, namely that they may be covering up ongoing fraud. Now we have more data, namely that the website is a 'pod'. I will obtain more data.

Christopher Story,

I am working on the article. I'll see what can be done given the available documentation for the information currently presented in the article. If you wish you may give me simple, concrete, piecemeal feedback. That would actually assist me in improving that article, as opposed to "please fix all the problems".

But please, feel completely free to advocate your position also on the discussion page of the article. My caveat however would be that you really ought not to allow yourself to become entangled in polemics. That would probably not lead in a constructive direction as far as that article is concerned. I also would strongly discourage your actually editing the article text. That would critically raise the conflict-of-interest issue. With your presently ongoing activities your Wikipedia article is naturally another potential battle ground, and we may be seeing the beginning of that in its most recent editing activity.

With regards,
Halvor

I never wrote a word of my Wicked Pedia biography.

I have only been publishing for 40 years.

If what I publish is all lies I would be in jail or dead, and neither woudl I be received with courtesy by US immigration on my frequent trips to the United States, the laest being on 11th December 2009.

Can you get this trash removed?

When I tried to amend the existing inaccuracies, they were restored. I regard Wikipedia as a CIA information control operation. It's lethal. But if you can do anything that would be appreciated.

He however introduces some new "facts" that are paradoxical to say the least, namely that Obama/Biden will be replaced by the end of January by Nancy Pelosi and Hillary Clinton. He also states that Panetta has been "silenced", whatever that may mean.

Christopher Story, Jesuit Coadjutor and British Agent, 2009

All additions and comments by EJP are in Red.

"There are many things I don't like about [Christopher Story's book] TNUO. The problems come in the middle of the book. Chapters 5, 6 and 7 have the most errors. Among them,

1. Freemasonry is Jewish and controlled by Jews (297-312). Not only due to its structure and titles and rituals of the Scottish rites, but also because of the penetration by Rosicrucians who are supposed to have had a Germanic Jewish origin (pp. 442-444). The Kabbalah, as infused in the Rosicrucians and Masons, was preserved by Jews, who took it from Gentiles while in Babylonian Captivity. The real Babylonians, the real Saturnalians, the real Satanists with the most power, who in fact run masonry, are the papal bloodlines and Jesuit mafia.

What's wrong with the Jew bashers
http://z10.invisionfree.com/The_Unhived_Mi...showtopic=29513

Now keep in mind that on page 442, Story said Weishaupt was a lapsed Jesuit priest. This means Story sides with Lady Queensborough and to an extent Robison, who says that Weishaupt was the enemy of the Jesuits [which is typical Jesuit conspiracy rhetoric].

So what does that mean for those Robison quotes way down below soon to come in this analysis, which seem to point to Jesuits going into masonic lodges? Probably it means that the Jesuits simply wanted to destroy Freemasonry from within or at least control it for themselves in order to fight the spread of Protestantism probably . . . at the very least. Just one gang fighting with another gang in Robison's view, I imagine. However, that's not the case. We know Weishaupt was working for the Jesuits. Secondly, we also know about the Stuarts and the Catholic connections to the Scottish Rite of freemasonry.

Now I should state that in pages 297-312, Story doesn't really prove that the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry is Jewish outside of quoting Lady Queensborough's unproven assertion to this effect. All he really does it talk about a lot of Jews who opened masonic lodges and helped propogate masonry, in America especially. But that is stuff right out of Marvin Antelman's book [To Eliminate the Opiate, volumes I and II] and Marvin blames the problems of masonry mainly on kabbalistic Jews influenced by Sabbtai Tzvi, I believe. And Antelman is not so foolish as to forget that this masonic, anti-Torah Judaism stuff was inspired solely by other Jews. In volume one, he talks about Illuminism in Germany and how in fact many Jews weren't allowed into masonic lodges. I think the main group that started this attack on the religion of Judaism (Torah not kabbalah), was the German Bund. It consisted of people born into Catholicism, Protestantism and Judaism, but they were usually intellectually gifted plotters who wanted to destroy religion. That is how Illuminized kabbalistic Judaism, as manifested by the Sabbateans and the Frankists was being used in conjunction with Jewish masons and Jewish masonic lodges. I think Story only mentioned this Bund once and he certainly never did in the same revealing way as Antelman did.

As for Story claiming the Rosicrucians were of Jewish origin, he says on apge 443, that the Rosicrucians had a meeting in 1617 called "The Convention of Seven" at Magdebourg on October 31 of 1617. They decided to maintain strict secrecy for at least one hundred years. The source, Story says for this meeting, is a book called Themis Aurea written in 1616-17 and printed in 1618 by a Jew, Michael Maier, who called himself Summus magister, or Sovereign Master, a title used in Rose-Croux documents preserved in the Sovereign Patriarchal Council of Hamburg "which is the Supreme Jewish Lodge identified by Lady Queensborough as being 'secretly affiliated to Masonry.' " That's about the only proof Story offers. However, the German origins of the Rosicrucians are not to be discounted. Whatever the one of the two origin stories is true, both are connected to Germany.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rosicrucianism

Juri Lina does provide an interesting source in his book ARCHITECTS OF DECEPTION. He says that Christian Rosencruz was just a pen name for Johann Valentin Andreae who wrote the original manifesto of the Rosicrucians. The source given is THE TEMPLE AND THE LODGE by Richard Leigh and Michael Baigent. Some have speculated he was a Jew. If so, that would mean Story is correct about German-Jewish-Kabbalistic origins of the Rosicrucians.

On page 444-5, Story has the following:

"EXPLOITATION OF JEWISH ANIMUS AGAINST JESUS CHRIST.
Unsurprisingly, therefore, given that we can precisely identify Rosicrucian sorcery with a Jewish/Babylonian source, it is no surprise to find that many hyperactive Jews were associated with the Rosicrucians prior to their takeover or merger with Freemasonry, in addition to Michael Maier – including Cesare Ceremonini, Richard Simon and Nick Stone, who influenced the Rosicrucian figure Thomas Vaughan to pursue the idea of subverting the guild of the 'physical' Freemasons, an ancient universal fraternity, to Gnosticism and sorcery, given the phasing-out of church-and-cathedral building. At the Convention of Seven in Magdebourg, 'The Invisibles' had both sworn to destroy the church of Jesus Christ (which they confused of course with the Catholic Church) and 'to transform the fraternity into an association which would carry on more or less open propaganda, while adopting such measures of prudence as might then be deemed expedient by the sect.'[37]" Why an oath was sworn to keep these intentions secret for a century is not entirely clear, which suggests an occultic imperative. In the event, the decision was taken effectively to continue the Rosicrucian tradition of secrecy by means of the takeover-merger with Freemasonry, which enabled the Rosicrucians to spread their sorcery and related abominations through Freemasonry from behind their preferred veil of secrecy, even though a publication called 'The Rosicrucian' was flourishing in the second half of the 19th century. The last of the known Grand Masters of the Rose Croix, according to Lady Queenborough, was Johann Christian Wolff [38] of Jewish extraction. And according to a source cited by Lady Queenborough herself, the last Grand master of the Rose Croix, who died in 1750, was another Jew, Brunn. [39] Both were German.

"German Jews have been at the forefront of the Rosicrucian Illuminati for centuries, right down to the alleged triple or quadruple agent Dr. Henry Kissinger, clearly identified by the Author's late friend [Jesuit priest of the Fourth Vow] Malachi Martin as the International Delegate and Plenipotentiary Extraordinary to the Enthronement of the Prince of Darkness at the Vatican (see page 374) [Jesuit Malachi Martin promoting a Jewish Conspiracy] – the 'mentor' of George Bush Sr., who is allegedly the head of the Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD), Dachau, under Heinz Alfred Kissinger's guidance [Jewish Kissinger ruling over Gentile George Bush, Sr.]. Both these men allegedly control vast, secretly acquired financial resources.

"Apart from the Rosicrucian manifestation of the perpetual 'seething energies of Lucifer', other secret societies bent upon the elevation of Gnosticisim, sorcery and revolution to the forefront of the geopolitical agenda have included:

"The Martinists: established by a Portugese Marano Jew, Martinez Depasqualy, who indulged in magical practices united with political intrigue, and included among their members of the leading political operatives, Salvette De Lange, a Jew, William law (ditto) and Mirabeau, who fomented the French Revolution [blaming Jews for the French Revolution!] – just as the Rosicrucian Illuminati seperately preparted the ground for the American Revolution [rather, it was Av1611 Bible-based First Great Awakening that prepared the ground for the American Revolution].

"The Strict Obsercance led by Baron Hund und Leucht, of Jewish extraction, who assumed the name of Johnson and several other aliases. This secret society recruited its members from the Lodges and merged occultism with political intrigue, formulating a plan for financial/economic control based on the Babylonian fiat money system.
The Scottish Rite, the Moravian Brothers, the Alta Vendita (and/or anti-church Carbonarism, into which the Jewish Giuseppe Mazzini was initiated in 1827 [Mazzini was no Jew!] and with which he merged his Young Italy Movement which shared the same objective of destroying Papal power, and was headed by a mysterious Jew called Piccolo Tigre), and the Egyptian Rites of Cagliostro (Mizraim), ostensibly founded in 1805 with 90 degrees. Essentially Jewish [in fact Jesuit-authored], this elaborate system involved long and difficult ritual trials absed on records of the Egyptian and Elusian occult and death mysteries. The Rite of Mizraim had in fact been amalgamated with the Rite of Memphis in 1775, for use in England.

"According to 'The Rosicrucian' for January 1871: 'We have great pleasure in announcing that this philosophic Masonic Rite (Ancient and Primitive Rite of Mizraim) has been recently established in England under an authority derived from the Grand Council of Rites for France, and that the Conservators General held a meeting at the Freemasons Tavern, on Wednesday, the 28th of December. The principal chairs were filled by Ill. Bros. Wentworth Little 90 degrees; the Rt. Hon. The Earl of Limerick 90 degrees; and S. Rosenthal (of Jewish extraction) 90 degrees; by whom the 'Bective' Sanctuary of Levites – the 33rd of the Rite – was duly opened.' In other words, Mr. Rosenthal was in change." [Of course, Story blames a Jew rather than the Jesuits who authored the Rites of Memphis-Mizraim as stated by former RMM member Count Vittorio Vivaldi of Venice.]

End 444-5 excerpt of Story. A reminder that Story's end notes of 38 and 39 come from Lady Queenborough's Occult Theocracy.

2. Weishaupt, falsely called a crypto Jew by Story, was a fighter against the Jesuits according to Story. He bases a lot of this crap on Lady Queenborough's work. She too buys the Jesuit propaganda, as did Nesta Webster. [Nesta Webster was a Roman Catholic and friend of Archbishop of Westminster Henry Cardinal Manning.] If anyone knew anything about Weishaupt, other than what a mere chapter could fill, they would know he later went back into the Catholic Church. Scroll down in this link and you will see what I mean. It's at the bottom of page one.

Madame Blavatsky's comment on the Jesuits.
http://z10.invisionfree.com/The_Unhived_Mi...?showtopic=1060

This to me just proves he was with them all along. On 314, Story mentions Knigge only once and does it to refer to how Knigge and Weishaupt were close. Why the heck didn't Story go into more detail about Knigge? Did he not know that Knigge and Weishaupt split due to Weishaupt being jealous over how successful Knigge was at getting more masons to come into his group and swear loyalty to him and Weishaupt? Did Story not know that Knigge accused Weishaupt of being a Jesuit, and that there was proof of it?

http://troyspace2.wordpress.com/2008/09/16...it-in-disguise/

http://troyspace2.wordpress.com/2008/08/15...suit-loyalties/

I don't see how anyone who has ever reserached Weishaupt's group, or read the whole memoirs of Jacobinism (parts 3 and 4) back to front like I have, could have missed how Knigge suspected Weishaupt of being a Jesuit. Barruel mentions it a lot. In fact, Barruel, a priest, who authored the MEMOIRS OF JACOBINISM, was so upset at insinuations that the Illuminati was run by Jesuits through Weishaupt, a secret agent, that part 4, on page 299, in the original 1799 typeset as seen in the KESSINGER

BOOKS edition, Barruel starts a long footnote running to 302 where he mocks supposed proof of Jesuits already running masonry. [Abbe Barruel was a Jesuit priest!] It's actually quite a strong case that is made and he doesn't seem to fully refute it. In fact, this footnote comes in the middle of chapter 9, which starts on page 284, and it is designed to attack the insinuation of Jesuit links to masonry. See it here on googlebooks.

AntiSionist interruption: I checked this googlebooks link and the page to start at in googlebooks is not the same page as the kessinger edition, 298, but rather in googlebooks, you must go to page 186.

All that aside, the real reason Weishaupt was used by the Jesuits was to get control of Freemasonry, and to also take back control of the Vatican, after Pope Clement XIV was poisoned for suppressing and extinguishing that order in 1773 via a papal bull. Story never talked about that. If he is so anti-Catholic, how come he didn't know about Knigge's suspicions of Weishaupt? Or why didn't he mention them if he did? And thus, did he or didn't he know about Knigge's change? Like I said before, Story probably would have come across it if he just had more time. He's more of an economic minded guy. When it comes to the NWO, he can only summarize the issues he has briefly heard about in passing.

3. Story also makes the blunder on 442 that the first Jesuits were Jews, as quoted in that fictional work by Disraeli. That is simply not true. Ignatius was not a Jew. Furthermore, Eric Phelps has disproven this time and time again that Jews had anything to do with the Jesuit order.

Eric Phelps

"The Jesuits were suppressed in 1773. Their response was to create the Illuminati in their old stronghold of Bavaria. Adam Weishaupt was a German Gentile and a prof of Canon Law at Ingolstadt University—the Jesuits being formally absent due to their expulsion from Roman Catholic Bavaria.

"Weishaupt joined the Bavarian Masonic lodge in 1777 and then united with the Rothschilds. Because the Order had ceased to exist (formally) it had to find a holder for its fortune in banks domiciled in non-Roman Catholic countries. This spelled Prussia, Russia and England. The keepers of this massive Jesuit treasure derived from their South American Reductions were the Rothschilds, then financing the Illuminati. The Order then started the French Revolution for the punishment of the Bourbon and Hapsburg dynasties, beheading King Louis XVI and his Hapsburg Queen.

"Any accurate history on the French Revolution will admit that the Rothschilds financed the Jacobins and Napoleon. In fact, after the Revolution, the Order's controlled European press sought to blame the revolution on the Jews!

"With the false message sent to London via roost that Wellington lost Waterloo, stocks plummeted. There to buy the exchange for pennies on the pound was Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor Rothschild. From this moment on the Order, via their Rothschild financiers, owned the Bank of England and the Old City's Stock Exchange. Thus, the British Empire became the agent for all the designs of the Order for the 19th Century. Queen Victoria backed every Jesuit plot barring none (the opium wars, the Irish famine, the Boer War, etc.).

"When the Order was restored in 1814, it promptly took back the papacy with its international Vatican Empire. Thus, the Jesuit General retained the Rothschilds as his bankers and this pattern is repeated in several forums. The Sicilian Roman Catholic Mafia, working its international drug trade, has is finances managed by Jews, Meyer Lanski being one in the past.

"Further, King Edward VII, the son of Victoria, formally readmitted the Order into England in 1902. The king's dearest bankers were J. P. Morgan and the Rothschilds, those Jews managing the Bank of England. The Second Thirty Years' War (1914-1945) was put in motion by this monster: his financial backers were, among others, the Rothschilds, Warburgs, etc."

And Eric Phelps again.

Eric Phelps

"These maxims teach that Gentiles rule the Jesuit Order. And indeed, true history proves this. Loyola was never a Jew as he was the son of one of the highest Spanish grandees in the court of Ferdinand and Isabella. Laynez, the second Jesuit Superior General was in fact a Jew and for this reason in 1593, after a huge falling out within the Society, a statute was passed forbidding any Jew to be within the Order. Ex-Jesuit E. Boyd Barrett confirms this policy in his The Jesuit Enigma and Rome Stoops to Conquer.

Therefore, Adam Weishaupt was never a Jew; rather, he was a German Jesuit of the short robe and the first non-priest to be given a Canon Law chair at the Jesuit University in Ingolstadt, Bavaria. The Jewish Rothschilds did not come into financial prominence until the mid 1700s. They were Masonic and affiliated with the Pope's Court Jews—the Frankists—at the time of the Suppression of the Order in 1773. With the Pope outlawing the Jesuits, the Rothschilds became the Order's bankers to finance the French Revolution and Napoleonic Wars—that great Jesuit vengeance upon the Vatican Empire and Europe.

Indeed, the Papacy has always made the Jews its scapegoats for the secret works of the Pope now under supreme command of the Black Pope. The Jews were blamed for the Black Death of the Dark Ages when a third of Europe perished; for the Napoleonic Wars; for the destruction of Germany in WWI; and now for 911 as well as all the crimes committed by the Pope's Masonic Jewish Labor Zionists running Israel.

Further, the Rothschilds were not the bankers for the Jesuits in 1540. The papacy had plenty of money and the Jewish "Fuggars" were one of the Vatican bankers at the time according to Ridpath's Universal History.

No doubt there were Jews who converted to Romanism in 1492 and were known as Marranos. But the Order knew all the intelligence from the Court of the King to the curb of the slum. And no Jew after 1593 was OPENLY allowed into the Order although there were Jews who were secret Jesuit Temporal Coadjutors at the secret creation of the General."

It really surprises me how Story could never have heard of Eric Jon Phelps. At least there is no indication in anything of his I have read that he heard of Phelps and then just basically ignored him.

4. Story has a nice sixth chapter on the Jesuits. He attacks them because Story claims they are not really a Christian church. He claims that it is infected with Illuminism and Luciferianism. He also tackles Opus Dei. One of the subheadings under his attack on Opus Dei is "OPUS DEI EXPOSED BY THE BRAVE MARIA DEL CARMEN TAPIA." It refers to her memoir Beyond The Threshhold: A Life in Opus Dei. Story notes how people think Opus Dei is a conspiracy against the Catholic Church but he writes it off as nonsense by saying on page 396, "the late Malachi Martin and others have revealed that the Ancient Mysteries have long since been allowed into the sanctuary, with the proliferation of Freemasonic membership and ritual among some of the hierarchy – contrary to Pope Leo XIII's rearguard Encyclical 'Jumanum Genus' dated 20th April 1884, in which Freemasonry was roundly condemned." He also said that The rules of secrecy and deceit which characterises Freemasonry are replicated among the Jesuits and Opus Dei, also on page 396.

On page 377, he asks why Pope John Paul's casket had an M on it at the funeral. Story describes an unusually shaped coffin with the letter M, the 13th letter of the alphabet on it. What did the M refer to, Story asks? Mary, whom the Catholics worship and pray to as a goddess like in ancient Egypt and Babylon? (think of Hislop's THE TWO BABYLONS book)? Did it refer to Malta (if the late pope was indeed a Knight of Malta)? Or did it mean Magus? As for the trapezoid shape of the coffin, Story claims that the late Pope John Paul II was a salesman of Zyklon B (I first heard this from William Cooper). Story then says,

"An organisation calling itself The Order of the Trapezoid—yet another one of these Illminati organisations calling itself The Order—has been identified as one of ten 'magickal' Orders loyal to the Temple of Set, based in San Fransisco, an organisation of Satanists openly presided over by Dr. Michael A. Aquino, a US military intelligence officer who is notorious in the United States as a perpetrator of Himmlerian US occultic intelligence experimentation. In a response dated 14th November 1990 to criticisms of his activities, Aquino himself described how The Order of the Trapezoid features, along with 'several specialised Orders within the Temple of Set,' as a component of its structures 'somewhat analogous to the departments of a university.' The Satanist Aquino continued, revealing the wide range of Himmlerian investigations with which the Order of Set was and is engaged on behalf of US 'Black' Intelligence, as follows:

'In actuality, this particular Order is concerned with a great many areas of reserach, of which North European (including Nazi German) occultism is only one. Others include time/space sciences, proxemics, art and architecture (particularly Expressionism, Art Nouveau/Deco/Moderne), electronics (Tesla et al), flim noir, Lovecraftian literature, music and the electromagnetic spectrum, mental sciences, etc.'

In other words, these—revealingly—are among the areas where intelligence investigators have sought to apply or merge occult skills for secret mind and personality control purposes."

Story then continues on page 378. The Order of the Trapezoid had a document in which it explains its behavior as follows:

'The Order of the Trapaezoid extracts the positive, the constructive, the exalted and the romantic from Germanic magical tradition—and just as carefully avoids and rejects those excesses, distortions and cruelties which have made this tradition an object of the most extraordinary fear, condemnation, and suppression in the postwar period. The Germanic tradition is also part of the legacy of the Prince of Darkness, hence is appropriate to an Order within the Temple of Set, which embraces all manifestations of the Powers of Darkness in the world.'

The truth, once again from a horse's mouth. This extraordinary admission reveals, once again, how these deluded fools are themselves fooled by Lucifer himself, whom the purport to revere as God. The notion that an occultist dabbling in Black Magick can pick and choose which element of magick to 'accept' and what is 'unacceptable' or unwise, is disingenuous and fanciful—since the occultist is in severe danger of becoming the possessed, and can never control the dark powers that wind up controlling him or her; and in any case, the let out in this context is contradicted by The Order's assertion that its membership within the Temple of Set means that it is part of the Germanic Satanic tradition, 'which embraces all manifestations of the Powers of Darkness.' Hence the claim that The Order selects what elements of magick to accept and what elements to reject, is a brazen lie which is contradicted in its own literature."

Story also asks what the mis-shapen cross means. Part of the caption of the photo has him saying, "Karol Wojtyla, an Illuminati magus, is featured on a list of alleged mind control programmers (page 517)."

Story has many more important things to say in terms of exposing the satanism and consecration of the devil in the Vatican, and a lot of it comes from Malachi Martin as well as Boyd Barrett's book The Jesuit Enigma. Story also shows how he doesn't like how the Jesuits are supposed to have no sexual relations and he thinks this is a perversion of what God intended. For man and woman are to be attracted to each other and to reproduce in the confines of a stable, loving, monogynous relationship. He also exposes how young Jesuits when recruited, are spied upon by others higher than them, to make sure they don't do anything too crazy like drink alcohol or forget to bathe. And that's another thing. Story talks about how they are told to 'renounce the world' and that they feel good and euphoric about it. But over time, they go crazy since it's not really natural. They become depressed. "Many of them acquiring peculiar habits, fetishes and preoccupations evidently arising from the wholly unnatural restrictions, lack of true and loving human relationships, and the environment in which they are required to live and have their pathetic being. In other words, the Jesuits novice's euphoric period is false." (354).

5. Story talks briefly about The Protocols of Zion in his book on pages 431-440. On 432, he has a dig at Rabbi Antelman. He says Antelman blames the Jewishness of freemasonry on Sabbtai Tzvi, and that is not going back far enough. Well that's true, and Story justifies it on the German-Jewish-Rosicrucian penetration of masonry (442-444). However, Story, being too busy, didn't figure out who the papal bloodlines were. Furthermore, Antelman, despite mistakenly thinking Weishaupt was an enemy of the jesuits, blamed the Jesuits for massive slave trading in volume 2 of his To Eliminate the Opiate, like the Jews were engaged in as exposed in THE SECRET HISTORY OF BLACK NOBILITY AND JEWS.

AntiSionist interruption: The book is actually called The Secret Relationship Between Blacks and Jews

Of course Craig Oxley only figured it out when he had insiders coming to him last year. However, Story was close. When he talked about the supposed Jewishness of the black nobility, he mentioned Orsini. THAT'S ONE OF THE PAPAL BLOODLINES. The Orsini's are only "Jewish" because they married into Jews and have an offshoot called Rosenburg who does work for them in America. Right now, the AIPAC head is a Rosenburg, and Alan Rosenburg ran the hollywood screen actor's guild, it being filled with Jewish frontmen. If Story had it in him to go back to the 14th and 15th century Germany to talk about the Rosicrucians and the supposed Jewish black nobility that intermarried with banker Jews who then took over (lie), and he followed the Orsini line, he would have gone back further and saw how the Orsinis and the Aldobrandini's connected, and then how the Aldobrandini's connected with the De Medici's. I went into this with you before, all based on the book PAPAL GENEALOGY. Actually he does go that far when in his seventh chapter, he talks about the (supposedly 'Jewish') black nobility. Story was getting close, but not close enough.

To Story's credit, he says the issue of The Protocols being Jewish is diversionary. In fact he clearly states that they were written to make all Jews look bad. With regard to The Protocols, he also mentions on 447-448, a 1492 letter from the Chief Rabbi of Spain, written to the grand Sanhedrin asking for help on a law in Spain which threatened the Jews with expulsion. Story says authorities think that extracts from the reply to the rabbi were inspirations for the later Protocols. Again, Story missed a lot because his sources also missed a lot. Oxley, has a good audio on Jews controlled by Rome, and he talks about The Protocols, nearly RIGHT OFF THE BAT, in his VATICAN HOFJUDEN audio.

6. Starting on page 468, Story quotes a lot from Craig Heimbichner's book BLOOD ON THE ALTAR, which is about the OTO. He quotes from Craig's section on the OTO having the Catholic Church in their crosshairs in terms of wanting to exert their own influence on it. Story suffers from Heimbichner's mistake. The Roman Church already has Luciferian elements to it. It was that way from the beginning. Furthermore, the Jesuits, not the Jews, control Freemasonry. [The world headquarters for Scottish Rite Freemasonry is in Rome in the Piazza del Gesu near the Jesuit Order's Church of Gesu!] This is another mistake of Story's based on the limited resources he had at the time.

7. On 469-470, he talks about Bilderberg as a coordinating center for a predetermined agenda. That's the correct way to look at Bilderberg. It's not where policy is decided, but just agreed upon, like Rome-ruled masonic lodges. Story falsely called Rettinger, the starter of Bilderberg, a polish Jew. [Again, he is blaming a Jew for the work of a Jesuit!] I have never seen proof of that. However, Daniel Estulin himself fingered Rettinger as a Freemason and a Jesuit. He even fingered Pat Buchanan as a Knight of Malta. That clip from Estulin's book to this effect is reproduced on an Oxley topic a few posts down by AS.

http://z10.invisionfree.com/The_Unhived_Mi...opic=193&st=375

Alex Jones never touched on this ONCE in Estulin's book, in all the years he has had Estulin on his show. But then Alex Jones covers for Rome.

Now Estulin's book came out in 2007, the same year Story's did, and I believe that was the first time Estulin said what he did about Rettinger. However, one of his footnotes about Rettinger being a Freemason and Jesuit was John Coleman. Now Story knew damn well who Coleman was and what his work involved. In a Soviet Analyst issue, which talks about the role of Jews in Bolshevism, he mentions the work of John Coleman. Here is a paragraph.

"As the same time, Coleman is virulently anti-British, stating for instance that Britain started the First World War 'out of jealousy and hatred of Germany's burgeoning trade and economic success', whereas the very reverse is the case! So Coleman's conclusions and assertions need to be handled with caution."

If Germany was so poor and destitute, why did the allied powers have to crush them (as part of the Roman controlled dialectic) via the Versailles treaty? If we study the anti-Zionist work of Albert Pastore, http://www.the7thfire.com/9-11/Pastore_Inv...ism_and_WWI.htm

we see that the Zionists who were in on the world war scheme, and allied with the British, didn't think Germany was going to win the first world war but it was turning out that way. So the Zionists got USA and Britain (both Roman controlled of course) into the war to help crush Germany [the Protestant Second Reich]. The dialectic wasn't working out like the Romans wanted and so that's why Germany went down in World War I and stayed down with Versailles. Then the American and British elite controlled by Rome were able to rebuild Germany ON THEIR TERMS, BUT FOR ROME. Proof of the allies rebuilding Germany is found in the works of Antony Sutton and Eustace Mullins.

Furthermore, E.C. Knuth has proven in his book EMPIRE OF THE CITY, that the British in fact were responsible for World War I. He also exposes THE CITY of London. I have to wonder if Story honestly never heard of Knuth. However, if Story was big on American politics, he had to have known who Eustace Mullins was, at least in my opinion. And Mullins referenced Knuth's book in his book SECRETS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE in a chapter called "THE LONDON CONNECTION." Did Story honestly miss this because he was so damn busy writing on economic matters and obviously, the NWO issue isn't really where he excells at due to having limited time or resources?

Now I bring up Coleman, not because Story should have heard of what Coleman said about Rettinger being a Mason and a Jesuit due to finding it in Estulin's book, but because Story is very familiar with the work of Coleman in virtue of knowing about Coleman himself and not with the help of someone like Estulin. Coleman's claim about Rettinger seems to have nevertheless found its way into Story's book, albiet, based on other sources, and not Coleman's accusation. At least Story doesn't finger Coleman explicitly. Anyway, on page 471, Story says the idea that Rettinger was Vatican-linked was for public consumption, in order to hide his Jewish blood [which is once more perfect Jesuit rhetoric!]. Story then says the Vatican or Jesuits are essentially pharisaic anyway – which oh-so conveniently ties in with Story recycling the tired claim that Ignatius of Loyola was a Jew. Story does however mention, in regards to Rettinger in the European Union, that the Council of Europe had an executive Committee, which provided Rettinger "with his first prominenet platform for the promotion European unification. The widespread opinion that Retinger was inter alia an agent of the Vatican arose after he had suggested to the French Prime Minister, Georges Clemenceau, that Austria, Hungary and Poland should be merged as a tripartite monarchy under the guidance of the Jesuit 'Order' ; but Clemenceau [an enemy of the Jesuits since the Order's Dreyfus Affair], suspicious that this was a Vatican-inspired proposal, rejected the scheme outright."

8. On the next page, 472, Story says Coleman is ex-British Intelligence but then says he is technically a colleague of the Satanist Aleister Crowley. He never explains why he said that. Nevertheless, he quotes Coleman as saying that Bilderberg coordinates relationships between three strands of Illuminati. 1. Communists (or wicca masons) 2. Black Nobility and 3. Maltese, Jesuits, Vatican. Story says that Coleman has justification to claim that the Bavarian Illuminati created Bilderberg, "which was established not by Rettinger, who acted as coordinator, but by the former Nazi SS officer, [Knight of Malta] Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands in 1954." Story goes on to say that Bilderberg's Board has 39 members, 13 each coming from those three strands stated above. Story doesn't deny the Vatican connection Coleman made to Bilderberg so that's good for him. However Story seems to imply that Bernhard was the true power behind Bilderberg, when I believe it was Rettinger. Again, Story gets close, but not close enough [as that was his purpose, the same purpose of John Coleman].

9. On 473-476, Story talks about the Khazars. He states the idea that Khazars, being heavily Ashkenazic, are very very related to the highly semitic Sephardim. He bases this, for one thing, on bible quotes like Eric Jon Phelps would. “The Ashkenazim are the heterogenous branch of European Jewry excluding Jews from the Mediterranean area. Their generic name refers to the Jews dwelling in Mitteleuropea, considered to be the land of Ashkenaz, with the term being later extended to different Jewish communities including German, Polish, Scandanavian, Russian and Danubian Jews. The Mitteleuropean Jews lived long enough in Germany, Austria and Bohemia to have developed their own language, Yiddish, which in due course became a sort of official tongue of the Ashkenazim Jews.” (474) Story also claims that the Sephardim are heavily Semitic, but Paul Wexler disproved this in his book THE NON JEWISH ORIGINS OF THE SEPHARDIC JEWS. No one has refuted his work. Sure Kevin Alan Brook has revised a few things by Koestler, but that’s on the Ashkenazim. To my knowledge, no one has touched Wexler’s book on the Sephardim. To me, that means it’s pretty solid work. Brook has revised also a few things on Wexler’s early nineties book on the Ashkenazim, but again, no one (to my knowledge) has touched his work on the Sephardim. On 475, Story claims only the rulers [of Khazaria] converted to Judaism in Khazaria, but Kevin Alan Brook has proven in his book and on khazaria.com, that it wasn’t just the nobility that converted to Judaism. [Brook proved no such thing as per the work of EJP. The purpose of Brook, like British agent Arthur Koestler, is to "prove" there is no such thing as a preserved Jewish race of Israelites living today.] So Story loses a point there. On page 476, Story goes on to say that after their kingdom fell in 1016 due to the Vikings, the Khazars intermixed mainly with the Kipchak (Kuman) populations. They also mixed with several groups on the Caucus such as Karachays, Kumyks, and Dhagestani tribes. These tribes have Khazars among their ancestors, so claims Story.

10. On 477 Story talks about black nobility families. He correctly says they go back a long way. “During the first three crusades lasting from 1063-1123, the power of the Venetian Black Nobility was established; and the aristocracy had secured complete control over Venice by 1171, when the appointment of the Doge was transferred to a Great Council consisting of members of the new banking and commercial aristocracy, including members of the famous Medici family.” (477). Story then in page 478 lists all the main black nobility families, which he claims are all Jewish. Why? “Due to the pre-eminence of Jewish (Khazar) bankers and monopoly merchants among those who consolidated power in city states and principalities all over Europe during the middle ages.” He then lists, Windsor (Guelph) of Britian, Wettin of Belgium, Bernadotte, the Swedish line, Liechenstein, the Denmark line of Oldenberg, the German Hohenzollern, Hannover of Germany, Bourbon in France, the House of Orange in the Netherlands (with William of Orange who “was originally the Jew William Stradholder who was first elevated to the rank of Captain-General in the Dutch Forces.”), Grimaldi of Monaco, Wittelsbach of Germany, Braganza in Portugal, Nassau of Luxembourg, Hapsburg of Austria, Savoy in Italy, Karadjordevic in Yugoslavia, Wurttemberg in Germany, Zogu of Albania. “All these families are connected with the House of Guelph, one of the original

Venetian Black Nobility families." [This is the same anti-Venetian, Jesuit rhetoric of Roman Catholic shill for the Jesuits, Webster Tarpley.]

Story then has an interesting paragraph on 479.

"In 1815, Jesuit agents and freemasonic allies among the crowned heads of Europe agreed at the Congress of Vienna which put an end to the geomasonic depredations of Napoleon (a masonic operative), that the inviolable neutrality of Switzerland, which had been decreed by the Peace of Westphalia in 1648, would be guaranteed in perpetuity—so that, irrespective of what wars are provoked by the Illuminati in pursuit of their objectives, the funds belonging to the Black Nobility lodged in Switzerland would always remain free from the threat of plunder. This is of course why Switzerland remains in existence."

11. On page 480, Story writes some stuff that does not sit well with me, given what I know about the power and evil of the British, and also what we know of the papal bloodlines. I don't even have to comment on the absurdity of this passage.

"At all events, the Black Nobility families consisting of Jewish money lenders who over time usurped the thrones which were indebted to them, are prominent 'movers and shakers' among the synarchy. The award by Her Majesty the Queen of an honorary knighthood to George Bush Sr., allegedly perhaps the biggest criminal operative in history, is sadly consistent with this analysis. And one feature of this research emerges time and time again, to connect with the 'double-mindedness' characteristic of the Illuminati. It is that Black Nobility figures, and their newcomer associates such as the Bush family 'profess' Christianity, but may secretly despise it. In a treatise on 'The Order of St. John of Jerusalem,' Dr. John Coleman wrote that 'as an example, we find the atheist Lord (Peter) Carrington, who pretends to be an Anglican Christian but who is a member of the Order of Osiris and other demonic sects, including Freemasonry, installed as Knight of the Garter at St George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II of England, of the Black Nobility Guelphs and head of the Anglican church, which she thoroughly despises.' Dr. John Coleman is among those who have argued that the 'Christianity' of these people is false; just as was the professed Christianity of the Spanish Jews who 'converted' in order to save their skins in medieval Spain, and that they derive their 'spiritual' intake from occultic-Judaic Freemasonry. This is hard to square with the evident humility and devotion to Jesus Christ of Her Majesty, but not hard to recognise, possibly, from the behavior of certain other prominent members of Britain's Royal Family. The reality of its extensive Jewish antecedents (increased by the Bowes Lyon family of which the late Queen Mother was a member) does not, of course, preclude the possiblity of members being True Christians, as The Queen appears to be, even though her Anglicanism may perhaps be simple (yet commendable). Not only could Dr. Coleman not document the existence of the Committee of 300, but also, likewise, his assertion that The Queen despites the Church of England could never be proven. However given that the Church of England has abandoned its role of instructing people in the Way of the Truth and the Life, and has gone a-whoring after many of the abominations forbidden by the prophets of the Israelites, this Author would be sympathetic to Her Majesty if she does indeed despite Anglicanism. But supporting Dr. Coleman's argument is the sad reflection that the serially repobate behavior of Anglican clerics has not, apparently, been corrected by The Queen and Head of the Church. Her Majesty has not appeared to exercise her authority to reprimand them." *

* Indeed, in the course of an interview given in the first quarter of 2006, Dr. Rowan Williams, the Archbishop of Cantebury, when asked point blank whether he believed in God, responded: "If by believing in God you mean is he sitting in the chair opposite me as you are, no." That is not the correct answer, which is: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and is come in the flesh.' – for which statement Christ promises that all who utter it in sincerity are saved. Dr. Williams' first act on being perversely 'selected' for consecration as Archbishop by Tony Blair for confirmation by The Queen, was to attend a Druidic ceremony in Wales, in which he was co-opted into the highest Degree of the Druids. Druidism is of course wholly incompatible with True Christianity, so this man is an imposter.

12. On page 501-03, Story has citations from John Robison's book PROOFS OF A CONSPIRACY. Story has a quote from Robison who says sources told him Jesuits were meddling in masonic lodges in the 17th century. "I have met with many particular facts, which convince me that…at this time" (referring to the English revolution and the Civil War period) "the Jesuits interferred considerably, insinuating themselves into the Lodges and contributing to increase that religious mysticism that is to be observed in all ceremonies of The Order." Story then says Robison noted how this society likes to hide and change labels when proper. "This Society is well known to have put on every shape, and to have made use of every mean that could promote the influence and power of The Order (Jesuit version)." "And we know that at this time they were by no means without hopes of re-establishing the dominion of the Church of Rome in England. Their services were not scrupled at by the distressed Royalists, even such as were Protestants, while they were highly prized by the Sovereign." Story then has his own paragraph on page 502 with some more quotes from Robison. Whatever numerical reference follow are Story's not Robison's.

"When, following the English Revolution, King James II took refuge in France with many of his most zealous adherents, his entourage too Freemasonry over to the Continent, 'where it was immediatly recieved by the French and was cultivated [there] with great zeal. The Lodges in France naturally became the rendezvous of the adherents to their banished King, and the means of carrying on a correspondence with their friends in England. At this time also the Jesuits took a more active hand in Freemasonry than ever. They insinuated themselves into the English lodges, where they were caressed by the Catholics, who panted after the re-establishment of their faith, and tolerated by the Protestant Royalists, who thought no concession too great a compensation for their services. At this time changes were made in some of the Masonic symbols . . . which bear evident marks of jesuitical interference.' [103]. This was nothing new, for in an earlier era, 'in all this progressive mummery, we see much of the hand of the Jesuits, and it would seem that it was encouraged by the Church.'"[104]

13. On 502-03, Story goes on to talk about Robison's important talks about Germanic freemasonry. But Story reminds us that Germanic Rosicrucianism dates back to 14th century. Story brings more of Robison forward where Robison says Freemasonry was imported back to Germany somewhat later than into France. The first German lodge was in Cologne in 1716 but was soon suppressed. But by 1725, there were lodges in Catholic and Protestant Germany. From Robision: "Those of Wetzler, Frankfort on the Maine, Brunswick and Hamburg are the oldest. . . . All of them received their institution from England and had patents from a Mother Lodge in London. All seem to have got the mystery through the same channel, the banished friends of the Stuart Family. Many of these were Catholics, and entered into the service of Austria and the Catholic Princes." [108]

Story: "Enter once again, the Rosicrucians, followed noch einmal by the Jesuits." [503]

"Freemasonry, professing mysteries, instantly roused all these people, and the Lodges appeared to the adventurers who wanted to profit by the enthusiasm or the avarice of their dupes, the fittest places in the world for the scene of their operations. The Rosycrucians were the first who availed themselves of the opportunity…a set of Alchymists. Pretenders to the transmutation of metals and the universal medicine, who, the better to inviegle their votaries, had mixed with their own tricks a good deal of the absurd superstitions of that sect, in order to give a greater air of mystery to the whole… These cheats…persuaded their pupils that they were the only true masons. Rosycrucian Lodges were soon established and became numerous, because their mysteries were addressed…to the curiosity, the sensuality, and the avarice of men. They became a very formidable band, adopting the constitution of the Jesuits, dividing the Fraternity into circles, each under the management of its own Superior, known to the President, but unknown to the individuals of the Lodges. These Superiors were connected to each other in a way known only to themselves, and the whole was under one General." [110]

Story:

"So here we have from this respeceted academic source, confirmation of the intertwined machinations of the Rosicrucians and the Jesuits—a combination that raises the question: were certain jesuits (Weishaupt for instance) also Rosicrucians? Whatever the truth of the matter, there is no further need to wonder that both the Jesuits and the Rosicrucians used (and use) the tell-table label "The Order," for they were truly rats out of the same sewer. When rats emerge from a sewer, no distinction can be made between them: all are brown."

14. On pages 531-33, Story gets into all the Nazis that had Jewish background in them. He talks about how these Illuminized Jews, partnered up with the worst kind of Gentile elements, as told by Svali, whom he quoted at length in his book, worked to create the holocaust to destroy the Ashkenazim because they viewed them as impure, imposter Jews, which Story says is not the case since he claims the Ashkenazim are in fact heavily realted to middle eastern, semitic, antecedents. However, Story has it backwards. Besides me not agreeing with him in the purity of the Ashkenazim, or even the Sephardim (due to Paul Wexler's book), many nazis who have Jewish blood in fact have more Ashkenazi background in them. Story, I believe, claims that these Germanic Nazi Jews were in fact Sephardic because it is claimed by some that many Sephardic, middle eastern Jews, settled in West Germany going back to the middle ages. And since Germany is the starting point of the conspiracy for Story, he assimilates that into his belief that the Nazi Jews were Sephardic and were attacking the Ashkenazim. However, if Story knew anything about "the Ringworm Children" and Barry Chamish, he would know those radiated kids were Sephardic Jews and that the Ashkenazi Jews are running Israel for the Vatican and the British.

15. On page 535, Story talks about the Vatican ratlines. He has this to say.

"Gehlen's new employer, the OSS, working with the Vatican, not only encouraged but financed an escape mechanism negotiated and set up by Gehlen for his Nazi colleagues. Although the Vatican has always been 'blamed' for developing the rat-lines, for which it provided ample cover in its monastic and church establishments (enabling operatives like Karol Wojtila to enter holy orders, an alternative option), it was in fact the so-called Gehlen Organisation which established, with OSS assiatence, the underground escape networks which Nazi war criminals could use to escape prosecution by war crimes tribunals. As a consequence, more than 5,000 nazis secretly made their way out of Europe, and were relocated all over the world."

Sounds to me like he is blaming the Germans and Gehlen and the OSS more than the Vatican for the ratlines. I just can't buy that given what Eric Jon Phelps has taught us. What I find interesting is that, despite Story promoting Golistyn (and never wavering from it until his death [as both papal knights worked to weaken the CIA and to strengthen the KGB pursuant to the plan of the Jesuit General to make the USSR a "superpower" secretly subject to the Pope of Rome]) and thus also having kind words to say in the past about James Jesus Angleton who debriefed Golistyn who was trying to warn America about Soviet deception strategy, Story, has some unkind words for Angleton in his book on page 536.

"Among the Nazi expatriate communities were the notorious 'high' Illuminist Dr. Josef Mengele, who collaborated with US intelligence and whose specialty had been to conduct crude experiments on Jewish concentration camps inmates—and the infamous 'Butcher of Lyons' the mass murderer, Klaus Barbie. It is believed that James Jesus Angleton, who worked for the Abwehr agent Allen Dulles and who later in life grew orchids—a plant with occult connotations—for pleasure, was primarily responsible for providing escaping Nazis with new identities prior to their leaving the detainment camps."

16. The only other time Story mentions Angleton is on page 410. And again, he associates him with Nazis. Perhaps Story was beginning to correct himself? Interestingly, this is in the chapter where he uses theology, the Bible, and occult practices that are demonic as reasons to expose the Jesuit Order. He cites a lot of work from Wayne Madsen who talks about Germanic Illuminist front groups in the USA like THE FELLOWSHIP or THE FAMILY. Another suspicious Germanic group is the ICL. Again, Story uses Madsen's anti-German work.

By 1957, the International Christian Leadership (ICL) had established 125 gruops in 100 cities with 16 groups in Washington DC alone.

"Around the world, it had set up another 125 groups—in Canada, Britain, Germany, France, Northern Ireland, The Netherlands, Belgium, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Lebanon, Ethiopia (where Emperor Haile Selassie provided ICL with property in Addis Ababa on which to build its African headquarters), India, South Vietnam, Hong Kong, Taiwan, South Korea, Japan, Philipines, Australia, new Zealand, Guatemala, Cuba, Costa Rica, Mexico, and Bermuda.' Given his alleged intelligence background, Mr. Madsen does not state the glaringly obvious—which is that this nexus of operations was and remains a covert operation of international intelligence. ICL's international activities coincide with activities in countries where the CIA was particularly active—an obvious by-product of the close cooperation between Verdide and the CIA's (abwehr penetration) [Knights of Malta] Allen Dulles and James Jesus Angleton. Angleton and his close associate, Miles Copeland, favoured using private businessmen to conduct operations that the CIA was satutorialy barred from undertaking."

This is one of the beginnings of the process of privatization of US intelligence operations which has led to such disastrous botches and consequences.

"International Christian Leadership fitted the bill very nicely. And although The Fellowship despised homosexuals, that did not stop the [homosexual] FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, writing a prayer for Verdide."

That's pretty much all the things I have found wrong or about Story's massive book.

Title: The killing of Social Security
Description: Will government honor their bonds

toinfinityandbeyond - August 13, 2010 10:03 PM (GMT)

What are 308,367,109 Americans supposed to do?

First of all, despite clamping down on immigration, our population grew by 2.6M people last year. Unfortunately, not only did we not create jobs for those 2.6M new people but we lost about 4M jobs so what are these new people going to do? Not only that, but nobody is talking about the another major job issue: People aren't retiring! They can't afford to because the economy is bad – that means there are even less job openings… The pimply faced kid can't get a job delivering pizza because his grandpa's doing it.

There are some brilliant pundits who believe cutting retirement benefits will fix our economy. How will that work exactly? Pay old people less money, don't cover their medical care and what happens? Then they need money. If they need money, they need to work and if they need to work they increase the supply of labor, which reduces wages and leaves all 308,367,109 of us with less money. Oh sorry, not ALL 308,367,109 – just 308,337,109 – the top 30,000 (0.01%) own the business the other 308,337,109 work at and they will be raking it in because labor is roughly 1/3 of the cost of doing business in America and our great and powerful capitalists have already cut their manufacturing costs by shipping all those jobs overseas, where they pay as little as $1 a day for a human life so now, in order to increase their profits (because profits MUST be increased) they have now turned inward to see what they can shave off in America.

How does one decrease the cost of labor in America? Well first, you have to bust the unions. Check. Then you have to create a pressing need for people to work – perhaps give them easy access to credit and then get them to go so deeply into debt that they will have to work until they die to pay them off. Check. It also helps if you push up the cost of living by manipulating commodity prices. Check. Then, take away people's retirement savings. Check. Lower interest rates to make savings futile and interest income inadequate. Check. And finally, threaten to take away the 12% a year that people have been saving for retirement by labeling Social Security an “entitlement” program – as if it wasn’t money Americans worked their whole lives to save and gave to the government in good faith. Check.

As Allen Smith says: “Ronald Reagan and Alan Greenspan pulled off one of the greatest frauds ever perpetrated against the American people in the history of this great nation, and the underlying scam is still alive and well, more than a quarter century later. It represents the very foundation upon which the economic malpractice that led the nation to the great economic collapse of 2008 was built. Essentially, Reagan switched the federal government from what he critically called, a “tax and spend” policy, to a “borrow and spend” policy, where the government continued its heavy spending, but used borrowed money instead of tax revenue to pay the bills. The results were catastrophic. Although it had taken the United States more than 200 years to accumulate the first $1 trillion of national debt, it took only five years under Reagan to add the second one trillion dollars to the debt. By the end of the 12 years of the Reagan-Bush administrations, the national debt had quadrupled to $4 trillion!“

Both Reagan and Greenspan saw big government as an evil, and they saw big business as a virtue. They both had despised the progressive policies of Roosevelt, Kennedy and Johnson, and they wanted to turn back the pages of time. They came up with the perfect strategy for the redistribution of income and wealth from the working class to the rich. If Reagan had campaigned for the presidency by promising big tax cuts for the rich and pledging to make up for the lost revenue by imposing substantial tax increases on the working class, he would probably not have been elected. But that is exactly what Reagan did, with the help of Alan Greenspan. Consider the following sequence of events:

1) President Reagan appointed Greenspan as chairman of the 1982 National Commission on Social Security Reform (aka The Greenspan Commission)

2) The Greenspan Commission recommended a major payroll tax hike to generate Social Security surpluses for the next 30 years, in order to build up a large reserve in the trust fund that could be drawn down during the years after Social Security began running deficits.

3) The 1983 Social Security amendments enacted hefty increases in the payroll tax in order to generate large future surpluses.

4) As soon as the first surpluses began to role in, in 1985, the money was put into the general revenue fund and spent on other government programs. None of the surplus was saved or invested in anything. The surplus Social Security revenue, that was paid by working Americans, was used to replace the lost revenue from Reagan’s big income tax cuts that went primarily to the rich.

5) In 1987, President Reagan nominated Greenspan as the successor to Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Greenspan continued as Fed Chairman until January 31, 2006. (One can only speculate on whether the coveted Fed Chairmanship represented, at least in part, a payback for Greenspan's role in initiating the Social Security surplus revenue.)

6) In 1990, Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, a member of the Greenspan Commission, and one of the strongest advocates the 1983 legislation, became outraged when he learned that first Reagan, and then President George H.W. Bush used the surplus Social Security revenue to pay for other government programs instead of saving and investing it for the baby boomers. Moynihan locked horns with President Bush and proposed repealing the 1983 payroll tax hike. Moynihan's view was that if the government could not keep its hands out of the Social Security cookie jar, the cookie jar should be emptied, so there would be no surplus Social Security revenue for the government to loot. President Bush would have no part of repealing the payroll tax hike. The "read-my-lips-no-new-taxes" president was not about to give up his huge slush fund.

The practice of using every dollar of the surplus Social Security revenue for general government spending continues to this day. The 1983 payroll tax hike has generated approximately $2.5 trillion in surplus Social Security revenue which is supposed to be in the trust fund for use in paying for the retirement benefits of the baby boomers. But the trust fund is empty! It contains no real assets. As a result, the government will soon be unable to pay full benefits without a tax increase. Money can be spent or it can be saved. But you can't do both. Absolutely none of the $2.5 trillion was saved or invested in anything.

That is how the largest theft in the history of the world was carried out. 300M people worked and saved their whole lives to set aside $2.5Tn into a retirement system that, if it were paying a fair compounding rate of 5% interest over 40 years of labor (assuming an even $62Bn a year was contributed), would be worth $8.4Tn today – enough money to give 100M workers $84,000 each in cash! The looting of FICA hid the massive deficits of the last 30 years in the Unified Budget. Presidents and Congresses were able to reduce taxes on the wealthiest Americans without complaint from the deficit hawks, because they benefited. The money went directly from the pockets of average Americans into the pockets of the rich.

Now that it is time to repay those special bonds in the Trust Fund, we are inundated in opinion pieces in the leading newspapers and magazines complaining about Social Security and its horrible impact on the budget. Government finances have been trashed by foolish tax cuts, unpaid wars, tax loopholes for corporations and the very wealthy, the failures of economists, the greedy search for greater returns in financial markets and the collapse of moral values in giant businesses, but Social Security is supposed to be the problem that needs fixing…

Social Security is not "broken"–the money is in the Trust Fund. But the people who manage the finances of the United States don't want to repay the bonds held by the Trust Fund. They want to default selectively against average people, their fellow citizens, who paid their taxes expecting to be protected in their retirement. Refusing to repay the $2.54 trillion dollars in bonds held by the Social Security Trust makes the US look like Greece, just another nation unable to govern itself coherently. The people who manage US finances come from the financial elites, the best that Wall Street and enormous corporations have to offer. Selective default exposes them as charlatans. The claims of the economics profession to expertise are puffery. Their theories about the benefits of tax cuts are proven false. Their mathematical proofs about free markets collapse in the real world.

So, what is this all about? It's about forcing 5M people a year who reach the age 65 to remain in the work-force. The top 0.01% have already taken your money, they have already put you in debt, they have already bankrupted the government as well so it has no choice but to do their bidding. Now the top 0.01% want to make even MORE profits by paying American workers even LESS money. If they raise the retirement age to 70 to "balance" Social Security – that will guarantee that another 25M people remain in the workforce (less the ones that drop dead on the job – saving the bother of paying them severance).

What's next? Is it fair to say that children can't work in a struggling family business? Isn't it to everybody's benefit that kids should be allowed to help out at the family store? That will be the next step towards turning America into a 3rd World country. The seemingly innocent concept of "letting" kids work will deprive another 5M people of paying jobs – throwing them out into the labor force as well and driving labor costs down even further.

There's an expression that goes "give them an inch and they'll take a yard." The top 0.01% of this country have taken their inches and they are foreclosing on the yards and they will come for the rest of your stuff next. If you think you are "safe" from the looting of America, it is only because they haven't gotten around to you yet. As I explained in "America is 234 Years Old Today – Is It Finished?" – the game is rigged very much like a poker tournament. The people at the top table don't care how well you do wiping out your fellow players at the lower tables, they know they will get you eventually and your efforts to scoop up a pile of cash for yourself simply makes their job easier when they are ready to take it from you.

The average American is $634,000 in debt thanks to the efforts that Reagan and Greenspan put in motion 30 years ago and the richer you are, the more of that money is going to come out of your hide eventually and the more you lobby to make sure that the "rich" are not taxed unfairly, the less fair it will be to you because, no matter how rich you THINK you are, unless your income is measured in MILLIONS PER MONTH, you aren't even close to the top 30,000.

No progressive tax? That means that people and corporations who make $1M PER DAY should pay no more tax than a person making $1M per year, right? Well that means that the $2.5M debt that your family of four owes will be paid by you over 2.5 years of labor while the $2.5M owed by your Billionaire competitor will be paid over a long weekend, after which he can turn his attention back to crushing your business by creating cheaper goods – maintaining profit margins by driving down local labor costs and outsourcing the rest.

It's a new world, America, and you'd better get used to it – we were sold down the river on a slow boat to China long ago and we're only just beginning to feel the first effects of waves that wash back to our own shores. The people who own the media don't want CHANGE. That's why you never hear this stuff in the MSM – things are going exactly according to plan and the old money crowd is playing a long, patient game and they already have most of the chips – the last thing they want is people questioning the system…

BRITISH POLICE RAID PRIVATE SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES

ANOTHER HAMMER BLOW RAINING DOWN ON THE CRIMINALIST CLASSES

Tuesday 3 June 2008 09:54

By Christopher Story FRSA, Editor and Publisher, International Currency Review, World Reports Limited, London and New York. For earlier reports, press ARCHIVE. Order your subscriptions and our 'politically incorrect', hence correct, intelligence books from the Edward Harle segment.

•
BOOKS: Edward Harle Limited has so far published FIVE intelligence titles: The Perestroika Deception, by Anatoliy Golitsyn; Red Cocaine, by Dr Joseph D. Douglass, Jr.; The European Union Collective, by Christopher Story; The New Underworld Order, by Christopher Story; and The Red Terror in Russia, by Sergei Melgounov. All titles are permanently in stock. We sell books DIRECT.

NOTE: The Subs/Books panel on the Home Page is a means to enable us to communicate with subscribers, the purpose being to announce when issues of our serials have been published, and also to provide updated information on our Books. On 23rd May, the Editor appended an essay for the specific benefit of subscribers to International Currency review, the purpose of which was to inform them of progress on the publication of International Currency Review, Volume 33, Numbers 3 & 4, which runs to almost 1,000 pages, and will provide a massive historical record with detailed documentation and updated information on the worst financial corruption crisis in world history.

This private communication was lifted by another website and placed onto their space out of any context, causing some confusion. The reason for the confusion was that the information published in the second panel, though accessible to anyone, represents, as indicated, this Editor’s private communications with subscribers to our printed intelligence publications. Therefore, what we say in the second panel is nothing to do with anyone other than our actual or potential subscribers.

Please Make a Donation, if you feel able to do so, to help finance Christopher Story's ongoing financial global corruption investigations. Your assistance will be very sincerely appreciated and will make a real difference, hastening the OVERDUE resolution of the worst financial corruption and linked financial fallout in world history. The Editor's $35,000 Wanta bail-out money has been stolen.

UPDATE, 4.15pm UK time, 4th June 2008: Today's UK press contains ZERO further information on the lock box raids conducted by 300 armed police, reported below, on addresses in Mayfair, Central London, and in Hampstead and Edgware, Northwest London. Furthermore, we understand from US sources that there has been ZERO coverage of this operation in the US media.

The way the Editor interprets this silence is that, after we identified this massive operation against lock boxes as a critical element of a huge ongoing operation to close down the intelligence sector-organised criminal financial corruption, or to severely wound the head of the serpent, a decision was taken to suppress further open media reports on the subject.

That deduction presupposes that the raids are indeed DIRECTLY CONNECTED TO THE ROLLING-UP ACTIVITY THAT IS TAKING PLACE behind the scenes, which has geopolitical implications.

For instance, the South African connection opens the door into an explanation of the capitulation of South Africa, and of the offensive against Rhodesia/ Zimbabwe. Since Bush Sr.'s operation was running this financial corruption through South Africa in conformity with the long-range offensive against Britain masterminded by Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau, we can now begin at last to comprehend the fundamentals of Pan-German (Nazi) long-range strategy against the hated 'Main Enemy' (even though the offensive has been run by part of the 'Main Enemy' since Bush Sr. was Director of Central Intelligence and then President of the United States) and to start to understand the central role of financial corruption in the realisation of long-range Nazi strategic objectives.

Since the methodology is replicated in the European Union context (where financial corruption is likewise the primary driving force), the Editor will have more to say on these parallels in future reports on this website. For the time being, the message is: the SUDDEN cessation of reporting on the massive armed police raids in London provides further confirmation of their huge significance.

UPDATE, 7.30pm UK time, 3rd June 2008: This is clearly a huge operation. This afternoon there was heavy police presence in the Park Lane area, with streets adjacent to the big hotels cordoned off. Physical removal of the lock boxes, including massive walk-in vaults, to a secret location, indicates that British police have taken the special precaution of making it impossible for the 'crime scene' information to be tampered with. By removing the lock boxes in their entirety from the addresses that have been raided, it is impossible for intelligence/organised crime desperados to interfere.

That this would be likely arises from the fact that, following this posting, we have established that it was indeed in Mayfair, Central London, that many of the stolen assets et al. used as the basis for launching the open-ended fiat-financial criminality in the second half of the 1980s, were located.

Given that Safe Deposit Centres Limited was established in Mayfair at around that time, there can be little doubt that this police operation is indeed DIRECTLY CONNECTED to the ongoing cleanup offensive that has been 'in the works' for two years, at least. Moreover the timing of the UK raids can be interpreted as signalling to the intelligence-linked criminalist cadres that the international financial community, however compromised itself in part by these criminals, has had enough of this free-wheeling organised crime hiding behind arrogant, over-powerful official structures.

That the timing is especially significant will become evident in the near future, we believe.

And that in turn should be interpreted as a signal to the den of iniquity at Langley to 'clean up its act' because it has blown not only its cover, but the patience of the Rest of the World as well.

LONDON, 3rd June 2008: The British press reports this morning that UK armed special police have conducted mass raids on three safety deposit box depots in Park Lane, Central London, Hampstead and Edgware, both in Northwest London. Yesterday, more than 300 officers and staff were involved in simultaneous armed raids at the three lock box locations.

The total number of safety deposit lock boxes raided is 7,000.

Police officers have secured the concrete and steel vaults, and will take several weeks to remove each box, using angle grinders, to a secret location where they will be prized open with diamond-tipped drills. This is an unprecedented blow against UK and global organised criminal operations, and will have decisive implications for the criminalised sectors of intelligence services, especially the vast intelligence criminal underworld associated with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Press reports assert a view that a top tier of criminalist masterminds are believed to have rented out most of the boxes from the firm, Safe Deposit Centres Limited, which has been operating for more than 20 years. Two directors of this firm were arrested yesterday: Jaqueline Swan, 44, who was arrested at the Mayfair address, and Leslie Sieff, aged 60, who was detained in Hampstead. A third director, Milton Woolf, 52, is reported to be abroad, possibly in Israel.

Sieff and Woolf, originally from South Africa, have been residents in Britain since the 1980s.

While not yet knowing how many of the safety deposit boxes are being rented, British police believe that 90% of them may hold criminal assets. Scotland Yard said that the Met's Specialist Crime Directorate raided seven properties in all: the three safety lock box depositories, an office and three residential addresses. This was the biggest raid of its kind in the Met's history.

The Assistant Commissioner at Scotland Yard, John Yates, told the press that 'each box will be treated as a crime scene in its own right'. Named Operation Rize, the police offensive is 'a money-laundering investigation, one of the biggest ever undertaken in the United Kingdom', John Yates said. 'In the past, safety deposit boxes have been searched on an individual basis, often resulting in the recovery of guns, drugs and cash. We believe that this operation has the potential to impact upon many layers of serious crime'.

Translated into the vernacular, this last sentence by Yates will send tremors down the corridors at Langley, that den of open-ended iniquity, and other US nests of intelligence criminality, warning the perpetrators that when we and others say that 'the game is up', this statement is accurate.

Significantly, this investigation has been running for two years, indicating that it started just as our exposures of US intelligence-related criminality hit the ground running. Mr Yates elaborated:

'This is an unprecedented operation, and my officers have worked tirelessly and methodically, advised throughout by leading counsel, to ensure that this is the right action to take'.

In other words, this is not America, where the Rule of Law has decayed and almost collapsed, but Britain, where the police still take meticulous care to operate within the framework of the law. Mr Yates explained that the raids were part of 'a huge undertaking to tackle criminal networks who we believe are using safe deposit facilities to hide criminal assets. It is in the public interest that we target this particular business to stop any criminal activity'.

Scotland Yard is reported to believe the operation may unlock clues and links to every layer of serious crime in Britain, including murders, shootings, drug trafficking, paedophile gangs, and fraud. Senior officers said there is a potential to recover stashes of diamonds, jewellery, stolen computer data, artworks, you name it.

Some boxes are no larger than a sheet of paper in length and width. Others are 'walk-in' vaults.

Members of the public who have innocently and legally stored their valuables with Safe Deposit Centres are 'inevitably' going to be affected by this disruption, police said.

But the police have provided a freephone telephone number (free in the UK, at any rate) for such people to claim back their goods. The number is: 0800-030 4613.

As always, the sigificance of important events is often indicated by their timing. Despite the focus on 'visible' criminal behaviour recognisable to newspaper readers, the underlying implication here is that the criminalist intelligence Dark Forces have received a further powerful kick in the pants, representing another decisive move in the offensive that has been running for two years now, to defang and put an end to their aberrations.

Of course lock boxes held at firms like Safe Deposit Centres Limited (or Mail Boxes Etc.) are not the primary location of safety lock boxes where the proceeds of criminal operations, especially of intelligence-related organised theft, are located. The other venue for safety boxes is of course the banking sector. It will be interesting now to observe whether, in due course, Scotland Yard follows through with armed raids on banks specialising in offering safety lock box facilities.

That would be the logical next step in this huge operation against the criminalist intelligence rats.

Note: This report will remain up for 24 hours and will then be replaced by the report dated 26th May 2008, which exposed the tip of the Cheney corruption iceberg. Contrast the above report with the news from last week that the Unterreichsführer visited Richmond, VA, accompanied by a colossal Gestapo presence, to protect him from his enemies.

In the United States, the resources of the state are deployed to protect the Number One Gangster-in-Chief. In Britain, where the Rule of Law still applies, the resources of law enforcement are busily unravelling the chaos perpetrated by the likes of the Unterreichsführer. Something's got to give.

THE UPDATE POSTED ON 2ND JUNE AND ADDED TO OUR REPORT DATED 26TH MAY, HAS BEEN CARRIED OVER TO THIS NEW REPORT, AND IS APPENDED HEREWITH:

MISPRISION OF FELONY: U.S. CODE, TITLE 18, PART 1, CHAPTER 1, SECTION 4: ‘Whoever, having knowledge of the actual commission of a felony cognizable by a court of the United States, conceals and does not as soon as possible make known the same to some Judge or other person in civil or military authority under the United States, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both’.

UPDATE: 8.30pm UK time, 2nd June 2008:

ATTACKS ON THE EDITOR OF THIS SERVICE: The Editor is the subject of confused and mindless attacks on one or more US websites. The specific trigger for these attacks is an email sent by the Editor to one of the websites concerned, in which the Editor made the simple point that convoluted assertions made by a US operative hiding behind the meaningless label 'S', lack credibility because the source hides behind a cloak of anonymity, lacking the guts to reveal his identity and therefore to expose his credentials. The Editor sent this email in response to an earlier attack by this maniac, who has now gone verbally berserk. Nothing that that source presents for the consideration of the public can be or should be taken seriously, and anyone who does so is liable to be deceived.

The Editor has yet to reveal the elements of the double-cross operation perpetrated against him and a US arms'-length colleague by Wanta and the Cheney Gang, (a) because subscribers to the financial journal (International Currency Review) will receive this and related information and key documentation first, and (B) secondly because we are waiting to see whether certain obligations are going to be honoured. We refer to pay orders, the $35,000 and other payables to key recipients.

IF it transpires that they are not, we can assure everyone who reads this Update that the ENTIRE NEST OF RATS WILL BE EXPOSED AND BROUGHT DOWN, with the impact of such exposures rocking the corrupt US structures to their foundations. And this is NO IDLE FACT. It is THIS that these fools are anxious to avoid: they can avoid TOTAL exposure ONLY by delivering on their OBLIGATIONS. Recall the legal phrase FRAUD BY INDUCEMENT in this context.

The first and most basic rule when reviewing web postings is this: to establish the source's bona fides. By definition, an anonymous source has no bona fides, so it cannot be established. Further, the purpose of the latest diatribe is to inveigle the Editor into a polemical slanging match, which would serve no purpose other than to massage the wounded pride of this sick operative.

These eruptions of verbal anger from anonymous sources will get a lot worse in the weeks and months ahead. The sources in question are locked inside their virtual world, where truth and lies are interchangeable. Such sources can indulge in the luxury of questioning the motives of open sources and Editors who do not hide their identity and credentials [see our Testimonials on this website], and are unlikely to have sufficient Latin to understand the meaning of the phrase PRO BONO PUBLICO. But the main point to note at this juncture can be summarised as follows:

Given that the criminalised US intelligence community cannot stuff the genie back into the bottle, thanks to the massive kick in the pants it was given by (yes) the ('unexpected') exposures of its criminality on this website, it is working overtime to disguise its vulnerability by manufacturing OBFUSCATION red herrings, of which many more will surface in the immediate future.

These 'lines' will all have one single objective: TO MASK/OBFUSCATE THE CONCLUSION OF THE SETTLEMENTS and to HIDE the horrendous struggle that is taking place behind the scenes which the Editor knows resulted in an EXPLOSION on Monday the 2nd June when the absolute, absolute, final deadline for the Settlements was again torpedoed, it is believed by Cheney (who did a deal: earlier reports to that effect were true. He turned up at Richmond last week accompanied by a large Gestapo force which was clearly deployed to protect him. Amazing!).

This led to exchanges by certain countries with the United States which can only be described as liable, if not met with appropriate action by the US criminalists, to yield horrendous consequences.

A further ongoing objective of certain US OBFUSCATION operations is to continue the established practice of confusing WHOLESALE with RETAIL. The dimensions that this service has covered have referenced the WHOLESALE Settlements. By definition RETAIL Settlements cannot proceed without having been preceded by the WHOLESALE payments. This distinction is NOT to belittle the integrity, or whatever, of the RETAIL Settlements: it is just a statement of simple fact.

One other point, to reiterate, here: since the latest antagonist of this Editor is both confused and anonymous, it stands to reason that the Editor is not about to become entangled in his nefarious attempts to entice us into a slanging match, which lots of 'Black' onlookers would like to happen.

It is true that the Editor uses strong language sometimes, but given the extreme gravity of the overall situation, which IF NOT PROMPTLY RESOLVED MIGHT WELL DETERIORATE INTO ACTUAL WARFARE, according to what the Editor was told this afternoon, what can one expect?

BLANK, THREATENING AND OBSCENE EMAILS: We continue to receive emails from unsolicited correspondents who lack the guts to reveal their true identities and coordinates. To deal with this menace, we have installed a facility that displays emails before they are downloaded. Such emails are routinely deleted before they are pulled down from the multiple servers hosting this service. It would appear that this notice has not yet been read by certain mentally perverse perpetrators.

SELECTIVE DUPLICITY: In response to the above, the Editor has recently been asked why he concentrated on the Wanta dimension 'when so much else was happening'. This is a fine example of taking things out of context. ANSWER: Because the Editor forked out $35,000 of his own scarce private funds to dig Wanta out of his unlawful probation, which was terminated five years and two weeks early, as a consequence. This development helped trigger the course of events leading to our exposures and the movement towards the Settlements. The fact that Wanta has not repaid the funds he borrowed from the Editor and subsequently double-crossed him and an arms'-length US colleague is factual and will have and is having 'consequences'. To demand to know why the Editor followed the Wanta dimension while forgetting WHY HE DID SO AND HOW THIS ALL CAME ABOUT is just disingenuous. Finally, we have covered FAR MORE than just the Wanta dimension, as the record clearly shows. The Wanta dimension opened a window into the broader corruption issues.

THE LONDON POLICE RAIDS AND THE INTELLIGENCE WAR

WAS THE SAFETY DEPOSIT BOX COMPANY A COVERT AGENCY OPERATION?

LONDON, 4th June 2008: Something happened yesterday in connection with the Settlements that may have been associated with the British police raids on premises owned by Safe Deposit Centres Limited in Mayfair, Central London, and in Hampstead and Edgware, to the northwest of the capital.

As we reported yesterday, citing prominent media reports, more than 300 British police officers and staff, including heavily armed police marksmen, were involved in simultaneous raids at three lock box locations. A total of 7,000 safety deposit boxes were seized and are being treated as individual crime scenes. To cite from Tuesday's report:

Police officers have secured the concrete and steel vaults, and will take several weeks to remove each box, using angle grinders, to a secret location where they will be prized open with diamond-tipped drills. This is an unprecedented blow against UK and global organised criminal operations, and will have decisive implications for the criminalised sectors of intelligence services, especially the vast intelligence criminal underworld associated with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Press reports assert a view that a top tier of criminalist masterminds are believed to have rented out most of the boxes from the firm, Safe Deposit Centres Limited, which has been operating for more than 20 years. Two directors of this firm were arrested yesterday: Jaqueline Swan, 44, who was arrested at the Mayfair address, and Leslie Sieff, aged 60, who was detained in Hampstead. A third director, Milton Woolf, 52, is reported to be abroad, possibly in Israel.

Sieff and Woolf, originally from South Africa, have been residents in Britain since the 1980s.

While not yet knowing how many of the safety deposit boxes are being rented, British police believe that 90% of them may hold criminal assets. Scotland Yard said that the Met's Specialist Crime Directorate raided seven properties in all: the three safety lock box depositories, an office and three residential addresses. This was the biggest raid of its kind in the Met's history.

The Assistant Commissioner at Scotland Yard, John Yates, told the press that 'each box will be treated as a crime scene in its own right'. Named Operation Rize, the police offensive is 'a money-laundering investigation, one of the biggest ever undertaken in the United Kingdom', John Yates said. 'In the past, safety deposit boxes have been searched on an individual basis, often resulting in the recovery of guns, drugs and cash. We believe that this operation has the potential to impact upon many layers of serious crime'.

The police were armed, self-evidently, for a reason: if our assumptions are anywhere near correct, they are dealing with the most dangerous and ruthless bunch of financial criminals in the world.

MAYFAIR AND THE SOUTH AFRICAN CONNECTION
It is a fact that the intensification of criminalist financial operations perpetrated under the overall direction or 'Black protection' of the DVD's George H. W. Bush Sr. and of his criminal intelligence operatives broadened out from Mayfair in the mid-1980s, via a South African connection. The fact that two of the three cited directors of Safe Deposit Centres Limited (Leslie Sieff and Milton Woolf), are from South Africa, is highly significant, not least since they have been resident in the UK since the 1980s and Safe Deposit Centres Limited has been operating for more than 20 years.

Closing down a huge proportion of the criminal intelligence sector's fraudulent finance ops would indeed necessitate the seizure of the underlying stolen assets, which are believed to have been stashed inter alia in safety lock boxes in Mayfair, Central London.

Hence we suspect that this immense armed police operation, which involves the physical removal from the three sites of actual complete vaults as well as of the lock boxes, all of which are being transported to a secret, heavily guarded location, represents a decisive coup against the criminal classes and will have shocked certain circles rigid. The raids were a closely guarded secret before they happened, but the Metropolitan Police took care to inform the press on the day (Monday).

IS SAFE DEPOSIT CENTRES LIMITED A COVERT CIA, MOSSAD OR 'MEGAWATT' OPERATION?

The forgoing considerations raise the question as to whether the British police have in fact tackled a huge covert intelligence operation that has been running 'smoothly' from the very heart of the British capital since the mid-1980s. Are we dealing with a covert Agency operation, an Israeli cover operation, or a joint CIA-Mossad 'background' venture, a.k.a. a 'Megawatt' front?

It stands to reason that reliance on bank safety lock boxes alone might pose certain problems. In this connection it is understood from several sources that the actual underlying assets tended to be hidden in commercial safety lock boxes, with secondary assets linked to them, held with the banks. That was by no means the norm, but we have been told that it was quite commonplace.

Logic suggests that proprietary commercial safety lock box operations controlled by intelligence operatives functioning under Non-Official Cover (NOC) would be needed, and that such obvious arrangements would be replicated in all the main centres around the world, for convenience.

ALL REPORTS ON THE POLICE RAIDS CEASED ABRUPTLY ON WEDNESDAY
The British press carried no reports on the ongoing police operation on Wednesday, and our US sources inform us that no information about the raids was monitored in the United States, with the exception of our report. There is no way that such a huge story can be buried overnight unless it has been ordered to be closed down.

We think this happened after it was realised that they could not 'run' the police operation under cover of it representing a coordinated offensive against organised crime as understood by the general public. As soon as we hinted at this operation being an escalation of the intelligence war, the story was 'closed down' on both sides of the Atlantic.

That reporting on this operation may have been, shall we say, 'discouraged' is highly probable if, as we suspect, the very core of the financial criminality has now been seized, and is in the process of being evaluated by British corruption police experts and detectives. As John Yates, the Assistant Commissioner at Scotland Yard, told the UK press for the reports that appeared on Tuesday:

'This is an unprecedented operation, and my officers have worked tirelessly and methodically, advised throughout by leading counsel, to ensure that this is the right action to take'.

'The right action to take' and Mr Yates' stress on the meticulous care that his officers and staff have been taking legally, represent public indications from Scotland Yard that the measures that are being adopted cannot be challenged legally and that there is not a lot that the perpetrators can do in the face of the reality that their underlying assets may have been seized. Furthermore, the quite astonishing statement by Mr Yates that each lock box is being treated as a separate crime scene, sends a clear signal to the holders of the 7,000 lock boxes that the scope of the UK police enquiries is vast, and may be assumed to impact every corner of the globe.

While the timing of any police investigation and seizure operation is a matter entirely for the police, it is to be noted that the raids 'just happened' to coincide with the Settlements process and with ongoing crisis developments in the United States which are causing the criminalised intelligence cadres extreme angst and have been associated with intermittent outbreaks of violence.

RETALIATION AGAINST THE POLICE RAIDS?
Any impediments to the overall Settlements process or other untoward developments that may have occurred on Tuesday may well have represented responses to the drastic developments in London. We understand that some arrests were made in Washington, DC, and possibly New York, yesterday, but this has not been confirmed.

But what is quite clear is that IF this huge UK police operation is what we think it is, namely a body blow to the head of the global corruption serpent (more than just a kick in the pants), one would expect the serpent to try to respond as its guts were being ripped out (metaphor for the physical removal of vaults, lock boxes etc., to the heavily guarded police investigation centre).

More to the point, since the intelligence war rages in the background and is not supposed to spill over into the public consciousness, there is nothing that the criminalist intelligence cadres can do to recover from this situation. We believe that the fallout from the raids will be dramatic, that the raids represent a further huge setback for the criminalised intelligence sector, and that one can state without fear of contradiction that the gloves are off as the showdown gathers momentum.

CHENEY IS DESPICABLE ENOUGH TO 'LET IT HAPPEN': A WARNING IN ADVANCE OF THE EVENT

VICE PRESIDENT MALICIOUSLY INTERVENED TO STOP THE RELEASE PROCESS LAST NIGHT

CHINESE FINANCE MINISTER, ON THE WAR PATH, IS DEMANDING IMMEDIATE PERFORMANCE

UPDATE: SEE NEW INFORMATION ON FUNDING FOR THE TWO HUGE UK AIRCRAFT CARRIERS:
This update has been appended immediately below the main report...

NEW COMMENT ON BUSH'S 'HITLER' OBSERVATIONS IN THE ISRAELI KNESSET
Outrage is an understatement in describing the hypocrisy of President Bush's comments in the Knesset [see, for instance: www.huffingtonpost.com], but the outrage has been focused on the obviously ludicrous stance adopted by Mr Bush on this score, given his family's very widely known and publicised ongoing Nazi ties, and also given our exposure of George W. Bush Sr. as the DVD operative/agent that he is (as was recently reconfirmed by the presumed National Security Council (NSC) operative who 'walked into' the Editor's London office before Easter).

But the point that has so far been completely missed is that, since we characterised

Bush as Der Führer and Vice President Cheney as Unterreichsführer (which is of course exceptionally rude of us but, guess what, WE HAVE SO FAR HAD NO COMPLAINTS), this Knesset spiel can reasonably be interpreted as a response to our characterisation, the implied argument being that if Mr Bush has criticised 'talking to Herr Hitler' as 'the false comfort of appeasement, which has been repeatedly discredited by history', our characterisation of this man as Der Führer 'must' be unfair.

We would be prepared to bet any of our subscribers a pint of Bass Ale at the Editor's local hostelry that we do not receive ONE SINGLE GENUINE COMPLAINT ALONG THESE LINES. In short, we suggest that the 'Hitler' remarks represent a response to our published characterisation. We should point out also that being 'unkind' is not the Editor's preference, but given the despicably serial criminal behaviour of these bandits over such a prolonged period of time, and the wrecks they have so ruthlessly made of so many people's lives, the Editor is sorry to say that he just doesn't care. And since we know that the arrogance continues, it gets worse by the minute...

The Editor's $35,000 Wanta bail-out money has been stolen.

LONDON, 15th May 2008: Following repeated obfuscation operations orchestrated by the United States' Unterreichsführer, Herr Reinhard B. 'Himmler' Cheney, since the Group of Seven financial powers' final 'go-ahead' agreement 'ratified' at the IMF/World Bank Spring Meetings convened in Washington, DC., on 13th April 2008, over ONE MONTH AGO, Madame Wu, the Chinese Finance Minister, has demanded that the US Treasury settle three Notes to the value of $35 trillion TODAY.

This demand follows an endless series of provocations, obfuscation charades, deceptions and lies perpetrated on Trustees and payees since the United States moved onto delayed Basel-II standard operational procedures effective at one minute past midnight on Monday morning, 14th April 2008, following the G-7 final accord, which we reported on this website.

Last night (14th May), the 'trigger' was ACTUALLY PULLED for the releases. According to sources who have intervened while the Editor was completing this report, the pay releases were suddenly STOPPED and the system was shut down. This intervention has been traced to WASHINGTON, D.C.

Specifically, we have now been informed that the payouts were stopped on the instructions of the Unterreichsführer himself. So the question needs to be asked RIGHT NOW: HOW MUCH MONEY WAS MADE ILLEGALLY OVERNIGHT FROM THIS PARTICULAR STOPPAGE, USING OTHER PEOPLE'S MONEY, MR CHENEY? Madame Wu and others might be interested in your answer.

We are also advised that a significant number of towns in China may have been devastated by the earthquake there, and that in this context Madame Wu is described as INCANDESCENT WITH RAGE AND ON THE WAR PATH, DEMANDING IMMEDIATE RELEASE WITH NO FURTHER DELAYS. She needs the money not least to assist the Chinese earthquake victims.

MADAME WU GAVE THEM MORE TIME AND THEY DOUBLE-CROSSED HER AGAIN, PER USUAL
Before we knew about the latest sabotage of the Settlements by the Unterreichsführer, Madame Wu was reliably reported to have finally lost all patience with the serial criminality of the American Treasury, which is controlled by the Unterreichsführer and Chief Justice John G. Roberts, Jr., who was nominated by criminalist President George W. Bush and took his seat on 29th September 2005.

French President Sarkozy, who was identified inside the Paribas building earlier this week, working with a key Trustee, is also now pressing for large monies owed to France, which put up some of the funds used for trading in Hong Kong in 2007. These monies are also grossly overdue, as the United States has basically raped everyone. Likewise, earlier this week, we were advised that the nine key recipient countries were to have been paid, which did not happen.

We have also been informed that a second delivery of 'packages' has been concluded (unverified by provenanced sources), but that these cannot be activated for the straightforward reason that the Big Trustees have not had their funds 'released'. No-one can 'spend' until after that happens, with the exception (it now emerges) of the Illuminati categories (see below).

As previously reported, Madame Wu has what amounts to a Writ of Execution or Lien issued by the World Court/ICJ, and is supported in her endeavours by the Group of Seven (G-7) leading financial powers, the representatives of the 160 governments (who have been insulted and messed around by these high-level US criminals to our knowledge since last October), Her Majesty The Queen and her MI6 et al enforcement team, as well as by other powerful forces behind the scenes.

Everyone 'who matters' now understands that US Presidents 41, 42 and 43 have been playing with funds belonging to others (obtaining access to funds in innumerable ways, 'clean' and unclean) and defaulting on repayments, i.e. holding onto the money in order to make more money, in the belief that their powerful position exempted them from honouring ANY obligations at any time.

It is also now very well understood that the former Presidents carried on this criminal behaviour after leaving office. Bill Clinton 'works/worked for' President Bush Sr., who taught him that being President confers upon the holder of that office a lifetime's opportunity to make colossal sums of money 'with impunity' (until now). It is also more widely understood 'where it matters' than was the case six months ago, that conference organisers who invite Dr Alan Greenspan to provide guests with the benefit of his latest penetrating thoughts, are either slow on the uptake, living in bankster land, irresponsibly ignorant about Greenspan's embedded criminality, in denial, or just plain ga-ga.

PERFORMANCE IS REQUIRED IN FULL TODAY, WITH NO FURTHER OBFUSCATIONS

We are reliably advised that failing performance IN FULL today, and in the event of further blocking operations by the criminals, the Writ of Execution will be enforced and the necessary arrests will proceed. Madame Wu is further believed to have made it clear to the relevant parties in the United States that 'your life as you know it will cease to exist if you do not perform TODAY'.

The Editor has obtained this and related information, which has been checked, from sources which have nothing to do with Michael C. Cottrell, M.S., whose own technical advice is highly prized by this Editor and others, but who is not the source of this particular intelligence.

The information comes from high-level payee sources whose identities cannot be divulged.

CHENEY MAY PROVOKE A DEFAULT: HE IS PERFECTLY CAPABLE OF SUCH AN OPERATION

The Editor contributes the following further elaboration. It is likely that the Unterreichsführer has in mind that the Treasury shall not perform today, so that the Treasury/United States will be declared in default. That would suit the Unterreichsführer down to the ground, for the following reasons:

•
Since the United States would be in default, it could not 'possibly' pay (Cheney may think).

The US Treasury's default then becomes THE story, and everyone forgets about the Settlements.

Do we believe this is REALLY what this unspeakable character may have in mind? Answer: YES.

THE REASON WE ARE PUBLISHING THIS WARNING NOW
This explains why we are publishing this warning now. Because, if the United States defaults, the operative responsible for bringing this about will have been Unterreichsführer Richard B. Himmler, who will thereby have added one supreme count of TREASON to the multiple acts of treason that he has committed while occupying the second most powerful position in the United States, which he has used for unfettered personal self-enrichment purposes, and in pursuit of an internationalist agenda which is itself grossly treasonous and should have long since had him removed from office.

Let us hope that the Unterreichsführer, who though cunning can be said, from his actions, also to be exceptionally stupid, is not SO STUPID as to proceed in the manner described above.

ILLUMINATI PARTIES MAY HAVE BEEN PAID OFF AS WE ORIGINALLY THOUGHT
There have been persistent allegations that certain Iluminati parties have been paid off. Earlier, we were unable to verify this, but we have now received confirmation from inside sources that at least two of these parties received 'their' money. One of these was paid a colossal amount ($2.0 trillion) from the Marshall Act resource, a CIA fund which George H. W. Bush Sr. had been using as his own private trading platform; while another Illuminati recipient, which originally contributed big money and gold in conjunction with Bush Sr. financial operations, received cash and Treasury Securities. Since we now know that these two Illuminati recipients were paid, we think it can be taken as read that the other two recipients in that category have also been paid. In other words, as anyone who knows how these people operate would expect, the Illuminati paid off their own. In April 2008.

That would explain why the Unterreichsführer MAY THINK HE CAN PUSH THIS TO THE LIMIT, 'as we speak'. On this analysis, too, the presumption that nobody can spend the money that they may be able to see on screens until the key payees at the top of the tree have all been 'released', may have a giant hole in it, labelled 'ILLUMINATI'. One would expect these ruthless Dark Forces to pay themselves first, with the firm intention, if they can get away with it, of nobody else being paid.

In this connection, the Editor has been at the receiving end of harassing communications to the effect that 'we Dark Forces have taken all the money'. These communications have been reported to US anti-terrorism enforcement, and to other US parties with powers of enforcement and arrest.

Within this abominable context, the Unterreichsführer might be content to 'allow' Madame Wu to 'provoke' a Treasury default (which is how it would be inaccurately portrayed), because the Dark Luciferian Forces have been paid: which is all they care about, with ONE exception: EXPOSURE.

FOUR WARRING GROUPS AT LOGGERHEADS INSIDE U.S. CRIMINAL 'INTELLIGENCE'
Let it be known, therefore, that if this worst-case scenaro eventuates, it will most certainly have been orchestrated by the Unterreichsführer, in collaboration with Der Führer himself. These two walking nightmares are aided and abetted by TWO groups inside the shambolic, warring firmament known as the criminalised US 'intelligence' community, which are opposed by two other groups that have been pushing for the Settlements. The internal warfare between these four groups underlies the endless obfuscation and prevarication operations, accounting for the fact that, as the Editor was again informed by a reliable source this morning, 'everyone has been and is being lied to'.

Given the Illuminati context alluded to above, we can assume that the two groups that have been blocking the Settlements are working for the Illuminati which, as the Editor explains separately in his book The New Underworld Order, is the primary cover used by the Pan-German (Nazi) long-range strategic deception 'Black' agency, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau (the Abwehr).

THE VISIT OF THE 'WRONG' OFFICIAL TO PHILADELPHIA ON 8TH MAY 2008
In our report dated 9th May 2008, it was noted that the Unterreichsführer visited the Philadelphia Regional Financial Center, part of the US Treasury Department's Financial Management Service, on Thursday 8th May [source: Associated Press, so it's the Government itself speaking].

We notice from our email correspondence that NOBODY has taken up this FACT in response to the preceding report dated 9th May. As mentioned, the official who would be expected to attend such a Treasury facility would be either the US Treasury Secretary or the Under Secretary of the Treasury, wouldn't it? Do we hear the sound of pennies dropping here?

Herr Himmler told employees at that facility, which is printing the economic stimulus checks that will be delivered to more than 130 million Americans, that the payments represent 'a shot of energy at the right time and in the right way'.

For 'right time', read 'just ahead of the General Election', and for 'in the right way', read 'we needed a cover in case we are forced to pay, so that we have some COHERENT rationale for explaining the rather sudden improvement in the outlook that will ensue following the Settlements'.

This prospectively improved economic outlook has been flagged in recent days by Mr Mervyn King, the equivocal Governor of the Bank of England (who, however, has today yet again changed his 'line', asserting that a UK recession is 'likely'), George Soros, several German bankers, and others, all of whom took their cue inter alia from the accord 'ratified' by the G-7 on 13th April.

BEWARE AGAIN: THESE PEOPLE OPERATE ON THE DIALECTICAL PRINCIPLE
However THE DIALECTIC, the standard practice of RUNNING TWO 'LINES' SIMULTANEOUSLY, also known as DUPLICITY or DOUBLEMINDEDNESS, the factor which so few people seem to understand, must be borne in mind at all times when dealing with these two-faced people.

Seen in this light, the Editor judges that the Unterreichsführer, whose grubby hand underlies this crisis, is liable usually to take the most extreme and dangerous decision, not least in the present context, because if the United States defaults, he may cynically judge that the payments can be shelved and fogotten about. The default will then be the main story for months and years to come.

One can deduce from his action in blocking the payments last night that he couldn't care less what the outcome will be, such is his unfettered arrogance and defiance of the Rest of the World.

THOSE WITH POWERS MUST NOT FEEBLY HESITATE TO USE THEM NOW
Now, it is not for a 'foreigner', albeit a proud 'honorary American', to suggest, as many Americans have been doing in recent months, that not only is enough long since enough, but that those with powers of arrest MUST NOT FLINCH FROM EXERCISING THESE POWERS. Yes, we know what the constraints are, and they boil down to one word: BLACKMAIL.

The Unterreichsführer is a past-master, we understand, at deployment of this 'Black Art', which goes hand in hand with bribery.

Those who have 'been accommodated', but have 'seen the light' subsequently, may be constrained by their own haunted fears that their past misdeeds will catch up with them.

But the misdeeds of those at the summit of power, starting with TREASON, are far greater: and if those people are finally incapacitated because the international community simply will not stomach their arrogant defiance and criminality any longer, the fears of those members of the elite, or soi-disant 'Great and the Good', who may have been compromised by these villains in the past, will be alleviated. In any event, there is no alternative now.

HIGHLY RESPECTABLE PEOPLE INCONVENIENCED AND LIED TO FOR YEARS
We are constrained by requests for confidentiality from revealing what very high-level payees have been been saying to us for months, all their revelations being recorded and held in a highly secure location for future reference. These people and their associates have been inconvenienced on a prodigious scale, in some instances for years: ordered to appear at the banks, collected by their chauffeurs for aborted expeditions to meetings and institutions, locked in the Operations Rooms, watching inactive screens where their funds are clearly identified, in certain key cases having to accept the banks' provision of sleeping facilities inside the institutions, while also being constantly troubled with brazen lies, diversionary information, unreliable messages and other manifestations of the complete collapse of standards and morality, while these bandits linked to the US criminal mafiosi play cynical games, exploiting the power they usurped by stealing two US elections.

Several distinguished parties have informed us that they possess information of such devastating consequences that it would destroy the criminalists, even if the US so-called 'mainstream' media, compromised by the CIA's cynical ongoing 'Operation Mockingbird', were to remain, as it has been throughout this crisis, in conspicuous dereliction of its duty to hold the Executive to account.

SEND US THE INFORMATION: WE HAVE THE GUTS TO MAKE IT PUBLIC
This is what the Editor has to say to these people: send us the information immediately by a secure route. If no-one in the United States has the guts to do it, WE WILL DO IT.

And if all the compromising information that we already hold from such sources were placed in a single narrative, which this Editor is capable of doing, the Bush II United States would be exposed as the most duplicitous and brazenly untrustworthy nation to have polluted the face of the earth since the days of Hitler and his dialectical, ruthless comrade-in-crime, Stalin. Speaking of whom, some revealing information has emerged from the archives of Georgia and the fake 'former' Soviet Union, including the following, relating to Stalin's endless criminalist operations in the Caucasus and elsewhere between 1905 and 1917. Further elaboration here would be superfluous:

Stalin made a habit of threatening and blackmailing the Baku oil tycoons. These people were said to be 'keen to pay up' after 'a ten-minute conversation with Stalin'.

Stalin, who operated a clandestine printing press, perfected an extortion system using printed forms that read as follows:

'The Bolshevik Committee proposes that your firm should pay .... roubles'.

The oil tycoons paid up because they did not wish their oilfields to catch fire, or 'accidents' to befall their families. The felonies that Stalin unleashed on those who did not comply included robberies, assaults, extortion of rich families, and kidnapping of their children on the streets of Baku in broad daylight, followed by demands for ransom on pain of the child being executed'.

'Stalin prided himself on being what he called a 'praktik', a practical hard man, an expert in what he called 'Black work', rather than a chatty 'intelligent', but his gift was for being both... Stalin had... 'an electrical effect' on his associates and collaborators' (1).

ADDENDUM: MORE ABOUT THE TWO BRITISH AIRCRAFT CARRIERS:
A correspondent has just sent us this additional information about the two huge (60,000 tonne) British aircraft carriers/warships which, as the Editor noted in the report dated 9th May 2008, are to be financed by funding from the Settlements. This is highly significant.

The source is the cited website:

http://www.bymnews.com/news/newsDetails.php?id=26544

"Our emphasis on engineering support services will increase when we form the shipbuilding and naval support Joint Venture with BAE Systems (that is, BVT Surface Fleet Limited). We have been reassured by the recent statements from HM Government and comments from the Prime Minister that the aircraft carrier project will go ahead. It has also been positive to see significant long lead forward orders being placed for equipment and steel for the ships'.

'We understand that the Ministry of Defence is now in the final stages of its spending decision planning and we are optimistic that an announcement will be made shortly."

WHITE HOUSE ORDERS CONTACT WITH STORY TO CEASE

U.S. OFFICIALS ASK FOR A 'TRUCE', THEN LIE THAT WANTA HAS BEEN PAID

Saturday 8 December 2007 13:56

UPDATE, 9.20PM UK TIME, 8TH DECEMBER:
Ambassador Wanta's $4.5 trillion is being exploited to bring the 90% of American banks that are not compliant with the on-balance sheet requirements of Basel II, into 'compliance'. But since the base of the funds, and those derived from off the top of them, are stolen from Lee Wanta, this exercise is futile. The US banks cannot be brought into 'Basel II compliance' using stolen money: SEE BELOW.

BIBLICAL UPDATE, 10TH DECEMBER:
Since the Editor has been 'got at' by a few Luciferians who take exception to Biblical references in these reports, the following passage from Isaiah is appended by way of reposte to such people:

'Because ye have said, we have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we in agreement: when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves'. Isaiah, Chapter 28, verse 15.

Please Make a Donation to help finance Christopher Story's ongoing financial global corruption investigations. Your assistance will be very sincerely appreciated and will make a real difference, hastening the necessary resolution of the worst financial corruption and global financial crisis in history. This website has been calling the shots, because of the hijacking of Wanta's Settlement.

The Editor is extremely grateful to the generous Americans and others who have so thoughtfully contributed funds to assist us with these exposures. He has now written to everyone around the world who had contributed by 27th November 2007, to thank them for their generosity.

Emails addressed to us which lack coordinates identifying the sender will be trashed unread. The Editor publishes all his coordinates, as has always been the case, as he has nothing to hide. Others should do the same. Also, we trash any emails unread that are not 'on message'.

It would be appreciated if webmasters would refrain from lifting our material without proper adequate attribution. Manifestly, the material may be used with attribution, but any other use is illegal and unethical. We also protest at people picking at our original research and posted reports, and crediting themselves rather than the Editor/this website.

Such behaviour is particularly prevalent in the United States, where lies are a way of life with some people, and is an example of the kind of dishonesty that we are exposing in these reports.

WHITE HOUSE ORDERS CONTACT WITH THE EDITOR TO BE CLOSED DOWN
Following the posting of our last report on 2nd December 2007, Ambassador Wanta was telephoned by the White House and was requested to cease his communications with Christopher Story, the Editor of International Currency Review, for 48 hours.

At 2.14pm on the same day, Michael C. Cottrell, M.S., the Executive Vice President and Treasurer of the Ambassador's Commonwealth of Virginia-based corporation, AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc, received a similar instruction from the White House.

He was officially told not to provide any further information to Christopher Story, whom the White House specifically named, for a period of 48 Hours.

There were, as usual, several people 'present' on the telephone line during these calls. The White House party elaborated that payment of Ambassador Wanta's (stolen and diverted) $4.5 trillion had been made to the Morgan Stanley securities account of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc, within Citibank at 399 Park Avenue.

The pattern in the past has been that whenever the Principals have been 'asked' to be silent, the criminal operatives who are holding the whole world to ransom gain time and proceed with a new phase of their scamming and deception operations.

PRINCIPALS AGREED TO ABIDE BRIEFLY BY THESE INSTRUCTIONS
On the basis of these telephone instructions, the diplomatic Principals, wishing as always to be helpful, duly complied, and Mr Michael Cottrell then informed the Editor that he would not be providing further information for two days. Depending on how this period was computed, the 48 hours expired at the end of Tuesday 4th December. Of course, no payment had been made.

TEAM SENT OVER FROM DALLAS FOR 'CONSULTATIONS'

On Monday 3rd December, a Dallas-based subscriber faxed the Editor to advise him that he and a senior colleague would like an interview with the Editor in London. The necessary arrangements were made for the paid consultation to take place on Monday 10th December, but were cancelled by the Editor on 7th December, on the advice of informed parties who are rather anxious about the Editor's security. Whether the Texan subscriber and his colleague were acting for certain parties or not, the timing of this intervention was now considered to be 'too coincidental' (in the light of what follows, below) for any such contact to be risked, although the Editor is not concerned about his own personal security, for many 'special' reasons.

During this interlude, the Editor was informed that what we published in the preceding report hit so many raw nerves that it provoked all sorts of worldwide reactions, in addition to the two telephone calls from the White House specifically instructing the Principals to suspend communications with this Editor for two days – including insolent suggestions (from a money man called Mr John Wood, based in London: see also below) as to how the Editor of this service should structure his reports, and what should be published in them. John Wood evidently took particular objection to the author mentioning Lucifer, a.k.a. the Devil, presumably on the basis that the truth hurts.

Having received a verbal slap from the Editor, this fellow then took it upon himself to attempt to ingratiate himself by telephone with Mr Cottrell, calling him four times, and expressing contrition for his rudeness to the Editor of this service. For his part, the Editor informed Michael Cottrell that on all previous occasions when we had complied with such 'official' requests, the Ambassador had been double-crossed, so why should this instance be any different.

It duly turned out to be no different at all.

NOTHING THAT WE PUBLISHED IS DISPUTED BY THE WHITE HOUSE
Of greater interest was the fact that the White House did not dispute a single statement or fact contained in the preceding report (2nd December): all that the White House officials wanted was that communications should be suspended for 48 hours, so that the payment could be made quietly, without any fanfare. By failing to contest a single thing that we had published, the White House confirmed its accuracy.

Naturally, the Editor did not believe that the payment would be made during this period, and assumed that the White House was engaged in a deception: and so it proved. Nothing that any official in the Bush Administration says can be believed.

This is a Government which operates on the basis the fuzzy 'anomie' environment explained by Emile Dirkheim (1858-1917) in which criminality is the norm, and any deviation from criminality is regarded as aberrant, irresponsible and crass.

As noted, nothing that we published in the report was actually challenged by the White House, for the usual straightforward, simple reason that it was and is all true – including the entire geopolitical analysis fingering Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD), Dachau-Munich, as the primary source of the United States' terminal disease.

DVD, the guardian of the Nazi continuum's long-range global hegemony strategy, reports to Chancellor Angela Merkel, the former Secretary for Agitation and Propaganda in the Communist Youth Wing of the East German Communist Party at Karl Marx University.

ALL THEY WANTED WAS TIME TO ELABORATE NEW LIES AND SCAMS
The White House had no quarrel with any of this at all, not even with the Editor's summary of the revolutionary political dialectic – by extension: Thesis, controlled US Republican Party; Antithesis, controlled Democratic Party; Synthesis, control by the manipulators (currently the 'Box Gang' proxy for the World Revolution controllers). All it wanted was to shut down communications between the Principals and the Editor of this service for two days, because we were being too effective, making too many waves in quick succession, and thereby depriving the criminal operatives of 'space' in which to work out how to counteract what we say through their anonymous disinformation agents, and how to continue with the criminal financial fraud that the Bush II White House and its criminalist financial associates have made their speciality.

Story was going too fast for them. Would he please give them a little time to catch their breath so that they could work out how to scam the Ambassador, the US taxpayer, the American people, the country payees and the Tier 1-10 recipients anew, while escalating their bribery of key Members of Congress, Justices, etc, using Wanta's stolen funds as source. Seven or eight key Legislators were causing a problem by increasing their demands for financial compensation as the price for going along with the White House's open-ended criminality and the ongoing high-level US free-for-all financial ransacking operation.

THE INTERVENTION OF THE OIL AND BAGMAN FROM HOUSTON
President George W. Bush has a Houston-based bagman. He is a prominent, powerful and corrupt Texas oil tycoon, whose identity is of course known. Bush's bagman steps into the picture every time the Ambassador is about to be paid, and aborts the Settlement.

On 7th December, this Houston-based Bush oil and bagman spent many hours at either a branch of Citibank or a correspondent institution, taking corrupt payments creamed off from all the illegal proceeds of hidden transactions driven off the back of the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion, for onward remittance to various prominent US domestic and international politicians (= BRIBES), including Senator Hillary Rodinski Clinton (1), who is up to her neck in the current epidemic of financial giga-sleaze, as before. This Texan bagman was involved, too, in the filching of that $48 billion that Vice President Cheney stole from his pal President George W. Bush himself some while back, and which Bush only discovered that Cheney had stolen some days later.

There is of course nothing that a gangster hates more than being shafted by his own top lieutenant, even though that is what he routinely does to everyone else.

Following the expiry, without any payment having been made, of the 48-hour period at the end of Tuesday, the Editor enquired as to exactly why it had been thought that the now defunct exposure moratorium could have been assumed to be likely to diverge in any way from previous Wantagate deception episodes.

COUNTRY PAYEES LIED TO THAT WANTA HAD BEEN PAID
Apparently the only difference was that the White House had specifically instructed the Principals to cease communication with this Editor, by name. As the moratorium continued in subsequent days, the Editor had to rub home the point that every time such undertakings are given by the Principals, the high-level financial fraudsters exploit the situation and renege on their undertakings. In this episode, it turned out that the 'gap' had been exploited to LIE TO THE COUNTRY RECIPIENTS THAT THE AMBASSADOR HAD BEEN PAID MANY DAYS PREVIOUSLY: see below.

Given that the Bush-Clinton 'Box Gang' clique of organised criminals that the US military is far too feckless, weak and scared to remove from office, operates in an environment of Durkheimian fuzzy 'anomie', that is not surprising. What, frankly, surprises this Editor, is that the slightest notice is ever taken of instructions from the White House or from any other US official quarter at any time, since nothing that ANY official in this rat-ridden Bush II Administration says, ever has any more credibility than the lies that routinely cascade from the lips of Mr Henry M. Paulson Jr.

THE STRAIN OF ALL THIS IS CAUSING PAULSON TO TWITCH
Mind you, all this strain seems to be affecting Mr Paulson physically.

Specifically, the Editor received numerous reports about Mr Paulson's curious behaviour during the White House news conference held on 6th December, at which the US kakocracy (2) announced their latest scam, illegally tearing up securities contracts by freezing Adjustable Rate Mortgages for five years, triggering a further deterioration in the values of mortgage-backed securities, plus the invention of their new core scamming entity, the Hope Fund, with its seed money stolen from the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion.

The source of funds for the 'Hope Fund' was blandly described as 'private money', with no further elaboration, naturally, since the funds had been stolen/derived from funds stolen and diverted from Ambassador Wanta's Settlement of $4.5 trillion which Paulson first hijacked in June 2006.

This package amounted to nothing less than Bush Jr.'s version of his Godfather's

Savings and Loan scamming operation in the 1980s, complete with a brand new fund that will permit secret hypothecation of the stolen $5.0 billion, to generate trillions of unsupervised, untaxed fiat money accruals, i.e. fraudulent finance for self-enrichment purposes, as usual.

It is, quite literally, Savings and Loan Scandal Number Two.

Furthermore, although already discredited, the Hope Fund and its linked five-year freeze gimmick represents a recipe for an open-ended long-term attack on private property, as will be explained in greater detail when we have a moment. Neither that reality, nor the brazen institutionalisation of the tearing up of securities contracts, will have been of concern to this cynical White House, since the destruction of private property is an old, well-known sterile plank of the World Revolution for which these organised criminal operatives are fronting. Which doesn't say much, does it, for the decadent and compromised Republican Party's so-called 'free market' orientation, either.

Anyway, on that occasion, Paulson's shifty eyes were reported to us by multiple observers to have been darting from side to side, with his face twitching like a jackass on speed. One correspondent said that he thought that Paulson was nervous that Gold Badges were about to arrest himself and Bush Jr. in front of the television cameras (which is what OUGHT to happen). Instead, Paulson's off to China again next week, raising suspicions that he may be engaged in further bribery of Chinese officials. Let's hope, for Madame Wu's sake, that he doesn't try shoving his heavy arm round her back (sticking a chip on her person?), like he did on that notorious earlier occasion. If he really is off to China, there must be some reason that overrides official concern that this criminal operative will again be booted out of Peking, as happened on at least two earlier occasions. It's curious, too, that the Chinese would wish to allow this multiple US felon within their borders, not least given that China has been reported to have been enforcing dimensions of that famous embargo against the United States somewhat more rigorously than the other evidently lily-livered nations supposedly participating in the embargo, are doing.

It also seems quite extraordinary (unless one assumes that BRIBERY is the cause) that foreign governments even give high US officials the time of day. After all, their two Master Lies – that 9/11 was perpetrated by Osama Bin Laden, who poses a ghastly threat to our civilisation, and that 9/11 was perpetrated by Al-Qaeda ('the Data Base'), have long since been demonstrated to be crude, cack-handed strategic deceptions unworthy even of Dr Josef Goebbels, who taught that if a lie is repeated often enough, it will be universally believed. He wasn't far wrong, as The Daily Telegraph writes about Osama Bin Laden, to this day, as though he is alive and kicking, notwithstanding the fact that he died somewhere in the American boondocks on 26th December 2001.

FORMER ITALIAN PRESIDENT SUDDENLY REVEALS THE TRUTH ABOUT 9/11

As for the 9/11 atrocities, the former President of Italy, Francesco Cossiga, told Corriera della Sera, Italy's most respected newspaper, on 5th December 2007, that 'the disastrous 9/11 attack has been planned and realised by the CIA and Mossad'. Cossiga has thus joined other scattered intelligence-related sources whose consciences clearly keep them awake at night as they approach the ends of their lives. For, all of a sudden, we think we hear a growing chorus of exposure accusations. Could this by any chance be because Wantagate has perhaps made it 'safer' for these people, who must have known all along what they are now spasmodically divulging, to get on the right side of what is going to be exposed, whether they like it or not?

This report was accompanied by the superfluous observation that this ageing Italian intelligence officer's sudden belated revelation of the outline truth of the matter has to be taken seriously, because Signor Cossiga (3) cannot be considered to be a 'crackpot conspiracy theorist'.

In other words, in order to carry any credibility at all, one needs to be Head of State first; and in any case, contrary to what Lenin taught, there is no such thing as a conspiracy. This is notoriously the most successful counterintelligence 'slide' (meaning, a prepackaged mental 'take' that precludes all further enquiry) ever invented, and it is notoriously common fare among superficial journalists and anonymous US payroll disinformation hacks whose normal posture is sitting on their brains.

A Government capable of such lies is unlikely to be interested in telling the truth about anything at all – a point which the Principals have learned the hard way. When a US official makes a statement, it can never be believed (as used to be said of the Soviets) – making all transactions with the Bush II Government impossible, but at the same time, providing maximum scope for the endless secret self-enrichment scams in which it specialises and which has become its sole raison d'etre.

LIES, FALSE UNDERTAKINGS, AND TELEPHONE CALLS
On 6th December, the Ambassador and Michael C. Cottrell, M.S., were formally told that they could expect a telephone call at about 9.00 am on 7th December, confirming details of the Wanta funds transfer (which the White House had specifically stated on 2nd December, had already taken place: but never mind: these innumerable discrepancies are soon forgotten, aren't they?).

In the event, the Ambassador's telephone connections were totally disrupted at around the time that the promised telephone call was supposed to have been received. This had never happened before. It is conjectured that Bush Sr. procured this disruption to Wanta's telecommunications.

Separately, notwithstanding the unprecedented sabotage of the Ambassador's telecommunications and its timing, Mr Cottrell was nevertheless informed that the Principals would be told between 9.00am and 3.00pm on 7th December about arrangements that would be made to fly them to New York to sign appropriate documentation for the release of the funds.

This false undertaking contradicted the previously exposed realities that no documents need to be signed, that the Principals do not need to be in New York, and that the funds must be transferred via the Treasury Direct system, a process that takes 20 seconds (as confirmed after Mr Cottrell had called Citibank's bluff: see recent reports).

At the same time, Michael Cottrell was also told that funds would be sent to his private banking coordinates, as requested in Mr Cottrell's letter to Mrs Catherine Weir, to cover the Principals' expenses and by way of a goodwill debit against the $4.5 trillion owned by the Ambassador that Citibank has stolen. (This 'undertaking' was later transmogrified into an insolent statement that the funds to be provided would be of 'subsistence level' proportions).

At 2.05pm EST on 7th December, Mr Cottrell received a telephone call from an associate who had just been informed by US Treasury compliance and DOD Internal Affairs, that various payees were to be paid, with actual delivery of funds on Monday 10th December (enabling the banks to gouge more off the top of the funds over the weekend, as usual). Meanwhile the Ambassador made it clear that the requirement for $1.0 million to be remitted to Mr Cottrell's banking coordinates must be fulfilled, by a way of a goodwill gesture; otherwise there could be no question of the Ambassador and Mr Cottrell travelling to New York, as suggested, should this prove 'necessary' despite the fact that it is not necessary (see above).

At 3.45pm, Mr Cottrell was informed by senior personnel that the aforementioned telephone call could be expected between 3.00pm EST and two hours later.

DOD INTERNAL AFFAIRS ASKED TO EXECUTE ISSUED FEDERAL WARRANTS
At 4.05pm, Mr Cottrell asked relevant associates to inform DOD Internal Affairs that the Principals have yet again been deceived, and that DOD Internal Affairs should please execute the issued outstanding arrest warrants, since it was obvious that payment had not, and would not, be made in accordance with all these endless vapid undertakings. DOD Internal Affairs has the authority to execute the warrants, if the Principals did not take economic receipt of the funds on 7th December.

ILLEGAL USE OF WANTA'S FUNDS JUSTIFIES DOUBLING OF INTEREST
At 5.05pm EST on 7th December, Mr Cottrell made it clear to senior personnel that the Principals are now demanding interest of $704 billion (twice $352 billion), and not a penny less, given that the CIA criminal enterprise called Citibank has stolen the Ambassador's funds, and is fraudulently using them in the context explained immediately below.

Since being instructed on Sunday 2nd December not to provide information to the Editor of this service for 48 hours on the basis of the worthless White House statement that the funds had been remitted to the Ambassador's corporate securities account – the basis of the lie fed to the payee (and Reagan Protocol) countries – the Principals had complied with this instruction, as described above. But since the White House's statement that the funds had been remitted turned out, of course, to be a lie, DOD Internal Affairs wrote to Citibank on 5th December, stating that Citibank MUST implement the Wanta Settlement no later than on 7th December. It did not do so.

DOD INTERNAL AFFAIRS 'REQUIRED' TO GIVE WARNING OF ARRESTS
It has since transpired that DOD Internal Affairs had been mysteriously 'required' (by bribed or otherwise 'assuaged' Federal and/or Supreme Court Justices?) to give Citibank 24 hours' written notice of what they must do to avoid 'consequences' – which meant that the bank 'required' the Gold Badges to give it 24 hours' written notice prior to the execution of the issued arrest warrants.

In any case, Citibank (the behaviour of which still remains as reprobate as ever, notwithstanding the supposed presence of senior British 'saviour' officials at the bank, for it is a fact that Rubin Cube is still there) retorted that Citibank does not respond to threats. Whereupon DOD Internal Affairs responded that no threat had been issued, but that Citibank was required to make the delayed and hijacked Wanta payment, and that unspecified action would otherwise be taken on Friday morning. Since Citibank should have made the transfer in June 2006, it is grossly and criminally delinquent, so that threats don't feature in the situation.

WANTA FUNDS ILLEGALLY USED AS BASE FOR BASEL II 'COMPLIANCE'
At 5.30pm on Thursday 6th December, Mr Cottrell had received a telephone call proving that the flood of funds that had now been reported to be flowing back to the United States represented fiat money generated off the back of Ambassador Wanta's stolen $4.5 trillion (which remains in situ at Citibank, 399 Park Avenue), and that the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion was also being illegally used as the basis of a 'credit line' to provide financial resources with which US banks are supposed to be made compliant with the Basel II requirements. At least 90% of all US banks were not creditworthy and did not comply with Basel II (as of the first week in December 2007).

In other words, Mr Cottrell has obtained a formal admission (specific details of which have, given their nature, been withheld from the Editor for the time being) that the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion is being illegally used to prop up the US banking system so that an appearance of compliance with the Basel II on-the-books requirements, can be presented for international public consumption. It is on the basis of this incredible fraud that the Principals have now doubled the previously agreed-upon $352 billion of interest payable by Citibank, which it will be recalled was originally based upon the Editor's back-of-envelope calculation of $350 billion, plus $2.0 billion on top.

Since the Ambassador's funds are being illegally employed for this purpose, Mr Cottrell is well within his rights to specify the rate of interest at which the funds are so deployed, albeit illegally, and has accordingly doubled the $352 billion, to $704 billion.

LONDON DEMANDS THAT ALL U.S. BANKS BE COMPLIANT BY MONDAY
On the afternoon of 7th December, an associate of the Principals received a telephone call from 'power centres' in London reiterating that ALL US banks MUST prove up and comply with the Basel II requirements as of Monday 10th December. Among underlying points to note here is the fact that all the large American banks have branches and subsidiaries in London, so that these branches and subsidiaries must all be Basel II-compliant, which cannot happen unless their own head offices are compliant as well. It is therefore wholly irrelevant, in practice, that US banks have a typically fuzzy period up to 1st January 2008, within which to comply (and lots of further fuzzy Basel II compliance 'requirement deadlines' thereafter).

Several antagonists wrote gleefully to the Editor of this service pointing out with gravitas that the US Basel II compliance date is the first of the New Year, without taking the above rather basic reality into account (because such Americans think that the whole world is America, probably).

U.S. BANKS CANNOT BE MADE 'BASEL II-COMPLIANT' WITH STOLEN MONEY
The reckless American criminal financial authorities appear to have overlooked the basic fact that compliance with the on-the-books requirements of the Basel II settlement CANNOT BE PROCURED through the use of STOLEN MONEY. The underlying base of the funds being deployed to shower the American banking system with financial injections in order to bring them up to compliance is the $4.5 trillion owned by Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta.

Therefore, these operations WILL NOT HAVE RENDERED U.S. BANKS COMPLIANT WITH BASEL II, whatever these corrupt US financial engineers may have intended.

Note: Contrary to the impression that may have been given earlier, due to the Editor's error, that the Wanta funds may have been held off-balance sheet, the $4.5 trillion has always been held on-balance sheet, for onward transfer via Treasury Direct to the Ambassador's corporate securities account with Morgan Stanley, New York City.

It is precisely because the Ambassador's 'real' money is held on-balance sheet, that it is being illegally employed right now to generate the funds, and as a loan base, for bringing the US banks into compliance with the Basel II on-balance sheet requirements.

While that is the underhand intention, the process and outcomes are illegitimate, since the use of stolen funds to massage the non-compliant US banks into de facto compliance is fraudulent and therefore cannot stand. These ongoing illegal transactions, which are being undertaken without the permission of the owner of the funds, Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta, will not be recognised.

WE THEREFORE REFUTE THIS LATEST FINANCIAL DECEPTION AND ROUNDLY EXPOSE IT.

MORGAN STANLEY MUST CONFIRM $5.204 TRILLION DEPOSIT TO THE PRINCIPALS

Against this background, the Treasurer of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. has also let it be known in the appropriate circles that the only confirmation document that the Principals will accept from Morgan Stanley is a confirmatory statement written on the Morgan Stanley letterhead that $5.204 trillion has been deposited with the corporate securities account of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc, held with Morgan Stanley, New York City. Mr Cottrell further informed appropriate parties that any other document submitted to them for signature will be published so that the international financial community, the corrupt intelligence sector, and the payee Governments and Tier 1-10 payees, are made aware of the escalation of fraudulent finance that has been going on behind the scenes as the cornered criminal financial operatives develop ever more exotic mechanisms for continuing their offensive against humanity for their own revolutionary and personal benefit, regardless of the consequences.

PAYEE GOVERNMENTS REACT WITH SHOCK AT WHITE HOUSE LIE

The payee Governments were notified by the Ambassador on 7th December that he had not been paid. They registered extreme shock.

The reason for this reaction was that THE GOVERNMENTS HAD ALL BEEN LIED TO BY THE WHITE HOUSE AND BY LYING U.S. OFFICIALS ON BEHALF OF THE WHITE HOUSE, THAT THE AMBASSADOR HAD BEEN PAID MANY DAYS EARLIER. The underlying stratagem is modelled after Dr Josef Goebbels: repetition of the lie substitutes for fact; AND THAT IS WHAT WAS INTENDED.

This lie was perpetrated during the period immediately following our posting last Sunday, the 2nd December, after the White House had specifically instructed the Ambassador and Mr Cottrell not to communicate with Christopher Story. The hiatus was designed, as the Editor assumed at the time, to provide the intended Master Lie with the necessary ‘space’ within which to take hold.

Finally, it is further understood that at least $2.0 trillion is being distributed to corrupt recipients by the Houston-based oil magnate who acts as President Bush's bagman. That's what he was doing at a certain bank for many hours on 7th December.

DISTORTED VIEW OF RIGHT AND WRONG FROM LONDON SOURCE
Which brings us back to the uncouth email that this Editor received from UK-based money man Mr John Wood on 3rd December 2007, the day after we were 'silenced' by the White House. Having arrogantly instructed the Editor as to what should and should not be included in these reports, this operative added: 'We are making real progress with decent and committed Treasury parties by [means of] low profile and diplomatic dialogue'.

If Mr Wood thinks that the stealing of The Queen's gold, the continuing hijacking, stealing, illegal hypothecation and renting out of the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion which should have been paid to him as instructed by the Chinese authorities back in June 2006, and the incessant (repeatedly exposed) financial criminality that is being perpetrated by the 'Box Gang' operatives including his beloved Hillary Rodinski Clinton and her Robert Rubin Cube side-kick, the collapse of the Rule of Law in the United States, the rape of the Central Bank of Iraq, the wanton murder not only of 3,000+ people on 9/11, but of approximately a million and a half Iraqis, and the deaths of thousands of American and British troops for the specific purpose of procuring the everlasting untaxed secret enrichment of the organised revolutionary gangs that have hijacked the US Government, represents 'progress', this man is in urgent need of a course in elementary ethics, coupled with a brain scan.

Notes:

(1) Indicative of what is to be expected in the future from CIA operative Hillary Rodinski was her provocative appearance (in a photograph, for instance, on page 22 of The Daily Telegraph of 8th December 2007), flanked by Ian Paisley, the duplicitous First Minister of Northern Ireland, and his terrorist-murderer Deputy, Martin McGuinness, who were both on a week-long tour of America. McGuinness and his Lenin look-alike, Gerry Adams, were jointly responsible for the maiming of an estimated 35,000 Britons and more than 5,000 deaths; so Mrs Rodinski, who knows a thing or two about sudden deaths herself, picks her company to advertise where her real 'interests' lie.

Since both Bill and Hillary have obtained Irish passports (rendering Hillary Rodinski, one would have thought, ineligible for becoming President of the United States), and since the Editor of this service could reasonably, shall we say, be considered to be in Hillary Rodinski's Little Black Book, one is entitled to wonder what Mrs Clinton and Martin McGuinness may have been discussing, and whether Mr McGuinness's 'old' assassination assets were to be briefed for a certain killing. We feel sure that our very perceptive readers and supporters will understand what is referred to here.

(2) Kakocracy: Governance by representatives of the worst elements of society.

(3) Of parallel importance and interest is the fact that Cossiga's latest comments have followed similar remarks by Roman Catholic Archbishop Richard Williamson of the Society of St. Pius X. He told a meeting in Bedford, Massachusetts, on 4th November 2007 that (Black) forces inside the US Government plotted 9/11 and that they may be planning another such abomination.

A well-briefed 'intelligence' source has commented as follows: 'The Italian and Vatican intelligence services maintain the closest possible contact with one another'.

It is noteworthy that the Society of St Pius X is a traditionalist and so-called 'right-wing' Catholic society founded by the late Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre. The father of Lefebvre was a French monarchist and British intelligence agent operating during the First World War, who died in a Nazi concentration camp in 1944. Lefebvre is reportedly 'close to' the 'right-wing' French National Front run by Jean-Marie Le Pen. The informed source elaborated that 'the 9/11 revelations from Italy and Williamson may indicate a schism between some Fascist sectors and pro-Israeli neocons'. However the underlying reality is that the Vatican has 'had more than enough'.

A Catholic Archbishop would be unlikely to have made this comment without institutional Vatican approval, and that would apply in this context, even to a Lefebvre-originated organisation.

LEGAL SECTION:
PEOPLE OUGHT TO READ THIS INFORMATION, AS IT INDICATES THE DEPTH OF THE DEPRAVITY THAT WANTAGATE HAS EXPOSED. CONSTANT REPETITION OF THIS BASIC DATA IS STILL NECESSARY...

We now repeat, yet again, our familiar summary of the Statutes, securities regulations and fraud information that we have appended to these reports for many months. The reason we append this information is to remind everyone of their clear responsibilities under the US Misprision of Felony legislation, and of course to provide a legal basis for these reports.

LEGAL RECAPITULATION FROM REPORT DATED 30TH AUGUST 2007:
Reiteration of the fraudulent transactions involving Bank of New York Mellon – a bank so arrogant and conspicuously indifferent both to its tarnished reputation and to its grotesque breaches of US law and of N.A.S.D./S.E.C. Regulations, that it now takes first prize in the crowded competition for the title of ‘Most arrogant and corrupt financial institution in America'. At least, this was the case until the perpetration of the 'Saturday scam' described above and on 13th November:

Step 1: Fraud in the Inducement: "… is intended to and which does cause one to execute an instrument, or make an agreement… The misrepresentation involved does not mislead one as the paper he signs but rather misleads as to the true facts of a situation, and the false impression it causes is a basis of a decision to sign or render a judgment" Source: Steven H. THEFT BY DECEPTION:

•
"FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT… The hiding or suppression of a material fact or circumstance which the party is legally or morally bound to disclose…".

•
"The test of whether failure to disclose material facts constitutes fraud is the existence of a duty, legal or equitable, arising from the relation of the parties: failure to disclose a material fact with intent to mislead or defraud under such circumstances being equivalent to an actual 'fraudulent concealment'…".

Wicked Pedia Update dated 2nd December 2007:

WIKIPEDIA IS PART OF AN NSA DISCREDITING OPERATION
As previously reported, the Editor's attention was drawn, in the second half of November 2007, to a pack of old lies, diversionary claptrap and disinformation posted on Wikipedia under 'Leo Wanta'.

Although this posting appeared FOR THE FIRST TIME on 12th November 2007, it consisted almost entirely of ancient lies, including disinformation dredged out of 'Thieves' World', a hatchet job published in 1994 by Simon and Schuster by the late Claire Sterling, a CIA operative.

Mrs Sterling died suddenly after being summoned for her second meeting with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, under Clinton.

ANCIENT DISCREDITED LIES POSTED IN NOVEMBER 2007
The fact that the OLD Wikipedia lies appeared for the first time as late as 12th November 2007, and consisted almost totally of old, discredited lies, omitting the Master Lie that the CIA retailed after the Ambassador had been taken down, namely that he was DEAD, indicated quite clearly to the Editor and his advisers that this latest evil display of regurgitated disinformation represented a deliberate operation by the US intelligence community's disinformation and lie machine, to begin, all over again, the process of discrediting Ambassador Leo Wanta – so that they can relieve him of his funds by some false pretext or other after a 'gag order' has been signed.

The definitive up-to-date information on the Ambassador's affairs has been published on this website, and in several issues of International Currency Review, Economic Intelligence Review, Soviet Analyst and Arab-Asian Affairs, all published by World Reports Limited, for several years. Copies of these publications are in official, institutional and library hands all over the world. Therefore, any posting about Ambassador Wanta that relies upon ancient lies and fails to take account of the accurate information that we have published, can easily be demonstrated to represent yet another US intelligence community and NSA discrediting operation.

PRELUDE TO 'SETTING UP' WANTA ALL OVER AGAIN
We now understand that the Principals have been advised (for the past several weeks) that they will not be allowed to reveal that they have been paid. This loony state of affairs is designed to 'set them up' for a future discrediting operation whereby false witness will be deployed against them to the effect that they have stolen the money, or some such pack of lies, which they will be unable to refute because they will be bound by the 'prerequisite' gag order that is intended. Its purpose, of course, is to 'legitimise' the old and new lies that the US disinformation apparat will be preparing for future use. The likelihood is that the new discrediting operation will be extended to Michael C. Cottrell, M.S., as well. We are prepared for this intended onslaught.

EDITOR'S TRUE REPORT REPEATEDLY REPLACED BY OLD LIES
On 19th November, the Editor posted on Wikipedia the accurate text about Leo Wanta that is now reproduced below. The Editor's accurate text was then removed by Wikipedia, leaving the 'old lies' that had existed previously. When the Editor became aware of this, he reposted the accurate text below, and, given that his own copy had been deleted, he then deleted the pack of lies, leaving his own accurate text up on the Wikipedia site instead, without the lies.

On 2nd December, the Editor was advised by a monitor that the Editor's accurate text had been removed and that the old discrediting lies had been reposted on the page by Wikipedia. When the Editor checked, he found that the page could no longer be edited because of what the site managers described as 'vandalism'.

IT'S 'VANDALISM' TO POST THE TRUTH, NOT 'VANDALISM' TO POST LIES
It was not 'vandalism' to delete the truth and to replace the truth by old lies, but it was 'vandalism' to delete 'old lies' and replace them by the truth.

We are therefore able to conclude from this Wicked Pedia outrage, as follows:

1. Wikipedia, which purports to 'change the world', prefers lies to the truth.

2. Wikipedia is therefore, by definition, a source of disinformation and lies, and cannot be trusted as a source of reliable information in any context.

3. The only category of sick society that would have any interest in disseminating lies about Ambassador Wanta, the United States' greatest living patriot, rather than the truth, is the mentally disturbed US counterintelligence disinformation apparat (a.k.a. the US STUPIDITY COMMUNITY) which, by its actions in deleting the Editor's ACCURATE information and replacing it with old lies, and by its illegal behaviour in 'snipping' our website texts as stated above, thereby reveals the desperation of its concerns, which all have to do with covering up official criminality.

4. It is now far too late for the US stupidity community to repair the damage that it has done since June 2006, when the Ambassador's funds were first hijacked by the criminal financial operative Henry M. Paulson, US Treasury Secretary. So it is laying the groundwork for a renewed discrediting operation against Ambassador Wanta and his colleagues.

We and others will see to it that this intention is defeated, and that such nefarious scheming is exposed for the amoral and disgusting Luciferian behaviour that it represents.

The ACCURATE text that the Editor posted on the Wikipedia site, follows. (The Editor, after all, PAID FOR AMBASSADOR WANTA'S EXIT FROM PROBATION, FOR GOODNESS SAKE, SO HE CAN HARDLY BE A SOURCE OF DISINFORMATION, CAN HE?). This information will be very widely distributed by other means, in order to provide all concerned with the necessary 'heads-up' as to what these US Dark Forces have in mind. They are out of their minds and in Satan's mind:

The disinformation about Leo Wanta (Lee Wanta) below was first posted on 12th November 2007. It contains ancient CIA disinformation and long since exposed lies going back to the early 1990s, and obfuscates the truth. The report appended immediately below was added on 19th November 2007, to correct the disinformation contained in the original stub.

It was subsequently removed and is hereby replaced. This sequence of events, which suggests that egregious lies are preferred to the truth, has been recorded on www. worldreports.org, which contains all the updated and breaking Wanta material, that was ignored and traduced in the stub at the foot of this report.

THE ACCURATE TEXT THAT WIKIPEDIA REPEATEDLY DELETED
This is the correct information that we posted on 19th November 2007:

The 'information' posted below represents a deliberately malevolent, false disinformation picture which has no bearing on reality. It is a travesty of the truth of the matter and cites Christopher Story as the author of some of the disinformation, which is libellous and implies that Story, the veteran
Editor of International Currency Review of nearly 40 years' standing, is engaged in the egregious dissemination of lies, which is not the case.

This is such an egregiously malevolent stub of disinformation that readers should prudently dismiss it altogether; they should start afresh by accessing Christopher Story's website, which is: www.worldreports.org., reading from the Archive.

www.worldreports.org is the authoritative source for all updated information on Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta. The source 'Thieves' World' was a CIA disinformation work prepared by the late CIA disinformation operative Claire Sterling, published in 1994.

This stub regurgitates ancient lies perpetrated by the CIA, which lied for many years that Lee (Leo being his intelligence community name) Wanta was dead. The CIA proclaimed that he was dead so that corrupt cadres could ransack his funds (see below).

He 'ceased to be dead' with effect from 21st July 2005 after Christopher Story, a British private citizen, had paid $35,000 from his scarce private funds pro bono publico by way of 'restitution' to an American lawyer for onward payment to the Wisconsin State Department of Corrections, to procure Mr Wanta's release from his illegal probation.

Despite his Ambassadorial status, Wanta had been illegally 'taken down' in Switzerland on 7th July 1993 without a warrant on a trumped-up Wisconsin State charge of having failed to pay $14,129 in falsely assessed Wisconsin State fabricated tax that he never owed because he had been resident in Vienna on US Presidential intelligence work since June 1988.

This data is all in the public domain, has been published for several years in International Currency Review, the Journal of the World Financial Community, and can be read on Mr Story's website.

International Currency Review is a banking and financial journal with a worldwide circulation:
ISSN 0020-6490. It is published by World Reports Limited, London.

Notwithstanding that this fabricated tax demand (orchestrated by US criminal intelligence) had been paid twice under protest by Lee Emil Wanta from abroad (in May and June 1992), the funds were improperly allocated by the Wisconsin State Department of Revenue and were never credited to the false account maintained by them for the Ambassador. (Christopher Story holds documentary proof of both payments). They were paid a third time by Christopher Story in June 2005, which action duly procured Mr Wanta's release from illegal probation effective 14th November 2005.

As a consequence of Wanta thus ceasing to be dead, the CIA's lie that he was dead collapsed in chaos, and all the subsidiary old false witness lies that the CIA had perpetrated, including those assembled for disinformation purposes in the stub below (which, in line with the standard false witness used throughout by detractors, attempts to portray Christopher Story as a source of disinformation) were discredited as well.

Why was Wanta taken down? So that the criminal intelligence cadres running the US Government could ransack the $27.5 trillion of funds assembled by Leo Wanta on President Reagan's orders, in the course of his Financial Warfare operations against the USSR.

Under Reagan's Executive Order 12333 of 1981, US intelligence officers were permitted to establish corporations which could thereafter contract with the CIA/DIA/DEA/NSA et al for the purpose of fulfilling allotted intelligence tasks allocated to them.

The financial proceeds of operations conducted by such corporations were consequently the property of the corporations and thus of their shareholders, a legal fact of life which has never been, and cannot be, disputed. This was not a good idea because almost all US intelligence operatives are liars and do not function on the basis of the Rule of Law at all, if they can help it.

Lee Wanta is the well-known patriotic exception to this rule: he operates solely in accordance with US law, in contrast to the behaviour of other US operatives, which is why the kakistocracy* needed to remove him from the scene, as duly occurred July 1993.

Once Wanta had been illegally arrested (contrary to international law, as a diplomat) and then thrown into a stinking Swiss jail on 7th July 1993, the criminal cadres inside the US official structures immediately ransacked Mr Wanta's bank accounts according to plan.

The history of this matter is, and has been, elaborated in great depth on Christopher Story's website www.worldreports.org. and has been extensively published, as mentioned, in International Currency Review and other World Reports Limited intelligence publications.

Students are advised perhaps to begin with the 'Wisconsingate' report dated 6th August 2007, which forensically dissects, with detailed documentary back-up, the Wisconsin Department of Revenue's tax fabrication operation against Wanta, stretching back for over 20 years, that has been exposed by Christopher Story in minute detail, and which formed the fabricated basis for Wanta's illegal takedown in 1993, despite the fact that Wisconsin has no jurisdiction beyond its borders.

The overall Wantagate crisis, which is the sole and continuing underlying cause of the prevailing global financial and economic day of reckoning that the world is now facing, has been triggered by the fact that the George W. Bush Jr. White House, aided and abetted by other senior office-holders, hijacked the compromise financial settlement of $4.5 trillion that the White House itself agreed (in a classified accord that was finalised in May 2006) should be paid over to Ambassador Wanta, so that the stolen and diverted remaining $23 trillion of his funds (and the many hundreds of trillions of dollars hypothecated upon them) could be released from a de facto lien arising from the collapse of the CIA's lie that Wanta was dead.

For clearly, since he had ceased to be dead, 100% of these funds (plus the hundreds of trillions of fiat ‘funny’ money generated by illegal leveraged operations from that base) belonged to Lee Wanta and to no-one else: a situation that the banks 'could not handle'.

The entire narrative of what has become the worst financial corruption crisis in world history (which this stub consisting of disinformation attempts to obfuscate) is set out in great detail on Christopher Story's website www.worldreports.org., to which all readers are directed in order for the accurate state of affairs to be understood. As indicated, this stub below is a travesty and a disgrace, as it regurgitates long since discredited CIA lies, presents a diversionary, distorted and misleading picture, and because it malevolently incorporates Christopher Story as a source for some of this disinformation.

It is a disgusting instance of ignorant and malevolent US counterintelligence disinformation and deceit at its very worst.

All the statements in the above commentary may be verified by reference to www.worldreports.org and International Currency Review. Another publication covering this matter in detail is Economic Intelligence Review, also published by World Reports Limited, London. Wanta students should access the Archive on the www.worldreports.org Home Page.

A book devoted to Ambassador Wanta and the Wantagate crisis is in preparation

DIPLOMATIC STATUS OF THE PRINCIPALS
The Ambassador and his colleagues now have special diplomatic status (conferred upon them by HM The Queen in 2007), which means that the Ambassador is now an Ambassador several times over. This factor greatly complicates the intended discrediting offensive that the mad US stupidity community's Dark Forces contemplate, their sole objective being of course to cover up their own criminality, in line with pending 'thought crime' legislation which has the same Nazi-style objective.

*Note: 'Kakistocracy': Governance by a clique representing the worst elements of society, from the Greek, kakos, meaning foul, or filthy.

Please Make a Donation to help fund Christopher Story's ongoing financial corruption investigations. Your assistance will be very sincerely appreciated and will make a real difference, hastening the necessary resolution of the worst financial corruption and global financial crisis in history. This website has been calling the shots, because of the hijacking of Wanta's Settlement.

The Editor is extremely grateful to the generous Americans and others who have so kindly contributed funds to assist us with these exposures. He intends to communicate personally with everyone who has contributed, on his return to the United Kingdom.

•
Emails addressed to us which lack coordinates identifying the sender will be trashed unread. The Editor publishes all his coordinates, as has always been the case, as he has nothing to hide. Others should do the same.

It would be appreciated if webmasters would refrain from lifting our material without proper adequate attribution. Manifestly, the material may be used with attribution, but any other use is illegal and unethical. We also protest at people picking at our original research and posted reports, and crediting themselves rather than the Editor/this website.

Such behaviour is particularly prevalent in the United States, where lies are a way of life with some people, and is an example of the kind of dishonesty that we are exposing in these reports.

UPDATE 17TH NOVEMBER:CONCERNING A CERTAIN ATTACK MADE ON THE EDITOR:
The Editor has correctly asserted that if it had not been for Wantagate, no-one would be paid a single red cent. This statement is not false, self-serving or arrogant: IT IS ACCURATE. The reason it is ACCURATE is that the George Bush Sr.-Greenspan 'NEVER-PAY' model was constructed in such a diabolically interleaved manner (designed to preclude payouts) that it has always been possible for payments to be torpedoed by means of a single interference at any level or point in the interlinked chain of payments, so that the entire spectrum of payments is aborted. The allegation that the Lee Wanta situation has 'blocked' the other payments is an inversion of the facts.

The difference to the situation imposed by the necessity of making the Wanta

Settlement is the same point that we have made all along, namely that when Lee Wanta ceased to be dead [see e.g. report dated 6th August 2007], following this Editor's intervention, it became necessary for unique reasons for his compromise stand-alone payment to be made (even though it was later hijacked by Paulson, in June 2006): whereupon we had to begin pressing for payment in these reports. Had it not been for this and huge related pressures, the Bush Sr.-Greenspan model would have remained intact, as these criminals never had any intention of fulfilling ANY of their financial obligations.

But because of the massive international backing for The Wanta Plan, and because the criminalists MADE THE SERIOUS MISTAKE OF HIJACKING WANTA'S FUNDS AND TRYING TO INCORPORATE HIS NECESSARY (STAND-ALONE) COMPROMISE PAYMENT INTO THE BUSH SR.-GREENSPAN 'NEVER-PAY' SCAMMING MODEL, they destabilised their own impregnable arrangements designed to preclude payment EVER, with the consequences that have unfolded since June 2006.

THEREFORE our statement is NOT self-serving, arrogant puffery, but rather a correct and accurate statement of FACT. We are aware of the identity of the individual who appended the disinformation, unscrambled above, to the report in question. As for whoever obtained what information, when and why, this is childish and irrelevant. The fact that others have suffered for years attempting to get these criminals to deliver on their promises and undertakings, is a harsh reality which attracts the sympathy of everyone, but has nothing whatsoever to do with the Wantagate issues in question.

Concerning the lie that The Queen was involved in certain nefarious financial activities, this is a REVERSAL OF THE TRUTH. HM The Queen was DECEIVED BY THE CRIMINAL OPERATIVES, and is A VICTIM OF THEIR EVIL INTENTIONS AND PRACTICES. Her Majesty The Queen was further victimised when they stole her gold on 29-30 March 2007 (which has since been retrieved, with the massive illegal fiat accruals being, we are led to believe, substantially paid for HM's account).

So THE LONG-RUNNING QUEEN LIE, beloved of certain US disinformation specialists without a cause, is hereby NAILED, as well.

Further, some people were surprised at the Editor's rather harsh reaction to being threatened (see below). Why ? During the Second World War, the people of London were subjected to horrendous bombardment and the response was the same. A sharp riposte is appropriate in the face of bullying and malevolent threats. Finally, as of late on Friday evening London time, we had prepared, as had been made widely known, a report linking Wantagate directly to the 9/11 mass murders, which the criminal cadres have all along been collectively seeking to cover up. This was ready to be posted; but (although the Editor operates on an unpaid, arms'-length basis) publication of this report has not yet been authorised. That can be interpreted, for the time being, as somewhat encouraging.

THE EDITOR IS THREATENED BY TERRIFIED U.S. SOURCES WHO OUGHT TO KNOW BETTER

On his return to the United Kingdom overnight 13/14 November 2007, the Editor of International Currency Review received a telephoned threat via an intermediary attributed to a US Admiral (i.e., an Office of Naval Intelligence operative). An angry voice in the background said that Mr Story ‘probably shouldn’t make a trip to the US any time soon’.

The Editor immediately made a telephone call to the United States to ask for special protection and was at once informed that this is to be forthcoming. The source of the threat is being traced. Issuing threats is a criminal offence in the United Kingdom and is contrary to US Federal law.

PROVOST MARSHAL CRITICISM CONFIRMED AS ACCURATE

Before leaving New York, the Editor, under arms’-length advice, posted the report dated 13th November, in which it was stated that the Provost Marshal, General Rodney L. Johnson, MAY now be a co-conspirator in the scandal involving the further illegal withholding and diversion of the $4.5 trillion private transaction funds belonging to Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta (1).

These should have been remitted through the good offices of the Provost Marshal as soon as he became involved, not least because their payment has absolutely nothing to do with the Tier 1-10 payments that have since been unlawfully ‘linked’ to the Wanta payment (see below).

The reason we made this assertion is that, as was reconfirmed to the Editor on 14th November by an impeccable US source, (quote) the Provost Marshal is basically ignoring the Rule of Law and is taking orders from his civilian master (unquote). This statement was made to us WITHOUT the conditional 'may' which the Editor carefully inserted in the preceding report. But see below.

About an hour later, the Editor received a separate US high-level CONFIRMATION that the Provost Marshal General WAS taking orders from a civilian official, believed to be the US Vice President, Richard B. Cheney. The source for this information is so well-connected that his DC informant could not possibly be lying about this.

TREASURY COMPLIANCE AND DOD INTERNAL AFFAIRS CONFIRM ACCURACY OF OUR REPORT

We have today been advised that both US Treasury compliance AND The Department of Defense Internal Affairs staff HAVE CONFIRMED THAT OUR REPORT THAT THE PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL WAS TAKING ORDERS FROM VICE PRESIDENT CHENEY IS ACCURATE.

We are sorry that the General is 'pissed' with the Editor of this service, but we must report the truth and we will not be intimidated by anyone into retracting what we know to be true: and that includes the General. He must get on and do his job so that the imminent worldwide financial and economic catastrophe is avoided. Period.

Naturally, NSA cut communications between our source and the Editor when the above 'smoking gun' compromising information was confirmed to us (on 15th November). When NSA does that, it stupidly provides further confirmation of the 100% accuracy of the report. Idiotic.

Note: There is a sophisticated view, just received from France, that there was a disinformation campaign to the effect that the Provost Marshal was taking orders from Cheney, in order to 'sting' some high-level criminal perpetrators, who were duly identified and dealt with. If that is the case, it was a clumsy operation because it reached this service and of course we published it. And if it was indeed a disinformation operation, both DOD Internal Affairs and Treasury compliance are brazen deceivers and liars. We are sticking to our analysis above, thank you. Sounds like a sophisticated belated cover-up to protect the integrity of the Provost Marshal General, to us.

•
In any case, as of 2.30pm 15th November, THERE IS NO CHANGE IN THE SITUATION. MR WANTA HAS NOT RECEIVED HIS $4.5 TRILLION AND THERE HAS BEEN NO PHONE CALL.

UPDATE: 3.00PM EDT, 8.00PM UK TIME: WE HAVE JUST HAD IT CONFIRMED THAT THE ABOVE 'SOPHISTICATED ELABORATION' IS INDEED A PACK OF LIES. IT IS GARBAGE.

THE GENERAL'S OBLIGATIONS UNDER THE UNIFORM CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE
The motto of the United States Army Criminal Investigation Command, of which General Rodney L. Johnson is in charge is:

‘DO WHAT HAS TO BE DONE’.

The Provost Marshal General is subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), as indeed is the Admiral who reportedly issued the threat against the Editor of this service. We have naturally interpreted this as a murder threat, and have taken steps accordingly.

If a military officer, not least an officer holding a position as critical and sensitive as that held by General Rodney L. Jackson, fails to perform in accordance with his obligations under the UCMJ, or impedes in any way the necessary legal outcome, he is himself prospectively subject to arrest.

Period.

Specifically, the Provost Marshal may be subject to a charge of dereliction of duty under the UCMJ (in failing so far to procure the immediate remittance of the Ambassador's unlawfully diverted $4.5 trillion as previously reiterated), and the Army Chief of Staff has the authority and capability to file such a charge. In this context, a highly respected US legal adviser has contacted a senior military connection and has requested that the Army Chief of Staff file formal Uniform Code of Military Justice charges against General Rodney L. Johnson, the Provost Marshal, in connection with his perceived dereliction of duty relative to his oath as a commissioned officer.

This may prove unnecessary IF the Provost Marshal procures the immediate remittance of the $4.5 trillion in accordance with his obligations. But he had better hurry up.

STUPIDITY OF UTTERING THREATS AGAINST THIS EDITOR
All the above facts are TRUE. Furthermore, those who utter and/or convey threats to the Editor of this service or to the Principals should pause before doing so, not least because we have the international capability to publicise such threats, as we are doing in this case.

Moreover those who are again sending the Editor poisonous emails or else who are publicising libellous statements against the Editor of this service run the very considerable risk that not only will we launch libel actions against such sources in the English court (where the penalties for libel are far more severe than in the United States) in order to protect the Editor's reputation, but that we naturally reserve the right to expose such scurrilous attacks and their perpetrators on this website and via other outlets, as necessary.

We will not be intimidated, as ought by now to have been crystal clear. Obviously, some who have come 'late to the party' have not bothered to do their homework and are foolishly relying upon disinformation outlets run by certifiable delinquents and/or disgruntled US counterintelligence disinformation websites – little people with grudges who are on the payroll and who specialise in sowing confusion and lies in the service of the terrified official criminal operatives who are facing their days of reckoning, at long last.

FEAR, TREPIDATION, INTIMIDATION, WAILING AND GNASHING OF TEETH
Indeed, we are informed, from several US sources, that 'fear, trepidation, intimidation, anxiety and loathing' have broken out at all levels of the duplicitous US structures, and among the ranks of those (especially intelligence agents in the field) who fear for the future because they have been involved in criminal financial activities, or are the victims thereof – exactly as we predicted ages ago. Many of the perpetrators and victims are, we understand, not going to be paid, although the Tier 1-10 people who have been approved for payment will be paid.

Obviously none of this is anything to do with the Ambassador; and at the risk of again repeating ourselves for the nth time, here's why.

Ambassador Lee Wanta's $4.5 trillion was remitted by the People's Bank of China (see our reports, passim) in May 2006 for the sole and specific benefit of the Ambassador himself and for no other party. It should have been paid to him in June 2006 as a stand-alone payment and was not paid to him in June 2006 when it should have been paid. The precise whereabouts of the $4.5 trillion were identified as a consequence of the 'sting' operation reported in recent reports, as a consequence of which Citibank has agreed, and is obliged, to pay the Ambassador an extra $352 billion by way of interest under the Article 4A-305 of the Universal Commercial Code: 'Liability for late or improper execution or failure to execute payment order' as previously described'.

These FACTS have nothing whatsoever to do with any other payment or circumstances and are STAND-ALONE FACTS OF RECORD.

THE BUSH SR.-GREENSPAN GIGA-FRAUD MODEL
Under the complex fraud model developed by George Herbert Walker Bush Sr. and Dr Alan Greenspan (who tried to steal between $3.0 trillion and $8.0 trillion, we are not yet certain which figure is most accurate), the transactions referenced by what are now referred to as the Tier 1-10 payments were intermingled and layered in such a way as to procure that the perpetrators of these financial scams would never, ever, be called upon to meet any of their financial obligations (as they wrongly assumed).

Without going into extreme detail, these two masterminds thought that they had developed a model so watertight that they could seize all the investors] money and never pay back a single red cent.

The model can be illustrated as follows. Given the layering and the interconnections between the collateralised and layered exploitative hypothecations, it remained permanently in the power of the masterminds and their corrupt lackeys to destabilise just ONE intended transaction, which would have the effect of stalling all attempted payouts, so that no payouts (other than to the criminal operatives and their favoured recipients) need ever take place.

On the contrary, all that was necessary was to go through the motions of preparing to make the payouts (what we referred to some time ago as the 'preparing to settled syndrome') and to ensure that one of the linkages was destabilised, for the false payout sequence to be interrupted, so that it never happened. Against this background, now consider the current situation.

When the dirty river is flowing, one cannot see the revolting filth inside the murky waters. However when the river dries up, the murky filth is revealed on the bed of the river.

THE 'IMPREGNABLE' FRAUD MODEL IS NOW A SHREDDER
This is a metaphor for what is happening 'as we speak'. The George Bush Sr.-Greenspan giga-financial scamming model – believed to have been put in place when the duplicated $27.5 trillion was raided from the 200+ banks in 1992 as we have reported in successive issues of International Currency Review and in our report dated 27th July 2007 (for instance) – has collapsed. Instead of its construction – like a huge building, similar to the Twin Towers, in which the tensions and forces transmitted through the multiple complex beams and cross-bars hold the building upright – the model is collapsing in on itself, or, in other words, it is shredding.

And this is happening uniquely and exclusively because of the Wantagate exposures that we have had to publish on this website, and because of the consequences of the Editor's $35,000 payment in the summer of 2005 (which, natch, has been stolen or misallocated inter alia by the Wisconsin Department of Revenue (see report dated 6th August 2007 for details).

PAYMENT IN 2006 WOULD HAVE AVERTED THESE EXPOSURES
To extrapolate the glaringly obvious: if the criminal kleptocrats led by Paulson, Bush Jr., Cheney et al had REMITTED WANTA'S $4.5 TRILLION back in June 2006, as they should have done, instead of unlawfully conspiring with their corrupt banking and intelligence community reprobates to exploit the Ambassador's funds for their own selfish and geopolitical purposes, NONE OF THIS WOULD EVER HAVE COME OUT, YOU UNDERSTAND.

But because of their consummate greed and stupidity, they persisted with their criminal financial operations with Hitlerian arrogance, contrary to all common sense, with the horrendous results that we see before us today.

THE CROOKS ASSUMED THEY COULD NEVER BE CONFRONTED
These people NEVER BELIEVED that anyone would have the guts to stand up to them, and to expose their arrogant certainty that they were above the law and could ransack, steal, divert, exploit and otherwise abuse the funds belonging to others with perpetual impunity.

They made a grave miscalculation. We are now being told from all quarters that 'all hell has broken loose'. To which our response is: you should have paid attention to what we have been saying for the past 18 months. BE IT UPON YOUR OWN HEAD.

Instead of which, they continued to divert and unlawfully trade the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion without his authority.

CRIES FOR 'HELP' AS PHONE RINGS OFF THE HOOK
An impeccable US authority with a birds'-eye view of all this informs us through an intermediary that his telephone is ringing off the hook as shoals of these perpetrators and victims phone in to seek his assistance in the face of the headlong shredding of the Bush Sr.-Greenspan financial scamming model, on which their hopes of riches have been pinned all these years.

And as we have predicted, there is 'wailing and gnashing of teeth' all round.

CROOKS ADVISE BUSH TO PAY, SO THEY WON'T BE ARRESTED!
The situation is 'so bad' for these criminal people, all of them, that Bush Jr.'s 'friends' met with the President on the morning of 14th November and told him to make the Wanta payment 'because they don't want to be arrested'.

Please pause to take note of what this means:

•
These Bush Jr. 'friends' did NOT advise the President of the United States to 'allow' the payment to be made BECAUSE IT IS THE RIGHT AND LAWFUL THING TO DO, but rather IN ORDER TO PREVENT THEMSELVES BEING ARRESTED.

In other words, THEY NEVER INTENDED THAT WANTA SHOULD EVER GET PAID, AND THAT THE UNLAWFULLY LINKED PAYMENT SHOULD EVER TAKE PLACE, and they are only going to happen BECAUSE THESE PEOPLE DON'T WANT TO BE ARRESTED AND TO BE SHIPPED OFF IN ONE OF THE AIRCRAFT TO A EUROPEAN DESTINATION UNDER ANTI-TERRORISM LAWS.

Thus, as we always anticipated, the only reason the matter is going to be settled is that these criminals are being forced to do what they never intended to do, what they have never wanted to do and what they still don't want to do, because they don't like the idea of being confined for 25 years or life in a British. German or Swiss maximum security jail under the relevant anti-terrorism legislation. That is the ONLY factor that's driving them to settle.

THE PROVOST MARSHAL WILL GO DOWN, FAILING THE WANTA SETTLEMENT
And for his part, the Provost Marshal General is being forced to do what Cheney and others have allegedly been telling him not to do because he, too, will face the very same consequences that he is inflicting on others IF HE DOESN'T DELIVER THE WANTA PAYMENT, WHICH STILL HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH ANY OTHER PAYMENT AND OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN SETTLED ON A STAND-ALONE BASIS IN JUNE 2006.

AS OF THIS POSTING HE HAS STILL NOT DELIVERED THE WANTA PAYMENT.

THE EDITOR IS BEING ATTACKED BY ROTTEN PARTIES WHO WILL BE PAID EXCLUSIVELY AS A CONSEQUENCE OF THE RISKS TAKEN BY THE EDITOR
On top of all this, here's a new syndrome. The Editor, who, because of the action that he took in the summer of 2005, is indeed responsible for these developments and for the unravelling of the Bush Sr.-Dr Greenspan financial scamming model – and is accordingly responsible for the outcome that those parties who will be paid will actually be receiving their payments, is being attacked by some of these very same people, whose confusion and lack of understanding seems to have no limits.

Such people should realise that it was never intended that they would ever receive a single red cent and that the only reason they are going to get anything at all is because of Wantagate.

You can imagine how such ignorant and ungrateful emailed assertions go down in this office. How unpleasant can people be? They wait for 20 years for payments that they never stood any chance of receiving, and then they turn on the party who is responsible for making their payment possible, and accuse him of disseminating lies and disinformation. What kind of mental aberration is this?

PROVOST UPROAR SMOTHERS THE 'SATURDAY SCAM'
Amid the ignorant outrage with which our assertion that the Provost Marshal may have become a co-conspirator, few appeared to have noticed the nature of the unprecedented abomination and corruption surrounding the remittance by Citibank, in collusion with Morgan Stanley, between 3.00 and 4.00 am on Saturday 10th November, to a fictitious account at Morgan Stanley, for the purpose of stealing the funds and then diverting them from the fictitious account to a third US institution, believed to have been another very large commercial bank. As reported on 13th November, the stolen Wanta funds were restored to the criminal enterprise known as Citibank (which this Editor considers to have been ridiculous, because of course Citibank under Clinton buddie Robert Rubin immediately concocted further illegal impediments on Tuesday 13th November).

THE PARADOX OF THE PROVOST MARSHAL'S POSITION
The immediate consequence of all this was that bankers were immediately arrested at Citibank, while officials were likewise arrested at Morgan Stanley (and probably also at the third institution). Altogether, some 600 bankers and financial sector workers, plus corrupt American lawyers, were arrested between Sunday morning 11th November 2007, and late on Tuesday 13th November, we understand. These arrests make it clear that the Provost Marshal General has 'got the message', although as indicated, at the time of this posting, the Ambassador's funds had STILL not been remitted to his corporate securities account with Morgan Stanley, so that what we stated in the report dated 13th November still applies.

In other words, as is typical with the duplicitous double-mindedness of all Illuminati affairs:

On the one hand, the Provost Marshal General has been conducting audits, issuing orders left right and centre, and authorising and enforcing mass arrests in the financial sector as the clean-up operation proliferates, according to multiple sources and reports;

While on the other hand he remains in apparent dereliction of his duty because he has so far failed to procure the Wanta payment of $4.5 trillion in accordance with his oath as a commissioned officer and his obligations under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

As we state above, he had better hurry up.

RECENT EVENTS RECAPPED, AND IN MORE DETAIL
We now revisit the events of Saturday morning, given their unprecedented gravity and the SEC investigation of Morgan Stanley that is proceeding as a consequence thereof. Some parts of this information repeat and elaborate the intelligence conveyed in our report dated 13th November.

Between 3.00 and 4.00 a.m. on Saturday morning 10th November, Citibank remitted the $4.5 trillion belonging to Ambassador Lee Wanta that had been unlawfully withheld from him since June 2006, to Morgan Stanley, New York.

But instead of sending the funds to the securities account set up for the Ambassador's Commonwealth of Virginia corporation, AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., the funds were corruptly transferred to an account that had been specially set up to enable the funds to be stolen. The fictitious account had a name very similar, but not identical to, the name of the Ambassador's corporation. This is a gross, organised crime-style, underworld, Black deception and fraud.

CONSPIRACY OF THE CRIMINAL ENTERPRISES
Thus the criminal enterprise Citibank conspired with Morgan Stanley for the funds to be placed in a fictitious account – representing gross theft and, in the case of Morgan Stanley, grievous breaches of Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) regulations. The two institutions, which were caught red-handed perpetrating this fraud, face prospective RICO lawsuits resulting in massive payouts amounting to three times damages.

The SEC was reported on Sunday 11th November to be conducting an investigation. Where on earth has this supervisory organisation been all this time?

But it gets worse. Having been transferred into the fictitious account at Morgan Stanley, the funds were then re-routed to a third corrupt US institution, as summarised above. The third institution, too, was therefore exposed as a co-conspirator in a co-ordinated criminal operation to steal the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion funds for good.

PAULSON CAUGHT 'IN FLAGRANTE' AT CITIBANK
ON THE SATURDAY MORNING ON A HOLIDAY WEEKEND
Unfortunately for the Boards and senior officials at all the three institutions, the Provost Marshal General and his staff were alerted to this grotesque, unbelievable fraud. The Provost Marshal then appeared at the relevant offices of Citibank – where whom should he encounter but none other than the arch-criminal operative, Henry M. Paulson Jr., the US Treasury Secretary. Mr Paulson was actually at the bank when the Provost Marshal arrived.

As can be imagined, the Provost Marshal wanted to know exactly what the US Treasury Secretary, an official administrator of the Executive Branch, was doing in a commercial bank on a Saturday morning, on a holiday weekend. Without wasting time hearing the arch-criminal's explanations, Paulson was ordered to pack his bags and was informed that he would suffer the consequences, recalling the Provost Marshal's earlier warning that Paulson would spend the rest of his life in jail if he proceeded to interfere ONCE MORE in the settlement process.

Following that warning, Paulson took no notice and was caught interfering and impeding the Wanta Settlement payment (which triggers all the subsequent payments), at least five more times, the last recorded occasion being the operation to steal Wanta's $4.5 trillion outright at dead of night early on the holiday Saturday morning.

Paulson was identified as the ringleader who had orchestrated this latest abomination. Upon his arrival at the bank and obtaining confirmation that the funds had been diverted in the manner described in outline above, the Provost Marshal immediately ordered the arrests of banking staff and possibly Directors at Citibank and the third corrupt institution, and of securities house officials at Morgan Stanley.

PAULSON 'GIVEN SEVEN DAYS TO RESIGN'
It was subsequently made known to us that Paulson had been given seven days in which to resign his post, or else he would be arrested – which of course is what should have happened at the very outset. When the Provost Marshal failed to carry out his threat to arrest Paulson after he interfered for the first time following the Provost Marshal's explicit warning (see previous recent reports), he made a serious mistake – having failed, perhaps, to comprehend that these people understand no language other than whatever hurts them personally (having their accounts frozen, the backs of their legs whipped, as in the case of Cheney earlier, or being handcuffed and shovelled into a black law enforcement vehicle under the glare of the TV cameras.

And that, by the way, is what the Provost Marshal should be doing: he should summon the big networks to be present to televise his key arrests, so that the whole world (including the madman kleptomaniac in the White House) wakes up to the realisation of who is in charge.

By approximately 1.50 p.m. on Saturday 10th November, the $4.5 trillion belonging to Ambassador Wanta had been restored to Citibank. We found this rather odd, to put it mildly, but it appears that, by now, following the further arrests at that institution, Citibank was considered to be marginally safer than Morgan Stanley.

IDIOTIC AND IGNORANT 'FINANCIAL TIMES' REPORTS
The events described above represent the worst known case of bank and securities house fraud in the sordid history of modern financial affairs. Yet The Financial Times of 12th November, having absolutely no clue either due to its arrogant assumption that it is the sole reliable clearing house for financial information, or else on purpose, carried a front page report entitled 'New Citi chief to get free hand on strategy', which discussed the options facing Robert Rubin, the chairman of the criminal enterprise pro tempore, who took over from Charles O. Prince III in an earlier Boardroom coup triggered exclusively by the Wantagate fraud exposures and by our characterisation of Citibank as a criminal enterprise, which is exactly what it is. And of course Robert Rubin will have necessarily been implicated in the 'Saturday scam', as were ALL the Citibank Directors.

LEADING UK NEWSPAPER GROSSLY OUT OF TOUCH
Indicative of how out of touch with reality this supposedly leading financial newspaper is, the same front page carried a trailer lauding the benefits of derivatives, reading as follows:

'Bankers eye Derivatives: Bankers are increasingly using derivatives to exploit the contrasting outlook for commercial property in the US and UK in another powerful sign of the potential of this fast-growing market'. Excuse us???? We always thought that the Financial Times' complacency and twisted ideology made much of its coverage unreadable. But we really had no idea that it was quite so out of touch with what is going on, as it has now shown itself to be.

PAULSON'S AFRICAN VISIT: WILL HE FLEE TO ISRAEL?
On 9th November, the US Treasury's Internal Affairs people issued a statement to the effect that Paulson would travel to Tanzania, South Africa and Ghana between 13th and 19th November for meetings with G-20 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors, and for other time-wasting gatherings. He would be meeting local community leaders, would visit a mosquito net factory in Tanzania, and would be touring the Khayelitsha Cookie Company in Cape Town before flying to Accra, Ghana prior to his return to the United States.

It is possible that the seven days' grace that the Provost Marshal gave him before he must resign ('according to the Provost Marshal') may reflect the fact that it was now too late to cancel Paulson's appearances in Africa. However such tours are typically undertaken by a US Under-Secretary. The alternative explanation for this bizarre situation is that Paulson gets away from the Provost Marshal for a week or so, and is afforded opportunities to find foreign bolt-holes for stolen money.

Either way, the US Treasury Secretary is effectively 'on the run' and, unless he is carrying the grey screen that he probably obtained from his corrupt superior, George W. Bush Jr., he may well find it problematical to perpetrate further frauds while enjoying the African scenery and touring cookie and mosquito net factories. It's all most bizarre.

The Editor speculates that Paulson might defect while in transit at a South African airport, to the offices of El Al, from where he would hope to be flown to Israel. However this is speculation, and in accordance with our rule, it is specifically labelled here as such.

4000 PARTIES AND INDIVIDUALS TARGETED FOR INVESTIGATION
On Monday 12th November, we received multiple confirmations that arrests of bankers ordered by the Provost Marshal General took place on Sunday morning, and proceeded all day on Monday. As stated in the update appended at 10.00 pm New York time to the report dated 11th November, the Provost Marshal's criminal investigation experts have compiled a list of at least 4,000 parties and individuals who are targeted for investigation and interrogation, on top of the 3,000+ bankers and others known to have been hauled off to holding centres, and then flown to European centres for arraignment before Magistrates and the full application of the law.

They have been exported to European cities – of which London and Frankfurt are known to be two of them – because the massive financial frauds they have committed were perpetrated there. As indicated, the US technique, masterminded by George Bush Sr. and Dr Alan Greenspan, has been to export the criminal operations, as a precaution against entanglement with US law enforcement and the ponderous US legal system.

The scale of the arrests reported to us as having taken place on Monday 12th November alone, was very large. Among those arrested on the Monday were people who had been involved in the illegal transfer of Ambassador Wanta's funds as described above, in the early morning of 10th November.

PROVOST MARSHAL IS SUPPOSEDLY BEING AS 'TOUGH' AS HE CAN BE. UNLESS THIS IS ALL ANOTHER 'SHADOW INTEL' DECEPTION.
Reports confirm that, notwithstanding his apparent dereliction of duty in failing so far to procure the remittance of the Ambassador's funds in accordance with his UCMJ obligations, the Provost Marshal General, Brigadier General Rodney L. Johnson, Commanding General United States Army Criminal Investigation Command, is nevertheless (see above) purporting to be extremely tough and is proceeding as fast as he and his expert Marine and other criminal investigators can, given that the overall investigation is expanding by the hour and is now by far the biggest and most wide-ranging criminal investigation in world history.

For we can disclose that the Provost Marshal's staff have identified staggering amounts of money that has been stolen, and hidden in foreign bank accounts – the lowest aggregate we are hearing being described as 'hundreds of trillions of dollars'.

THE CURRENT OR RECENT EXCUSE FOR THE DELAYS
MULTIPLE TRILLIONS OF DOLLARS STOLEN AND HIDDEN IN SECRET BANK ACCOUNTS
The delays supposedly (unless they represent 'shadow intel ops') reflect the fact that the Provost Marshal's sworn investigators have been conducting audits at financial institutions all over New York and, we presume, other key US money centers.

These audits have revealed that the colossal sums (in the multiple trillions) have been alienated, stolen and hidden in secret bank accounts all over the world. Detailed proof and documentation confirming these massive orchestrated US financial frauds have been obtained, and very large numbers of banks and securities people can undoubtedly expect to spend the rest of their lives contemplating natural history of the American cockroach in the horrendous American GULAG – to which the organised crime controllers condemned Ambassador Wanta on the basis of that trumped-up, illegal Wisconsin State civil tax assessment of $14,129, that Wanta had paid twice under protest in May and then in June 1992, both of which payments were stolen and misallocated.

The Editor paid the same amount the third time on 21st July 2005, as a consequence of which the Ambassador was finally granted an Absolute Discharge from his wholly unlawful probation, by the Wisconsin Department of Corrections from 14th November 2005 (whereas otherwise Mr Wanta would have been held on probation until 28th November 2010).

RE-READ OUR 'WISCONSINGATE' POSTING DATED 6TH AUGUST.

'SPECIAL FORCES' CALLED UP FOR STATESIDE OPERATIONS
During the week ending 9th November, a significant number of US 'special forces' were called up for an unspecified mission described to us only as being 'stateside'. It appears, therefore, that the hundreds of Marines and US Army Criminal Investigation Command experts have been augmented by 'special forces' operatives whose tasks include making arrests and ensuring the physical safety of personnel in the event of any 'problems arising'.

The Provost Marshal is also reported to have his experts/auditors posted in the institutions, in force, checking transactions, watching for fraud in real time, and supervising the audits and the gathering of incriminating documentation which will seal the fate of the criminal financial sector perpetrators of these abominations, including the latest diversion of the Ambassador's funds.

MARTIAL LAW SO FAR LIMITED TO THE FINANCIAL SECTOR
Concerning the Martial Law outlook, the reality as matters stand, we are authoritatively advised, is that the United States is now de facto under Martial Law, since the Provost Marshal General is the Commander-in-Chief in the place of President George W. Bush Jr., who is now powerless to stop the inevitable progress of this biggest criminal investigation in history.

Our informed sources say that Martial Law is still being, and will probably remain confined to, the banking and overall financial sector – although it surely has to be extended to the US Executive, Legislative and Judicial Branches of Government, given that the highest office-holders are up to their necks in facilitating and orchestrating these massive ongoing financial frauds. A substantial number of US legislators have been 'on the take' for years.

BASEL II FINAL RULES PUBLISHED
The Federal Reserve Board have sent the Editor of this service a copy of the 404-page book giving details of the Basel II Final Rules, agreed at the Federal Reserve Board Open Board Meeting on 2nd November 2007, at 10 am EDT.

This confirms, finally, that the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Treasury; the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; and the Office of Thrift Supervision, of the Treasury, are collectively adopting the new risk-based capital adequacy framework that requires some and permits other qualifying banks to employ an internal ratings-based approach to calculate regulatory credit risk capital requirements, plus advanced measurement approaches to calculate regulatory operational risk capital requirements. The final rule describes the qualifying criteria for banks that are required or are seeking to operate under the new framework, and the applicable risk-based capital requirements for banks operating under the framework. THE TIMING OF THE PUBLICATION OF THIS DOCUMENT IS HIGHLY SIGNIFICANT IN THE WANTAGATE CONTEXT. HOWEVER, EQUALLY SIGNIFICANTLY, THE TEXT READS:

DATES: The final rule is effective [INSERT DATE] and NO DATE IS INSERTED.

It is the height of irony that the Federal Reserve, which has massive hidden derivatives liabilities of probably by now around $1,400 trillion, is issuing these Basel II Final Rules, when its own perverse and permissive behaviour within the closed central banking system has consistently flouted all the known rules of banking and financial sector prudence. No doubt the appearance of this document at this stage may originally have been timed TO PROVIDE YET ANOTHER TWO-FACED PRETEXT FOR DELAYING SETTLEMENT: or that may have well have been an intention.

If so, that rationale is redundant now.

CRITICISM OF FAILURE TO ARREST THE GIGA-CRIMINALS
The failure to date of the Provost Marshal so far to arrest (preferably in front of the TV cameras) the biggest financial fraudster scamming crooks of all, is the subject of rumblings of severe discontent all over the United States, if the mass of Wantagate emails on this and related subjects that we and others are receiving, is any guide.

We understand that the top criminals' secret and other bank accounts may have been or are being frozen, but that the criminal fraudsters will be 'allowed' to serve out their terms, as though nothing ever happened, provided they cease all interference (this is certainly the case with Cheney).

They have of course been blackmailing the Provost Marshal by trading their powerful positions – and the global financial market, economic and geopolitical consequences if they were now to be removed from office – for 'immunity' or clemency.

Whether this cynical formula will deliver the necessary outcome, remains to be seen.

YET EVEN SO, THE PROVOST MARSHAL CANNOT ESCAPE FROM FULFILLING HIS DUTIES
And notwithstanding all of the above, the Provost Marshal General cannot himself escape the consequences of the objective fact that he has so far failed to procure the Wanta payment – even though we of course acknowledge that he may be TRYING to do so. He may assume that while he is seen to be ATTEMPTING to procure the payment, he cannot be touched.

But that may depend upon HOW LONG these alleged attempts take. He has had several weeks on the job already, which seems excessive and is the source of continued extreme anger among the 160 representatives of foreign powers, who are STILL waiting to be paid, at their New York area hotels and diplomatic premises.

'THIS IS THE MOST DANGEROUS TIME I HAVE EVER SEEN'
An associate of one of our informants, who has been in limited contact with George Bush Jr., told us on 11th November, that he had told an intermediary that 'this is the most dangerous time I have ever seen'. This source states that our reports over the past three weeks have been accurate, not least given that certain information that we published had been given to the informant two days before we published it. French intelligence have likewise confirmed the accuracy of our reports, as has one high-level

US intelligence source and a very senior US civil servant.

craig-oxley - July 30, 2010 03:49 PM (GMT)

In summary, the biggest nexus of financial scams in history was designed and orchestrated by the following two arch-criminals:

•
Former President George Herbert Walker Bush (Scherf(f) Sr.

Dr Alan Greenspan, former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

‘FOOLPROOF’ SCAMMING MODEL NO LONGER FOOLPROOF
Between them, these crooks designed what they thought was a foolproof, layered, convoluted fraud machine, which would enable them to steal in perpetuity, and to arrange, for instance, for stolen Federal Reserve Notes and US Treasury paper to be redeemable at full face value by co-conspirators abroad. By channelling contracts to buddies throughout the banking system in the United States and elsewhere, and bribing anyone who may have been thought likely to stand in their way, they contrived what they imagined to be the prefect perpetual scamming machine – yielding colossal amounts of fraudulently procured untaxed fiat money held off-balance sheet in offshore bank accounts around the world.

As explained above, by layering the financing arrangements, Greenspan procured that no payouts could ever take place (as they assumed) because the complexity of the linked transaction system was so immense, that they could always arrange for any one of the links to be sabotaged, thereby ensuring that payouts were aborted. They believed that this model was foolproof in perpetuity.

‘STING’ MECHANISMS BUILT INTO THE MODEL
To provide added security, George Bush Sr. – described when aged 14 by Nicholas Tesla as ‘evil, devious and curious as a monkey’ (see the report dated 11th November) – devised various ‘sting’ mechanisms which detonated whenever there was any danger of a real payout taking place, and enabled the banksters and their political/associates to steal the funds instead.

THEY NEVER HAD ANY INTENTION OF FULFILLING OBLIGATIONS
What is confirmed beyond any doubt, now that the colossal scale of these frauds is being exposed, is that George H. W. Bush Sr. and Greenspan never had any intention of ever fulfilling ANY of their financial obligations – with the exception of bribery transactions and payments to themselves and their cronies. While the octogenarian crook Greenspan was in jail in June and early July, one of his secretaries continued making transactional telephone calls on his behalf.

ARCH-CRIMINAL GREENSPAN'S IMF PER JACOBSEN LECTURE
Having attempted to steal at least $3.0 trillion (some sources says that the figure is as high as $8 trillion), Greenspan was incongruously afforded the highest honour during the IMF/World Bank meetings October, where he gave the Per Jacobsen Lecture before an 'invitation only' audience.

Per Jacobsen was a respected early Managing Director of the IMF. He would be turning in his grave if he kew that the worst financial criminal in history had lectured in his name.

Making his way past two lines of heavily armed DC police and special forces operatives, who were ranged all the way from the IMF 1 building on Pennsylvania Avenue, to the International Finance Corporation, the Editor wondered why on earth such security was being provided for Greenspan, when Finance Ministers were coming and going in the IMF/World Bank area without any obvious protection at all. None of the Finance Ministers needed such heightened security.

Of course the obvious reason was that since this criminal had defrauded such a vast constituency of victims, there must have been every prospect that he could have been attacked or even shot en route to deliver his wretched lecture.

But most depressingly of all, large numbers of bankers, Finance Ministers and other 'distinguished persons' flocked like stupid lemmings to the IFC auditorium to listen to the words of wisdom falling from the lips of this duplicitous, two-faced arch-criminal who, working hand-in-glove with the 'evil, devious' Bush Sr., has been scamming the United States and foreign victims rigid for decades.

The Editor caught a glimpse of this now very unpleasant-looking old man, and it was not a pretty sight. His face is that of a thoroughly twisted, odious human being who has spent years of his life defrauding others – and getting away with it.

The Provost Marshal has no choice but to ensure that the likes of Greenspan and Paulson receive their appropriate rewards. In this connection, Greenspan's age is irrelevant.

IMPLICATIONS OF THE IN-YOUR-FACE 'SATURDAY SCAM'
As for the attempted fraudulent diversion of the Ambassador's $4.5 trillion from Citibank early on Saturday morning 10th November, to a specially opened fictitious account with a name very similar, but not identical to, that of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., this represents a terrible fraud so blatant and disreputable as to have the potential for the irretrievable destruction of the reputations of both these institutions (or rather, criminal enterprises).

The fact that they were caught in flagrante, and that Paulson was found incongruously directing this fraud, reveals to what unspeakable depths of ongoing financial criminal depravity the United States has fallen since George Bush Sr. was appointed Vice President.

Tesla's observation was correct.

THE UNPLEASANTNESS WE HAVE ALL HAD TO ENDURE
When we think back to the hell we have gone through publishing these reports in good faith for 18 months, while the highest-level UScriminals nevertheless carried on perpetrating their colossal financial scams in the face of our exposures, the natural sensation is one of extreme bitterness.

Such a vast amount of time has had to be devoted to publishing these reports in order to get to this point – and the 'mainstream' media still have appear to have absolutely no clue about what has been happening in the background, while they have been focusing instead on the antics of Prince Harry or stupid, empty-headed drug-taking 'celebrities'.

But who are we to complain?

After all, the Ambassador lost eight years of his life being assaulted in prison while trying to get to the prison library for some peace and quiet, not knowing how long he would be left to languish in jail for trumped-up felonies that he never committed, and wondering how it would all end – while fighting the corrupt Wisconsin judicial authorities who were covering up for a corrupt Governor (Tommy Thompson) with knowledge of the removal of the 18 high-value US Treasury instruments that have been stolen from hWanta's diplomatic briefcase; and when placed under illegal house arrest and probation, the Ambassador had to continue fighting these forces, including batting off constant demands for tax that he had paid twice already back in 1992.

For his part, Michael C. Cottrell, M.S. has had to put up with innumerable lies and deceptions, constant attacks on his computers and software perpetrated daily by NSA and organised crime geeks in Chicago (who have been doing the same to the Ambassador's communications, as well), and the arrogance of innumerable parties who thought they knew better than this supremely qualified securities expert, and some of whom stole both his techniques and his business. Numerous attempts have been made to subvert and corrupt Mr Cottrell, without success.

THE TABLES HAVE BEEN DECISIVELY TURNED
But as a consequence of Wantagate, the tables have been turned, and the entire edifice of corrupt off-the-books layered and interlinked financial transactions is shredding. And this time, the system of justice that the perpetrators of these serial financial frauds will be facing in the United States will be the law dispensed in US military courts, rather than the notoriously corrupt US judiciary. As for bankers flown out to face the music in Britain and Germany, for instance, they can expect both fair trials and the appropriately harsh sentences associated with the anti-terrorism legislation which was originally installed in order to protect the financial criminals themselves from exposure.

AMERICANS WILL NOT BE SATISFIED WITH ANY FUDGE
The American people, whom the Editor knows very well, already stirred up by what has had to be disseminated via these Wantagate reports because of the bovine, evil intransigence of the US perpetrators, will demand that the arch-criminals who have been orchestrating and participating in these that they deserve.

Treating people like Henry M. Paulson Jr. with courtesy and giving him further chances, is asking for trouble, as such criminals simply take advantage of the situation: that's their crude mentality – although we have to admit that, emboldened by the fact that he had not been arrested when the Provost Marshal said he would be, Paulson did what all these people do: he just went too far and decisively incriminated himself beyond any possible future doubt.

That is what the Nazis did. They went too far. They didn't know when to stop. In which connection, Ambassador Wanta informs the Editor that 'they can't stop committing fraud. If they stopped, they would consider that they had been defeated'.

Besides, they never, ever, believed that they would be found out, and impeded.

The financial crimes have been continuing for so long that they regarded their aberrant behaviour as perfectly normal.

They could not conceive that the tables would ever be turned on them. Now many of them will have long years in jail to figure out what on earth went wrong.

Note:
(1) The Ambassador has asked the Editor henceforth in these reports and in our publications to refer to him by his birth-name, which is Lee Emil Wanta, and no longer by his intelligence name of Leo. The reason for this adjustment will be made public at the appropriate time. Some people have asked us whether Leo and Lee Wanta are one and the same person. That shows just how paranoid Americans have become, which is not surprising given that they have been systematically lied to by their criminal Governments for decades.

We now repeat, yet again, our familiar summary of the Statutes, securities regulations and fraud information that we have appended to these reports for many months. The reason we append this information is to remind everyone of their clear responsibilities under the US Misprision of Felony legislation, and of course to provide a legal basis for these reports.

•

OUR CONSTANT REPETITION OF THIS INFORMATION IS EVIDENTLY STILL NECESSARY.

LEGAL RECAPITULATION FROM OUR REPORT DATED 30TH AUGUST 2007: Reiteration of the fraudulent transactions involving Bank of New York Mellon – a bank so arrogant and conspicuously indifferent both to its tarnished reputation and to its grotesque breaches of US law and of N.A.S.D./S.E.C. Regulations, that it now takes first prize in the crowded competition for the title of 'Most arrogant and corrupt financial institution in America'. At least, this was the case until the perpetration of the 'Saturday scam' described above and on 13th November:

Step 1: Fraud in the Inducement: "… is intended to and which does cause one to execute an instrument, or make an agreement… The misrepresentation involved does not mislead one as the paper he signs but rather misleads as to the true facts of a situation, and the false impression it causes is a basis of a decision to sign or render a judgment" Source: Steven H. Step 3: Theft by Deception and Fraudulent Conveyance:

THEFT BY DECEPTION:

"FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT… The hiding or suppression of a material fact or circumstance which the party is legally or morally bound to disclose…".

•
"The test of whether failure to disclose material facts constitutes fraud is the existence of a duty, legal or equitable, arising from the relation of the parties: failure to disclose a material fact with intent to mislead or defraud under such circumstances being equivalent to an actual 'fraudulent concealment'…".

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER CAUGHT UP IN WANTA THEFT SCANDAL

21 OTHER OFFICIALS, BANKERS FACE ICJ ARREST WARRANTS

12 ARE SENIOR U.S. PUBLIC OFFICIALS, INCLUDING CHERTOFF

ROBERT GATES MENTIONS PREPARING FOR WAR WITH RUSSIA, CHINA

GERMAN AUTHORITIES REISSUE INTERNATIONAL ARREST WARRANTS
The state office of Mme Angela Merkel, the German Chancellor, has authorised the reissuance of warrants issued last December by the 'ad hoc Tribunal' of three European Justices in Germany in accordance with the subpoena of the International Court of Justice, for named financial operatives holding high office in Britain, the United States and Germany itself, as well as named central and commercial bankers, to be arrested. Twelve senior US public officials are included on the list of 22 people for whom such warrants are being despatched.

Last December, the US Treasury Secretary, Henry M. Paulson Jr., was arrested on such a warrant after he had been specifically warned not to divert funds illegally but proceeded to do just that, while on German soil. He languished under police custody until 'exfiltrated' by British operatives. Subsequently he has been surveilled continually by British agents allegedly working for Tim Spicer's Sandline operation, which has a contract believed to be worth $350 million with the Pentagon, which cannot trust American agents to carry out its instructions.

U.S. JURISDICTION GIVEN BY SUPREMES TO ICJ WARRANTS
Two US Supreme Court Justices and one retired US Supreme Court Justice, who travelled to Germany immediately following our report posted here at www.worldreports.org on 2nd February 2007, have conveyed US legal power to the Justices of the 'ad hoc' Tribunal, for the named perpetrators of massive ongoing financial crimes to be arrested on US soil, as well as elsewhere.

Thus the familiar argument that the writ of the International Court of Justice does not run in the United States has been overturned for the purposes of this widening criminal investigation.

As indicated, it is now understood that 22 individuals were crowding under the 'immunity umbrella' which WAS strictly conditional upon the Wanta Settlement payment of $4.5 trillion being lodged in the securities account of Ambassador Leo Wanta's Commonwealth of Virginia-based AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. with Morgan Stanley, New York City. However the immunity pardons have now lapsed. This is because unless the $4.5 trillion had been paid to AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., BY CLOSE OF BUSINESS EASTERN STANDARD TIME ON 9TH FEBRUARY, the ICJ immunity from arrest sought by the 22 criminal financial operatives WOULD BE NULL AND VOID.

The $4.5 trillion was not remitted, so the immunity documents have lapsed.

Twelve of the 22 operatives facing ICJ warrants are senior US public officials. Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. have informed the Principals that these officials are unconcerned about the ICJ warrants, even though they are now strengthened with jurisdiction within the United States – because they believe that President Bush Jr. will pardon them at the end of his term.

But this consideration does not apply to the Prime Minister of Britain, Tony Blair, and to Angela Merkel, the German Chancellor herself – both of whom are now vulnerable to arrest for conspiracy to commit financial crimes in the Wanta Settlement context. This means that the crisis has split the West and that three Western Great Powers are now at each others' throats, while Robert Gates [see below] is warning Congress to prepare for war with Russia and China.

That in turn may be because it appears that the US criminal operatives have stolen trillions from the Chinese, in fulfilment of George H. W. Bush Sr.'s well-known long-range plan for stealing back the 'Morgenthau money' held for decades by Chinese interests.

To underscore how ruthless these US criminals are prepared to get, the 'eavesdroppers' who listen in to all our telephone calls threatened Ambassador Wanta's life on 9th February. After a conversation with Michael Cottrell, one of these mafia-style operatives informed the Ambassador that he did not 'understand his existence'.

MERKEL NEEDS THE WANTA SETTLEMENT FOR HER OWN IMMUNITY
At a minimum, the stage is therefore now set for the actual arrests of top politicians and high officials in both Europe and the United States, even though, quite astonishingly, one of the highest-level figures named in the warrants is Angela Merkel herself. For, in the mad Alice-in-Wonderland hell that we are having to describe, Merkel needs the Wanta Settlement to be paid, in order for her own immunity from criminal prosecution for alleged financial corruption to take effect!

The actual texts of this immunity have been in the hands of all 22 named operatives who were subject of the ICJ 'ad hoc' Tribunal's reactivating warrants which, as noted above, will now be operationally 'live' in the United States in the context of the fact that the ICJ's immunity documents have all lapsed. This reflects the fact that the Wanta Settlement payment was not made by close of business on Wall Street on 9th February, as stipulated in the draft immunity agreements.

MERKEL, BLAIR, CHENEY, PAULSON NAMED IN ICJ WARRANTS
In response to questions concerning the identities of the operatives named in the warrants, we are able to confirm the sensational news that in addition to Mme Angela Merkel, Richard Cheney, and the disgraced Henry M. Paulson Jr., Tony Blair, the British Prime Minister, is, as indicated above, among the 22 operatives for whom an arrest warrant is being issued and activated by the 'ad hoc' Tribunal in response to the instructions of the German Chancellor's office and the underlying ICJ subpoenas. You may laugh at this madness, but this is where matters stand this weekend.

Therefore, it is now entirely possible that the British Prime Minister may be arrested for conspiracy to commit international financial crimes, along with central and commercial bankers and prominent US officials, in addition to those already identified.

It is clear to all with a ring-side seat observing the spectacle of the greatest treason ever perpetrated by US office holders against the American people, that the arch Magus of this criminality is Richard Cheney, the Vice President of the United States. It is further evident to all concerned that his attitude towards the catastrophe that he is orchestrating is one of supreme arrogance and total indifference to the worldwide tensions his behaviour is generating

However, as was the case with Mr Paulson, great pride comes before a great fall.

BIZARRE TWIST IN WORST CRISIS SINCE WORLD WAR II
For the German Chancellor, herself a target of one of the activated ICJ-'ad hoc' Tribunal warrants, to be facing a situation in which her own Government has had to authorise the activation of the warrants in order to procure the German Chancellor's own immunity from ICJ prosecution for financial crimes, is probably the most bizarre twist in this ever more dangerous cascade towards monetary meltdown, which represents a lurch towards the unknown with the potential even for unleashing unfettered intergovernmental violence.

It is certainly no coincidence that the US Secretary of Defense has suddenly started talking of World War, and that the Russians have pointedly, in the same week, announced a sizeable rearmament programme.

The inclusion of Tony Blair on the list of criminal operatives for whom an ICJ arrest warrant has been issued, is of course no surprise to British observers of this man's behaviour over the years.

DIARY OF EVENTS: 01-09 FEBRUARY 2007
We resume and recap herewith our Diary presentation, which will enable you to understand what has been going on in the foregoing sensational context:

01 February 2007: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., advise that US Treasury compliance officers are extremely disconcerted that the payment of $4.5 trillion long overdue (by eight months now) will be withheld over the coming weekend, commenting that the financial criminals are at loggerheads among themselves.

01 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., disclose that the Chinese are split internally, given that it would appear that one or more of the Elders have been co-opted by the renegade US Treasury Secretary, Henry M. Paulson, and others, and may have taken bridge loan payment(s). At the same time, the relevant Chinese sources comment to the associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc, that Americans should examine and remove the motes in their own eyes, before rushing to accuse foreigners of corruption.

The precise aphorism used by the Chinese was: 'Look in your own house: evil comes from within'.

01 February: AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc, advises associates that European bankers would be well advised to short the US dollar so that any profits that the US financial criminal operatives hoped to gain from this latest theft would be nullified.

01 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. disclose that huge volumes of US dollars have been conveyed to the Bank of England for manipulation by a 'back-room operation' that functions on a 24/7 basis issuing short-term loans to large businesses at interest rates starting at a minimum of quote unquote "25% and up"…

… resulting in the transfer of trillions thus money-laundered and brought back to the United States for deposit, not least into US Treasury accounts.

02 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. inform Ambassador Leo Wanta and Michael C. Cottrell, M.S. that European Central Bankers are aware of the "US Treasury-Bank of England operation" and have already begun to short the US dollar [as of 31st January 2007].

02 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. advise that the US Treasury has limited Secretary Paulson's authority over Treasury operations and that Mr Robert M. Kimmitt, the Deputy US Treasury Secretary, has been specifically given control over all Treasury financial transactions.

The Principals are also advised that the US Treasury is attempting to manipulate the US monetary system to support the US dollar on the foreign exchange markets and to fill as many gaping "holes" as possible prior to belated release of the $4.5 trillion of stolen/diverted funds to the Morgan Stanley securities account of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. This is of course merely a confirmation of what became apparent many months ago.

One of many purposes all along has been to generate 'fiat funny money' so that some of the victims of the CIA's OMEGA OPS Ponzi Scheme scams in the United States are finally paid out, thereby cauterising the seething discontent among the army of the 'broken hearted' which appears at times to indicate that if these scams continue, there could be a revolutionary domestic explosion.

02 February: Investigators inform AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., that the CIA and the Department of Homeland Security will force the issue of the overdue payment of $4.5 trillion being made to AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. Such assurances of course have no meaning in the context of the endless lies and deceit that has characterised this crisis.

•

03 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. advise that US Treasury Compliance has been the conduit for the dispersion of colossal volumes of US dollars to the European Union/Bank of England in the context of the persistent demand by the International Court of Justice (ICJ) that the US Treasury is required to 'fix its problems' and pay the $4.5 trillion to Ambassador Leo Emil Wanta/AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc, or face the consequences (see above)…

… and that the US Treasury and Paulson (even though he has lost his authority) are using the US dollars belonging to the Chinese, to resolve the situation.

03 February: H.R. 2778 is to be approved by the US House of Representatives on Monday the 5th February, when it will thus be ready to be signed. Under this Bill, the entire Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve is to be discharged, the Federal Reserve is to be abolished as a legislated authority empowered to issue currency on behalf of the US Treasury, and all Federal Reserve Banks and offices in the United States and around the world are to be closed. This will have the consequence that the US Treasury will again perform the functions of the United States' Central Bank, reverting to the situation prior to the 1951 accord between the US Treasury and the Federal Reserve, which has hidden derivatives liabilities estimated at around $1,100 trillion. That explains why it is to be closed down.

05 February: Vice President Richard Cheney is identified as having been orchestrating illegal financial transactions using unlawful dollars associated with illegal trades, even though he has signed a pre-immunity document in which he has thereby recognised the authority in this matter exercised by the International Court of Justice. We repeat: by signing this pre-immunity document, Mr Cheney accordingly recognised the ICJ's jurisdiction in connection with this international financial corruption crisis. Thus there are now TWO strands of legality which require absolute compliance by the orchestrator of these criminal financial operations, Mr Cheney: First, his signature on the ICJ's pre-immunity document; and secondly, the explicit extension of US jurisdiction to the ICJ's 'ad hoc' Tribunal by the US Supreme Court Justices referred to above.

03 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. inform the Principals that as a direct consequence of our report dated 2nd February 2007 ['CHENEY BRIBES OFFICIALS TO ABORT WANTA PAYMENT'], a formal investigation has been initiated by Mr Hammond of the International Court of Justice. He was the ICJ official who issued the original ICJ subpoenas to Messrs Paulson, Cheney and one other US operative, and who further wrote the immunity documents which were to have been activated at the Wanta Settlement, and which were to apply to 19 further individuals worldwide, INCLUDING NO LESS THAN 12 PUBLIC PERSONS IN THE UNITED STATES.

As stated above, the named perpetrators whose immunity documents were to have taken effect when the $4.5 trillion had been transferred into the Securities Account of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. with Morgan Stanley, New York, include the British Prime Minister, Tony Blair, central banking officials, and the German Chancellor, Angela Merkel herself.

03 February: US Treasury Compliance advises that payment of the $4.5 trillion will be made to AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. by the following Tuesday (6th February), in the context of the President signing H.R. 2778. The Principals are further advised by the same sources that US banks are now funnelling massive volumes of US dollars through Paulson (even though his authority has been removed from him) to facilitate payment to AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. via the aforementioned "Bank of England operation". There is also talk from the same sources that the Bush Administration is concerned that AmeriTrust "will be paid too soon" since the Administration is still not ready to accept the immediate $1.575 trillion tax payment on the books. This is pure eyewash, since the tax payable is to reside in an AmeriTrust tax account, to which the Treasury will have access and from which it will be able to draw down at any time. It will thus be able to perform whatever cosmetic adjustments it may wish to arrange with the Office of Management and Budget, without reference to AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. As matters stand, the 2008 Federal Budget documentation already clearly accommodates the Wanta windfall payment in Table 16-2, 'Federal Government Financing and Debt' on page 225 of its latest 'Analytical Perspectives' compendium, since the 'unified budget balance', stated as $248.2 billion and $244.2 billion for FY 2006 and FY 2007 respectively, has been massaged down to a projected surplus of $61.0 billion by FY2012.

The 'line' that the Administration has not made provision for the initial $1.575 trillion tax payment can therefore accurately be described as BS.

NOTE: The section on the Government-Sponsored Enterprises in the Federal Budget 'Analytical Perspectives' for FY2008 shows BLANK DATA TABLES (again) for the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac) and the Federal Home Loan Bank System (FHLBanks), as was the case for the FY2007 edition.

This therefore confirms that there are gigantic BLACK HOLES in the accounts of the three largest Government-Sponsored Enterprises, as we reported in the summer of 2006. The BLANK Tables in question each have the following rubric shown in 5-point type beneath them:

'Note: Consistent with Government-wide practice for GSEs, information for 2007 and 2008 was not required to be collected'. Inconsistently, however, data for 2007 and 2008 is shown for other GSE's in the same document, namely the Farm Credit System and the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation (Farmer Mac). Odd, isn't it?

03 February: Foreign associates of the Principals advise that Vice President Richard Cheney is deeply involved in a criminal scam to gather colossal volumes of US dollars for placement in high-yield "offshore programs" that will "buy high and sell short", thus inducing "losses" that are then passed to the 'investors' (including US banks) for use as tax write-offs.

This, in outline, is how this scam works:

Invest $100 million into the program, obtaining for instance a "return" of $92 million, creating a "loss" for tax write-off purposes of $8.0 million. The "loss" is then divided among the participants of the fraud, such as Vice President Cheney, bankers, Prime Minister Blair et al. Thus the Vice President of the United States was said to be actively engaged in transactions designed to defraud the Internal Revenue Service.

03 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. inform the two Principals that former US Supreme Court Justice Sandra O'Connor and current US Supreme Court Justice Bader-Ginsburg are in Frankfurt, Germany, where they are engaged in monitoring and perfecting the international legal arrangements for the Wanta Settlement. The same sources advise that a third US Supreme Court Justice is monitoring developments in the United States. As indicated above, the US Supreme Court Justices have explicitly extended US jurisdiction to the warrants issued by the 'ad hoc' Tribunal of three Judges implementing the orders of the International Court of Justice.

03 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. further advise that President George W. Bush Jr., is understood to be 'extremely upset' with Vice President Cheney given the Vice President's personal involvement in the aforementioned fraudulent scheme, and is reportedly seeking to instigate punitive action against Cheney. We merely report what has been stated.

05 February; Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. advise that two separate sources have reported that "high profile Federal Reserve Bankers have been detained while trying to cross the border into Mexico". One source sent a communication to Senator Dodd (D-CT), and was promptly telephoned by an FBI agent and advised to cease activity relating to the border incident. It may emerge that the high-profile Federal Reserve bankers concerned are engaged in drug money laundering, as the Fed is known to be a drug money-infested operation.

06 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. inform US Treasury Compliance officials that the Deputy Secretary of the US Treasury, Robert M. Kimmitt (who, as indicated above, is in full control of the Treasury, despite Paulson's public 'appearances' to the contrary), had told them that the "Wanta/AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc." payment is "coming down the line". Naturally such official assurances, given the record, have no meaning, since the Treasury's word has long since been demonstrated to be worthless, along with the "Full Faith and Credit of the United States".

06 February: Investigators inform AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. that the US Department of Defense was "paid out on Friday, 2nd February" and that the "Wanta payment" will definitely take place this week. See above.

06 February: Known participants in the CIA's vicious OMEGA OPS Ponzi Scheme scams, whereby American families, trusts etc, are financially raped, and which are orchestrated inter alia out of Las Vegas, telephone Michael C. Cottrell, M.S., the Executive Vice President and Treasurer of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., to 'ask his advice' and to seek his participation in the issuance of corporate Promissory Notes for projects in the State of Israel with respect to oil assets offshore Tel Aviv. Mr Cottrell advises these OMEGA OPS. scamsters that without a bona fide bank underwriter, such "bonds" would be fraudulent and not issuable on the US Depository Trust Corporation, and that he will have nothing to do with such fraudulent schemes.

06 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. are now propositioned with extremely "enticing" offers, worth huge amounts of fiat money, to leave the "Wanta-AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc operation" for secure and grossly lucrative job offers with criminal financial operations involving the "Bush-Clinton Box Gang". These attempted bribes were declined.

06 February: Investigators advise that $23 trillion worth of US dollar futures are being "tapped" every 30 minutes to generate the funds necessary to "fill the holes" and to effect the grossly overdue "Wanta/AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc." payment [$27.5 trillion less $4.5 trillion = $23 trillion].

07 February: Associates and investigators inform AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. that "today is the day" for the $4.5 trillion payment to be made to the securities account of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. with Morgan Stanley, New York.

07 February: Associates advise the Principals that US Treasury Compliance has also been advised that the $4.5 trillion payment will finally be made today.

07 February: Investigators advise AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. that the texts of the 'Cheney/ Paulson immunity documents' issued by the International Court of Justice have been forwarded to the United States accompanied by a severe warning should the "Wanta payment" not be met.

07 February: Investigators inform AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., that the $4.5 trillion has at last been transferred to the Custodial Account of JPMorganChase in New York City, and that payment will be made to Ambassador Wanta/AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., "soon".

•
07 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. advise 'further confirmation' of the deposit of $4.5 trillion to the JPMorganChase Custodial Account in New York City.

08 February: Investigators advise the principals that the CIA, the Department of Homeland Security, the National Security Agency and the National Security Council are now involved in the payment process and that the authorisation codes will be issued shortly.

08 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. inform the Principals that US Treasury Compliance advises that authorisation is to be released after the close of the New York Stock Exchange (NSYE), that is, after 4:00pm Eastern Standard Time, today, with an individual wire to AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc's securities account at Morgan Stanley, New York City.

08 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. advise the Principals that:

(a) H.R. 2778 has reportedly been signed by the President today;
(B) TWO VATICAN BANKERS WERE ARRESTED [5th-6th February 2007]; and:
© OTHER INTERNATIONAL BANKERS HAVE BEEN ARRESTED (on 7th February 2007).

09 February: At 9.25 am Eastern Standard Time, NO PAYMENT HAS YET BEEN MADE INTO THE SECURITIES ACCOUNT OF AMERITRUST GROUPE, INC., WITH MORGAN STANLEY, NEW YORK.

SICKENING FOUL-MOUTHED ABUSE BY SECRETARY CHERTOFF
09 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. advise that Michael Chertoff, the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security (a.k.a. the US Ministry of Interior), has intervened and has annexed, or stolen control of, the $4.5 trillion.

•
At the same time, authority is issued to US Treasury Enforcement officials that anyone standing in the way of the Wanta Settlement payment is to be arrested.

09 February: On learning that Chertoff has intervened to seize the $4.5 trillion, Mr Michael C. Cottrell, M.S. telephones the office of the Deputy Secretary of the Treasury, Robert M. Kimmitt, and asks the following question: Why has the Department of Homeland Security been given or seized access to the $4.5 trillion that was supposed to have been deposited in the Securities Account of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., this week? Mr Cottrell was then abruptly told that this matter should be placed immediately in the hands of US Treasury Enforcement, which is controlled by Mr Stuart Levey. On being given Mr Levey's telephone number, Mr Cottrell duly called Mr Levey and was told he was attending a meeting. Mr Cottrell therefore asked the same question, mentioning the letter to Mr Kimmitt sent by Attorney Henry, on behalf of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc., on 22nd January.

The person in Mr Levey's office asked for a copy of this letter to be faxed for Mr Levey's attention, and on being given the relevant fax number, Mr Cottrell faxed it over.

09 February: Mr Cottrell informs the Editor of this service that an investigator called him after checking the position with Mr Chertoff's office. We regret that we must now reproduce VERBATIM, the response from the uncouth Mr Chertoff himself, to the investigator. We apologise in advance for his violent, filthy and vulgar language. Mr Chertoff told the investigator:

'Yes, I am the one who took the money, and I ain't gonna pay it to AmeriTrust, Inc., not this week, not next week, or ever. With regard to the sanctions against me, kiss my a..'.

Further, when told about the possibility that he will be arrested, his response was: 'F... YOU'.

THIS WAS THE FIRST TIME THAT ANY COMPONENT OF THE U.S. FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAD OPENLY ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE FUNDS BELONG TO AMBASSADOR LEO EMIL WANTA AND AMERITRUST GROUPE (WHICH OF COURSE IS VERY WELL KNOWN GIVEN THAT THEY REMAIN TAGGED AND EARMARKED IN THE NAME OF THE AMBASSADOR AND HIS CORPORATION) OR THAT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAD ADMITTED TO STEALING, MANIPULATING AND USING THE $4.5 TRILLION WITHOUT MR WANTA'S PERMISSION.

AS A DIRECT CONSEQUENCE OF THIS OUTBURST AND ADMISSION, MATTERS ARE NOW BEYOND THE CONTROL OF THE AMERICAN FEDERAL GOVERNMENT CRIMINALISTS, AS WILL SHORTLY BECOME APPARENT TO EVERYONE, AND THERE IS NOW NOTHING THE CRIMINAL OPERATIVES CAN DO.

PUT BLUNTLY, THE ODIOUS MR MICHAEL CHERTOFF 'BLEW IT'.

The position of the Department of Homeland Securuity (which many in Congress want to abolish) is grossly compromised now, given that the DHS was a signatory with the CIA of the May 2006 accord negotiated with the Ambassador. After the foregoing uncouth statements to a US investigator, Mr Michael Chertoff, who was implicated in the Vince Foster murder, and presumably has a great deal to hide, slammed the phone down on him.

09 February: Associates of AmeriTrust Groupe, Inc. report that US Treasury

Compliance have stated that after having spent most of the preceding 24 hours attempting to make the $4.5 trillion Wanta payment, it has become crystal clear that the $4.5 trillion is being used as a 'hot potato' which is being passed around to various entities for 'coming weekends', and that the thinking behind this reckless behaviour is that no matter what occurs and for however long these criminals play with Wanta's money, President Bush Jr., will pardon the perpetrators at the end of his term, just as President Clinton pardoned his DVD buddy Marc Rich (Hans Brand).

09 February: The same Treasury Compliance sources confirm that the 'ad hoc' Tribunal-ICJ immunities were contingent upon the Wanta Settlement funds being placed in the Morgan Stanley securities account of AmeriTrust Corporation, Inc., by close of business on Wall Street on 9th February; and that, since the payment was not made, the immunities are null and void and have lapsed. This of course applies to the immunity that the British Prime Minister and the German Chancellor both need, along with their fellow conspirators in the United States, to avoid the risk of arrest on the basis of the activated ICJ warrants.

09 February: Late on Friday, informed sources advise Michael C. Cottrell, M.S., that a signed agreement has been entered into by members of Mr Bush's Cabinet and outside associates, for Wanta's funds to be traded among the Cabinet members for their own account, with various entities over the coming weekends, and for charades to be mounted during the working weeks similar to the orchestrated play-acting that occurred during the weeks ending 2nd and 9th February with respect to preparations for finalisation of the Wanta Settlement.

09 February: The same sources inform Mr Cottrell that the existence of this document, under which each signatory imagines that he is protected by his fellow financial criminals, is known by the Republican Party, which is OUTRAGED. Equally disgusted at this blatantly illegal exploitation by top office holders of their free-wheeling powers to abuse the system is the Speaker of the House, Mrs Nancy Pelosi. Neither did the Generals at the Pentagon approve this abomination. They are angry because they need the funds which will accrue from the 35% tax windfall from the Wanta payment.

THE U.S. CONGRESS NEEDS TO WAKE UP AND CLEAN (WHITE) HOUSE IMMEDIATELY, USING THE POWERS IT CAN WIELD IN AN EXTREME CONSTITUTIONAL EMERGENCY SUCH AS THIS.

INSTEAD OF WHICH IT HAS RELAXED, WHILE THESE CRIMINAL GANGSTERS RUN RINGS ROUND THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

•

A similar situation has developed in the United Kingdom, where Tony Blair, faced with the prospect of arrest, has finally decided that he will remain in office and will NOT be ceding his Premiership to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Gordon Brown, as he had indicated he would. Confirmation of this was received from US intelligence sources at time of posting.

U.S. CABINET AT WAR WITH ITSELF AND ITS OWN DEPARTMENTS
Not only does all this indicate that Chertoff is an oaf who has no conception of the consequences of his intemperate behaviour, but it provides further clear evidence that the Bush II Administration's objective is to play an incessant game of 'round robin', perpetually introducing new complexities in order to procure further open-ended delays so as to be able to continue milking Ambassador Leo Wanta's Settlement funds.

We therefore have an American Cabinet that is completely out of control, is engaged in mafia-style gang warfare and is openly at war with and within its own departments, is in breach of all domestic and international legal constraints, and has abandoned all norms of civilised behaviour.

Furthermore, its business is compromised and bedevilled by open domestic intelligence warfare, which may or may not be subject to manipulation by foreign powers, the primary suspect among which appears to be Israel. Earlier in the week, it was being suggested that Mossad was anxious for the Wanta Settlement to be completed, to avoid further damage to international relations.

SEETHING INTERNATIONAL TENSION UNDERMINING STABILITY
We are also now face to face with a seething international crisis in which top officials in Britain, Germany and the United States are implicated AND ARE PROSPECTIVELY AT EACH OTHERS' THROATS. If not brought under control, this situation could lead to horrendous consequences.

To make matters worse, the Secretary of Defense, Robert Gates, testified before Congress this week that the United States must consider preparing for war with Russia and China. This American Administration is clearly shaping up as the most dangerous regime to hold power since Hitler, even though it is grossly incompetent, terminally corrupt and at loggerheads internally.

As a consequence of this state of affairs, Mr Chertoff is among the high-ranking officials who risk arrest. The others include the German Chancellor, Angela Merkel; Tony Blair, the British Prime Minister; Richard Cheney, the Vice President of the United States; Henry M. Paulson, the 'Teflon' figurehead 'Secretary' of the US Treasury; and 18 other senior officials, of whom TEN are American public officials. Presidential pardons or not, the scope for a complete breakdown of international law and order is staring us all in the face, thanks to the open-ended, reckless ruthlessness of the small clique of financial criminal operatives who have seized control of our suffering nations.

It is against this duplicitous background that the International Court of Justice ‘ad hoc’ warrants have been triggered and are being applied.

George Orwell: 'In an age of deceit, speaking the truth is a revolutionary act'.

J. Edgar Hoover: 'The individual is handicapped coming face to face with a conspiracy so monstrous, he cannot believe it exists'.

US friend: 'You are to be congratulated on a masterful piece of research in exposing the treason and the biggest heist in history'.

Christopher Edward Harle Story FRSA (1938 – 14 July 2010[1]) was a British writer, publisher and government adviser specialising in intelligence and economic affairs, who is best known for his collaboration with KGB defector Anatoliy Golitsyn on the 1995 book The Perestroika Deception. Christopher Story, the son of Colonel Henry Harle Story MC of the Cameronians (Scottish Rifles),[2] was educated at Eton College and Christ Church, Oxford, and then worked as an industrial writer in Canada. In 1963, he formed his own publishing company specialising in intelligence and founded World Reports Limited in 1963.[3] Since 1970, he has edited and published International Currency Review,[4] which includes the World Bank, the Federal Reserve, and the Bank of England amongst its subscribers.[5] He became an economic adviser to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher,[6] and a year after her resignation he purchased the respected Soviet Analyst, whose previous editors include Robert Conquest and Tibor Szamuely,[7] due to his continued scepticism about Mikhail Gorbachev, perestroika and the official version of events in the Soviet Union.[8] In May 1992, he was approached by KGB defector Anatoliy Golitsyn, who supported Story's analysis in Soviet Analyst, and handed over to Story his memoranda to the CIA, which Story edited and published as The Perestroika Deception in 1995.

In 2002, Story published The European Union Collective, which applied Story's analysis to the European Union. He is also critical of the German intelligence establishment, pointing out its Nazi origins.[9] In the book, he equates the current situation in Europe to the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact before World War II. He describes both world wars as "the two Illuminati Wars." [1] He also claims that former British Prime Minister Edward Heath was "recruited by the Nazis before the war" and was an agent of the "the secret Nazi strategic continuum since exposed as the Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD), Dachau." [2]

Other historical parallels, according to Christopher Story, include:[10]

• 9/11 = the Reichstag Fire;
• What he describes as the unprovoked invasion of Iraq (a bank raid) = Hitler's invasion of Czechoslovakia;
• What he describes as the US Generals' feckless inactivity in the face of this madness = the ambivalence of General Alfred Jodl and the German General Staff; and:
• The threat to attack Iran = Hitler's intended aggression against Poland.

Story was most recently writing a book on the Wanta crisis. (See Leo Wanta). Originally a staunch supporter of the controversial CIA operative, Story started in 2008 to expose Leo/Lee Emil Wanta as a consummate professional deceiver in a series of articles posted on his website www.worldreports.org.

Whether ultimately conclusive or otherwise, the serious student of the subject should hardly be unaware of it or so committed to some other 'explanation' as to ignore it."
^ The predecessor of the Bundesnachrichtendienst (Federal Intelligence Service, BND) is the German eastern military intelligence agency, Abteilung Fremde Heere Ost in the General Staff, led by Wehrmacht General Reinhard Gehlen. Its main purpose was to collect information on the Soviet Union. In 1946 Gehlen set up an intelligence agency informally known as the Gehlen Org, and recruited many of his former co-workers. Many also were recruited from the former Sicherheitsdienst, SS and Gestapo. The organisation mainly worked for the CIA, which contributed money and other materials. On 1 April 1956 the Bundesnachrichtendienst was created from the Gehlen Org, and was transferred to the German government. Reinhard Gehlen remained President of the BND until 1968.

I personally recommend you use polyester resin and Copper or Gold. I would presume Silver would be useful too. Stick to the original orgonite and you'll be okay.

QUOTE

Dear friends of Orgonise Africa, http://www.orgoniseafrica.com/

Again and again new proposals for "improving" orgonite are being circulated on the net. Some of these ideas are driven by genuine motives, some seem to be promoted by those powers that would love to see the orgonite movement disappear rather yesterday. (The notorious agencies and their paid disinformers)

Often the intention of these campaigns seems to be to sow doubt in the minds of those beginning to become interested in the orgonite phenomenon, thereby limiting the spread of this amazing technology of etheric self empowerment and healing. The general aim of disinformation campaigns is confusion - In this case: make it look like there is dissent in the orgonite camp, create the impression that some orgonite could be dangerous to your health and you can prevent a few newbies from taking the first step. (As usual the battle the illuminati are fighting here is a rearguard action as their paradigm is fading fast)
Aluminium vs other metals

So, for years a "fraction" of the orgonite using community is promoting that aluminium as a main constituent of orgonite is harmful. They mostly base it on a small remark by Wilhelm Reich in which he observed some negative effects with an aluminium based orgone accumulator, I think in connection with what he called the Oranur-effect.

Firstly, Wilhelm Reich was constantly researching at the cutting edge of his time. So, many of his observations were later refined or revised by himself. He did that constantly. Even his evaluation of the "Oranur effect" changed over time when he noted that radioactive Uranium after initial violent and sickening interactions could be orgonised (Orur) and be used to tickle the cosmic life energy as he did in his desert greening operations (Orop) in Arizona and elsewhere.

Secondly, we have never found such negative effects after years of getting fantastic results with aluminium in the orgonite.

Kirlian photography of aluminium orgonite

The Kirlian photo above shows the radiant aura of a pendant with aluminium orgonite.

Aluminium in orgonite has some distinct advantages:
The filings are much thinner than those normally produced with iron or copper. That results in a finer alternative layering of metal and resin, making the DOR to OR conversion more powerful.
At the shearing surfaces (where it has been shaved off), aluminium develops minute micro crystals that add power to the orgonite.
The devices are lighter, hence lower shipping cost
Easy to get and relatively cheap (that would also be true for iron filings but they are normally quite clunky)

Of course, all metals have different energy signatures. It would be naive to deny that.
Everything has an energy signature. There is no dead matter. That's now pretty much common knowledge.

On a certain level all matter is consciousness, right? (Even a rock has/is consciousness)

But this does not mean that aluminium is "negative" or copper or gold is "positive". Just like the addition of healing gemstones adds "colour" and rich overtones to the basically always positive etheric vibration of any orgonite, using different metals can enhance certain healing aspects of the orgonite.
This is happening on a more subtle level than the actual "raw" energy conversion from DOR to POR which is nothing else but removing a blockage and getting stagnant Chi to flow again.

Kirlian photography of copper orgonite

Kirlian photography of gold orgonite

The way I understand it is that there are finer and finer levels of perception. (like the layers of an onion or the famous Russian dolls with a doll within a doll...)
Our conventional 3D reality is the coarsest level.

The level of "Orgone Energy" is almost protophysical, it visually affects clouds and has other very easily observable physical effects.

Gemstones and other additions to orgonite - also when used on their own - work on a much finer vibratory level.

For this reason we add copper, gold and silver to personal healing tools in order to bring in these finer healing vibrations where it's appropriate.
The beeswax deception

Another well known stream of disinformation is the "beeswax dis-info" whereby beeswax is promoted as a more sympathetic replacement of synthetic resins in making orgonite.

Make no mistake: Beeswax is of course a lovely material and has a nice and positive energy signature. But just like lovely scented woods or beautiful gemstones on their own don't show the powerful characteristics of orgonite, beeswax has been found to be much less effective in the orgonite mix. Furthermore it is totally unsuitable for environmental gifting because it will melt and disintegrate under real life weather conditions.
No harm done if you want to make a "beeswax orgonite" piece for your personal indoor space. It'll even work as a weak orgone generator and may just feel good to have around and nice to look at. But is that what orgonite is really about?

Orgonite in the strict sense is the matrix of resin and metal filings, most often aluminium, and some quartz crystals. This material mix has been found and demonstrated to effect some unique and wonderful things.

I think that our expedition reports provide ample demonstration for the efficacy of this simple but oh so effective mix.
Plasterite - the new Orgonite?

One of the latest fads in this line of deceptions is called "plasterite".
Basically it's "plaster of Paris" or simply gypsum with crushed quartz crystal.
Here is a depiction of a (quite nice looking) piece of "plasterite":

Plasterite - the new orgonite?

Kirlian photography of "plasterite"

To make a longs story short: Plasterite has nothing to do with orgonite at all. It's just gypsum with some crystals. Any perceived healing effect would be from the crystals added to the gypsum and that would be on a quite weak and very subtle level.

The Kirlian photo above speaks a very clear language in that respect, I think.
The Easter bunny is still at it

Yes, the Easter bunny knows that many of you are far away and will not get your Easter orgonite before the actual Easter holiday. So what? It's all about initiating the process and that's why the 20% special Easter discount is still on! (Until including Easter Sunday)

After all Easter is kind of a feast of abundance, awakening life and merriment. So let's not be too uptight about dates, OK? With some of the discount opportunities that are permanently in place, this can work out very nicely for you:

20% Easter discount + 10% if you share your purchase on Facebook, twitter or MySpace + 5% if you pay by credit card. And then don't forget that for most products except the bundles there are tier prices if you order higher quantities:
10% when you order 5 or more
20% for 10 or more and
30% for 30 or more

All this adds up for your savings. Use the shopping cart to find out how it works out. It's much easier than trying to figure it all out off-line. The shopping cart is the ideal calculation tool. You can also get accurate shipping quotes to every destination based on the contents of your shopping cart.

If you order a lot from us you create abundance on our side and we create abundance on your side. That's the true Easter spirit. Abundant orders allow us to spread more happy positive life energy in Africa.

That's what we really love doing.

I hope to see you soon at Orgonise Africa.

Forget the pendants, build a genuine orgone accumulator from Reich's own plans.

Orgone Generators, Orgone Accumulators, and Karl Welz (Oct. 12, 2009)

Subject: Protective Pendants important question
From: Max
Date: Mon, October 12, 2009
To: Ken Adachi

Good day to you, Ken!

First of all - excuse my poor English - it is not my native language. And sorry for possible multiple letters - this form doesnt send letters right...

You have a Great site that opened my eyes on some interesting subjects. Being introduced to the orgone energy, i started to search the internet for more information. Having found a lot of sources, some questions aroused. Would you be so kind to answer them?

I'm currently interested in Orgone Protective Pendants. But the principle of their work is not clearly understood from the description on the site.

On http://educate-yourself.org/products/orgon...ts09dec08.shtml page you write that these pendants are actually "generators" and not "accumulators" as i thought firsthand. Can you please explain how can they be "generators" without pulsing current through it?

I'll explain my misunderstanding.

On Karl Hans Welz's (I believe this is the man you regard as "A developer of Radionic devices" on the "Orgone Generators" page) site - www.orgone.net he claims, that Only pulsed current orgone generators can transform DOR into POR, and everything else that doesnt involve pulsing a current through it is an accumulator and thus cannot make that transformation.

So, how do the pendants generate (and not just accumulate) the POR ? And where does the DOR go ? Is it attracted to the orgonite same as POR ?

Waiting anxiously for your answer,

Max

Hi Max,

Karl is a self serving individual who is more interested in promoting himself and expanding his bank account than he is in serving humanity, in my opinion. He's been making a pain of himself ever since Don Croft started the chembuster movement in late 2001 by claiming that he alone is the "inventor" of orgone generators. He's been working through a proxy in Canada who wants people to think he's a lawyer in an attempt to intimidate anyone else who even uses the term "orgonite" (which Karl may have coined) or "orgone generator" (which Karl did NOT coin) on their web site.

Karl, an Austrian, did not invent anything, including radionics. Karl utilized the information provided by Wilhelm Reich (also an Austrian) in his books. Reich said that if you placed an organic substance (a hydrocarbon) such as wood next to metal, the metal initially attracts orgone energy and then repels it immediately.into the surrounding area. The wood absorbs the orgone energy and then radiates it into the area adjacent to it. Reich made a box out of wood and lined the inside with thin iron sheet metal. This was called an orgone accumulator as the concentration of orgone energy inside the box intensified from the orgone found outside of the box. Another type of orgone accumulator is made by altering layers of steel wool (metal) with cotton batting (organic) and stitching the whole thing together with a cloth covering on the top and bottom and use it as a blanket.

Don Croft examined one of Karl's over priced radionic boxes which he had sold to someone for $500 and discovered that inside the box was a small amount of fiberglass resin mixed with metal shavings, and not much else in the way of electronics.. Don added this same resin/metal mixture to the inside of his Terminator box and his wife noticed that his aura jumped out a few feet when he touched the box to his body. Don and Carol got the idea of adding special crystals to the mix to add the vibes of crystal healing. Don later wrapped a large quartz crystal in a mobius coil and pulsed it with the same waveform produced by the Terminator. He called that a Succor Punch (SP) crystal. He adopted a variation in which he partially embedded the bottom of the crystal with the resin/metal mixture and later enclosed most of the crystal with resin/metal and called it a Powerwand. He filled a 2 gallon bucket with the resin/metal mix and stuck in 6 copper pipes with a crystal in each pipe and called that a "cloud buster". I changed the name to a "chembusters" when I published an article over viewing Don's discovery in January 2002 titled Goodbye Chemtrails, Hello Blue Skies, as the chembuster functions in a different manner than Wilhelm Reich's 1950s 'invention called a "cloud buster". .

When discussing the chembuster, the "orgone generator" part comes from the idea that the pipes act as wave guides drawing in ambient negative DOR orgone energy and TRANSMUTING it into the positive polarity of orgone, called "OR" or "POR" and re-radiating this OR energy into the environment This transmutation process does not require coils with an electrical current running through them. I called this type of device a "passive" orgone generator. The evidence of this transmutation process was seen in the huge blue hole punched through an overcast sky of chemtrails when the chembuster was FIRST being deployed in 2002.

The SP crystal or the Powerwand is an example of an "active" orgone generator in which the mobius coil wrapped around the crystal is pulsed with a 15 Hz square wave current. This definitely produces a more powerful energy than the passive orgone generator. However, that is not to say the the passive device produces no transmutation of DOR, it does, It's just a smaller radius of influence, depending on the SIZE of the generator (the blue aura of orgone energy can be seen on Kirlian photography when photographing a passive orgone generator).

The OPP pendant is STILL an orgone generator, despite its small size and STILL transmute DOR into OR and is directly influencing the heart chakra over which it sits. The crystals and coils inside the pendant INTENSIFY the action and TAILOR the energy to fit a certain goal. You wouldn't be reading all of the testimonials which are seen on that page if the pendant didn't work, now would you?

DOR energy is CHANGED into the positive polarity of orgone energy (which is all around us). It doesn't "go" anywhere, it just changes into a different polarity that is life enhancing, rather than degenerative.

Regards, Ken

Hello, Ken.

Thanks for your interesting answer, but I still have some things to be clarified.
Don't take me as a person that doesn't believe you or something - I just want to understand the whole process of transformation in details.

So, let's take a look at a basic metal/resin matrix (without any crystals and tubes) .
First step - metal attracts Orgone energy. Ambient positive AND negative (just two different polarities of the same energy), right ? Or just positive ? Which metal is the best for this ? I've read somewhere, that it's not advised to use aluminum, what's your opinion on this ? If DOR is attracted, so in order to get to the metal it gets through the resin and is accumulated there ?
Next step - the energy was attracted to the metal, now it is being repelled. Is this the step, where DOR attracted (if any) is turned into POR ?

Thanks in advance,
Max

Hi Max,

I'll respond to these questions, but I can't have a running dialog on this. I don't have the time for that. This info has been discussed ad nauseam on the orgone blogs which you can find the archives of if you search.

If you want to understand the nature of orgone energy, READ THE BOOKS OF WILHELM REICH.

For the CB or any orgone generator, any metal is OK including aluminum. For an orgone accumulator of the type Reich built intended for humans to sit in, then we only use iron sheeting as the iron is found in hemoglobin and is compatible with the body.

Aluminum is lighter and for atmospheric work is perfectly OK. We use titanium and other special metals for pendants since they affect the chakras. For room HHGs, TBs, any metal is fine.

The fiberglass resin is a SOLID crystalline hydrocarbon which absorbs the orgone and re-radiates it to the surrounding area. It appears to transmute DOR into OR.

DOR is normally found in highly polluted areas (where you are exploding, expanding or DESTROYING something) or where negative activity is taking place such as murders, satanic sacrifice, or other destructive behavior. Smog is an example of accumulated DOR energy. DOR is highly concentrated around a nuclear reactor, for instance.

Orgone can manifest in the 3rd dimension, but it starts at a higher dimension, probably the 5th. So you see a mix of 3rd and 4th dimension attributes with orgone. Ether physics is entirely different and usually shows opposite attributes compared to 3D physics.

You're thinking is based on 3D physics. Read Reich's books to learn more

I have one in my backyard. When I first purchased it, I noticed that chemtrails seemed to disappear straight overhead where it was pointing, but could still be seen near the horizon & sometimes near both horizons as if the chembuster was concentrating its affect more strongly directly above it than at either horizon.

I also, noticed when there were few clouds in the sky, they seemed at times to form a wispy spiral pattern around the center of where the chembuster was pointing (straight up in this case). Friends claimed that it seemed to be raining more near my home than the surrounding country side. I haven't noticed it breaking up any clouds nor have I noticed it attracting clouds either.

I have no doubt Don Croft is sincere.

Orgone Adventures!

From: Carol
Date: Wed, March 18, 2009

What have you and the Women Warriors done? You have set me off big time into orgone! BUT IT WORKS!

Just got all of my materials to make some orgonite in a small pyramid form. They tend to 'tell' you where they need to go..In my case, into the fridge to charge food and filtered water, my TV unit, my outside courtyard, and gift one to the church at the 'altar end' so that all the projected love feelings are focused towards the altar in church, which, when mixed with organite, makes for a pretty powerful amplified punch. It also serves to deal with any 'pharisees' within the church! ;)

So days go by, and we get some lovely blue sky sunny weather; cheers everybody's mood in the village. Nights were clear, so the full moon shone and I could charge my orgone and crystals, and my new Lemurian crystals (another story!) Next morning, I see two planes agressively chemming over my house, and the mast on the hill near me. This mast has no purpose objectively. It's not a TV mast because I cannot get a TV signal on analogue full stop. It's not a phone mast because I cannot get a signal either. It's just there, begging to be gifted. (was my next target!).

All day and all night, til 3.30am, the planes chemmed and turned a beautiful day into a dark, overcast cold day. Instinctively, I thought that they can pick up positive OR readings and spray accordingly. I also didn't feel that the shite they sprayed was particulary harmful; it just dampened everybody's spirit, and kept the heat from being able to escape naturally. Damage enough though, as I live in a rural area, and farmers depend on good weather, especially as there are small farms doing (well, trying to do) organic free range produce: i.e. TRUELY free range hens lay free range eggs when it is warmer.

I boosted, prayed, made a blue hole, and the sylphs did try, but we were overwhelmed; it was that intense. I made some more organite, then came back to your site for help, and found THAT VERSE..."No more chemtrails"... just what the reikipath ordered he,he

I put more orgone pyramids outside, and said that verse on the night as I heard the planes again prepping to ruin the sky for the next day. Then spoke it again today, though refined it, mentioning the sylphs and asking for 'a true weather day' instead. I said it repeatedly, and put another few pyramids out.

Oh I have had some fun watching four jets try to spray over here today, let me tell you LOL!! Still CLEAR blue sky!! One even came over my house as usual now, and the chem stopped mid spray, as a syplh was there ready for it. The sylphs just need us to go about asking for their help in the right way. We need to be specific. And that's what that verse does; it's very specific. It also works well as it is like a spell..that's what spells are, verses of focused intent. All we need to learn is to ASK correctly.

Anyway, that woman who posted that verse...cheers!

I am on gifting mission these next few weeks, reservoirs so people somehow drink the OR water, gift the sea, the streams, tourist beauty spots, so when people come to recharge away from the towns, they CAN recharge. That is vitally important! Of course, masts will get it too, though for hard-to-reach masts, I have another approach...find the nearest big tree, ask it if you can gift its roots to help you against that mast nearby, and you will find that it will readily say yes, even with urgency, (I'm not making this up, it happened LOL!) Its branches act much like that of the phone mast, but with added life force and wisdom.

Sorry for the ramble, but the more places people know where to 'gift' if masts are hard to reach, the less defeatied people feel. We also need to get creative so as not to get our gifts discovered. Needle in a haystack is a good way to go.

I find it wonderfully eccentric for us all to be taking on the NWO from our kitchen worktops. Thanks for the info Ken, I just wish I knew this years ago!!

Kind Regards and all the best...

Carol

craig-oxley - October 5, 2008 11:58 PM (GMT)

They obviously have something. It's almost as if their bloody homed in on your creation. Noticed this in the past with placing much orgone in graveyards. The only other time you will see it is with these large scale cloudbuster devices. The graveyard is supposed to boost the energy due to something like leylines. Remember how things are position for certain reasons. The whole shit hit the fan when I did one graveyard. About a week after I created my Cloudbuster I was awoken in the early hours. I heard this amazing noise which was like a ZimZimZIMZIMMMZIMMMMM, it was weird. I jumped up out of bed to see what was out the window. This sounded like it was at my window. There was absolutely nothing at all. This orgone is very strange stuff indeed. Seems when theres a mass amount of it at one spot and time, then it draws attention big time.

theresa - October 7, 2008 04:06 AM (GMT)

It is heartening to see that 'gifting' is being done the world over. I understand the power of crystals. Must be an energy between metal and crystal? Duh! I don't understand the principles behind the recipe, etc. but after seeing a cloud busted while being 'wanded' was amazing. BTW, has anyone succeeded in 'gifting' the queen or other world leaders.

craig-oxley - October 7, 2008 11:46 PM (GMT)

The crystals merely amplify the Orgone energy which is created by the organic, in-organic materials (metals and resin).

Title: Orgone Question
Description: DOR and POR

maxamillion - September 21, 2008 04:39 PM (GMT)

If you put the same amount of DOR and POR orgonite beside each other, does the POR repel the DOR continually?

How about if there's twice as much DOR? Does the POR still win?

craig-oxley - September 23, 2008 09:59 PM (GMT)

I have no idea wether it repels just just mixes. No when you speak of Orgonite then your coming from a different angle. If orgonite is present then the DOR will be drawn in and converted to POR regardless. If you jut had POR on it's own then thats a different ball game.

Cyprus: Pope called for inter-religious dialogue

http://www.adnkronos.com/AKI/English/Relig...d=3.1.498409419

Nicosia, 5 June (AKI) - Pope Benedict XVI on Saturday called for dialogue between Christians and people of other faiths during the second day of his landmark visit to Cyprus. The Mediterranean island is divided between Greek Orthodox Christians and Muslim communities from Turkey. It is the first visit to Cyprus by a pope and Benedict's first to an Orthodox country.

The pope also emphasized the need for cooperation between different Christian faiths.

"Much still needs to be done throughout the world," the 83-year-old pontiff said with regard to inter-religious dialogue.

"Only by patient work can mutual trust be built, the burden of history overcome and the political and cultural differences between peoples become a motive to work for deeper understanding," he said.

Benedict spoke at a Maronite primary school near Nicosia. The ancient Maronite church has its roots in Lebanon and Syria that is in communion with Rome and has been present in Cyprus for centuries, primarily in the northern part of the island that has been occupied by Turkey since 1974.

Most of the Maronites have moved to the Christian south leaving a number of villages almost empty.

In an address to the pontiff, Maronite Archbishop Youssef Soueif on Saturday asked Benedict to "please help us return to our villages."

Four ancient Maronite villages there have virtually died out, mostly the result of displacement after the Turkish invasion and occupation of the north in 1974.

Theology school integrates studies of different faiths

Updated 1d ago | Comments 41 | Recommend 2
http://www.usatoday.com/news/religion/2010...t=Google+Reader

CLAREMONT, California (AP) — The venerable Claremont School of Theology, which has taught Methodist ministers and theologians for more than a century, will try an unorthodox approach this fall: cross-training the nation's future Muslim, Christian and Jewish religious leaders in classrooms scattered around Southern California as they work toward their respective degrees.
The experimental approach launched last week is intended to create U.S. religious leaders who not only preach tolerance in an era of religious strife, but who have lived it themselves by rubbing shoulders with those in other Abrahamic faiths.

The idea already faces resistance from more conservative elements in some religious communities; its architects say that only underscores the need for such an approach.

"Christians attend school with Christians, Jewish with Jewish and Muslims with Muslim," said Rev. Jerry Campbell, president of the Claremont School of Theology. "Educating people in a segregated environment is not a way to teach them to be peacemakers. It only steeps them in their own religion and with their own people."

Conceived in 2006, the University Project will allow seminary students at Claremont to cross-enroll in programs that train future Muslim and Jewish religious leaders while working toward their own degrees in Christian theology. Claremont already has chaplaincy programs for Muslims and Jews who ultimately work as counselors in institutional settings, but they do not have rabbinical and imam certification programs. Course topics will include inter-religious conflict resolution, scripture and ethics.

The exchange also will work in the other direction. Starting this year, rabbinical students enrolled at the Academy of Jewish Religion CA will be able to study at Claremont. And by next year, the project will include an Islamic program that aims to create a standard for training American imams by working with the Los Angeles-based Islamic Center of Southern California. Classes at the Islamic institute will be taught by Claremont professors and will be open to seminarians and rabbinical students.

The collaborative effort among the seminary, Jewish academy and Islamic center is believed to be the first to integrate the three studies. Other Christian institutions, such as Connecticut's Hartford Seminary, offer an imam training program but do not incorporate rabbinical students.

"It is our responsibility as religious leaders to show that religion can be a powerful force for unity and love in the world, instead of it being captured by a spirit of divisiveness, based on fear of the other and ignorance of the other," said Rabbi Mel Gottlieb, president and dean of the Academy of Jewish Religion CA.

Claremont already has used an initial $10 million gift to hire the first Muslim and second Jewish faculty members. If the project takes off, its architects hope to add Hinduism and Buddhism and house the project under one roof.

"It could be a breeding ground for conflict, but it should be a place where students can develop skills for a multifaith environment, and what better place to do it than with their education?" said Najeeba Syeed-Miller, the Muslim professor. "When they're in practice, they have a tool box ready to respond to the conflicts that come up. To me, that's at the core of why it's unique and exciting."

The project has yet to be approved by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, an accreditation institution.

The Islamic school will be incubated by the Christian seminary, piggybacking on Claremont's accreditation.

Organizers hope to raise $40 million for its development from both U.S. and Middle Eastern donors, possibly through fundraising trips to Islamic nations. Muslim groups here have found little opposition to the interfaith initiative but aren't sure what to expect when news of it becomes more public.

Islam has the most to gain from the project because it remains the most misunderstood faith in the United States, said Jihad Turk, an imam and religion director for the Islamic Center of Southern California. Traditionally, Muslims interested in being imams must return to the Middle East for their education, but find the more conservative approach is not compatible with the needs of Muslims in America.

Turk, 38, said the project will cater to the hallmarks of Islam in America, which is more inclusive of women in leadership roles, involved in interfaith relations and has a higher degree of civic engagement.

"This is a very American approach. It's an expression of American religion and American religious attitude," said Turk, a U.S.-born Muslim who himself studied to become an imam in Iran and Saudi Arabia. "It's better that they're getting their training in America if they're planning to work in America."

Jewish organizers are excited that the project will allow future rabbis and imams to study together for the first time, which they contend is that's increasingly important in a world where Muslim-Jewish conflict makes headlines almost every day.

"God is the God of all people, and we want to get back to the notion of treating people the way you'd want to be treated," Gottlieb said. "That is the basic principle of all religions, instead of an entity that divides people and creates friction and acrimony."

Organizers have been unable to avoid all acrimony. Some more conservative elements in the Christian and Jewish communities have pushed back, worried the approach may dilute their own faiths. One Jewish Academy faculty member took a leave of absence when he heard of the project's inception.

The United Methodists have withheld funds and the University Senate, a body within the United Methodist Church that oversees schools and colleges, hampered the project's momentum last April when it demanded a review of the curriculum.

The United Methodists traditionally give about $800,000 to Claremont each year, said Campbell, the school's president.

"There are some elements within Methodism that felt we shouldn't be doing this," he said. "The issue is whether the United Methodists will put money into the school for education of only United Methodists."

Students have expressed excitement about the project. Susan Goldberg, 36, a third-year rabbinical student from Echo Park, California, said she is thrilled about studying overlapping theologies and scriptures in the project.

"I have a great desire to learn about others, and in the learning it clarifies who I am and how I'm different and how we're connected," she said. "It can only serve to make us better leaders."

Christopher Carter, 29, is returning to Claremont in the fall to begin a doctorate and plans to take classes in Jewish ethics at the Jewish Academy.

"As a Methodist pastor in Southern California, I can see a future need for an education like this," said Carter, who said he was attracted to Claremont's pluralistic approach because it has helped him with issues of diversity and intermarriage.

"I know I wouldn't have understood that if I stayed in the Midwest because it's more religiously homogeneous," he said. "Being exposed to something like this gives me more of a leg up."

Project leaders have agreed to teach the classes on separate religious campuses to address misgivings among some conservatives that too much integration would dilute the study of their own beliefs. Originally, the planners had envisioned a "university within a university."

Professors will be able to cap the number of students from other faiths in their classes.

"We could be swallowed up by a larger school," Gottlieb said. "This is an attempt to respect each other's boundaries."

The Coming One World Religion

http://pro-gospel.org/x2/content/view/67/53/

As the church awaits the glorious return of our Lord Jesus Christ we are witnessing the formation of a global religious system that will one day worship the Beast (Rev. 13:12). Jesus warned that a widespread dynamic deception would be one of the signs of His return to the earth. His word reveals there will be many false teachers who will prepare an unsuspecting bride for the anti-Christ. This counterfeit religious system will give her allegiance and worship to one who will blaspheme God.

There is currently a dialogue among world religious leaders who are seeking common threads of truth as a basis for unity. As diverse as some religions appear, there are some common bonds of unity. One is the teaching that salvation is attained by what men must do for God, instead of what God has already done for man through His Son. All religions, with the exception of biblical Christianity, arrogantly deny that salvation is by grace, the unmerited favor of God.

Several organizations have been working diligently to unite the people of the world but none as aggressively as the Roman Catholic Church. The Second Vatican Council made this clear when it stated: The Catholic Church endeavors "to gather all people and all things into Christ, so as to be for all an inseparable sacrament of unity... expressed in the common celebration of the Eucharist."

The Vatican has been building strategic bridges to all Christian denominations and non-Christian religions for the purpose of bringing all people under the papacy. In a 1998 speech to the leaders of Islam, Pope John Paul declared: "Dialogue between our two religions (Islam and Catholicism) is more necessary than ever. There remains a spiritual bond which unites us and which we must strive to recognize and develop." Later in January of 2002 many of the most influential religious leaders of the world responded to the pope's invitation to gather in Assisi, Italy to discuss unity and peace. The pope, whom Catholics believe is the supreme head of the entire Christian Church, made all the leaders of non-Christian religions feel comfortable by removing all the images, crucifixes and icons of Jesus Christ.

Strategy for Christian Unity

The Vatican has a well defined and aggressive strategy for uniting all of Christianity under the papacy. Some of the elements of this master plan are outlined below:

I. Promote the opinion that Catholics, Orthodox and Protestants are all brothers-in-Christ and therefore must be reunited. This is why the Vatican is urging all "separated brethren" to come back home to Holy Mother, the Church, to enjoy the "fullness of salvation." Rome believes the salvation of Protestants cannot be complete unless and until they receive the transubstantiated Christ in the Eucharist.

II. Another important part of their strategy is to redefine evangelical terms in vague and ambiguous words to make them acceptable to both Catholics and Protestants. This strategy has been used effectively in their recent unity accords with Evangelicals and Lutherans. They have also been effective in identifying and seducing highly visible and influential evangelicals to promote Catholicism as a valid expression of Christianity.

III. The Vatican's strategy also involves exploiting post-modernism and the emerging church movement, which has gained widespread popularity. These movements have caused confusion, biblical ignorance and a lack of discernment within Protestant churches. In turn, these have produced fertile soil for seeds of deception and compromise to grow. Many who are uncertain of the true Gospel are easily deceived and willing to embrace the false gospel of Catholicism.

IV. Rome is also encouraging tolerance of all faiths because tolerance unifies and brings peace, while doctrinal truth divides. Whenever doctrinal truth is suppressed there can be no distinction between believers and unbelievers. One example of the Vatican's push for tolerance is seen in a statement from the 1997 accord: The Gift of Salvation. It reads: "All who truly believe in Jesus Christ are brothers and sisters in the Lord and must not allow their differences, however important to undermine this great truth." Some of the differences cited that should never divide Evangelicals and Catholics were listed as: baptismal regeneration, the Eucharist, sacramental grace, justification, purgatory, indulgences, Marian devotion, the assistance of the saints in salvation, and the possibility of salvation for those who have not been evangelized. Clearly, each of these differences can not be tolerated because they all oppose the Gospel and bear eternal consequences for those who are on the wrong side of truth.

Same Story Different Verse

Rome attempted to reunite Catholics and Protestants in Germany in 1541 but Martin Luther gave this stern warning: "Popish writers pretend that they have always taught, what we now teach, concerning faith and good works, and that they are unjustly accused of the contrary, thus the wolf puts on the sheep skin till he gains admission in the fold." Three hundred years later another great preacher warned against unity with the Roman Catholic Church. Charles Spurgeon said: "There is a deep and indelible sentence of damnation written upon the apostate church...the curse is registered in heaven...its infamy is engraven in the rock forever...followers of Jesus, for their own sake as well as for their Lord's, should oppose it with all their might." The 21st century church needs more Luthers and Spurgeons to contend earnestly for the faith against the fatal errors of Catholicism.

Apostasy is Fueling the Push for Unity

In spite of the numerous Scriptural warnings of apostasy, many Protestants are returning "home to Rome." Nearly every documented case of Protestant apostates who departed to join the Catholic religion, gave one of three reasons. They were either convinced by some "early church fathers" that Catholicism is true, or they were compelled to become Catholic in order to marry a Catholic, or they joined because of pleasurable experience. We have never heard of anyone who became a Catholic because the Bible convinced them to do it.

Tragically, we seldom hear warnings against apostasy from our pulpits. Rarely are false teachers who lead people away from the true faith ever exposed. Apostates, who appear as ministers of righteousness, are facing very little opposition. They successfully deceive the undiscerning because pastors and church leaders are not contending against them. Very few Christian leaders are warning the church of these ferocious wolves dressed in sheep's clothing. The twenty-first century church needs strong leaders like the apostle Paul. He warned the early church, "even from your own number men will arise and distort the truth in order to draw away disciples after them. So be on your guard! Remember that for three years I never stopped warning each of you night and day with tears" (Acts 20:30-31). Throughout the Scriptures we are exhorted to test every spirit, every teacher and every doctrine because men are so easily deceived.

Two Kinds of Unity

Doctrine is what divides the true church from the emerging world religion. The Bible condemns any unity that is not founded in God's word. False unity is based upon man's ambitions and is always independent of God (Gen. 11:1-9). This type of unity will be a tool of the Antichrist (Rev. 17-18). On the other hand, biblical unity is based on apostolic truth and is a work of the Holy Spirit, not of man (Eph. 4:3,13; 1 Cor. 12:13).

One of the greatest dangers to Christianity today is the deliberate suppression of biblical truth for the sake of unity. The danger intensifies as we see influential Christian leaders jumping on the Vatican's ecumenical bandwagon. Instead of warning believers of this false unity, they applaud those who are creating it. Instead of obeying biblical exhortations to keep the Gospel pure, they are tolerating those who preach another gospel (Gal. 1:6-9). Rather than hating every false way, they are allowing the devil's lies to go unabated (Psalm 119:104). Instead of exposing false Christs and lying spirits they put up with them (2 Cor. 11:4).

What Are Christians To Do?

Christians must not tolerate anyone who willfully misrepresents the character or attributes of almighty God or His Gospel. A sound and loving rebuke, using scripture, is necessary to earnestly contend for the faith (Jude 3). To remain silent shows, either an indifference toward the Lord Jesus, or a greater loyalty to another person or institution.

We are commanded to separate from those who persist in false teaching (Rom.16:17; Titus 3:10). For some, this may mean finding another church. For others, it may mean withholding support from ministries that continue to compromise the Gospel. The apostles warned us that if we do not separate from false teachers we could either be disqualified for service, become identified with them and their error, or risk being partakers of their fate (2 Tim. 2:20; 2 John 10-11; Jude 11-13). May God help us all to stand firm and not be carried away by every wind of doctrine!

Interfaith movement brings world closer to global religious system

September 21st, 2010 3:24 pm ET http://www.examiner.com/canada-bible-proph...eligious-system

During the last days prior to the return of Jesus Christ, one of the many signs heralding His return will be a global apostasy (2 Thessalonians 2:3) coinciding with a global cry for peace.(1 Thessalonians 5:3) Globalized communications of our day facilitate the rise and speed of this falling away from the faith, and have also been prophesied since the Bible foretells the world will see certain events come to pass. (Revelation 11:9-10; 17:8)

With nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons technology, terrorist threats, combined with several nations increasingly more hungry for power and domination than for true peace, the capability of mankind destroying all life on earth today, is real. Over 2000 years ago, Jesus predicted this capability for world destruction at a time when only spears and swords were the weapons used. (Matthew 24:21-22)

All these factors and more, play into the role of fulfilling the prophecy found in Revelation chapter 13, the time coming when the Antichrist , or 'false messiah' forms his one world religion (Revelation 13:12)

To get to the point of global worship of the Antichrist who will rule the world temporarily during the tribulation prior to the return of Jesus Christ , the true Messiah, there must (logically) be a global 'conditioning' or preparation, and this begins with apostasy, or the 'falling away' from the true faith in Jesus Christ in much of the Christian world. This is happening right now and increasingly so, with the global cry for peace. Jesus Christ is denied as being the 'only way, truth, and life' (John 14:6) and in many churches, this truth is excluded (subtly in many cases with a weak gospel) in the name of 'peace and tolerance.' How can this happen? What is the motive or inspiration? This is an examination of only a few factors working together to bring about this change.

In an August 30, 2010 article entitled, 'Religions should unite against radicalism,' Imam Faisal Abdul Rauf, who is leading the project to build a mosque and muslim/interfaith centre near the site of the September 11, 2001 attacks, provides a clue: "we are all in this together ... there is a common threat: Radicalism, which exists in all religions." He further states, "the real battlefront is not between Muslims and non-Muslims - the real battlefront is between moderates and extremists." In a Daily Times article entitled, "Interfaith harmony for world peace," the author Mohammed Jamil concludes that the 'fundamental reason for the turmoil and tension in the world is the absence of a just economic order.' In his reasoning, interfaith harmony is a means to solve this problem. In 2008, King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia called for interfaith dialogue between Islam, Christianity and Judaism and said at that time, "If God wills it, we will then meet with our brothers from other religions, including those of the Torah and the Gospel to come up with ways to safeguard humanity." The king, who is the guardian of the holy sites of Mecca and Medina reasoned that the major faiths "shared a desire to combat the disintegration of the family and the rise of atheism in the world."

The unifying theme in all interfaith dialogue is 'tolerance.' While this sounds virtuous and good, it is deceptive for that very reason. There is no question that peace-making is a noble effort. However, in the name of 'tolerance' and for the cause of eradicating 'radicalism,' it is highly likely that the Christian faith, specifically those who teach and maintain that Jesus Christ is the only way to God as truth - will be viewed as intolerant and bigoted, and even extreme. The increase in religious tensions all over the world in all forms; terrorist attacks, burning of books, arguments against the banning of books from schools, public offices, etc., will likely lead to global restrictive religious laws, in attempt to reduce these tensions, and promote 'tolerance' as a means to bring about global peace. The United Nations Alliance of Civilizations program is one such body set up for this. An article entitled, "Saudi U.N. Interfaith Movement would “Crush Religious Freedom” provides more insight on this topic.

The blending of faiths, and unifying of world religions in the name of peace, but to the exclusion of truth, is leading the world and those who follow this path into a deceptive trap.

Matthew Ch 7 v 13-14

The Narrow and Wide Gates

"Enter through the narrow gate; for the gate is wide and the way is broad that leads to destruction, and there are many who enter through it."
"For the gate is small and the way is narrow that leads to life, and there are few who find it."

Interfaith Conference Aims to Eliminate Preconceived Ideas

Posted: Sep 22, 2010 04:00 AM

An interfaith forum was held at Western Iowa Tech to spread the message of religious unity.

The event was held at the Cargill Arena on WIT's campus and gathered religious leaders from three faiths.

The clergymen answered questions from audience members about Christianity, Judaism, and Islam.

The organizers wanted a way to inform the public of the three religions similarities and differences and also wanted to help any preconceived notions of the faiths.

The organizers said they hope to have more interfaith discussions in the future and told us to keep a lookout on WIT's web site for more information on future meetings.

Pope finds Hinduism's "sense of the sacred, sacrifice and fasting" in agreement with Catholicism

http://in.news.yahoo.com/139/20101113/888/...e-of-the-s.html

Nevada (US), Nov 13 (ANI): "Evidence of a close connection between a relationship with God and the ethics of love for everyone is found in many great religious traditions", His Holiness Pope Benedict XVI wrote in his "Verbum Domini" (The Word of the Lord) apostolic exhortation released at Vatican City on November 11.

Talking about "dialogue with other religions", he voiced Catholic Church's respect "for the ancient religions and spiritual traditions of the various continents. These contain values which can greatly advance understanding between individuals and peoples. Frequently we note a consonance with values expressed also in their religious books, such as...in Hinduism, the sense of the sacred, sacrifice and fasting..."

This about 200-page document is addressed to the bishops, clergy, consecrated persons and the lay faithful.

Prominent Hindu statesman Rajan Zed, in a statement in Nevada (USA) today, welcomed Pope's overtures on interreligious dialogue and suggested him to invite world Hindu leaders to Vatican City and enter into a comprehensive dialogue as he had done with few other religions in the past.

Zed, who is President of Universal Society of Hinduism, pointed out that serious and honest interfaith dialogue was the need of the hour. Religion was the most powerful, complex and far-reaching force in our society, so we must take it seriously. And we all knew that religion comprised much more than our own particular tradition/experience.

After intensive deliberations, this proposed meeting of Catholic-Hindu leaders should come up with a concrete plan about the common religious concerns like human improvement, peace, ecological responsibility, social and economic development, etc. Maybe this gathering could become an annual feature after that, Rajan Zed added.

Zed further says that in our shared pursuit for the truth, we can learn from one another and thus can arrive nearer to the truth. Dialogue may help us vanquish the stereotypes, prejudices, caricatures, etc., passed on to us from previous generations. As dialogue brings us reciprocal enrichment, we shall be spiritually richer than before the contact.

Rajan Zed stressed that in the spirit of Synod of Bishops 2008 which recommended "strengthening inter-religious dialogue", Pope should visit a Hindu temple in the near future to promote mutual understanding and respect between the faiths. (ANI)

God's dream is for people of faith to be united, says archbishop

12/2/2010 11:07:00 AM
http://www.catholicsentinel.org/main.asp?S...ArticleID=13410

NEW ORLEANS — New Orleans Archbishop Gregory Aymond urged delegates attending an ecumenical conference to embrace a longing toward unity.

"God's dream for us is to be a united people, and we must pursue it ... and pledge together to do this," he said.

He made the comments at a prayer service at St. Louis Cathedral that opened the 2010 Centennial Ecumenical Gathering of the National Council of Churches in Christ, which had as its theme "Witnesses of These Things: Ecumenical Engagement in a New Era."

The Nov. 9-11 conference drew more than 400 Catholics, Baptists, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Mennonites, Unitarian Universalists, Orthodox and those of other faiths.

It marked the 100th anniversary of the 1910 World Mission Conference in Edinburgh, Scotland, an event many church historians regard as the beginning of the modern ecumenical movement.

The prayer service included a review of the gathering from its humble beginnings, but along with the history was conveyed the sentiment that while celebration was warranted for the strides toward Christian unity over the past century, the failure to fully receive God's gift of unity remains challenging and lamentable.

In his remarks, Archbishop Aymond told the attendees that the choice of New Orleans for their gathering was appropriate because it is a city of people of faith.

He mentioned how New Orleans had suffered its share of tragedies -- from fires, plagues, hurricanes and the recent oil spill. But it was after Hurricane Katrina that New Orleans had to overcome its fear of strangers, for it was the help of strangers from so many different faiths and ethnicities that "became the hands and hearts of Christ."

The archbishop said people shouldn't wait for a national tragedy to reach out to each other in faith, even though people may initially be strangers. He said he hoped that the centennial observance would heal divisions and offer true unity among Christian religions and get rid of that fear of stranger that is alive even in Christianity.

"We are here together to give thanks to God for the many signs of spiritual revelation and rebirth," he said. "That's what brings us together as Christians."

He rallied believers to cast their needs into the deep, even if it seems foolish to do so. He said Jesus is always with them saying, "Do not be afraid."

"We must have one God, and for that we pray, dialogue and we work," he said. "We welcome and embrace one another no longer as strangers but as brothers and sisters."

Archbishop Aymond suggested that as a unified body "and as a Christian church, we must help our world, our country, our society realize that there are strangers among us, but as Christians we must create a true unity."

He said even as Christians, sometimes we struggle to see the face of Christ in those who are different, the strangers among us. But Christ seeks unity in the diversity.

"We must show the rest of society that it is possible for us to be united," Archbishop Aymond said. "We come here to ask God's strength because more has to be done. ... If we, as a (national) council of churches (of Christ in the U.S.) .... don't take the lead, who will?'"

The gathering offered many opportunities for people of different faiths to explore ways in which they could find common ground.

"We come together as a church and speak with a common voice to a lot of the issues facing our society and world," said Father Robert Nemkovich Jr., a delegate from Fall River, Mass., representing the Polish National Catholic Church.

Those participating explored a diversity of issues facing the church and world today including social justice, interfaith issues, race and ethnicity, the need to engage young adults, and Muslim and Jewish relationships.

Speakers and preachers ran the gamut from the Rev. Lois M. Wilson of the United Church of Canada; the Rev. Olav Fykse Tveit, general secretary of the World Council of Churches; Rabbi Steve Gutow, president of the Jewish Council for Public Affairs; Sayyid Syeed, national director of the Office for Interfaith and Community Alliances for the Islamic Society of North America; and Bishop Vashti Murphy McKenzie, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. Greek Orthodox Archbishop Demetrios also led a Bible study.

Many sessions were small group discussions called "cafe conversations" led by a facilitator concerning the future of ecumenism. Discussions centered on a Christian understanding of unity in the age of radical diversity, mission in an age of interfaith relations, creation in an age of environment crisis, war in an age of terrorism and economy in an age of growing inequality.

The gathering also offered a work project through Project Homecoming to help rebuild New Orleans and served as the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference for the World Council of Churches.

The hope is "we can do something together whether as Christians or believers," Father Anthony Mikovsky of Scranton, Pa., said. "It's part of discernment, to see what we can do together."

Korean religious leaders visit Vatican

http://www.koreaherald.com/national/Detail...=20101216001195

Korean religious leaders met Pope Benedict XVI on Wednesday to exchange views on promoting inter-faith harmony with the Vatican, according to Yonhap News Agency.

The Korean Council of Religious Leaders, comprising representatives of Buddhism, Catholicism, Confucianism and Protestantism, visited the Vatican as part of their Christian pilgrimage from Dec. 6-16 to Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

It is the first time the leaders of the Korean faith communities made a group visit to a pope, the council said in a press release.

The visiting representatives include Kim Joo-won, general director of Won-Buddhism; Rev. Rhee Kwang-sun of the Christian Council of Korea; Hyginus Kim Hee-joong, archbishop of Gwangju; Ven. Jaseung, head of the Jogye Order of Korean Buddhism; Choi Gun-duk, president of Sung Kyun Kwan; and Han Yang-won, president of the Korean Council of Religious Leaders.

“The Vatican showed keen interest in the fact that Korean religious leaders jointly went on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land,” the council said in a press release.

They also met with senior Vatican leaders including Archbishop Pier Luigi Chelata and exchanged views on ways of promoting inter-faith peace.

SHERRY PEEL JACKSON IS BEING MURDERED IN PRISON BY LACK OF MEDICAL CARE! READ THIS ALL THE WAY TO THE END

Posted By: Rayelan <Send E-Mail>
Date: Tuesday, 1-Dec-2009 02:03:56 Note from Rayelan: I was married to a political prisoner who had his meds routinely withheld from him. They were heart meds and without them they thought he would die. Whenever they did this to him, he called me or his lawyer and both of us got on as many radio shows as possible. It was the ONLY thing that kept him alive. We must let these people know that we are watching and we will not stop bothering them until Sherry is free and home with her family.

Our letters worked for Gunther. They worked for Les Coleman. They WILL work for Sherry Peel Jackson. I don't have a prison address for her, but when I get one along with all the information on how to send her checks... and for a list of things we can send her.

Gunther was able to get vitamins. I don't know if they have changed the rules now. The vitamins had to come from a store not individual people.

There is a long email from the man who sent it to me... followed by a short email... in red... from her husband... followed by a long letter from Sherry.

You know that Sherry doesn't have access to a typewriter. I suspect that her letter had to be re-typed by someone to be included her.

Thank you for your attention to this.
Rayelan

Subject: [Lawmen: 3382] Scream BLOODY MURDER again, this time for Sherry Jackson, BEFORE it's too late!

You read that headline correctly. BLOODY MURDER. This time the feds seem intent upon MURDERING SHERRY JACKSON. See her own report below, and you'll understand. She details how the feds denied her medical care In prison and right now she IS IN THE PROCESS OF DYING.

Hello. Are you reading this? The IRS/DOJ/courts are MURDERING OUR STAUNCHEST ADVOCATES AGAINST CRIMINAL INCOME TAX COLLECTION, and ANYONE who stands much of a chance of exposing them.

Remember? Larry Becraft and Jeff Dickstein defended Sherry in a willful failure to file charge and the crooked judge gave her 6 years, scheduling her to get out of prison in 2011. Her "fellow" IRS agent witnesses testified against rather than for her, another example of the DOJ and IRS intimidating witnesses and suborning juries.

Remember?

And a week ago today, perhaps at this time, someone MURDERED Marcel Bendshadler's federal public defender Nancy Burgeson, daughter of an Orange County California lawmaker, IN COLD BLOOD, by strangling her to death on the very night the jury returned a guilty verdict against Marcel. And just a few weeks before, a defense team of investigator and public defender flew to California at government expense to interview Tom Cryer. The sat through his mini-seminar and then asked him whether it really was true that the IRS and DOJ LIE ROUTINELY to get convictions. When he said "yes," one of them responded "Those sons of bitches."

Well maybe, just maybe the perp murdered Bergeson because of her job. But common sense tells us to suspect her CURRENT CASE as the trigger. On the last day of the trial, she began stirring things up as she dug into the question of jury tampering. You read this in Cajun Mike's report. Marcel confirmed to me that Bergeson had begun to support him vigorously because she knew he was innocent of the charges and knew the IRS/DOJ had done something to poison the jury, friendly the last day of the trial, and then turned enemy by some influence on the day of the verdict. ONLY JURY TAMPERING can reasonably explain that.

I believe Bergeson threatened to expose the jury tampering in a NATIONAL SCANDAL, and the IRS had her murdered for it.

And I believe multiple $35,000 secret government-paid bribes (cash awards) and pay grade promotions provide a powerful motive for government employees to DO ANYTHING TO CONVICT and if necessary MURDER tax protestors, particularly the high-profile ones.

It would not surprise me to learn that prison officials and medical officials in the prison have also heard promises of secret cash awards to MURDER SHERRY JACKSON while trying to make it look like she died of natural causes.

EVERY ONE OF YOU spread these concerns to your legislators, the local sheriff, the FBI, the governor, and the NEWS MEDIA. Don't let another day go by without writing half a dozen letters demanding that Sherry be given proper medical care or released from prison, and the FBI and Oregon Sheriff redouble efforts to identify Nancy Bergeson's murderer.

SHERRY JACKSON WILL DIE IF YOU DON'T SAVE HER. Email Colin for her prison location details.

Hi Friends and Family,

Please, pray for my wife, Sherry Peel Jackson. She's still having challenges while she's incarcerated. Thank you, in advance, for your prayers and encouragement.

Here's a letter from Sherry to our Congressman, concerning her current situation.

God bless you. In Christ, Colin

Dear Congressman Johnson
I am Sherry Peel Jackson, your former CPA. I am writing you because I am concerned about my health and my life. Prior to becoming a political prisoner I was the picture of health. In late June, 2009 I started experiencing a rapid heart beat on an irregular basis.

Since this had happened infrequently in the past I did not think much of it. However, in Mid July it started happening on a regular basis and I became concerned. I went to the medical staff twice in Mid July only to be given a one-minute EKG test and powerful meds without proper diagnosis. I did not take them because I had not been seen by a specialist.

One week later, on July 21 at 12:45am I left the dorm in flip flops to go tell the officers that I was having a heart attack. The officers on duty called the ambulance and the ambulance checked my heart on their portable EKG machine. It was beating at 150 beats per minute.

They took me to Leesberg (spelling) hospital where I remained until Friday, July 24th at 11:30pm. During the hospital stay it was determined that my heart was healthy but my thyroid was producing too much hormone, thus speeding up my heart.

This is called hyperthyroidism or Graves disease. I was given two medications by the hospital - Methimazole, which is an anti-thyroid agent used to reduce the amount of thyroid hormone produced by the body and Metoprolol, which is a beta blocker used to slow the heart.

The hospital doctor told me that in four weeks (approximately August 21) the prison medical unit was to do blood tests to determine how the thyroid medication was affecting my body.

The blood test was taken in late August and I was told that I would be placed on the appointment schedule to come over and review the results. I was never called. I went over in early September and inquired of Dr. DeLeon as to how to get blood test results. He told me to put in a request to staff, so I did that on September 15th. It simply asked to see the results of the tests.

Sometime after September 23rd I received a response in writing, from Ms. Marich, that stated that I could either make a sick call (come over early in the morning wait in line and fill out forms) or come to Open House to see the results. Open house is held only on Thursdays from 3:00pm to 3:30pm. I went to Open House Thursday September 30th and was told by Ms. Marich that she could not find the results! I watched her look through and around several piles of folders in her office but at no time did she look on a computer for them. She told me to check back later. On Wednesday October 28th I passed out around 4pm and was taken to medical and cleared.

On Friday October 30th my lips started turning black as if I had been a lifelong smoker. By Sunday November 1st my lips were fully black.

My boss, the Chaplain, called medical and a male nurse was sent over from the medium security men's prison on this complex (there are two maximum security, one medium security and one low security men's prisons on this complex with the women's camp). He took my blood pressure and oxygen and said there was nothing else he could do. He told me to go to sick call Monday morning, which I did.

I showed Mr. Coucho my lips and told him that something was wrong with my blood, I could tell. (I am leaving out gross details here).

He said I would be put on the schedule. However, the very next day, Tuesday morning, November 3rd, I found blood in my stool and rushed over to medical because I am smart enough to know that this is a major problem. I was chewed out for coming over to medical without a staff member telling me to come. I told Charlie, the female nurse and Mr. Coucho the PA that I was in the hospital in July, never got the blood work results and something was terribly wrong.

I was 46 years old and I know my body! I finally convinced them that I was not playing and was not stupid, so they 'treated' me with a packet for a stool sample test. Mr. Coucho looked on the computer for the blood test results from August and found them there!

The blood test showed a problem with the thyroid way back then!
He said I would be put on the schedule for new blood work later that week because these results were too old. He had a short conversation with Dr. DeLeon in Spanish and then said the thyroid count was off.

This was November 3rd. I administered the stool tests and returned them to Nurse Charlie on Friday November 6th.

Today is November 26th, Thanksgiving. I have not received the results of the stool test. I have not been given any new blood test.

My neck is swelling up like a blow fish and I am having trouble talking. I have been feeling very ill for the last two weeks.

Congressman, I don't want them to kill me in here. As you well know, I am being punished for exposing government fraud. However, millions of people don't file tax returns and I was just used as an example by the DOJ for their new program called the Tax Defiers Initiative.

I have a wonderful husband and two beautiful children. I have already spent 21 months in prison for a non crime, and I refuse to come out dead or maimed for life. I have not caused these people any problems. This is no threat but just for your information.

I also wrote the warden today. Things can't go on this way as I languish in here for someone's political gain. God doesn't like ugly and He is the ultimate judge and vindicator.

I was given two medications by the hospital - Methimazole, which is an anti-thyroid agent used to reduce the amount of thyroid hormone produced by the body and Metoprolol, which is a beta blocker used to slow the heart. The hospital doctor told me that in four weeks (approximately August 21) the prison medical unit was to do blood tests to determine how the thyroid medication was affecting my body.

The blood test was taken in late August and I was told that I would be placed on the appointment schedule to come over and review the results. I was never called. I went over in early September and inquired of Dr. DeLeon as to how to get blood test results. He told me to put in a request to staff, so I did that on September 15th. It simply asked to see the results of the tests.

Sometime after September 23rd I received a response in writing, from Ms. Marich, that stated that I could either make a sick call (come over early in the morning wait in line and fill out forms) or come to Open House to see the results. Open house is held only on Thursdays from 3:00pm to 3:30pm. I went to Open House Thursday September 30th and was told by Ms. Marich that she could not find the results! I watched her look through and around several piles of folders in her office but at no time did she look on a computer for them. She told me to check back later.

On Wednesday October 28th I passed out around 4pm and was taken to medical and cleared. On Friday October 30th my lips started turning black as if I had been a lifelong smoker. By Sunday November 1st my lips were fully black.

My boss, the Chaplain, called medical and a male nurse was sent over from the medium security men's prison on this complex (there are two maximum security, one medium security and one low security men's prisons on this complex with the women's camp). He took my blood pressure and oxygen and said there was nothing else he could do. He told me to go to sick call Monday morning, which I did. I showed Mr. Coucho my lips and told him that something was wrong with my blood, I could tell. (I am leaving out gross details here). He said I would be put on the schedule.

However, the very next day, Tuesday morning, November 3rd, I found blood in my stool and rushed over to medical because I am smart enough to know that this is a major problem. I was chewed out for coming over to medical without a staff member telling me to come. I told Charlie, the female nurse and Mr. Coucho the PA that I was in the hospital in July, never got the blood work results and something was terribly wrong. I was 46 years old and I know my body! I finally convinced them that I was not playing and was not stupid, so they 'treated' me with a packet for a stool sample test.

Mr. Coucho looked on the computer for the blood test results from August and found them there! The blood test showed a problem with the thyroid way back then! He said I would be put on the schedule for new blood work later that week because these results were too old. He had a short conversation with Dr. DeLeon in Spanish and then said the thyroid count was off. This was November 3rd. I administered the stool tests and returned them to Nurse Charlie on Friday November 6th.

Today is November 26th, Thanksgiving. I have not received the results of the stool test. I have not been given any new blood test. My neck is swelling up like a blow fish and I am having trouble talking. I have been feeling very ill for the last two weeks.

Congressman, I don't want them to kill me in here. As you well know, I am being punished for exposing government fraud. However, millions of people don't file tax returns and I was just used as an example by the DOJ for their new program called the Tax Defiers Initiative.

I have a wonderful husband and two beautiful children. I have already spent 21 months in prison for a non crime, and I refuse to come out dead or maimed for life. I have not caused these people any problems. This is no threat but just for your information. I also wrote the warden today. Things can't go on this way as I languish in here for someone's political gain. God doesn't like ugly and He is the ultimate judge and vindicator.

I JUST CALLED THE PRISON WHERE SHERRY WAS SUPPOSED TO BE NOW

In Response To: A NEW EMAIL FROM COLIN JACKSON - SHERRY'S BEEN MOVED - YOU WON'T BELIEVE WHY!! (Rayelan)

The facility where Sherry was moved was NOT part of the federal prison system.

It was a county detention center in Sumter County.

I just got off the phone with the booking office.

I asked if Sherry Peel Jackson was there.

I was told she had been released.

For a moment my heart jumped because I thought she had REALLY been released!!

I said... "Released? Released where?"

She answered, "Back to Federal"

"federal?" I exclaimed. "What Federal?"

I was told she was released back to Coleman.

I asked why she had been transferred to the Sumter Facility in the first place.

The woman seemed like she wanted to tell me, but then she said. "I can't answer that."

I have informed Colin that she is no longer at Sumter county detention center is Bushnell, Florida.

Stay tuned... updates are coming.

Hi Rayelan,

Sherry cannot receive CD's or anything. Only paperwork, paper back books and non-audio greeting cards.

She was moved to a new facility on 12-16-09. Her spirit is strong but, I'm concerned about the kind of medical attention she may or may not get. I'm also concerned that our planned trip to see her this Christmas may be cancelled. Her new address is:

Sherry Peel Jackson
Booking # 2009-003275
ID # 0227712
P.O. Box 188
219 East Anderson Ave.

(352)793-0225

They said that the reason they moved her was because they are investigating whether or not she contacted the media (which is supposedly a violation of the BOP). A magazine came to the prison with her picture on the cover and a copy of the letter she wrote to Congressman Hank Johnson. She DID NOT contact any media and a very small investigation would show that without her being moved.

God bless you.
In Christ, Colin

Rally To Free Ex-IRS Agent Who Admitted The IRS Is A Fraud & Refused To Add To The Ponzi Scheme

source: http://www.libertyontour.com/2010/11/01/freesherry/

The Free Sherry Peel Jackson: Taxation Is Theft! rally happening on Wednesday, Nov. 10th at noon just northwest of Orlando.

Sherry Peel Jackson, a former IRS agent, is a political prisoner being kept in a cage because she concluded that the wealth she earned was not owed to the criminal U.S. government. She's featured in the late Aaron Russo's Freedom to Fascism (see her at 1:55 in this trailer for the documentary) and here's the first of a two-part video about Sherry and her situation.

She's almost three-years into her four-year sentence and needs our support.

How can you help?

* Join us at noon on Nov. 10th outside the Federal Correctional Institution at Coleman, where she's being held. Here's a Google Map to the location of Sherry's cage.
* Invite your friends. Share this post or the event on Facebook.
* Make a video or blog post expressing your support. Include "Free Sherry Peel Jackson" in the title to help with branding.
* Write to Sherry:
* Sherry Peel Jackson
59085019
FCC Coleman Camp, F1

P. O. Box 1027
Coleman, FL 33521-1027
* Contact the media. Encourage them to cover the event.
* Inform those in your sphere about the immorality and illegality of the IRS. Theft is theft, whether it's done by you, me or a stranger who believes their badge or title grants them such authority (more on this from Voluntaryist.com/Taxation).
* Share your ideas with others so we can learn from each other and have as big an impact as possible. Leave a comment here or on the Facebook Event.

Props to James Cox, the point-person for the Fully Informed Jury Association here in Florida, and everyone else with whom we're collaborating to make this event a reality. Unfortunately there are many good, peaceful people like Sherry that are being kept in a cage for actions the U.S. government deems "illicit" despite the fact that there is no real victim. Learn about some of them, and if you're so-inclined, send them a letter or postcard for free via Mail-to-Jail.

Arctic ice refuses to melt as ordered

There's something rotten north of Denmark

By Steven Goddard → More by this authorPublished Friday 15th August 2008

http://www.theregister.co.uk/2008/08/15/go...ic_ice_mystery/

The Need for Vulnerability Management Just a few weeks ago, predictions of Arctic ice collapse were buzzing all over the internet. Some scientists were predicting that the "North Pole may be ice-free for first time this summer". Others predicted that the entire "polar ice cap would disappear this summer".

The Arctic melt season is nearly done for this year. The sun is now very low above the horizon and will set for the winter at the North Pole in five weeks. And none of these dire predictions have come to pass. Yet there is, however, something odd going on with the ice data.

The National Snow and Ice Data Center (NSIDC) in Boulder, Colorado released an alarming graph on August 11, showing that Arctic ice was rapidly disappearing, back towards last year's record minimum. Their data shows Arctic sea ice extent only 10 per cent greater than this date in 2007, and the second lowest on record. Here's a smaller version of the graph:

The National Snow and Ice Data Center (NSIDC)'s troublesome ice graph

The problem is that this graph does not appear to be correct. Other data sources show Arctic ice having made a nice recovery this summer. NASA Marshall Space Flight Center data shows 2008 ice nearly identical to 2002, 2005 and 2006. Maps of Arctic ice extent are readily available from several sources, including the University of Illinois, which keeps a daily archive for the last 30 years. A comparison of these maps (derived from NSIDC data) below shows that Arctic ice extent was 30 per cent greater on August 11, 2008 than it was on the August 12, 2007. (2008 is a leap year, so the dates are offset by one.)

Ice at the Arctic: 2007 and 2008 snapshots

The video below highlights the differences between those two dates. As you can see, ice has grown in nearly every direction since last summer - with a large increase in the area north of Siberia. Also note that the area around the Northwest Passage (west of Greenland) has seen a significant increase in ice. Some of the islands in the Canadian Archipelago are surrounded by more ice than they were during the summer of 1980.

[dohtml]<object width="425" height="344"><param name="movie" value="http://www.youtube.com/v/cKLiHWRaJU4&color1=11645361&color2=13619151&hl=en&fs=1"></param><param name="wmode" value="transparent"></param><param name="allowFullScreen" value="true"></param><embed src="http://www.youtube.com/v/cKLiHWRaJU4&color1=11645361&color2=13619151&hl=en&fs=1" type="application/x-shockwave-flash" allowfullscreen="true" wmode="transparent" width="425" height="344"></embed></object>[/dohtml]

The 30 per cent increase was calculated by counting pixels which contain colors representing ice. This is a conservative calculation, because of the map projection used. As the ice expands away from the pole, each new pixel represents a larger area - so the net effect is that the calculated 30 per cent increase is actually on the low side.

So how did NSIDC calculate a 10 per cent increase over 2007? Their graph appears to disagree with the maps by a factor of three (10 per cent vs. 30 per cent) - hardly a trivial discrepancy.

What melts the Arctic?
The Arctic did not experience the meltdowns forecast by NSIDC and the Norwegian Polar Year Secretariat. It didn't even come close. Additionally, some current graphs and press releases from NSIDC seem less than conservative. There appears to be a consistent pattern of overstatement related to Arctic ice loss.

We know that Arctic summer ice extent is largely determined by variable oceanic and atmospheric currents such as the Arctic Oscillation. NASA claimed last summer that "not all the large changes seen in Arctic climate in recent years are a result of long-term trends associated with global warming". The media tendency to knee-jerkingly blame everything on "global warming" makes for an easy story - but it is not based on solid science. ®

Bootnote
And what of the Antarctic? Down south, ice extent is well ahead of the recent average. Why isn't NSIDC making similarly high-profile press releases about the increase in Antarctic ice over the last 30 years?

The author, Steven Goddard, is not affiliated directly or indirectly with any energy industry, nor does he have any current affiliation with any university.

Arctic Sea Sees Massive Gain in Ice Coverage

September 3, 2008
http://www.dailytech.com/Arctic+Sees+Massi...rticle12851.htm

Data from the National Snow and Ice Data Center (NSIDC) has indicated a dramatic increase in sea ice extent in the Arctic regions. The growth over the past year covers an area of 700,000 square kilometers: an amount twice the size the nation of Germany.

With the Arctic melting season over for 2008, ice cover will continue to increase until melting begins anew next spring.

The data is for August 2008 and indicates a total sea ice area of six million square kilometers. Ice extent for the same month in 2007 covered 5.3 million square kilometers, a historic low. Earlier this year, media accounts were rife with predictions that this year would again see a new record. Instead, the Arctic has seen a gain of about thirteen percent.

William Chapman, a researcher with the Arctic Climate Research Center at the University of Illinois, tells DailyTech that this year the Arctic was "definitely colder" than 2007. Chapman also says part of the reason for the large ice loss in 2007 was strong winds from Siberia, which affect both ice formation and drift, forcing ice into warmer waters where it melts.

Earlier predictions were also wrong because researchers thought thinner ice would melt faster in subsequent years. Instead, according to the NSIDC, the new ice had less snow coverage to insulate it from the bitterly cold air, resulting in a faster rate of ice growth.

Most concern has focused on the Arctic regions, rather than Antarctica. Recent research has indicated Antarctica is on a long-term cooling trend, for reasons which remain unclear.

Earlier this year, concerns over global warming led the US to officially list the polar bear a threatened species, over objections from experts who claimed the animal's numbers were increasing.

Global Cooling? Unprecedented Ice Storms In Kenya

But suspend your rational thought process for a moment - the WWF assures us that CO2 causes global warming and global cooling

Paul Joseph Watson
Thursday, September 4, 2008
http://www.propagandamatrix.com/articles/s..._ice_storms.htm

Evidence that the planet is tip-toeing towards the onset of a new mini ice age continues to present itself following unprecedented ice storms in Kenya as well as Sydney experiencing its coldest August for 60 years. But don't worry because according to the World Wildlife Fund, global cooling can just as easily be blamed on CO2 emissions as can global warming.

The cold snap arrives on the back of the Sun reaching a milestone not observed in nearly 100 years - the entire month of August passed without a single sunspot being noted.

Lack of solar activity in 2008 has coincided with evidence of a cooling trend across the world.

Earlier this year, China experienced its coldest winter in 100 years while northeast America was hit by record snow levels and Britain suffered its coldest April in decades as late-blooming daffodils were pounded with hail and snow on an almost daily basis. The British summer also left many yearning for global warming, with temperatures in June and July rarely struggling to get over 16 degrees and on one occasion even dropping as low as 9 degrees in the middle of the afternoon.

"Summer heat continues in short supply, continuing a trend that has dominated much of the 21st Century's opening decade," reports the Chicago Tribune. "There have been only 162 days 90 degrees or warmer at Midway Airport over the period from 2000 to 2008. That's by far the fewest 90-degree temperatures in the opening nine years of any decade on record here since 1930."

According to an Associated Press report, The Farmers Almanac is now also predicting "below-average temperatures for most of the U.S." The publication boasts of an 85 per cent accuracy rate for its forecasts which are given two years in advance.

According to a report from the World Meteorological Organization last month, the first half of 2008 was the coolest for at least five years, adding that it may actually be the coolest since 2000.

Meanwhile, Arctic ice has expanded by 30 per cent since this time last year as respected scientists predict a new mini ice age within 10 years.

Continuing the trend, parts of Kenya just experienced unprecedented ice storms after which 4 inch deep hail covered the ground.

"Residents of a village in central Kenya were shocked to see a blanket of hail resembling snow covering their land," reports the BBC.

"I have not seen such a thing ever since I was born," said one resident of Nyahururu.

Hail storms in western Kenya are not unknown, but the hail normally melts instantly because of high temperatures on the ground. Not this time around, and Kenyans were keen to take advantage of the rare event by enjoying numerous photo opportunities.

Meanwhile, in Sydney, Australians are talking about "the big chill," the coldest August in Sydney for more than 60 years.

So what's to blame for the sudden cold snap affecting many parts of the globe? The rapid decrease in solar activity, an event that has always preceded similar mini-ice age periods throughout history?

Not according to the World Wildlife Fund, who blame human-caused CO2 emissions for the cold snap.

That's right - in case you weren't aware of the new climate change catch-all explanation, CO2 now causes global warming as well as global cooling.

All weather events, be it rainfall, storms, hurricanes, typhoons or earthquakes are also caused by CO2 emissions.

But don't worry because experts have the solution that can save us all from global warming, global cooling, or whatever the weather happens to be doing at any particular time.

At a cost to the taxpayer of around $100 billion dollars a year, as part of a program to "geo-engineer" the world, scientists are proposing to build a fleet of spaceships that will be sent up above the Earth's atmosphere, spanning half the diameter of the entire planet, to block out the Sun from reaching parts of the globe.

But I thought CO2, and not the Sun, was the main driver of climate change?

Maybe Barney the purple dinosaur is the true culprit behind it all - but whatever the explanation - at least I can be assured that my government and the esteemed experts advising them will do their level best to tax and control every aspect of my behavior in the interests of saving us all from global warming, global cooling, or whatever else the weather decides to do tomorrow.

Summer has been one of Alaska's coldest

High temperatures this season were 3rd lowest on record

http://www.adn.com/news/environment/story/518517.html

Summer is officially over in Alaska, and if you got out in the sun to enjoy both days of it you were lucky.

Those were the two July days the temperature at the offices of the National Weather Service in Anchorage hit 70 degrees or better.

"Those temperatures occurred at the beginning of the month (of July) and were immediately followed by a long stretch of cool and wet weather.

"With only two days above 70 degrees this year, that sets a new record for the fewest days to reach 70," the weather-watching agency reported Friday.

Add to the lack of heat and sunshine what the agency calls "an astonishing 77%" of days colder than normal, and you get the picture.

This summer was every bit as bad as you thought it was.

Gardens didn't grow. Salmon returned late. Bees didn't make honey. Swallows didn't breed.

ADVERTISEMENT

And the sunbathing, well, what sunbathing?

On average, Anchorage sees 16 days that hit 70 or better.

Not this year. Not since 1980 has there been a summer less reflective of global warming than this one. Consider these 2008 benchmarks from the weather service that say this month won't be any better:

Over the course of the past 87 years, September temperatures have reached 70 only 17 times, and two of those 70-degree days came in the same year, according to the weather service.

On average, a 70-degree September day comes along about once every five years, but those days also tend to come in warm years, not years like this one.

Overall, the weather service ranks the summer of 2008 as having the third coolest average high temperatures since record keeping began. Only the summers of 1973 and 1971 were worse. In overall average daily temperatures, 2008 ranked 11th place.

CLOUDS ARE GOOD?

All that stopped this summer from winning a place as coldest ever was, strangely enough, its cloudy grimness.

"What seemed like endless days of cloud cover kept the daytime highs averaging 3 degrees below normal," according to the weather service. "Inversely, the cloud cover helped to keep overnight temperatures up.

"The minimum temperatures in the summer of 2008 only ranked as the 34th coolest on record."

Now, there's something to cheer about. That and the fact that, though the summer left the birds and the bees struggling, the mosquitoes seemed to be doing just fine.

So what can you expect from here on out?

"September climatologically opens with high temperatures around 60 and overnight lows in the middle 40s," says the local office of the weather service. Followed by October, when temperatures start to really drop, to the 20s and 30s by the end of the month.

That is the normal pattern.

This year?

The National Climate Prediction center is calling for "below normal temperatures along southern Alaska (through September)." Warm waters flowing north into the Gulf of Alaska mean Southcentral Alaska could be back to "normal" -- if there is such a thing -- by October or November.

That would be just in time for the snow-sport season that lasts about twice as long as summer.

Meanwhile, in case you forgot, the days are getting shorter, too.

Contact Craig Medred cmedred@adn.com or call 257-4588.

• Anchorage's average high temperature was 60.9 degrees, 3 degrees below normal.

• The average low was 47.7 degrees, 1.9 degrees below normal.

• The average for the season was 54.3 degrees, 2.4 degrees below normal.

Soggy September already on course to break records

Forecasters say Britain is on course for the wettest September since records began, only a week into the month.

By John Bingham
Last Updated: 8:44PM BST 08 Sep 2008
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/uknews/270...ak-records.html

Parts of north east England have already exceeded average monthly levels with forecasts of further severe downpours to come on Tuesday.

The Met Office has issued a string of severe weather warnings for western areas of the British Isles throughout the week.

Northern Ireland, Wales, western England and south west Scotland are set to see about an inch of rain on Tuesday bringing fears of further localised flooding.

Then remnants of Hurricane Hanna, the storm which has wreaked havoc in the Caribbean, will then hit Britain on Thursday bringing more heavy rain.

The alerts came as the Association of British Insurers said repair bills from the recent floods, which claimed seven lives, could hit £15 million.

Worst hit was Morpeth in Northumbria where 900 homes had to be evacuated before the River Wansbeck burst its banks, leaving the town's High Street under 2ft of water.

During a visit by John Healey, the floods minister, residents complained that expanding bags designed to safeguard their property had simply floated away forcing them to hurriedly fill sandbags from children's sandpits.

But the Environment Agency said towns including Hexham, West Auckland, Corbridge and Warden in Northumberland and Yarm, Teesside, would all have faced a similar fate to Morpeth had it not been for recent flood defences.

Fears that rivers such as the Ouse in North Yorkshire which have been swollen by draining flood waters could overwhelm defences have subsided.

Details have emerged of a series of tragedies and dramatic rescues over the weekend.

A 17-year-old girl who was killed when the 4x4 vehicle she was travelling in was swept into a river by floodwater on a remote mountainside at Llyn Brianne in Powys, Wales, was named as Louise Ferreira, from Thamesmead, south London, at an inquest.

Police believe her father, who was driving the vehicle, under-estimated the depth of a stream and crossed, causing the vehicle to be swept into a larger river.

Details also emerged of an accident in Birmingham on Sunday in which a car ploughed into a bus stop on a wet road, bursting into flames and killing the driver, a man in his 20s.

The RSPCA carried out one of its biggest ever animal rescue operations, ferrying more than 150 sheep to safety from a flooded field in Whittington, Staffs, on Sunday and Monday. A further 70 sheep were rescued near Morpeth and in Herefordshire.

Provisional Met Office figures show that Albemarle in Northumberland saw 4.4 inches of rain on Friday, Saturday and Sunday - already exceeding the 3.9 inches seen in an average September.

The wettest September on record was in 1918 when Britain saw an average of 7.1 inches of rain.

"At the moment we are well on course for one of the wettest Septembers," said Met Office forecaster John Hammond.

Sorry to ruin the fun, but an ice age cometh

http://www.theaustralian.news.com.au/story...-7583%2C00.html

THE scariest photo I have seen on the internet is www.spaceweather.com, where you will find a real-time image of the sun from the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory, located in deep space at the equilibrium point between solar and terrestrial gravity.

What is scary about the picture is that there is only one tiny sunspot.

Disconcerting as it may be to true believers in global warming, the average temperature on Earth has remained steady or slowly declined during the past decade, despite the continued increase in the atmospheric concentration of carbon dioxide, and now the global temperature is falling precipitously.

All four agencies that track Earth's temperature (the Hadley Climate Research Unit in Britain, the NASA Goddard Institute for Space Studies in New York, the Christy group at the University of Alabama, and Remote Sensing Systems Inc in California) report that it cooled by about 0.7C in 2007. This is the fastest temperature change in the instrumental record and it puts us back where we were in 1930. If the temperature does not soon recover, we will have to conclude that global warming is over.

There is also plenty of anecdotal evidence that 2007 was exceptionally cold. It snowed in Baghdad for the first time in centuries, the winter in China was simply terrible and the extent of Antarctic sea ice in the austral winter was the greatest on record since James Cook discovered the place in 1770.

It is generally not possible to draw conclusions about climatic trends from events in a single year, so I would normally dismiss this cold snap as transient, pending what happens in the next few years.

This is where SOHO comes in. The sunspot number follows a cycle of somewhat variable length, averaging 11 years. The most recent minimum was in March last year. The new cycle, No.24, was supposed to start soon after that, with a gradual build-up in sunspot numbers.

It didn't happen. The first sunspot appeared in January this year and lasted only two days. A tiny spot appeared last Monday but vanished within 24 hours. Another little spot appeared this Monday. Pray that there will be many more, and soon.

The reason this matters is that there is a close correlation between variations in the sunspot cycle and Earth's climate. The previous time a cycle was delayed like this was in the Dalton Minimum, an especially cold period that lasted several decades from 1790.

Northern winters became ferocious: in particular, the rout of Napoleon's Grand Army during the retreat from Moscow in 1812 was at least partly due to the lack of sunspots.

That the rapid temperature decline in 2007 coincided with the failure of cycle No.24 to begin on schedule is not proof of a causal connection but it is cause for concern.

It is time to put aside the global warming dogma, at least to begin contingency planning about what to do if we are moving into another little ice age, similar to the one that lasted from 1100 to 1850.

There is no doubt that the next little ice age would be much worse than the previous one and much more harmful than anything warming may do. There are many more people now and we have become dependent on a few temperate agricultural areas, especially in the US and Canada. Global warming would increase agricultural output, but global cooling will decrease it.

Millions will starve if we do nothing to prepare for it (such as planning changes in agriculture to compensate), and millions more will die from cold-related diseases.

There is also another possibility, remote but much more serious. The Greenland and Antarctic ice cores and other evidence show that for the past several million years, severe glaciation has almost always afflicted our planet.

The bleak truth is that, under normal conditions, most of North America and Europe are buried under about 1.5km of ice. This bitterly frigid climate is interrupted occasionally by brief warm interglacials, typically lasting less than 10,000 years.

The interglacial we have enjoyed throughout recorded human history, called the Holocene, began 11,000 years ago, so the ice is overdue. We also know that glaciation can occur quickly: the required decline in global temperature is about 12C and it can happen in 20 years.

The next descent into an ice age is inevitable but may not happen for another 1000 years. On the other hand, it must be noted that the cooling in 2007 was even faster than in typical glacial transitions. If it continued for 20 years, the temperature would be 14C cooler in 2027.

By then, most of the advanced nations would have ceased to exist, vanishing under the ice, and the rest of the world would be faced with a catastrophe beyond imagining.

Australia may escape total annihilation but would surely be overrun by millions of refugees. Once the glaciation starts, it will last 1000 centuries, an incomprehensible stretch of time.

If the ice age is coming, there is a small chance that we could prevent or at least delay the transition, if we are prepared to take action soon enough and on a large enough scale.

For example: We could gather all the bulldozers in the world and use them to dirty the snow in Canada and Siberia in the hope of reducing the reflectance so as to absorb more warmth from the sun.

We also may be able to release enormous floods of methane (a potent greenhouse gas) from the hydrates under the Arctic permafrost and on the continental shelves, perhaps using nuclear weapons to destabilise the deposits.

We cannot really know, but my guess is that the odds are at least 50-50 that we will see significant cooling rather than warming in coming decades.

The probability that we are witnessing the onset of a real ice age is much less, perhaps one in 500, but not totally negligible.

All those urging action to curb global warming need to take off the blinkers and give some thought to what we should do if we are facing global cooling instead.

It will be difficult for people to face the truth when their reputations, careers, government grants or hopes for social change depend on global warming, but the fate of civilisation may be at stake.

In the famous words of Oliver Cromwell, "I beseech you, in the bowels of Christ, think it possible you may be mistaken."

Surprise spring snowfalls blanket KZN

September 21 2008 at 10:23AM
http://www.int.iol.co.za/index.php?set_id=...84615870C810928

Parts of KwaZulu-Natal were transformed into a "winter wonderland" after snowfalls blanketed several areas of the province.

Temperatures plummeted into the low teens, with residents of Kokstad and Giants Castle waking up to 0C.

Durban experienced its coldest September night in recorded history on Friday night.

Snowfalls were reported in Kokstad, Matatiele, Underberg, Mooi River, Bulwer, Himeville and Nottingham Road.

Several roads in the province were closed and people were advised not to go snow hunting, as they risked becoming stuck in traffic and not being able to keep themselves warm.

The road between Harding and Kokstad was closed for most of yesterday, but has since been reopened.

Transport spokesperson Nonkululeko Mbatha said four accidents had been reported on the N3 freeway between Ashburton and Nottingham road as a result of the snow and several people had been seriously injured.

"All motorists on the N3 are urged to reduce their speed," she said.

The severe weather also disrupted power supplies in a number of areas including Underberg and Kokstad. Cellphone communication was also down.

The weather service said the cold spell was due to a high pressure system to the east of the country, and an upper air trough brought the cloudy and very cold conditions to parts of the Eastern Cape and KwaZulu-Natal.

The weather service predicted further rain for Sunday.

On Monday it will be sunny and cool to warm over most parts of the country. No rainfall is expected.

Bad weather was good for Alaska glaciers

MASS BALANCE: For decades, summer snow loss has exceeded winter snowfall.

Two hundred years of glacial shrinkage in Alaska, and then came the winter and summer of 2007-2008.

Unusually large amounts of winter snow were followed by unusually chill temperatures in June, July and August.

"In mid-June, I was surprised to see snow still at sea level in Prince William Sound," said U.S. Geological Survey glaciologist Bruce Molnia. "On the Juneau Icefield, there was still 20 feet of new snow on the surface of the Taku Glacier in late July. At Bering Glacier, a landslide I am studying, located at about 1,500 feet elevation, did not become snow free until early August.

"In general, the weather this summer was the worst I have seen in at least 20 years."

Never before in the history of a research project dating back to 1946 had the Juneau Icefield witnessed the kind of snow buildup that came this year. It was similar on a lot of other glaciers too.

"It's been a long time on most glaciers where they've actually had positive mass balance," Molnia said.

That's the way a scientist says the glaciers got thicker in the middle.

ADVERTISEMENT

Mass balance is the difference between how much snow falls every winter and how much snow fades away each summer. For most Alaska glaciers, the summer snow loss has for decades exceeded the winter snowfall.

The result has put the state's glaciers on a long-term diet. Every year they lose the snow of the previous winter plus some of the snow from years before. And so they steadily shrink.

Since Alaska's glacial maximum back in the 1700s, Molnia said, "I figure that we've lost about 15 percent of the total area."

What might be the most notable long-term shrinkage has occurred at Glacier Bay, now the site of a national park in Southeast Alaska. When the first Russian explorers arrived in Alaska in the 1740s, there was no Glacier Bay. There was simply a wall of ice across the north side of Icy Strait.

That ice retreated to form a bay and what is now known as the Muir Glacier. And from the 1800s until now, the Muir Glacier just kept retreating and retreating and retreating. It is now back 57 miles from the entrance to the bay, said Tom Vandenberg, chief interpretative ranger at Glacier Bay.

That's farther than the distance from glacier-free Anchorage to Girdwood, where seven glaciers overhang the valley surrounding the state's largest ski area. The glaciers there, like the Muir and hundreds of other Alaska glaciers, have been part of the long retreat.

Overall, Molnia figures Alaska has lost 10,000 to 12,000 square kilometers of ice in the past two centuries, enough to cover an area nearly the size of Connecticut.

Molnia has just completed a major study of Alaska glaciers using satellite images and aerial photographs to catalog shrinkage. The 550-page "Glaciers of Alaska" will provide a benchmark for tracking what happens to the state's glaciers in the future.

Climate change has led to speculation they might all disappear. Molnia isn't sure what to expect. As far as glaciers go, he said, Alaska's glaciers are volatile. They live life on the edge.

"What we're talking about to (change) most of Alaska's glaciers is a small temperature change; just a small fraction-of-a-degree change makes a big difference. It's the mean annual temperature that's the big thing.

"All it takes is a warm summer to have a really dramatic effect on the melting."

Or a cool summer to shift that mass balance the other way.

One cool summer that leaves 20 feet of new snow still sitting atop glaciers come the start of the next winter is no big deal, Molnia said.

Ten summers like that?

Well, that might mark the start of something like the Little Ice Age.

During the Little Ice Age -- roughly the 16th century to the 19th -- Muir Glacier filled Glacier Bay and the people of Europe struggled to survive because of difficult conditions for agriculture. Some of them fled for America in the first wave of white immigration.

The Pilgrims established the Plymouth Colony in December 1620. By spring, a bitterly cold winter had played a key role in helping kill half of them. Hindered by a chilly climate, the white colonization of North America through the 1600s and 1700s was slow.

As the climate warmed from 1800 to 1900, the United States tripled in size. The windy and cold city of Chicago grew from an outpost of fewer than 4,000 in 1800 to a thriving city of more than 1.5 million at the end of that century.

The difference in temperature between the Little Ice Age and these heady days of American expansion?

About three or four degrees, Molnia said.

The difference in temperature between this summer in Anchorage -- the third coldest on record -- and the norm?

About three degrees, according to the National Weather Service.

Does it mean anything?

Nobody knows. Climate is constantly shifting. And even if the past year was a signal of a changing future, Molnia said, it would still take decades to make itself noticeable in Alaska's glaciers.

Rivers of ice flow slowly. Hundreds of feet of snow would have to accumulate at higher elevations to create enough pressure to stall the current glacial retreat and start a new advance. Even if the glaciers started growing today, Molnia said, it might take up to 100 years for them to start steadily rolling back down into the valleys they've abandoned.

"It's different time scales," he said. "We're just starting to understand."

As strange it might seem, Alaska's glaciers could appear to be shrinking for some time while secretly growing. Molnia said there are a few glaciers in the state now where constant snow accumulations at higher elevations are causing them to thicken even as their lower reaches follow the pattern of retreat fueled by the global warming of recent decades.

30-Years Of Warmer Temperatures Go Poof

http://network.nationalpost.com/np/blogs/f...es-go-poof.aspx

In early September, I began noticing a string of news stories about scientists rejecting the orthodoxy on global warming. Actually, it was more like a string of guest columns and long letters to the editor since it is hard for skeptical scientists to get published in the cabal of climate journals now controlled by the Great Sanhedrin of the environmental movement.

Still, the number of climate change skeptics is growing rapidly. Because a funny thing is happening to global temperatures -- they're going down, not up.

On the same day (Sept. 5) that areas of southern Brazil were recording one of their latest winter snowfalls ever and entering what turned out to be their coldest September in a century, Brazilian meteorologist Eugenio Hackbart explained that extreme cold or snowfall events in his country have always been tied to "a negative PDO" or Pacific Decadal Oscillation. Positive PDOs -- El Ninos -- produce above-average temperatures in South America while negative ones -- La Ninas -- produce below average ones.

Dr. Hackbart also pointed out that periods of solar inactivity known as "solar minimums" magnify cold spells on his continent. So, given that August was the first month since 1913 in which no sunspot activity was recorded -- none -- and during which solar winds were at a 50-year low, he was not surprised that Brazilians were suffering (for them) a brutal cold snap. "This is no coincidence," he said as he scoffed at the notion that manmade carbon emissions had more impact than the sun and oceans on global climate.

Also in September, American Craig Loehle, a scientist who conducts computer modelling on global climate change, confirmed his earlier findings that the so-called Medieval Warm Period (MWP) of about 1,000 years ago did in fact exist and was even warmer than 20th-century temperatures.

Prior to the past decade of climate hysteria and Kyoto hype, the MWP was a given in the scientific community. Several hundred studies of tree rings, lake and ocean floor sediment, ice cores and early written records of weather -- even harvest totals and censuses --confirmed that the period from 800 AD to 1300 AD was unusually warm, particularly in Northern Europe.

But in order to prove the climate scaremongers' claim that 20th-century warming had been dangerous and unprecedented -- a result of human, not natural factors -- the MWP had to be made to disappear. So studies such as Michael Mann's "hockey stick," in which there is no MWP and global temperatures rise gradually until they jump up in the industrial age, have been adopted by the UN as proof that recent climate change necessitates a reordering of human economies and societies.

Dr. Loehle's work helps end this deception.

Don Easterbrook, a geologist at Western Washington University, says, "It's practically a slam dunk that we are in for about 30 years of global cooling," as the sun enters a particularly inactive phase. His examination of warming and cooling trends over the past four centuries shows an "almost exact correlation" between climate fluctuations and solar energy received on Earth, while showing almost "no correlation at all with CO2."

An analytical chemist who works in spectroscopy and atmospheric sensing, Michael J. Myers of Hilton Head, S. C., declared, "Man-made global warming is junk science," explaining that worldwide manmade CO2 emission each year "equals about 0.0168% of the atmosphere's CO2 concentration ... This results in a 0.00064% increase in the absorption of the sun's radiation. This is an insignificantly small number."

Other international scientists have called the manmade warming theory a "hoax," a "fraud" and simply "not credible."

While not stooping to such name-calling, weather-satellite scientists David Douglass of the University of Rochester and John Christy of the University of Alabama at Huntsville nonetheless dealt the True Believers a devastating blow last month.

For nearly 30 years, Professor Christy has been in charge of NASA's eight weather satellites that take more than 300,000 temperature readings daily around the globe. In a paper co-written with Dr. Douglass, he concludes that while manmade emissions may be having a slight impact, "variations in global temperatures since 1978 ... cannot be attributed to carbon dioxide."

Moreover, while the chart below was not produced by Douglass and Christy, it was produced using their data and it clearly shows that in the past four years -- the period corresponding to reduced solar activity -- all of the rise in global temperatures since 1979 has disappeared.

It may be that more global warming doubters are surfacing because there just isn't any global warming.

Snow blankets London during Global Warming debate

http://www.theregister.co.uk/2008/10/29/co...te_change_bill/

29 Oct 08 – Excerpts: Snow fell as the House of Commons debated Global Warming yesterday - the first October snowfall in London since 1922.

In order to combat a projected two degree centigrade rise in global temperature (which I don't see happening), the Climate Change Bill pledges the UK to reduce its carbon dioxide emissions by 80 per cent by 2050.

The bill creates an enormous bureaucratic apparatus for monitoring and reporting, which was expanded at the last minute.

Recently the American media has begun to notice the odd incongruity of saturation media coverage here which insists that global warming is both man-made and urgent, and a British public which increasingly doubts either to be true. 60 per cent of the British population now doubt the influence of humans on climate change, and more people than not think Global Warming won't be as bad "as people say".

For the first 90 minutes of the marathon debate, the new nobility outdid each other with calls for tougher pledges, or stricter monitoring.

It was all deeply sanctimonious, but no one pointed out that Europe's appetite for setting targets that hurt the economy has evaporated in recent weeks - so it's a gesture few countries will feel compelled to imitate.

The US Senate has Senator James Inhofe, but in the Commons, there wasn't an out-and-out sceptic to be found. It was 90 minutes before anyone broke the liturgy of virtue. When Peter Lilley, in amazement, asked why there hadn't been a cost/benefit analysis made of such a major change in policy, he was told to shut up by the Deputy Speaker.

It fell to a paid-up member of Greenpeace, the Labour MP Rob Marris, to point out the Bill was a piece of political showboating that would fail. While professing himself a believer in the theory that human activity is primarily the cause of global warming, he left plenty of room for doubt - far more than most members. The legislation was doomed, Marris said.

The closest thing to a British Inhofe is Ulsterman Sammy Wilson, Democratic Unionist Party, who'd wanted a "reasoned debate" on global warming, rather than bullying, and recently called environmentalism a "hysterical psuedo-religion". Wilson described the Climate Bill as a disaster, but even colleagues who disagree with his views of environmentalism are wary of the latest amendments.

Tory barrister Christopher Chope professed himself baffled by the logic of including aviation and shipping. If transportation was made more expensive, how could there be more trade?

"As we destroy industry we'll be more dependent on shipping and aviation for our imports!" he said.

"When the history books come to be written people will ask why were the only five MPs... who voted against this ludicrous bill," he said. It would tie Britain up in knots for years, all for a futile gesture, Chope thought.

However, Tim Yeo, the perma-suntanned Tory backbencher who wants us to carry carbon rationing cards, said it would "improve Britain's competitiveness". He didn't say how.

World Sea Ice At 25 year high

5 May 08 - Report: World Sea Ice reaches 'unprecedented' 25 year high in April! (By Climate data analyst Stephen McIntyre of ClimateAudit.org, one of the individuals responsible for debunking the infamous "Hockey Stick" temperature graph)

Excerpt: On a global basis, levels are the third highest (for April) since the commencement of records in 1979, exceeded only by levels in 1979 and 1982. This continues a pattern established earlier in 2008, as global sea ice in March 2008 was also the third highest March on record, while January 2008 sea ice was the second highest January on record. It was also the second highest single month in the past 20 years (second only to Sept 1996).[…]

Four of the past 5 months are “all-time” records for Southern Hemisphere sea ice anomalies, “unprecedented” since the data set began in 1979 as shown below: (See weblink for graphs)

http://www.scienceblog.com/community/older.../199701386.html

New evidence indicates Australia's interior cooled by more than 16 degrees Fahrenheit during the last ice age, hinting that dramatic temperature drops associated with glaciations at the poles and in the Northern Hemisphere reached around the globe.

The surprising evidence comes from fossil eggshells of large, flightless birds known as emus, said University of Colorado at Boulder Professor Gifford Miller, chief author of the study. The chemical structures of amino acids in the eggshells change into mirror images of themselves at a rate that is directly dependent on air temperatures, allowing the shells to act as "paleo-thermometers," he said.

The research team first collected hundreds of fossil emu shell fragments and radiocarbon-dated them at the University of Arizona. The thumbnail-sized shells used in the study dated from about 45,000 years ago to about 16,000 years ago during the last glacial epoch. They then analyzed changes in the amino acids in Miller's CU-Boulder lab to estimate changes in air temperatures over that period.

Tests were conducted on two independent groups of shell fragments collected from two regions in Australia's sub-tropical interior, said Miller, a fellow at CU-Boulder's Institute of Arctic and Alpine Research. The researchers concluded that the mean annual air temperature in the interior was about 54 F between 45,000 and 16,000 years ago, compared to about 70 F from 16,000 years ago to the present.

"This immense temperature shift was very surprising to us," said Miller, who said the team did not expect to find significant temperature changes from Australia during the last ice age. "The fact that Australia was so much colder during that period was an indication that we were seeing some sort of a global signal. We believe Australia acts as a passive recorder of global-scale climate events."

A paper on the subject by CU-Boulder's Miller, John Magee of Australian National University and A.J.T. Jull of the University of Arizona was published in the Jan. 16 issue of Nature, one of the world's leading weekly science journals.

Although there are mounds of evidence of ice-age cooling from Earth's polar and temperate regions, cooling in tropical regions during those periods has been the subject of much debate, said Miller. Because of increased solar radiation striking the Southern Hemisphere due to a cyclic wobble in Earth's axis during the last ice age, many scientists discounted the possibility of significant cooling there, he said.

In recent years, however, researchers have found isolated evidence of tropical cooling during the last ice age in coral from Barbados, noble gases in Brazilian and African ground water and snail shells from Jamaica. "Combining these lines of evidence with our findings, which are the first quantitative temperature measurements from low elevations in a subtropical region, indicates the cooling trend during the last ice age was likely a global phenomenon," said Miller.

The study results also show that the onset of post-glacial warming in Australia and probably elsewhere around the globe began about 16,000 years ago, said Miller, who also chairs CU's geological sciences department.

The climate mechanisms that cooled Australia during the last ice age remain somewhat of a mystery, he said. Australia's sub-tropical location and relatively flat topography preclude the presence of common climate-forcing mechanisms like ice sheets, glaciers, sea-ice and permafrost believed to have acted as triggers for massive cooling episodes in the Northern Hemisphere and polar regions.

"Our feeling now is that this cooling in Australia may have been related to a reduction of water vapor in the atmosphere," he said. Less water vapor in the atmosphere would have meant the tropical oceans were significantly colder than many climate modelers have assumed.

During the ice age, ocean currents probably moved warm tropical water to the polar regions, where it cooled, he said. Cooler water returning back to the equator then helped to chill the tropical oceans.

Less water would have evaporated from the cooler tropical oceans, decreasing the amount of water vapor in the air over both hemispheres, Miller said. This would have "effectively spread the cooling throughout the planet."

"Events at the poles apparently can trigger much larger temperature changes around the globe than previously thought," he said. "If we ever are going to be able to predict future changes in Earth's climate, we need to understand how the circulation processes in the world's oceans and atmosphere are linked."

Global Cooling is Here

Evidence for Predicting Global Cooling for the Next Three Decades

by Prof. Don J. Easterbrook
Global Research, November 2, 2008
Department of Geology, Western Washington University

INTRODUCTION

Despite no global warming in 10 years and recording setting cold in 2007-2008, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climatic Change (IPCC) and computer modelers who believe that CO2 is the cause of global warming still predict the Earth is in store for catastrophic warming in this century. IPCC computer models have predicted global warming of 1° F per decade and 5-6° C (10-11° F) by 2100 (Fig. 1), which would cause global catastrophe with ramifications for human life, natural habitat, energy and water resources, and food production. All of this is predicated on the assumption that global warming is caused by increasing atmospheric CO2 and that CO2 will continue to rise rapidly.

http://i35.tinypic.com/2a8gq6e.jpg

Figure 1. A. IPCC prediction of global warming early in the 21st century. B. IPCC prediction of global warming to 2100. (Sources: IPCC website)

However, records of past climate changes suggest an altogether different scenario for the 21st century. Rather than drastic global warming at a rate of 0.5 ° C (1° F) per decade, historic records of past natural cycles suggest global cooling for the first several decades of the 21st century to about 2030, followed by global warming from about 2030 to about 2060, and renewed global cooling from 2060 to 2090 (Easterbrook, D.J., 2005, 2006a, b, 2007, 2008a, B); Easterbrook and Kovanen, 2000, 2001). Climatic fluctuations over the past several hundred years suggest ~30 year climatic cycles of global warming and cooling, on a general rising trend from the Little Ice Age.

PREDICTIONS BASED ON PAST CLIMATE PATTERNS

Global climate changes have been far more intense (12 to 20 times as intense in some cases) than the global warming of the past century, and they took place in as little as 20–100 years. Global warming of the past century (0.8° C) is virtually insignificant when compared to the magnitude of at least 10 global climate changes in the past 15,000 years. None of these sudden global climate changes could possibly have been caused by human CO2 input to the atmosphere because they all took place long before anthropogenic CO2 emissions began. The cause of the ten earlier ‘natural’ climate changes was most likely the same as the cause of global warming from 1977 to 1998.

Climatic fluctuations over the past several hundred years suggest ~30 year climatic cycles of global warming and cooling (Figure 3) on a generally rising trend from the Little Ice Age about 500 years ago.

Relationships between glacial fluctuations, the Pacific Decadal Oscillation, and global climate change.

After several decades of studying alpine glacier fluctuations in the North Cascade Range, my research showed a distinct pattern of glacial advances and retreats (the Glacial Decadal Oscillation, GDO) that correlated well with climate records. In 1992, Mantua published the Pacific Decadal Oscillation curve showing warming and cooling of the Pacific Ocean that correlated remarkably well with glacial fluctuations. Both the GDA and the PDO matched global temperature records and were obviously related (Fig. 4). All but the latest 30 years of changes occurred prior to significant CO2 emissions so they were clearly unrelated to atmospheric CO2.

The significance of the correlation between the GDO, PDO, and global temperature is that once this connection has been made, climatic changes during the past century can be understood, and the pattern of glacial and climatic fluctuations over the past millennia can be reconstructed. These patterns can then be used to project climatic changes in the future. Using the pattern established for the past several hundred years, in 1998 I projected the temperature curve for the past century into the next century and came up with curve ‘A’ in Figure 5 as an approximation of what might be in store for the world if the pattern of past climate changes continued. Ironically, that prediction was made in the warmest year of the past three decades and at the acme of the 1977-1998 warm period. At that time, the projected curved indicated global cooling beginning about 2005 ± 3-5 years until about 2030, then renewed warming from about 2030 to about 2060 (unrelated to CO2—just continuation of the natural cycle), then another cool period from about 2060 to about 2090. This was admittedly an approximation, but it was radically different from the 1° F per decade warming called for by the IPCC. Because the prediction was so different from the IPCC prediction, time would obviously show which projection was ultimately correct.

Now a decade later, the global climate has not warmed 1° F as forecast by the IPCC but has cooled slightly until 2007-08 when global temperatures turned sharply downward. In 2008, NASA satellite imagery (Figure 6) confirmed that the Pacific Ocean had switched from the warm mode it had been in since 1977 to its cool mode, similar to that of the 1945-1977 global cooling period. The shift strongly suggests that the next several decades will be cooler, not warmer as predicted by the IPCC.

http://i36.tinypic.com/311to2e.jpg

Figure 5. Global temperature projection for the coming century, based on warming/cooling cycles of the past several centuries. ‘A’ projection based on assuming next cool phase will be similar to the 1945-1977 cool phase. ‘B’ projection based on assuming next cool phase will be similar to the 1880-1915 cool phase. The predicted warm cycle from 2030 to 2060 is based on projection of the 1977 to 1998 warm phase and the cooling phase from 2060 to 2090 is based on projection of the 1945 to 1977 cool cycle.

Implications of PDO, NAO, GDO, and sun spot cycles for global climate in coming decades

The IPCC prediction of global temperatures, 1° F warmer by 2011 and 2° F by 2038 (Fig. 1), stand little chance of being correct. NASA's imagery showing that the Pacific Decadal Oscillation (PDO) has shifted to its cool phase is right on schedule as predicted by past climate and PDO changes (Easterbrook, 2001, 2006, 2007). The PDO typically lasts 25-30 years and assures North America of cool, wetter climates during its cool phases and warmer, drier climates during its warm phases. The establishment of the cool PDO, together with similar cooling of the North Atlantic Oscillation (NAO), virtually assures several decades of global cooling and the end of the past 30-year warm phase. It also means that the IPCC predictions of catastrophic global warming this century were highly inaccurate.

The switch of PDO cool mode to warm mode in 1977 initiated several decades of global warming. The PDO has now switched from its warm mode (where it had been since 1977) into its cool mode. As shown on the graph above, each time this had happened in the past century, global temperature has followed. The upper map shows cool ocean temperatures in blue (note the North American west coast). The lower diagram shows how the PDO has switched back and forth from warm to cool modes in the past century, each time causing global temperature to follow. Comparisons of historic global climate warming and cooling over the past century with PDO and NAO oscillations, glacial fluctuations, and sun spot activity show strong correlations and provide a solid data base for future climate change projections.

The Pacific Ocean has a warm temperature mode and a cool temperature mode, and in the past century, has switched back forth between these two modes every 25-30 years (known as the Pacific Decadal Oscillation or PDO). In 1977 the Pacific abruptly shifted from its cool mode (where it had been since about 1945) into its warm mode, and this initiated global warming from 1977 to 1998. The correlation between the PDO and global climate is well established. The announcement by NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory that the Pacific Decadal Oscillation (PDO) had shifted to its cool phase is right on schedule as predicted by past climate and PDO changes (Easterbrook, 2001, 2006, 2007). The PDO typically lasts 25-30 years and assures North America of cool, wetter climates during its cool phases and warmer, drier climates during its warm phases. The establishment of the cool PDO, together with similar cooling of the North Atlantic Oscillation (NAO), virtually assures several decades of global cooling and the end of the past 30-year warm phase.

Figure 6. Switch of PDO cool mode to warm mode in 1977 initiated several decades of global warming. The PDO has now switched from its warm mode (where it had been since 1977) into its cool mode. As shown on the graph above, each time this has happened in the past century, global temperature has followed. The upper map shows cool ocean temperatures in blue (note the North American west coast). The lower diagram shows how the PDO has switched back and forth from warm to cool modes in the past century, each time causing global temperature to follow. Projection of the past pattern (right end of graph) assures 30 yrs of global cooling Comparisons of historic global climate warming and cooling over the past century with PDO and NAO oscillations, glacial fluctuations, and sun spot activity show strong correlations and provide a solid data base for future climate change projections. As shown by the historic pattern of GDOs and PDOs over the past century and by corresponding global warming and cooling, the pattern is part of ongoing warm/cool cycles that last 25-30 years. The global cooling phase from 1880 to 1910, characterized by advance of glaciers worldwide, was followed by a shift to the warm-phase PDO for 30 years, global warming and rapid glacier recession. The cool-phase PDO returned in ~1945 accompanied by global cooling and glacial advance for 30 years. Shift to the warm-phase PDO in 1977 initiated global warming and recession of glaciers that persisted until 1998. Recent establishment of the PDO cool phase appeared right on target and assuming that its effect will be similar to past history, global climates can be expected to cool over the next 25-30 years. The global warming of this century is exactly in phase with the normal climatic pattern of cyclic warming and cooling and we have now switched from a warm phase to a cool phase right at the predicted time (Fig. 5)

The ramifications of the global cooling cycle for the next 30 years are far reaching¯e.g., failure of crops in critical agricultural areas (it's already happening this year), increasing energy demands, transportation difficulties, and habitat change. All this during which global population will increase from six billion to about nine billion. The real danger in spending trillions of dollars trying to reduce atmospheric CO2 is that little will be left to deal with the very real problems engendered by global cooling.

CONCLUSIONS

Global warming (i.e, the warming since 1977) is over. The minute increase of anthropogenic CO2 in the atmosphere (0.008%) was not the cause of the warming—it was a continuation of natural cycles that occurred over the past 500 years.

The PDO cool mode has replaced the warm mode in the Pacific Ocean, virtually assuring us of about 30 years of global cooling, perhaps much deeper than the global cooling from about 1945 to 1977. Just how much cooler the global climate will be during this cool cycle is uncertain. Recent solar changes suggest that it could be fairly severe, perhaps more like the 1880 to 1915 cool cycle than the more moderate 1945-1977 cool cycle. A more drastic cooling, similar to that during the Dalton and Maunder minimums, could plunge the Earth into another Little Ice Age, but only time will tell if that is likely.

Freak storm leaves town cut off under enough hail to fill the Millennium Dome twice

A freak storm, in which enough hail to fill the Millennium Dome twice over fell on tiny area of Devon, left a town partially cut off and 100 homes flooded.

By John Bingham and Richard Savill
Last Updated: 5:40PM GMT 30 Oct 2008
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/newstopics...Dome-twice.html

An estimated 270 million cubic feet of hail fell on a five-mile square area around the town of Ottery St Mary in a six-hour storm which confounded forecasts and overwhelmed local flood defences.

Thirty people had to be rescued from houses and cars as floodwaters, up to 5ft deep in places, washed through the town and the nearby village of Tipton St John, after hail stones blocked drains and two cars were washed into the river Otter causing a further build-up.

The area at the centre of the storm received three inches of rain - well over half its monthly rainfall - in six hours, 11 times as much as neighbouring towns.

Residents described seeing a "river of ice" flowing down the main street with many forced to wade chest deep to safety.

By morning the streets was left like a "lunar landscape" with cars buried under "a meringue" of hail and snow, 2ft deep across the town with drifts up to 6ft in places.

Low lying fields and roads were also under several feet of water, trapping cars, lorries and even a fire engine and causing a series of small landslides.

Emergency services dealt with more than 150 calls in a few hours.

Juliet Hall, 34, had to be rescued from a flooded road after being stranded on her way to hospital after going into labour three weeks early.

She was rescued in a police 4x4 and rushed to the Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital where she gave birth to her son Nathan eight hours later weighing 6lb 10oz.

About 100 homes were flooded, with many people rescued by coastguard boats.

Residents described the scene as like "a mini Boscastle", a reference to the disastrous flooding in Cornwall in 2004.

They face a clean-up operation likely to take several months.

Although rain had been predicted, the intensity of the storm over such a small area took forecasters by surprise.

The Met office said that icy airflows mixing with warmer currents nearer the ground prompted the kind of intense thunder storm usually only encountered at the height of summer.

"It is truly an occasion to use the word 'freak'," said forecaster Barry Grommet.

"I don't think you would have been able to forecast it in this sort of intensity."

Flood defences installed three years ago at a cost of £5 million were overwhelmed despite being checked only a few hours beforehand.

There were no reports of any injuries but an evacuation centre was set up at the local hospital, taking in around 20 people including staff from a ravelling fairground who had been staying in caravans near the river.

Simon Devay, who was staying with three generations of his family in a caravan, said members of the fairground group had to wade through chest high water.

"The sleet was coming down and people were saying that they could see rats and mice floating on top," he said.

"It was like a volcano with a wall of sludge and hail coming down the hill like larva."

Tony Fabry, 45, whose wife Sharon is the local sub post mistress, said the post office sorting room was under several inches of water

"I felt like King Canute trying to keep the tide of silt and mud out," he said.

"People will be cleaning up for weeks

"I saw beer barrels, sandwich boards from the local pub and even a children's plastic slide floating down the road.

"It came so quickly and even if it had been forecast there wouldn't have been anything we could have done."

Global Warming Talk Is All Just Hot Air

Wednesday, November 5, 2008 3:06 PM
By: Phil Brennan Article Font Size
http://www.newsmax.com/brennan/global_warm.../05/148113.html

For a lot of years when I worked in presidential and congressional elections, we lost. Like most of my colleagues, I joined in the finger pointing, blaming the people in charge for running inept campaigns and suggesting that what had not been done was the reason for the losses.

I'm too old and I hope a lot wiser now to take part in that useless exercise. I'll let those sleeping dogs lie, and try to concentrate on what is really important: what the future holds for all mankind. In that context the only part the new political situation plays is Barack Obama's determination to deal with a threat that does not exist — he wants to further cripple the economy by combating global warming that isn't happening when the real threat is global cooling on a massive scale.

As a result, when our attention should be focused on how we can deal with a real and immediate major shift in the global climate, it is concerned instead with how we should approach what is provably an imaginary threat based on imaginary science. Belief that the planet is fast approaching a conflagration that will deep fry the Earth is a triumph of fiction over fact. To waste our time and treasure combating a ginned-up threat, while at the same time ignoring the real challenge is nothing short of blithering idiocy.

The Earth is not warming. The 28-year period of warming between 1970 and 1998 stopped dead in its tracks, and the climate has been cooling ever since.

That's a fact, but the global warmiacs ignore facts because they sometimes tend to be inconvenient. So while we shiver in the cold, they shriek that we're doomed to be roasted sooner or later. Their computers are rigged to tell them what they want to hear.

Meteorologist and Weather Channel founder John Coleman put it this way: “In the face of a rapidly cooling planet, all the proponents of global warming can do is to lamely suggest that global warming has gone on vacation and is taking a 10-year hiatus on account of the absence of sun spots. If this weren’t so serious it would be laughable,” Coleman said.

“It is the greatest scam in history,” he said. “I am amazed, appalled and highly offended by it. Global warming — it is a scam. Some dastardly scientists with environmental and political motives manipulated long term scientific data to create in allusion [sic] of rapid global warming.

"Other scientists of the same environment wacko type jumped into the circle to support and broaden the 'research' to further enhance the totally slanted, bogus global warming claims. Their friends in government steered huge research grants their way to keep the movement going. Soon, they claimed to be a consensus.”

Echoing that thought is Bob Carter, a geologist at James Cook University, Queensland, Australia: "Since the early 1990s, the columns of many leading newspapers and magazines worldwide have carried an increasing stream of alarmist letters and articles on hypothetical, human-caused climate change. Each such alarmist article is larded with words such as 'if, ' 'might,’ ‘could,’ 'probably,’ 'perhaps,’ 'expected,’ 'projected,' or 'modeled,' and many involve such deep dreaming, or ignorance of scientific facts and principles, that they are akin to nonsense."

Escalating the verbal onslaught, Carter wrote, "The problem here is not that of climate change per se, but rather that of the sophisticated scientific brainwashing that has been inflicted on the public, bureaucrats and politicians alike. Governments generally choose not to receive policy advice on climate from independent scientists. Rather, they seek guidance from their own self-interested science bureaucracies and senior advisers, or from the IPCC itself. No matter how accurate it may be, cautious and politically non-correct science advice is not welcomed in Westminster, nor is it widely reported."

The climate is in a cooling phase: A pronounced global cooling has set in so far this century. This year, most of the northern hemisphere, except for Western Europe, experienced what most scientists say was the harshest winter in decades.

And this year, winter has come early with record-breaking cold and October blizzards.

Al Gore and his minions assure us that the frozen North, where cold fronts originate, is warming.

Oh?

That's not what the National Weather Service in Barrow, Alaska, tells us in an Oct. 31 bulletin reporting "All-time Record Monthly Snowfall in Barrow."

The area recorded 23.2 inches of snowfall, breaking the all-time monthly record of 21.2 inches set in October 1925, the weather service noted.

I have reported previously that 13 top scientists, including one Nobel Prize winner, wrote a letter to U.N. Secretary General Ban Ki-moon saying that, while carbon dioxide levels have continued to rise, global temperatures have fallen, dramatically contradicting the claim that high carbon dioxide levels cause global warming. They wrote that the U.N. Climate Change Panel "must be called to account and cease its deceptive practices — policies based on false science must be ended."

We are approaching the onset of a new ice age. For millions of years, ice ages have occurred on a regular schedule of every 100,000 years, with 90,000 years of glaciation followed by about 12,000 years of interglacial climate. The last ice age ended 12,000 years ago. A new ice age is upon us.

Alaska's Glaciers Are Growing

By Dennis T. Avery
http://www.iceagenow.com/Alaskas_Glaciers_Are_Growing.htm

28 Oct 08 – (Condensed) "Alaska's glaciers grew this year, after shrinking for most of the last 200 years. The reason? Global temperatures dropped over the past 18 months. The global mean annual temperature has been declining recently because the solar wind thrown out by the sun has retreated to its smallest extent in at least 50 years. This temperature downturn was not predicted by the global computer models, but had been predicted by the sunspot index since 2000.

"Unusually large amounts of Alaskan snow last winter were followed by unusually chilly temperatures there this summer. "In general, the weather this summer was the worst I have seen in at least 20 years," says Bruce Molnia of the U.S. Geological Survey, and author of The Glaciers of Alaska. "It's been a long time on most glaciers where they've actually had positive mass balance (added thickness)."

"Overall, Molnia figures Alaska had lost 10–12,000 square kilometers of ice since 1800, the depths of the Little Ice Age. That's enough ice to cover the state of Connecticut. Climate alarmists claim all the glaciers might disappear soon, but they haven't looked at the long-term evidence of the 1,500-year Dansgaard-Oeschger climate cycles. During the Little Ice Age—1400 to 1850—Muir Glacier filled the whole of Glacier Bay. Since then, the glacier has retreated 57 miles. But the Little Ice Age was preceded by the Medieval Warming, the cold Dark Ages, a Roman Warming, and a whole series of moderate warmings and coolings that extend back at least 1 million years based on the evidence of the microfossils in the world's seabed sediments.

> As I've been saying all along: It's a natural cycle. It's a natural cycle. It's a natural cycle. All of these things have happened before, and they must inevitably happen again ... whether humans exist on this planet or not.

Sea Ice Growing at Fastest Pace on Record

Michael Asher (Blog) - November 7, 2008 6:32 PM
http://www.dailytech.com/Sea+Ice+Growing+a...rticle13385.htm

Rapid Rebound Brings Ice Back to Levels from the 1980s.

An abnormally cool Arctic is seeing dramatic changes to ice levels. In sharp contrast to the rapid melting seen last year, the amount of global sea ice has rebounded sharply and is now growing rapidly. The total amount of ice, which set a record low value last year, grew in October at the fastest pace since record-keeping began in 1979.

The actual amount of ice area varies seasonally from about 16 to 23 million square kilometers. However, the mean anomaly-- defined as the difference between the current area and the seasonally-adjusted average-- changes much slower, and generally varies by only 2-3 million square kilometers.

That anomaly had been negative, indicating ice loss, for most of the current decade and reached a historic low in 2007. The current value is again zero, indicating an amount of ice exactly equal to the global average from 1979-2000.

Bill Chapman, a researcher with the Arctic Climate Center at the University of Illinois, says the rapid increase is "no big deal". He says that, while the Arctic has certainly been colder in recent months, the long-term decrease is still ongoing. Chapman, who predicts that sea ice will soon stop growing, sees nothing in the recent data to contradict predictions of global warming.

Others aren't quite so sure. Dr. Patrick Michaels, Professor of Environmental Science at the University of Virginia, says he sees some "very odd" things occurring in recent years. Michaels, who is also a Senior Fellow with the Cato Institute, tells DailyTech that, while the behavior of the Arctic seems to agree with climate models predictions, the Southern Hemisphere can't be explained by current theory. "The models predict a warming ocean around Antarctica, so why would we see more sea ice?" Michaels adds that large areas of the Southern Pacific are showing cooling trends, an occurrence not anticipated by any current climate model.

On average, ice covers roughly 7% of the ocean surface of the planet. Sea ice is floating and therefore doesn't affect sea level like the ice anchored on bedrock in Antarctica or Greenland. However, research has indicated that the Antarctic continent -- which is on a long-term cooling trend -- has also been gaining ice in recent years.

The primary instrument for measuring sea ice today is the AMSR-E microwave radiometer, an instrument package aboard NASA's AQUA satellite. AQUA was launched in 2002, as part of NASA's Earth Observing System (EOS).

Global warning: We are actually heading towards a new Ice Age, claim scientists

By Cher Thornhill
Last updated at 5:06 PM on 13th November 2008
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/art...scientists.html

It has plagued scientists and politicians for decades, but scientists now say global warming is not the problem.

We are actually heading for the next Ice Age, they claim.
British and Canadian experts warned the big freeze could bury the east of Britain in 6,000ft of ice.

Most of Scotland, Northern Ireland and England could be covered in 3,000ft-thick ice fields.

The expanses could reach 6,000ft from Aberdeen to Kent – towering above Ben Nevis, Britain's tallest mountain.

And what's more, the experts blame the global change on falling - rather than climbing - levels of greenhouse gases.

Lead author Thomas Crowley from the University of Edinburgh and Canadian colleague William Hyde say that currently vilified greenhouse gases – such as carbon dioxide – could actually be the key to averting the chill.

The warning, published in the authoritative journal Nature, is based on records of tiny marine fossils and the earth's shifting orbit.

The Earth has seen dramatic climate fluctuations – veering between cold and warm extremes - over the past three million years, the researchers say.

And changes in the Earth's orbit and slowly falling levels of carbon dioxide are the cause.

The team says we are approaching a turning point, in the next 10,000 to 100,000 years, which will lead to the new ice sheets smothering much of Europe, Asia and South America.

The theory, which is based on computer models, suggests ice sheets will also slash sea levels by up to 300m, so Russia and Alaska will be connected by land.

The North Sea will become part of a huge glacier stretching from Holland and Scandinavia to the Russian Far East.

Professor Crowley said the stark findings do not mean we should stop fighting warming.

But he urged: 'Don't push the panic button.'

'There's no excuse for saying "we've got to keep pumping carbon dioxide into the atmosphere,"' he told Reuters.

'Geologically it's tomorrow, but we have lots of time to argue about the appropriate level of greenhouse gases.'

Glaciers in Norway Growing Again

27 Nov 08 - "Scandinavian nation reverses trend, mirrors results in Alaska, elsewhere.

Norway's Svartisen_Glacier (Source: NRK)

"After years of decline, glaciers in Norway are again growing, reports the Norwegian Water Resources and Energy Directorate (NVE). The actual magnitude of the growth, which appears to have begun over the last two years, has not yet been quantified, says NVE Senior Engineer Hallgeir Elvehøy.

"The flow rate of many glaciers has also declined. Glacier flow ultimately acts to reduce accumulation, as the ice moves to lower, warmer elevations.

"The original trend had been fairly rapid decline since the year 2000.

"The developments were originally reported by the Norwegian Broadcasting Corporation (NRK).

"DailyTech has previously reported on the growth in Alaskan glaciers, reversing a 250-year trend of loss. Some glaciers in Canada, California, and New Zealand are also growing, as the result of both colder temperatures and increased snowfall.

"Elvehøy says that the glaciers were even smaller during the 'Medieval Warm Period' of the Viking Era, prior to around the year 1350.

"Not all Norwegian glaciers appear to be affected, most notably those in the Jotenheimen region of Southern Norway."

Precipitous drop in temperature endangers sea turtles

27 Nov 08 - Recent cold weather caught sea turtles off-guard before they could reach warmer Gulf Stream waters, which has led to nearly 25 rescues along the North Carolina coast in the past week.

Karen Beasley Sea Turtle Rescue and Rehabilitation Center on Topsail Island has rescued numerous cold-stunned sea turtles since Thursday, said Jean Beasley, the hospital's executive director.

"We're overwhelmed, this has never happened before -- at least not since the turtle hospital has been in existence," Beasley said.

Cocking a snook at the experts - Snow in parts of Switzerland 12 times deeper than average 29 Nov 08 - Ski resorts across Europe will open this weekend ahead of schedule after the biggest November snowfalls for at least a decade - in some places the biggest November snowfalls in more than 40 years - including 60cm (23in) of snow on Alpine slopes and even more in the Pyrenees.

“This is nature's way of cocking a snook at the experts,” said Christian Rochette, the director of Ski France International, the tourist body for French resorts.

“We've got excellent conditions for this time of year and very cold temperatures, which means we can use the snow cannons to make artificial snow as well,” he said.

Snow is thigh deep

Michael Broom Smith, of Purple Ski, said: “On the lower pistes, the snow is thigh deep and beautifully light and fluffy and more snow is forecast this weekend.”

Val d'Isère will also open today with snow two metres deep at 3,000 metres. “We've often had to put off the opening,” a tourist office spokeswoman said. “Last year we opened a few slopes at the start of the season but this year we're opening them all.”

Snow in parts of Switzerland 12 times deeper than average.

The Ski Club of Great Britain said that snow in parts of Switzerland was 12 times deeper than average.

Pyrenean resorts are also enjoying snowfalls unseen for years. “Oh, what happiness!” said Hervé Mairal, director of the Pyrenean Tourist Federation. “We've got 95cm at the foot of the slopes and 1.4m at the top. We've not had that for a decade.”

Best start in four decades

Andorra, which has had some poor conditions in recent years, is enjoying its best start to a season for four decades and both the main areas of Grandvalira and Vallnord will be open fully from this weekend.

On the Spanish side Roberto Buil, the marketing manager of the Baqueira Beret resort, said that the slopes had opened on November 22 for the first time in 44 years. “All our 69 ski runs are open,” he said. “We are having an amazing start.”

The cold snap comes after an OECD report said that a two-degree rise in temperature could eliminate a third of all Europe's ski slopes over the next 40 years.

“Some of the best, understated 'youse global warmers are all fin' idiots' quotations I've ever read,” says reader Rhys Jagger.

“For the benefit of your non-English readers, 'youse are all fin' idiots' was a classic statement by famed Scot, Sir Alex Ferguson, arguably the English Premier League's most famous and undoubtedly most successful manager, when the media came out with some typical poorly researched drivel (e.g. 'England will slaughter Croatia away from home in 2006', Sir Alex: 'Croatia haven't lost a competitive match at home for 12 years'.)

“I support Sir Alex' biggest long-term rivals, but every so often I doff my cap to the great man's sense of literary genius,” says Jagger

* To cock a snook

“The gesture of derision it encapsulates is that of putting one’s thumb to one’s nose and extending the fingers. Waggling them is optional but greatly improves the effectiveness of the insult. The gesture is widespread but names for it vary: cocking a snook is mainly the British name for what Americans, I think, sometimes describe as a five-fingered salute. Heaven knows what the notably blunt Australians call it.

"…folk etymology often turns the phrase to cock a snoot, since snoot is known as a slang name for the nose. (It's another variant of snout.)"

David Dilley Predicts Global Cooling Now

August 26, 2008
http://www.globalweathercycles.com/

"IN a new e-book 'Global Warming—Global Cooling, Natural Cause Found', meteorologist and climate researcher David Dilley utilizes nearly a half million years of data linking long term gravitational cycles of the moon explain the recent global warming, rises in carbon dioxide levels, and for 2200 global warming cycles during the past half million years.

"The gravitational cycles are called the Primary Forcing Mechanism for Climate (PFM), and act like a magnet by pulling the atmosphere's high pressure systems northward or southward by as much as 3 or 4 degrees of latitude from their normal seasonal positions, and thus causing long-term shifts in the location of atmospheric high pressure systems.

"Research by Mr. Dilley shows a near 100 percent correlation between the PFM gravitational cycles to the beginning and ending of global warming cycles. Global warming cycles began right on time with each PFM cycle during the past half million years, as did the current warming which began 100 years ago, and it will end right on time as the current gravitational cycle begins its cyclical decline.

"Global temperatures have cooled during the past 12 months. During 2008 and 2009 the first stage of global cooling will cool the world's temperatures to those observed during the years from the 1940s through the 1970s. By the year 2023 global climate will become similar to the colder temperatures experienced during the 1800s.

"Mr. Dilley of Global Weather Oscillations has found seven different types of recurring gravitational cycles ranging from the very warm 460,000 year cycle down to a 230year recurring global warming cycle. All of the gravitational cycles coincide nearly 100 percent with 2200 global warming events during the past half million years. This includes the earth's current warming cycle which began around the year 1900, and the first stage of global cooling that will begin during 2008 and 2009.

"The release of the book culminates 19 years of research clearly linking gravitational cycles as the cause for fluctuations within the earth's climate. The book is available as an electronic e-Book on this website. The author David Dilley is a meteorologist and climate researcher with Global Weather Oscillations Inc." [end of quote]

November one of the coldest and wettest in Augusta history

By Rich Rogers rrogers@nbcaugusta.com
Story Published: Dec 1, 2008 at 12:05 AM EST

http://www.nbcaugusta.com/news/southcarolina/35292019.html

AUGUSTA, Ga. - Heavy weekend rainfall across Georgia-Carolina has many thinking, 'what drought?

This weekend's heavy rain combined with heavy rain about two weeks ago has made this November one of the wettest months of November ever recorded in Augusta.

But it wasn't just rain that made history this month. November 2008 will also go down in the record books as one of the coldest ever in Augusta.

A Wet Month

The average November rainfall in Augusta is 2.68 inches. This year, November rainfall at Augusta Regional Airport more than doubled the normal amount. The official amount at Bush Field was 7.24 inches.

The ongoing rainfall deficit was nearly decimated after the heavy rain. Prior to the rain, Augusta's deficit for 2008 was nearly four inches, but has been reduced to a little under two inches. A wet December could make up the entire deficit before the end of the year. Even if that happens, the area still needs several months of above average rainfall to end the drought that began in early 2007.

NBC Augusta 26 News researched climate records and found that since 1950, about the time records began at Bush Field, 2008 marks the second wettest November on record. And, when records dating back to 1871 at various locations around Augusta are taken into account, 2008 had the fourth wettest November on the list, just behind 1871, 1947, and 1985. 1992 had the fifth wettest November on record.

A Cold Month

Near record precipitation wasn't the only aspect of the weather to be historic during the month. While rainfall was well above average, temperatures were well below average. According to official climate records obtained by NBC Augusta 26 News, November 2008 will go down as the sixth coldest November since 1900. The top five coldest November's occurred in 1976, 1901, 1950, 1969, and 1995.

The average temperature in Augusta during the month was 50.7 degrees, far below the normal of 54.4.

Storm Spotter Reports

NBC Augusta storm spotters reported a tremendous amount of rain during the weekend. Below are some of the amounts reported:

1. 3.50", Irina in Blythe
2. 3.40", Ken in Windsor
3. 3.20", Lil near Daniel Field in Augusta
4. 3.00", Justin in Aiken
5. 2.95", Proctor in Aiken
6. 2.65", Susan in Augusta off Skinner Mill Rd.

It's important to note that the Augusta-Aiken area picked up more rain in one weekend than is normally received in the entire month of November.

Over 200 inches of snow greets Alyeska skiers and riders

1 Dec 08 - Yes you read that right - over 200 inches - 16.7 feet! - of snow. And 117 inches of the total came in the last week at Alyeska Resort, about 40 miles south of Anchorage, Alaska.

Alyeska opened for business on November 26 and according to a press release, with "epic conditions that rival the best opening day on record."

Here's a short YouTube video shot on opening weekend at Alyeska:
[dohtml]<object width="480" height="295"><param name="movie" value="http://www.youtube.com/v/jxxL3kPvuzg&hl=en&fs=1"></param><param name="allowFullScreen" value="true"></param><param name="allowscriptaccess" value="always"></param><embed src="http://www.youtube.com/v/jxxL3kPvuzg&hl=en&fs=1" type="application/x-shockwave-flash" allowscriptaccess="always" allowfullscreen="true" width="480" height="295"></embed></object>[/dohtml]

“Conditions are more reminiscent of early spring than they are in December,” says the Alyeska marketing machine, “with several feet of deep soft snow covering all elevations of the mountain. More snowfall is forecasted for the next five days. Alyeska opened on November 26th to epic conditions that rival the best opening day on record. “

"This is the best opening weekend I can remember", stated Di Hiibner, Ski Area General Manager. "We were able to open the entire mountain with the exception of our outer areas and the lower bowl with waist deep powder that made this a memorable week."

2008 will be coolest year of the decade

http://www.iceagenow.com/2008_will_be_cool..._the_decade.htm •

5 Dec 08 - This year is set to be the coolest since 2000, according to a preliminary figures to be released next week by the Met Office. The global average for 2008 should come in close to 14.3C, some 0.14C below the average temperature for 2001-07.

“The relatively chilly temperatures compared with recent years are not evidence that global warming is slowing however, say climate scientists at the Met Office. "Absolutely not," said Dr Peter Stott, the manager of understanding and attributing climate change at the Met Office's Hadley Centre. "If we are going to understand climate change we need to look at long-term trends."

And what about long-term cycles?

“Assuming the final figure is close to 14.3C then 2008 will be the tenth hottest year on record. The hottest was 1998 - which included a very strong El Niño event - followed by 2005, 2003 and 2002.

In other words, it has been cooling since 1998.

In March, a team of climate scientists predicted that natural variation would mask the 0.3C warming predicted by the IPCC over the next decade. They said that global temperatures would remain constant until 2015 but would then begin to accelerate.

Funny, isn’t it, how they call it a “natural variation” when temperatures decline, but they blame us when temperatures rise.

Thousands stranded as Siberian front sweeps China

BEIJING (Reuters) - A Siberian cold front swept China on Thursday, with temperatures in the capital plunging below freezing and thousands stranded on snowbound expressways in the remote far northwest.

The state weather observatory launched a cold weather emergency response plan on Wednesday to tackle disasters after record cold and snow brought down power lines and paralysed much of the usually mild south earlier this year.

And hundreds of thousands of people made homeless by the devastating May 12 earthquake are sleeping in tents or temporary housing in the mountains of Sichuan and surrounding southwestern provinces where temperatures at night can fall well below freezing.

In the restive northwestern region of Xinjiang, home to minority Uighurs, about 3,400 people were stranded on blocked expressways after two days of snow, the China Daily said.

Temperatures in the region have plunged by about 18 degrees Celsius as snowstorms also hit northern Inner Mongolia and Gansu province. In Beijing, temperatures plunged about 10 degrees overnight to minus 3 Celsius.

China issued an extreme cold weather warning on Wednesday, ordering 23 provinces to be on standby for emergencies.

In Sichuan, an official said last month that many quake victims were still short of basics, including quilts and even food, for the winter.

But a local propaganda official in Beichuan county, one of the hardest hit, told Reuters on Thursday the government had made efforts to ensure everyone would survive the winter safely.

The worst snowstorms in 50 years hit southern China in January and February, leaving millions of Lunar New Year travellers stranded on their way home for the holiday.

Global warming may be caused by underwater volcanoes

(Which I've been saying for years)

8 Dec 08 – A study by Gilbert Compo and Prashant Sardeshmukh of the University of Colorado and NOAA, and presented in the scientific journal Climate Dynamics, maintains that all of the greenhouse gases dumped into the atmosphere by humans over the last 46 years haven't affected land temperatures at all.

“The rise in land temperatures, the study states, can be tied directly to increased heat and humidity coming from warmer oceans, which in turn, the study admits, may be caused solely by natural forces.

“But if rising land temperatures are caused by rising ocean temperatures, what's causing the earth's seas to heat up?

Although admitting that it could be man-made, the study said that it could also be due to increased sun activity, underwater volcanoes or simply the earth's regular patterns.

"Although not a focus of this study," write Compo and Sardeshmukh, "the degree to which the oceans themselves have recently warmed due to increased GHG, other anthropogenic, natural solar and volcanic forcings, or internal multi-decadal climate variations is a matter of active investigation."

"A role for natural causes of at least some of the recent oceanic warming should not be ruled out."

Snowfall biggest in BR in 50-60 years

1895 holds city record with just more than 1 foot of snow

Despite overnight snowfall and other school closures in the Baton Rouge area, final exams still took place as scheduled Thursday. D'Ann Morris, interim director of the University's Emergency Operations Center, told The Daily Reveille early Thursday that finals will take place as scheduled today.

"School is definitely open. No closure as of yet," D'Ann Morris, interim director of the University's Emergency Operations Center, said at about 7 a.m. Thursday. "We know that some places in town have closed, but we're anticipating sending out an e-mail asking faculty to be tolerant of the situation."

Morris said officials were aware some students may be late to tests, but because there were no major road closures, exams would go on as scheduled.

Students unable to reach a final exam because of weather-related issues should “immediately contact both their instructor and the dean’s office of the department through which their course is offered for further instruction,” according to the University's Web site.

“The safety of students, staff and faculty remains LSU’s top priority,” the Office of Public Affairs said in the statement.

At 7:50 a.m., University officials used the emergency text-message system, as well at the University's Web site, to alert students exams will continue as scheduled. In the message, officials warned students to use caution traveling to campus.

Barry Keim, Louisiana state climatologist, said the snowfall in Baton Rouge is a "20 or 30 year event."

"It's obviously just the right atmospheric conditions that have all come together to produce snow, and it doesn't happen often in this neck of the woods," Keim said. "We have just the right set up with temperatures cold enough."

Jay Grymes, University climatologist, said an upper-level storm system moved along Louisiana's coast — from Lake Charles to New Orleans — rather than following the anticipated route from Lake Charles to Jackson, Miss. The unpredicted route left Baton Rouge on the north — or coldest — side of the system, which lead to snowfall rather than a mixture of sleet and snow.

"Usually when we get snow here, it's inmeasurable snow in Janurary or Feburary," Grymes said. "Here we are in mid-December, which makes it even more unusual."

Grymes said Baton Rouge will endure freezing temperatures again tonight, but the snow and rain are coming to an end. Baton Rouge will be "back to 60 degrees and tropical Louisiana" by tomorrow, he said.

"The significant snow had come to an end by 9:00 or so," Grymes said. "We may even get a peak of sunshine later today, but I wouldn't count on it."

Grymes said snowfall totals from around Baton Rouge today are between one and three inches, making it one of the biggest snow events in the past 50 or 60 years.

"This was a really, for Baton Rouge, a monster snow event," Grymes said. "Typically when we have snow here, it turns to rain before it reaches the ground."

Grymes said the snow is causing some problems with technology, including cell phones and satellites.

"The snow sticks to satellite dishes and blocks signals," Grymes said. "In the North, they have heaters on equipement, but no one has that here."

Though Grymes urged students to be cautious when driving, he said roadways in Baton Rouge are safe. Normal traffic and rising temperatures through the day make the roads safer.

"Most of the roads in metro Baton Rouge are fine," Grymes said. "In terms of travel hazards around Baton Rouge, there are little if any."

Keim said the snow will turn to rain as temperatures rise, and he does not expect it to continue snowing throughout the day. However, any snow still on the ground by night will likely remain until morning as Keim said he expects a "modest freeze" tonight.

"The last time we had snow of this magnitude was Feb. 5, 1988," Keim said. "We had a little over three inches over Baton Rouge then. We've had some other lighter snow flurries since, but nothing this significant."

Prior to the 1988 snowfall, Keim said about three inches of snow fell in Baton Rouge on Jan. 23, 1940. Only a few snowfalls have occurred in the capital city since, which Keim described as "not significant" since less than a single inch of snow fell.

The record snowfall in the Red Stick occurred in 1895 when 12 and 1/2 inches of snow blanketed the city, Keim said.

According to Baton Rouge Community College's Web site, the school has closed for the day and will reschedule exams. A Southern University Police Department official said his University remains open today despite weather conditions.

East Baton Rouge Parish schools are closed for the day, and both the New Mississippi River Bridge on I-10 and the Old Mississippi River Bridge on US 190 are closed.

The National Weather Service has issued a "winter storm warning" until noon today. A total daytime snow and sleet accumulation of 2 to 4 inches is possible, and the low tonight is 31 degrees Fahrenheit.

"A strong and cold upper level storm system combined with low pressure over the Florida panhandle will cause rain to mix with sleet and snow this morning across east central Louisiana," according to the National Weather Service's Web site. "Two to four inches of snow accumulation will be possible on grassy areas ... and elevated road surfaces like bridges and overpasses."

Snow accumulation on highways and roadways could reach two inches, and "many accidents" were reported to State Police this morning in Baton Rouge, according to the National Weather Service.

"To get this much snow is probably in the order of a 20 or 30 year event, so it's pretty rare," Keim said. "So if you haven't gone outside to enjoy it, now is the time."

Britain shivers through coldest start to winter for 30 years

2008 the coldest year globally this decade

http://www.iceagenow.com/2008_the_coldest_...this_decade.htm

12 Dec 08 – Bookies are receiving bets that the Thames will freeze over, while ministers meet in Brussels to set new global warming targets and the UN conducts a major “climate-change” conference in Poland.

The average temperature in Britain for the first third of December was a chilly 1.7C (35.1F) - compared with the long-term average of 5.2C (41.4F).

The last time Britain had such a cold start to December was in 1976, when the average temperature was 0.8C (33.4F).

Climate scientists say 2008 will be the coldest year globally this decade.

Danish Arctic research dates Ice Age

The result of a Danish ice drilling project has become the international standard for the termination of the last glacial period. It ended precisely 11,711 years ago.

http://politiken.dk/newsinenglish/article611464.ece

A Danish ice drilling project has conclusively ended the discussion on the exact date of the end of the last ice age.

The extensive scientific study shows that it was precisely 11,711 years ago - and not the indeterminate figure of ‘some’ 11,000 years ago – that the ice withdrew, allowing humans and animals free reign.

According to the Niels Bohr Institute (NBI) in Copenhagen, the very precise dating of the end of the last Ice Age has made Denmark the owner of the “Greenwich Mean Time” of the end of the last glacial period and beginning of the present climate – the so-called International Standard Reference.

Kilometres of ice
It took several thousand years to warm up the earth and melt the kilometre thick ice caps that covered large parts of the northern hemisphere during the last glacial period and as a result the transition from Ice Age to the current period has lacked a clearly defined point in time.

The answer has now been found in the NordGrip drilling project in Greenland.

“Our new, extremely detailed data from the examination of the ice cores shows that in the transition from the ice age to our current warm, interglacial period the climate shift is so sudden that it is as if a button was pressed”, explains ice core researcher Jørgen Peder Steffensen, Centre for Ice and Climate at NBI at the University of Copenhagen.

Ice core reference

When ice cores, that are formed by annual snowfall that is compressed into ice, are drilled out and analysed, the three kilometre ice cap in Greenland has acted like a filing cabinet of the climate detail of past geological periods.

“It is the first time an ice core has been used as an international standard reference for a geological period and it is a great recognition of our extremely detailed scientific data”, Jørgen Peder Steffensen said.

Road closures extend overnight; county schools cancel classes

http://www.lvrj.com/news/36335684.html

Because of today’s snow flurries, all road closures in Southern Nevada were expected to continue through the night, the Nevada Department of Transportation announced.

The Clark County School District announced on its Web site Wednesday night that schools would be closed Thursday. The site stated: "Due to weather conditions and for the safety of students, all Clark County School District schools will be closed tomorrow (Thursday). Students should not report to campus. All administrators, 12-month employees, and office staff should report to work as usual. Teachers and other classroom employees are not expected to report to work since a makeup day may be scheduled later in the year." Also, Faith Lutheran Jr./Sr. High School has told its students that if district schools are closed in the morning, it also will close.

Interstate 15 south of Primm remained closed and was not expected to reopen tonight, according to the California Department of Transportation Web site.

The Red Cross was providing shelter for stranded motorists at the San Bernardino County Fairgrounds in Victorville, Calif.

Closures in Southern Nevada included U.S. Highway 95, from Railroad Pass south to the California border, state Route 160 between Las Vegas and Pahrump, and state routes 163, 164 and 165.

Chains, snow tires, or four wheel drive vehicle restrictions were in place for Mountain Springs and Mount Charleston.

Chis Stachelski, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service Las Vegas, said as of 7:45 p.m. the heaviest snowfall occurred in the southeast valley, where about 3 inches of snow had accumulated.

Stachelski said anywhere from 6 to 10 inches could fall in that area by the time the storm tapers off Thursday morning.

Stachelski said the northern and western parts of the valley could receive between .05 inches to 4 inches of snowfall.

Steady snow dumped 11 inches on Mount Charleston in the past 24 hours at 7,600 feet.

Stachelski said Wednesday’s storm is nothing to scoff at.

“This is the most snow we’ve had in Las Vegas in almost 30 years,” he said. “It’s a significant historical event.”

Stachelski predicted Wednesday's accumulation totals would rank between the sixth to eighth heaviest snowfall on record.

But other records were sure to fall.

As of 4 p.m. Wednesday, the 2 inches of snow that fell in Las Vegas tied a record set on Dec. 15, 1967. Those two inches also set a valley record for snowfall in the month of December. Both records are expected to topple once today's total snowfall is recorded.

Snow records have been kept in Las Vegas since 1937.

The ongoing snowstorm stopped flights from landing or leaving at McCarran International Airport, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

"No planes are departing for Las Vegas from anywhere in the U.S. right now." said FAA spokesman Ian Gregor.

Gregor said the airport doesn't have snow removal or deicing equipment, which means there's no way for snow-covered planes to leave safely.

"The forecast is not looking particularly promising for anybody who wants to fly into Las Vegas," he said.

Transportation Department Spokesman Bob McKenzie said motorists are being advised to stay in Las Vegas if possible.

The Nevada Department of Transportation plans on using a liquid deicer called magnesium-chloride on the part of the valley's freeway system tonight, McKenzie said. The liquid will be spread over bridges and viaducts and areas most likely to freeze on Interstate 15 and U.S. Highway 95, McKenzie said.

Other weather-related closures:

Because of travel conditions, Henderson employees were sent home from work at 3 p.m., city officials announced. Emergency operations will continue and public safety and public works employees are on call.

Coolest year since 2000 but trend still shows global warming

The last 12 months have been cooler, but 2008 is still the tenth hottest year on record

James Randerson, science correspondent guardian.co.uk, Tuesday 16 December 2008 16.00 GMT

The last 12 months have been the coolest since 2000, according to an analysis by Nasa's Goddard Institute for Space Studies. The meteorological year - which runs from December 2007 to November 2008 - was 0.42C warmer than the global average temperature between 1951 and 1980.

Nasa's calculations agree closely with a similar analysis by the UK Met Office which was released officially this morning, but reported by the Guardian earlier this month. According to Met Office figures for the last 11 months, the global mean temperature for 2008 is 14.3C, which is 0.14C below the average temperature for 2001-07. That makes 2008 the tenth hottest year on record.

Climate scientists had predicted that 2008 would be relatively cool compared with recent years because at the beginning of the year there was a strong La Niña event - characterised by unusually cold ocean temperatures in the equatorial Pacific Ocean.

Professor Phil Jones head of the Climate Research Unit at the University of East Anglia in Norwich said that El Niño and La Niña events have a profound impact on yearly temperature fluctuations. "The most important component of year-to-year variability in global average temperatures is the phase and amplitude of equatorial sea surface temperatures in the Pacific that lead to La Nina and El Nino events."

The influence of La Niña can be clearly seen in Nasa's analysis. Its researchers have produced a world map showing which regions of the planet were above and below their average temperature during 1951 to 1980. While much of the equatorial Pacific was 1C below average, the Antarctic Peninsula and parts of Siberia were over 2.5C above average. The Goddard Institute for Space Studies is led by the US climate scientist Prof James Hansen.

Although 2008 is cool by recent standards, it still fits with a warming trend. The 10 warmest years have occurred since 1997 and world average temperatures for the current decade are nearly 0.2C warmer than the average for the last decade.

"Human influence, particularly emission of greenhouse gases, has greatly increased the chance of having such warm years. Comparing observations with the expected response to manmade and natural drivers of climate change it is shown that global temperature is now over 0.7C warmer than if humans were not altering the climate," said Dr Peter Stott of the Met Office.

The K7RA Solar Update

http://www.arrl.org/news/stories/2008/12/19/10515/?nc=1

Last week's sunspot group was only visible for three days, December 10-12. The average daily sunspot number for all of 2007 was 12.8; if we see no sunspots for the rest of 2008, the average for this year will be 4.7. By comparison, the yearly averages of daily sunspot numbers during the last solar minimum (1995-1997) were 28.7, 13.2 and 30.7. This solar minimum is much lower than the one about 12 years ago.

Sunspot numbers for December 11-17 were 12, 14, 0, 0, 0, 0 and 0 with a mean of 3.7. The 10.7 cm flux was 70.2, 71, 69.7, 68.8, 68.9, 69.4 and 68.8 with a mean of 69.5. The estimated planetary A indices were 3, 2, 1, 0, 1, 4 and 5 with a mean of 2.3. The estimated mid-latitude A indices were 4, 2, 1, 1, 1, 4 and 3 with a mean of 2.3.

Geomagnetic conditions have been stable and quiet this week, very nice for those lower HF frequencies during the long nights. As you can see, there have been many very quiet geomagnetic periods over the past few months. That table is based on the calendar quarter, so check here for the previous 30 days if you are reading this later than the end of 2008, only 12 days after this is written.

The daily A index (a linear scale, calculated from the eight daily K index readings, which are on a logarithmic scale) gives an interesting comparison to the last solar minimum. We can check those weekly averages beginning with the October 11, 1996 bulletin, when we began presenting the planetary A index at the suggestion of Robert Wood, WB5CRG (now W5AJ), of Midland, Texas.

Go to here and compare the weekly averages with current averages here and you can see that during all those weeks of zero sunspots, geomagnetic activity was much higher. It is also interesting to note how quickly sunspots returned toward the end of 1996 after those long weeks of no spots.

The outlook from USAF/NOAA shows solar flux below 70 through December 25, then at 70 from December 26-January 8. Perhaps we may see more sunspots during this period. The same prediction shows planetary A index of 5, except for December 22-23, when it rises to 10, then 8, and then December 31 to January 2, with planetary A index of 8, 10 and 10. Otherwise, all could be quiet. Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet conditions for December 19-21, unsettled December 22-23, quiet to unsettled December 24 and quiet again on December 25.

The 2008 winter solstice officially occurs in the Northern Hemisphere at 1204 UTC on December 21. This is during darkness on the West Coast of North America, where I am, so my Saturday night through Sunday morning should be the longest night of the year. This far north (Seattle), the Sun will set at 4:20 PM (0020 UTC Sunday) on Saturday, and rise at 7:55 AM (1555 UTC) on Sunday, December 21. This is 15 hours and 35 minutes from sunset to sunrise, nearly two hours longer than the same night in South Florida and almost two and a half hours longer than the same night on the southern tip of the island of Hawaii. Tierra Del Fuego -- at the southern end of South America -- will have a very short night this weekend, about six hours and 40 minutes from sunset to sunrise as it enters the Southern Hemisphere's summer season.

With all of these quiet days, there is still fun to be had and things to explore on HF. Two weeks ago on December 5, Chuck Hooker, VE3CQH, of Orangeville, Ontario, reported: "The low sunspot cycle doesn't seem to affect me and Bill, K4KSR (of Yorktown, Virginia). He added to his DX total during the CQ World Wide CW DX Contest using a K1 transceiver, and he and I communicated during our first sked -- and my first QSO in more than a year -- earlier this week on 40 meters. I called; he answered. Bill uses 5 W or (usually) less to a hidden antenna; I applied 1.2 W from a crystal-controlled Little Joe through a home-brew antenna tuner to a G5RV about 20 feet up (but downhill from the shack). Bill gave me a 579 at 1900 UTC."

In last weekend's ARRL 10 Meter Contest, we still saw activity, despite the fading sunspots. Dan Eskenazi, K7SS, of Seattle, Washington, reported some scattered openings on Saturday to the south and southwest, some nice sporadic-E propagation into Colorado and double-hop propagation further east.

Terry Oldham, KH6MT, of Grand Island, Florida, reported hearing good signals from the East Coast and into Ohio, Michigan, Arkansas and Louisiana, but not to Texas.

Vic Woodling, WB4SLM, of Centerville, Georgia, said the 10 meter propagation was unique, and while he put a small effort into the contest, "there was something for everyone. Friday night, December 13, ground wave was awesome. Can't say as to why, but could very easily work stations 200 to 300 miles. Found conditions close to what one will see on 6 meters. I decided to check 160 after about an hour from the start of the 10 Meter Contest and logged UT3UA amongst others in EU. Went back to 10 meters at 0321 and had some very unusual prop into the Northeast. It may have been Es, but let me explain: The conditions sounded like meteor scatter with an E coupling. CW signals were great. Hearing very strong bursts with long decay and the residual was there for several minutes. For example, K1ZZ was one call 100 W and I heard him many times over the next few hours in and out of the noise. Around 0400 UTC, the band shifted to the 0s. I stayed up until about 0530 UTC and continued working 2s & 3s. Saturday afternoon, I got some Es to 8 and 9 land.

"Sunday, December 14, from 0100 to about 0200 UTC, there was very strong ground wave again, but not as long a distance as the night before. Ten meter Es to W0SD, but the E was sporadic. Checked 160 and logged OK2PAY, SM5EDX, UR0MC and UX1UX; I copied but did not work EL2DX. I went off the air at 0400 UTC, but was back on at 1624 UTC and the band was open Es to all call areas. I didn't have to move the antenna, as there were very strong signals. Around 2015 UTC, the PYs in Brazil appeared -- every PY in the country must have been on, along with OA (Peru), then a shift at 2047 UTC to LU9 land (southern tip of Argentina). Signals were in reality 55 to 57 (disregarding the usual exchange!), but no problems working them very quickly. In the middle of the DX, stations in North Florida and South Florida suddenly appeared with 20+9 signals (very short skip). Went over to 6 meters quickly and got a partial on WP4 and some Northeast stations, but I didn't stay, as I wanted the DX on 10. At 2120 UTC, the band shifted again and went into the scatter mode. I worked some more GA, AL, SC and NC stations on groundwave and dropped up to 160 after the 0000 UTC hour.

"On Monday after the 10 Meter Contest was over, 160 meters was great for us with a dipole and couple hundred watts. I logged RK3AWL and his signals were an honest 599 on the meter; mine weren't so good at 449. I worked GW3YDX, ES5QX, LA5HE, SM2LIY and OH2BO. I was first to hear him, but with his 'QRZ?' to my call, it created an orange glow of EMP radiation out of the Northeast, thus prohibiting me from making the contact.

"Overall, I thought the 10 meter band was a pleasant surprise. I wasn't expecting much, but what I'll call 'meteor scatter with residual' really got me going, and for me it's always been the propagation and the wonder of it that has kept me in radio. Anyone can buy a kit, have the biggest and best, but it's the absolute wonder of radio wave propagation which keeps the headsets on."

Thanks, Vic! There is much more to report, and this is running very late. I am between snowstorms in Seattle, and it is almost noon in Newington where a blizzard is about to blow in, so I must put this to bed. Expect to read more about meteor scatter in the next bulletin, as well as a hole in the terrestrial magnetic field and a thin ionosphere. This may come out as an extra on Monday, December 22, in addition to the following Friday bulletin on December 26.

Stay warm and safe!

Amateur solar observer Tad Cook, K7RA, of Seattle, Washington, provides this weekly report on solar conditions and propagation. This report also is available via W1AW every Friday, and an abbreviated version appears in The ARRL Letter. Check here for a detailed explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin. An archive of past propagation bulletins can be found here. You can find monthly propagation charts between four USA regions and 12 overseas locations here. December 22, 2008 posting ... WOW ... we just survived the 2008 winter solstice and shortest day of the year ... temps to 15 below and wind chills to 40 below zero ... anyone that believes in global warming please step right up and hang outside in the upper mid-west for a few minutes ... your jaw would freeze shut before you could say Al Gore !!! jim mccanney

The Frigid Future Is Upon Us

Wednesday, December 24, 2008 8:53 AM
By: Philip V. Brennan Article Font Size
http://www.newsmax.com/brennan/global_warm.../24/165048.html

The heated debate about global warming suddenly has cooled off. It's no longer between the fanatic adherents of global warming (AGWers – Anthroprogenic [human-caused] Global Warming adherents) and the more sober-minded, so-called "deniers." It's now between the warmiacs and Mother Nature, and she's winning handily.

If you doubt that, take a look a national temperature charts that show below-zero temperatures as far south as the nation's lower midsection, a blizzard in Las Vegas and snow in New Orleans, and a fire-ravaged Malibu — and all happening before winter really sets in.

This is only the beginning. If I'm correct about what I've been saying since 1997, (The Ice Man Cometh http://www.pvbr.com/Issue_1/global12.htm) the onset of an ice age, little or big, is now upon us, and what's ahead is anything but pretty. This winter will tell the story.

What we're experiencing now is going to prove mild in comparison to what is waiting in the wings. Before this winter ends — and that won't be until late May or early June — most of the world will be in the deep freezer and under the incredible amounts of snow that record-breaking blizzards will continue to bring us.

This is not to say that the now-panicky members of the Gore brigade will throw in the towel — they'll be telling us that the frigid weather is a result of global warming. But by that time, nobody will be listening, and even if they were, they wouldn't be able to hear anything through their earmuffs.

What we are now witnessing is the triumph of reality over shabby and fraudulent scientific theory. The only hockey sticks we'll be seeing will be in the frozen hands of NHL players.

In my 1997 series, I showed how the scientific community was wedded to the possibility that we were approaching the end of the present interglacial period and headed for a new ice age.

"Understanding Climate Change," which the National Academy of Sciences published in 1975, makes these observations on page 181: "The present interglacial interval — which has now lasted for about 10,000 years — represents a climatic regime that is relatively rare during the past million years, most of which has been occupied by colder, glacial regimes. Only during about 8 percent of the past 700,000 years has the earth experienced climates as warm or warmer than the present.

"The penultimate interglacial age began about 125,000 years ago, and lasted for approximately 10,000 years. Similar interglacial ages — each lasting 10,000 plus or minus 2000 years and each followed by a glacial maximum — have occurred on the average every 100,000 years during at least the past half-million years.

“During this period, fluctuations of the northern hemisphere ice sheets caused sea level variations of the order of 100 meters."

On page 189, the question is asked: "When will the present interglacial [period] end?

"Few paleoclimatoligists would dispute that the prominent warm periods (or interglacials) that have followed each of the terminations of the major glaciations have had durations of 10,000 plus or minus 2000 years. In each case, a period of considerably colder climate has followed immediately after the interglacial interval.

“Since about 10,000 years have passed since the onset of the present period of prominent warmth, the question naturally arises as to whether we are indeed on the brink of a period of colder climate."

"The question remains unsolved. If the end of the interglacial is episodic in character, we are moving toward a rather sudden climatic change of unknown timing ... If on the other hand, these changes are more sinusoidal in character, then the climate should decline gradually over a period of a thousand years."

A study prepared for the 95th Congress in 1978 agreed with the National Academy of Sciences position as explained in the above-quoted study. The document “Weather Modification: Programs, Problems, Policy and Potential” warned:

"In geological prospective, the case for cooling is strong ... If this interglacial age lasts no longer than a dozen earlier ones in the past million years, as recorded in deep sea sediments, we may reasonably suppose the world is about due to slide into the next ice age."

That made sense then, before the global-warming gravy train brought billions in research grants to global warming researchers, and it makes sense now.

Moreover, Mother Nature has now begun to show her hand by pouring ice water on the AGW hoax.

The mere fact that we are overdue for a new ice age itself lends great credence to the idea that the great freeze is upon us. Current increasingly frigid weather enhances it.

In a contest between Al Gore and Mother Nature, she holds all the cards. And she's playing them now.

Stay warm and Merry Christmas.

Where did all the sunspots go - an ice age cometh?

The spotless Sun, as it appeared yesterday at 12:48 p.m. The Sun's spotlessness is giving rise to speculation of another Little Ice Age.

With the debate focused on a warming Earth, the icy consequences of a cooler future have not been considered

You probably haven't heard much of Solar Cycle 24, the current cycle that our sun has entered, and I hope you don't. If Solar Cycle 24 becomes a household term, your lifestyle could be taking a dramatic turn for the worse. That of your children and their children could fare worse still, say some scientists, because Solar Cycle 24 could mark a time of profound long-term change in the climate. As put by geophysicist Philip Chapman, a former NASA astronaut-scientist and former president of the National Space Society, "It is time to put aside the global warming dogma, at least to begin contingency planning about what to do if we are moving into another little ice age." The sun, of late, is remarkably free of eruptions: It has lost its spots. By this point in the solar cycle, sunspots would ordinarily have been present in goodly numbers. Today's spotlessness - what alarms Dr. Chapman and others - may be an anomaly of some kind, and the sun may soon revert to form. But if it doesn't - and with each passing day, the speculation in the scientific community grows that it will not - we could be entering a new epoch that few would welcome.

Sunspots have been well documented throughout human history, starting in the fourth century BC, with written descriptions by Gan De, a Chinese astronomer. In 1128, an English monk, John of Worcester, was the first person known to have drawn sunspots, and after the telescope's arrival in the early 1600s, observations and drawings became commonplace, including by such luminaries as Galileo Galilei. Then, to the astonishment of astronomers, they saw the sunspots diminish and die out altogether.

This was the case during the Little Ice Age, a period starting in the 15th or 16th century and lasting centuries, says NASA's Goddard Space Centre, which links the absence of sunspots to the cold that then descended on Earth. During the coldest part of the Little Ice Age, a time known as the Maunder Minimum (named after English astronomer Edward Maunder), astronomers saw only about 50 sunspots over a 30-year period, less than one half of 1% of the sunspots that would normally have been expected. Other Minimums - times of low sunspot activity - also corresponded to times of unusual cold.

The consequences of the Little Ice Age, because they occurred in relatively recent times, have come down to us through literature and the arts as well as from historians and scientists, government and business records. When Shakespeare wrote of "lawn as white as driven snow," he had first-hand experience - Europe was bitterly cold in his day, a sharp contrast to the very warm weather that preceded his birth. During the Little Ice Age, the River Thames froze over, the Dutch developed the ice skate and the great artists of the day learned to love a new genre: the winter landscape.

In what had been a warm Europe , adaptations were not all happy: Growing seasons in England and Continental Europe generally became short and unreliable, which led to shortages and famine. These hardships were nothing compared to the more northerly countries: Glaciers advanced rapidly in Greenland, Iceland, Scandinavia and North America, making vast tracts of land uninhabitable. The Arctic pack ice extended so far south that several reports describe Eskimos landing their kayaks in Scotland. Finland's population fell by one-third, Iceland's by half, the Viking colonies in Greenland were abandoned altogether, as were many Inuit communities. The cold in North America spread so far south that, in the winter of 1780, New York Harbor froze, enabling people to walk from Manhattan to Staten Island.

In the same way that the Earth shivered when sunspots disappeared, the Earth warmed when sunspot activity became pronounced. The warm period about 1000 years ago known as the Medieval Warm Period - a time of bounty in which grapes grew in England and Greenland was colonized - also was a time of high sunspot activity, called the Medieval Maximum. Since 1900, Earth has experienced what astronomers call "the Modern Maximum" - the 20th century has again been a time of high sunspot activity.

But the 1900s are gone, along with the high temperatures that accompanied them. The last 10 years have seen no increase in temperatures - they reached a plateau and then remained there - and the last year saw a precipitous decline. How much lower and for how long the temperatures will fall, if at all, no one yet knows - the science is far from settled on what drives climate.

But many are watching the sun for answers, and for good reason. Several renowned scientists have been predicting for some time that the world could enter a period of cooling right around now, with consequences that could be dire. "The next little ice age would be much worse than the previous one and much more harmful than anything warming may do," believes Dr. Chapman. "There are many more people now and we have become dependent on a few temperate agricultural areas, especially in the U.S. and Canada. Global warming would increase agricultural output, but global cooling will decrease it."

We are now at the beginning of Solar Cycle 24, so named because it is the 24th consecutive cycle that astronomers have listed, starting with the first cycle that began in March, 1755, and ended in June, 1766. Each cycle lasts an average of approximately 11 years; each is marked by sunspots that first erupt in the mid latitudes of the sun, and then, over the course of the 11 years, erupt progressively toward the sun's equator; each is marked by a change in the polarity of the sun's hemispheres; each changes the temperature on Earth in ways that humans don't fully understand, but cannot in all honesty deny.

Record snowfall across Canada

This follows record snowfall last year - but both of those facts are buried toward the end of the article. Instead, it talks about a nationwide white Christmas.
Is this attempt to deceive the public?
You decide.
(Be sure to read the comments by climatologist Dr. Timothy Ball at the end of this article.)

21 Dec 08 - Environment Canada senior climatologist David Phillips told CTV Newsnet that "it looks like a very good chance" it will be a white Christmas for all parts of Canada for the first time since 1971, the first one in 40 years.

"It's just sort of the beginning of winter, and it's a little much to expect when we have so many different climatic types in this country for it to be frozen and snow-covered from right across the huge country," he told CTV Newsnet on Sunday.

"In 10 provinces, every one of them has got some weather misery out there, and an advisory," he said.

The article was much longer than this, when it finally got around to what I consider the most telling statements:

“Phillips said some parts of the country are seeing snowfall amounts that have outpaced last year's record and near-record totals at this point in the season.

"Already in many places in eastern Canada, we're ahead of the record from last year," he said.

Canadian climatologist Dr. Timothy Ball had this to say about the above article:

David Phillips is listed as a Senior Climatologist at Environment Canada. He has a BA in Geography and made his name by producing a weather calendar; "Weather Trivia." He has been the spokesperson for that department giving lectures all across Canada pushing the AGW thesis. (Anthropogenic Global Warming)

Nature will follow its usual natural course and there will be periods of thaw across the country as the Rossby Wave pattern asserts itself, that is a general 4 to 6 week cycle of general weather conditions. It will result in the pattern of one half the country being warm the other cold with the dividing point being the western end of Lake Superior. They will latch on to the warm portion and emphasize that in their stories to the media - its Phillips' job as spin doctor for his department.

Generally, the weather stories in Canada are a function of what is affecting Toronto, so if the warming occurs in that city so much the better for the spin. The joke in the Canadian west is, "How many Torontonians to change a light bulb?" Answer, "None. They hold on to the bulb and the world revolves around them."

Sunspots: Second least active year since 1900 – Portends Cooling

31 Dec 08 – (Excerpts) “2008 Ends Spotless and with 266 Spotless Days, the #2 Least Active Year Since 1900, Portends Cooling, says meteorologist Joseph D’Aleo

http://www.iceagenow.com/Sunspots-Second_l...nds_Cooling.htm

“This will bring the total number of sunspotless days this month to 28 and for the year to 266, clearly enough to make 2008, the second least active solar year since 1900.

“The total number of spotless days this solar minimum is now at around 510 days since the last maximum. The earliest the minimum of the sunspot cycles can be is July 2008, which would make the cycle length 12 years 3 months, longest since cycle 9 in 1848. If the sun stays quiet for a few more months we will rival the early 1800s, the Dalton Minimum which fits with the 213 year cycle which begin with the solar minimum in the late 1790s.

“Looking ahead, put that together with the flip of the PDO in the Pacific to cold and you have alarming signals that this cooling of the last 7 years will continue and accelerate.”

30 Dec 08 - (Excerpts) Ask yourself this question: What makes our planet green?

If you guessed CO2, you're right. CO2 is to trees and foliage and all vegetation what oxygen is to humans — they can't survive without it. It's what makes them green and healthy.

The more CO2, the greener and healthy our planet. Yet the global warming fanatics are classifying CO2 as a pollutant and blaming it for dangerously warming our (fast cooling) planet.

How stupid do they think we are?

CO2 levels have skyrocketed since 2000, and guess what's happened?

It’s gotten colder, that's what happened.

Then there's the latest panic about the alleged plight of the polar bears. According to the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) polar bears face extinction — but not quite yet.

According to the WWF, "With 20-25,000 polar bears living in the wild, the species is not currently endangered, but its future is far from certain."

They go on to assure us that, "If current warming trends continue unabated, scientists believe that polar bears will be vulnerable to extinction within the next century."

To help stop that from happening, the WWF would like you to send it money.

Like all solemn pronouncements from the warmiacs, the predictions concerning polar bear extinction is based solely on computer models, not on what's happening now. Remember, the group said, “The species is not currently endangered.” And what's happening now is the swelling of the polar bear population, which grew from a low of 5,000 to 10,000 in the '50s and '60s, according to The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service.

Moreover, a 2002 U.S. Geological Survey of wildlife in the Arctic Refuge Coastal Plain noted that the polar bear populations “may now be near historic highs."

Asks botanist David Bellamy, a famed U.K. environmental campaigner, former lecturer at Durham University, and host of a popular U.K. TV series on wildlife: “Why scare the families of the world with tales that polar bears are heading for extinction when there is good evidence that there are now twice as many of these iconic animals, most doing well in the Arctic than there were 20 years ago?”

If you want something real to worry about, try an eruption of the Yellowstone caldera where scientists have discovered that the ground is over 70 centimeters higher than in was in 1923 — indicating a massive swelling underneath the park.

There was a swarm of 16 earthquakes in 24 hours this past weekend. The reservoir is filling with magma at a staggering rate. The volcano erupts with a calendar-like cycle of every 600,000-650,000 years.

The last eruption was more than 640,000 years ago.

Last time it erupted, 642,000 years ago, it ejected 1,000 cubic kilometers of magma into the air. If this happened in today’s world, it would kill millions and cover most of the United States in a layer of ash at least a centimeter thick. The lighter ash would rise up into the atmosphere, initiating a volcanic winter and ruining crops worldwide.

This is something genuine Al Gore could get really his teeth on. Instead of recommending carbon caps, he could suggest sacrificing a few virgins to the god Vulcan. It would be cheaper than cap and trade.

Sea Ice Ends Year at Same Level as 1979

Michael Asher (Blog) - January 1, 2009 11:31 AM http://www.dailytech.com/Sea+Ice+Ends+Year...rticle13834.htm

Rapid growth spurt leaves amount of ice at levels seen 29 years ago.

Thanks to a rapid rebound in recent months, global sea ice levels now equal those seen 29 years ago, when the year 1979 also drew to a close.

Ice levels had been tracking lower throughout much of 2008, but rapidly recovered in the last quarter. In fact, the rate of increase from September onward is the fastest rate of change on record, either upwards or downwards.

The data is being reported by the University of Illinois's Arctic Climate Research Center, and is derived from satellite observations of the Northern and Southern hemisphere polar regions.

Each year, millions of square kilometers of sea ice melt and refreeze. However, the mean ice anomaly -- defined as the seasonally-adjusted difference between the current value and the average from 1979-2000, varies much more slowly. That anomaly now stands at just under zero, a value identical to one recorded at the end of 1979, the year satellite record-keeping began.

Sea ice is floating and, unlike the massive ice sheets anchored to bedrock in Greenland and Antarctica, doesn't affect ocean levels. However, due to its transient nature, sea ice responds much faster to changes in temperature or precipitation and is therefore a useful barometer of changing conditions.

Earlier this year, predictions were rife that the North Pole could melt entirely in 2008. Instead, the Arctic ice saw a substantial recovery. Bill Chapman, a researcher with the UIUC's Arctic Center, tells DailyTech this was due in part to colder temperatures in the region. Chapman says wind patterns have also been weaker this year. Strong winds can slow ice formation as well as forcing ice into warmer waters where it will melt.

Why were predictions so wrong? Researchers had expected the newer sea ice, which is thinner, to be less resilient and melt easier. Instead, the thinner ice had less snow cover to insulate it from the bitterly cold air, and therefore grew much faster than expected, according to the National Snow and Ice Data Center.

In May, concerns over disappearing sea ice led the U.S. to officially list the polar bear a threatened species, over objections from experts who claimed the animal's numbers were increasing.

The Bible and the Bible alone are used to identify the Antichrist power. The little horn power of Daniel 7 with its twelve clear identifying features points to the only one who can qualify as Antichrist. Modern day deceptions regarding the little horn power, the doctrines of preterism, and futurism, are contrasted with plain Biblical teachings.

This is an expose of Revelation chapter 10 which reveals the counterpart to the beast which is to arise out of the bottomless pit (the kingdom of evil). It exposes the organization which God raises up to counter the myriad of errors which Satan places in the world to rob man of his salvation. It is this organization is to be empowered with a special message of warning and it arises at the right time in Biblical prophecy to herald an everlasting gospel of salvation in Christ and faithfulness to His word.

This video deals with the culmination of the 2300 day/year prophecy of Daniel 8 & 9. It shows that the same animosity which culminated in the crucifixion of Christ will be manifested at the close of time. In the corridors of secret societies, and in new age thinking, there is a movement to destroy those who believe in salvation in Christ alone, and in the veracity of His word. Evidence is presented for the plans to eradicate those who stand for truth and righteousness.

The Bible warns of signs and wonders that will be performed at the end of time to deceive if possible the very elect. The thunderous events of our time in the revelation of forces through the new age movement and the Marian movement are portrayed in this lecture in multimedia format. The teachings of the apparitions as they pertain to the commandments of the church are contrasted with those of the Bible. The two perspectives of the end time conflicting powers regarding the book of Revelation are contrasted. Where is it all leading and what is the grand finale?

The coming of Christ at the end of the age has been prophesied in the Bible and for centuries people have been awaiting this great event. What does the Bible really teach about the coming of Christ and how doe sit compare to the array of teachings abroad in the world today? Is there a secret rapture? What happens to the dead when Christ returns? These questions and more are answered in this eye-opening study, and God? s final intervention in the affairs of men to vindicate those who have stood for truth and righteousness is clearly portrayed.

The world is waiting for a millennium of peace in which Christ will set up His kingdom and all evil will cease. When will be the ushering in of the true millennium? What does the Bible really teach about the millennium in which the saints will judge the world? How does this compare with a world that is completely converted according to most current renditions on this subject? These and other issues are revealed. We are given a glimpse of the new world and the kingdom of Christ where there will be no more death nor pain nor suffering.

The greatest invitation is to surrender all and to follow Christ. Jesus commissioned His disciples to preach the gospel and to baptize those who believed in the name of the Father. the Son, and the Holy Spirit. But did He mean infant or adult baptism? Is there a right way to baptize-sprinkling, pouring, immersion - or does it matter? What does the Bible reveal about this controversial issue of baptism - the celebration of Christ's resurrection.

The Bible and the Bible alone are used to identify the Antichrist power. The little horn power of Daniel 7 with its twelve clear identifying features points to the only one who can qualify as Antichrist. Modern day deceptions regarding the little horn power, the doctrines of preterism, and futurism, are contrasted with plain Biblical teachings. GOOGLINK this is important too. this is regarding Tony Alamo ministries which Eric Phelps told me in an email that the Jesuits have done a lot of damage to him for his telling the truth about jesuits. Tony had a wonderful ministry here in the U.S. and has totally been maligned by the papacy and now a lot of people say he's a cult which is not true at all.

http://www.arcticbeacon.com/0922062.mp3

Tony Alamo was close friends with Alberto Rivera, Avro Manhattan, is still friends with Jack Chick and many others. Eric Links to Tony's site as well.

Tony's work exposing the Vatican:

QUOTE

I understand you being suspicious of anyone, especially in Christian ministry in these days. I do not know very much about Tony Alamo myself but I know enough to say that if he was backing up Dr.Rivera, he certainly is on our side.

One needs to remember that there is no limit what so ever to the evil of the Jesuit Order. It's inconceivable to the ordinary human being but these demon driven people are with absolution devoted to their General and will do ANYTHING for the benifit of their entirely satanic church.

I have read false allegations against many including Rev. Charles Chiniquy(who was by all means a GREAT man) that made my heart break in anger! And these were made by people who mostlikely never read any of his books. And it's not only the Jesuits themselves but any devout Roman Catholic.

These fanatics go to confession, their priests know everything about them and they will do ANYTHING their priests tell them to, including writting lies about whoever for the benifit of the antichrist they call the pope.

God bless you!

hmm, the final pope might have blood going back to the TRIBE OF DAN (symbolized by EAGLE). from danians to greco-roman SPARTANS 2 the BEAST!

Ireland.

Ireland = Hibernia = Land of the Hebrews. One of the settling places of the Tuatha de Dannan (tribe of Dan 1000--1200 BC) and the Zara line of the royal house of the Tribe of Judah. Gaelic or Erse (pure Irish up to the 1700s) was identical with Hebrew (also Manx). Lia-Fail = Stone of Destiny = Stone of Scone = Jacobs pillow from Bethel in Israel. Erin = Eri = Israelite family makers of fine linen.
Northern Ireland (Ulster) flag = the red hand of Ulster = biblical reference to the birth of Zara of the tibe of Judah.
Old Irish flag (pre-republic) = King David's harp on a green background.

note the 666 hexagram (6 points, 6 mini triangles, 6 sided center polygon) now the (tribe of dan) eagle starts to make more sense!

If it's truth what Vittorio had said: that the Papal Bloodlines are descendants of Cleopatra 5, then the "Families" are related to the ptolemaic and seleucid dinasties, which comes from Ptolemy and Seleuco, the two generals of Alexander the Great, from Greece and Macedonia.

TheUnhivedMind - November 13, 2010 04:14 PM (GMT)

Dear Craig,

I understand, and admire your approach to get readers back on the trail of Rome.

As to "the times of the Gentiles" as per Luke 21:24, they began in 605 BC with Nebuchadnezzar's capture of Jerusalem. Those "times" have extended to our present day. As to their ending, that day will be the day of Christ's physical return to the earth in power and glory. His return ends those "times" during which Jerusalem now suffers (Galatians 4:25).

As to when the time of Christ's Second Coming will occur, we can set no date. As to the return of Christ to set up the Davidic Kingdom, we are not to know "the times or the seasons which the Father has put in his own power" (Acts 1:7). Thus, we must never set a date. It would be a heresy to do so and brings disrepute on the date-setter as is the case with Harold Camping.

However, Christ's Second Coming to the earth will be preceeded by the building of the Third Hebrew Temple in Jerusalem (Matthew 24:15) and the rebuilding of the ancient City of Babylon (Revelation 18) to be the center of a new Babylonian Kingdom to be possessed by the beast (Revelation 16:10). It appears to me that "kingdom" of the Man-Beast will be first in the form of a new Muslim Caliphate with its capital in Baghdad---the present US Embassy under construction in the "Green Zone" to serve as its capitol. That kingdom of the Man-Beast to be his in the middle of the 70th Week of Daniel (Daniel 9:27) will include the EU, the revived Caliphate of the Middle East and the Mediterrean Union which includs North Africa. Europe must be completely united (including England and Scotland's abandonment of the British Pound and the adoption of the pope's Euro), the Far East must be united under "the Kings of the East" (most likely united under Red Chinese leadership for which reason the Jesuits are building China and its war machine), Russia must be united to the now Muslim nations of the Middle East in preparation for the pre-mid 70th Week invasion of Gog of Magog of Ezekiel 38 (that alliance formally having begun during the Pope's Cold War Hoax), and since the US is not in prophecy, the West must some day fall never again to rise as a world power.

All of this is going to take time, years! It may take, maybe, even another 100-200 years. If the Hebrew calendar is accurate, and I believe it is, we are in year 5770 from the year of Creation. If fallen man is to have a 6000-year rule and Christ is to rule the world for the last millinnium, which I believe to be the case, then fallen man has another 230 years before we arrive at 6000. Thus, 2010 plus 230 gives us a return date of no later than 2240, your estimated number.

Here is another belief which has merit. Hosea 6:1-2 concern Israel's international dispersion after the destruction of the Second Temple in 70 AD. Some say that dispersion began in 135 AD with Emperor Hadrian, he winning the Second Roman-Jewish War when he killed out out and/or drove out nearly all Jews from Judea. If the "two days" of 6:2 signify a period of time that is in fact 2000 years (as a day could mean 1000 years) then the date of the Second Coming could be 2070. If we calculate the date from 135, then the Return of Christ to earth would be 2135 as "the third day" of verse 2 would signify the 1000-year reign of Christ on earth. Thus, we have three possible dates: 2070, 2135 and 2240.

So I would agree that the Second Coming will not be beyond 2240, but the decreed date of Christ's return cannot be known. And the pope's Gentile rule of Jerusalem cannot end one day too soon for me!

Lord bless,

Brother Eric

Revelation 13:11-17

11And I beheld another beast (United States) coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him (Rome), and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast (Rome), whose deadly wound was healed.

13And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, 14And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

This is the US in prophecy as far as I see, unless someone has a better explanation.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 01:03 PM (GMT)

We are talking about different subjects (Gog & Magog from Revelation and Ezekiel).

Ezekiel 38 & 39 (Gog & Magog war, the Islamic / Russian led invasion on Israel) is to happen after Israel comes back to the land (Ezekiel 36: Israel regathered), (Ezekiel 37 - Israel born again, event that took place in May, 1948) and before the Millenium Kingdom (Ezekiel 40 to 48), therefore, we have the chronological order in Ezekiel. Now, if it's going to happen during or prior to the 70th week of Daniel, I don't know.

All in all, don't confuse Gog & Magog from Revelation with Ezekiel's.

Also, the United States is nowhere to be found in Bible end-times prophecy. Rev. 13 indicates the beast is a man (the coming Antichrist), not a "country", (also, don't confuse the "beast" from Rev. 13 and Rev. 17, they are not talking about the same subject).

Revelation {13:4} And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who [is] like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

Him = person / man.

2 Timothy {2:15} Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth*.*

What makes you think Gog and Magog in Revelation 20 is different to Gog and Magog in Ezekiel? Anywhere else in prophecy where we see the same wording such as the ten horns from Daniel and the ten horns in Revelation we find that they are referring to the same thing.

Read Daniel 7. Daniel tells us that a beast = a kingdom.

Oh well. I will try one more time,

Question: "What are Gog and Magog?"
http://www.gotquestions.org/Gog-Magog.html

Revelation {13:4} And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who [is] like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

The word of the living God requires massive study. Patience is needed, and we need to seperate, analize the word properly, take it literally, without ever losing context. Context is key, because everyone knows how to quote scripture and make doctrine out of it. Reading from a website (even if it's a really good one) five or ten times won't make it, reading the Bible from cover to cover 10, 15, 20 times won't make it. It takes way more than that to get the puzzle right (specially when it's concerned with Escathology).

Above all, we are to be patient, we are to study togheter. People who are Bible scholars for over 30 years will tell you they are always learning new things that they just couldn't see before. It is a very natural thing, it is "progressive learning".

Well I fail to understand why Daniel would tell us that a Beast = a kingdom, but then elsewhere that is scrapped and changed to mean a Beast = a man.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 01:45 PM (GMT)

Brother Phazon, I just edited my last post by the way (sorry about that).

As I said, context is key (also, patience, study, progressive learning). No person on the face of this planet will read the Bible cover to cover 5, 10, 15 times and instantly "get it all". Impossible, even for those who are Bible scholars for over 30 years.

So, context - Daniel 7 (which goes along with Daniel 2) is talking about Daniel's vision / dream. All the kingdoms (1. Babylon; 2. Medo-Persia; 3. Greece; 4. Roman Empire in two phases; 5. World government or revived Roman Empire).

Revelation 13 is talking about the coming Antichrist (a man, the last Führer). For instance, we find Gog & Magog in Rev & Ezekiel, yet they are not talking about the same subject.

Of course "historicists" will tell you that Rev 13. - "the wound that was healed" was the Roman Empire, but that is not correct. Any person, with no pre conceived ideas, will read Rev 13 and realize we are talking about a man (the one who will rule over the last kingdom before Jesus' second coming). It goes over and over again saying "him", "his", "him", "his". Now if you don't want to take the Bible literally, you can make a nation out of "his" / "him" (personal pronouns).

Combining this vision with Daniel's similar one (Daniel 7:16-24), we can conclude that some sort of world system will be inaugurated by the "beast", the most powerful "horn", who will defeat the other nine and will begin to wage war against Christians. The "dragon" (Satan) will indwell / give his power to the "beast" (the Antichrist).

I'm just giving a bit of context, because a massive study, a tremendously huge study would / is needed over the books of Daniel & Revelation - and I think we can't stress it enough: context is key. Without context, we have man made doctrines.

Phazon - November 16, 2010 02:11 PM (GMT)

So what you're telling me is this man in Revelation 13 is a man with 7 heads, 10 horns, feet like a bear and a mouth like a lion?

Sounds a bit like Man-bear-pig, is he going to be some genetically mutated experiment or something? He's gonna be one hell of a freaky man to witness.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 02:37 PM (GMT)

As I said, I only gave a bit of context. What I mean to tell you is that you want to go over too much information within a tremendously short time period. Study takes time, patience is needed.

I'm not going over all the symbolism. It's way, WAY too much to cover, but I can turn around what you said and go like this,

"you mean to tell me that a personal pronoum like "his", "him" and "he" refers to a nation" ? Dang, I thought I had learned some stuff about personal pronouns.

Again, without going over the meaning of each symbol,

Rev 13:2 "him"

Rev 13:3 "his"

Rev 13:4 "him"

Rev 13:5 "his"

Rev 13:6 "he" ; "him" ; "his"

Rev 13:7 "him"

Rev 13:8 "him"

Rev 13:11 "he"

Rev 13:12 (and "he" the false prophet will cause all to worship "him", the first beast, the Antichrist)

How will he (the false prophet, most likely to be the Pope) cause all to worship the AC ?!

Rev 13:3 "great wonders"

Rev 13:4 "he"

Now, check this,

Revelation {13:15} And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

You mean to tell me that those who will not worship the "beast" (supposedly a nation, therefore we should read - as many as would not worship the image of the NATION) should be killed ? Makes sense - not.

Rev 13:16 "he" causeth all ? You mean, a nation will cause all to receive the mark of the beast ? Makes sense - not.

Rev 13:17 You mean to tell me that those who have not the name of the "beast" / "nation" should be killed ? Okay, now THIS is getting creepy.

Obviously the Bible interprets itself and consequently gives you the interpretation of those symbols. The ten horns, etc.

A personal pronoum is what it is, as the sky is blue even if you want to think it is green.

Phazon - November 16, 2010 02:52 PM (GMT)

I'm not disagreeing with you, I just wanted to get that straight, that the antichrist is a man that has 7 heads, 10 horns, feet like a bear and a mouth like a lion.

I'm just trying to get my head around how people are gonna be fooled by this guy, then again the way people are going I guess they'll fall for anything.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 02:55 PM (GMT)

Sigh He will not have 7 heads or 10 horns. I even said it (will quote),

> QUOTE
> Again, without going over the meaning of each symbol

He will be a "normal" man.

How are people going to be deceived ? It says right there too.

Revelation {13:12} And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. {13:13} And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, {13:14} And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by [the means of] those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

The false prophet (the Pope ?) will help him out with great wonders "making fire coming down from heaven". With all the amazing technological capability we have these days (who knows to what extremes it goes, what the public - we - are not aware of), it'll be as easy as taking candy of a 5 years old kid.

The mass population is already deceived to the core (they like deception, they enjoy lies),

John {3:19} And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. {3:20} For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. {3:21} But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

... it isn't hard to imagine a couple ways this can and will be done - and remember massive war / economic collapse will come in the meantime, so people will literally BEG for this, they'll BEG for a new world order. Their wish shall be their command.

Revelation 13

1And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy.

2And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

QUOTE (kalongi @ Nov 16 2010, 03:03 PM)

> QUOTE
> Again, without going over the meaning of each symbol

What symbols? If you're trying to put symbols into it then you're not taking it literally.

If you start putting symbols into it someone might start using the symbol of a Beast equaling a kingdom and personal pronouns might start being used when talking about a symbolic beast and if we did that then it wouldn't be taking it literally.

So we must take out all the symbols and read it literally.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 03:08 PM (GMT)

Look, for example, when you read Daniel's vision (and of course Revelation), it is FILLED with symbolism, but the Bible interprets itself and it gives you the meaning of such SYMBOLS.

By "a literal reading", I mean - you interpret it literally where a literal interpretation is to be given, and when we see symbols like "feet of a bear", "mouth of a lion", "ten horns", you have to keep going and LOOK for the explanations of such symbols. It really doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure this out.

A simple case of literal interpretation where no symbolism is given is,

John {14:6} Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

Simple as this, Jesus is the way, the truth and the life and no man will see the Father but through Jesus.

A case of symbolism, which we need to read further to find out it's meaning is found in (just an example), Revelation {17:3} So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns*.*

Revelation {17:9} And here [is] the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains*, on which the woman sitteth.*

Yet you can't figure out the meaning of one of the other symbols which is that of a beast representing a kingdom.

EDIT: I know about the symbols of the bear, the leaopard and the lion, they're symbols of BEASTS that equal KINGDOMS.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 03:22 PM (GMT)

I said it that we would not go over the symbolism there (in Rev 13) because that was not the main point which you had brought up.

The point was actually the Gog & Magog war and it's timing for starters, and I explained it via Ezekiel's chronological order (and how it is not the same Gog & Magog from Revelation, a link was posted with a more in-depth study for you to go over - in case you were interested) why it'll happen after Israel comes back to the land (Ezekiel 36-37) and before the Millenium Kingdom imposed by Jesus' second coming (Ezekiel 40-48), simply showing that Eric Jon Phelps' reply was correct.

But then you changed subjects, and I tried to show (without, as I said, going over all the meaning of each symbols), that, yes - some people will say that we are talking about as a "system", "government" or "nation", but that is incorrect due to all the personal pronoums. The context is about a man, the "man of sin", the "lawless one", the "son of perdition", the "Antichrist", who will rule over the last kingdom (and by studying Daniel's vision and Revelation 13 you get it, but this you already know, and it is not the main subject here).

If Revelation 13 was entirely the same as Daniel 7, then how on earth would you build a talking statue of a "system" or "government" ?! Among many other examples I gave in other replies, this shows the fallacy of such statement. Again, a personal pronoum is what it is, period.

We also read of a "scarlet coloured beast" in Revelation 17, dont' we ?! Again, not the same "beast" as in Rev. 13 obviously. You will also note that the "beast" in Rev 17 also has seven heads (which are the seven mountains where she sits upon, as we both know, it is the Roman Catholic church), but has NO crowns. What I'm trying to show again, is that "Gog & Magog" from Revelation is not the same as the one found in Ezekiel". Just because we find the name in both books, it doesn't mean it is the same thing we are talking about (it is not).

Again, we are going over too much over such a short period of time, we'll get overwhelmed, so it is wise to stick to the point, if not - this is will have too much "bla bla" and then it just won't even be worth to look at the thread anymore.

Ezekiel's timing was the case. Each thing in it's proper moment. God's word is not a joke, when it says "STUDY" it means exactly that. Study takes time (a lot of time), takes patience, both from me and you.

It'll be futile if we don't try to go over it togheter as brothers in Christ.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 03:40 PM (GMT)

But just to give a quick example of Rev 13:1 (the ten horns we find there)

Daniel {7:24} And the ten horns out of this kingdom [are] ten kings [that] shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

"and another shall rise after them" - "another" is obviously refering to a man - "another king", "he" shall be diverse and shall subdue three kings.

So, I think what you may be missing here is that, yes - you are correct (but not entirely), the piece of the puzzle you missed is that it is talking about a kingdom and it's ruler (a man, the Antichrist).

... and then Rev 13. goes on talking about the AC, the False Prophet and their new world order. How they will come to power, how the masses will be deceived, how it'll all be done, etc.

We're gonna have to agree to disagree, because I don't agree with your study.

Daniel 7:19

Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

Daniel 7:23

The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom

Are you calling Daniel a liar?

Daniel called the fourth beast a kingdom, but "that is incorrect due to all the personal pronouns" he used when describing that fourth beast.

kalongi - November 16, 2010 04:03 PM (GMT)

You are correct brother. As I said, in Rev. 13 we are talking about the last kingdom and it's ruler (the piece of the puzzle you missed and/or I guess I failed to explain). Remember, this is not "my" study, it is what it says. We are talking about a kingdom (the last one), and it's ruler - all in one.

I mean, keep reading Daniel 7, don't stop in verse 23 because verse 24 is fulcral !

Daniel {7:24} And the ten horns out of this kingdom [are] ten kings [that] shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. {7:25} And he shall speak [great] words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.

Back to Revelation 13,

For example, how can we build a talking statue of a "system" or "government" ?!

Revelation {13:15} And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

Another example, how do you worship an image of the beast (a "nation / government") ?! It's an image of a MAN.

Revelation {13:14} And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by [the means of] those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

How do you get the "whole world" to worship a "nation" ?!

Revelation {13:12} And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

Humanity does not worship "nations", they worship things or other man. History tells you this. Many other reasons I already presented to show this is talking about a man, but yes, I did fail to say that we are talking about both in the same place - the last kingdom and it's ruler (the AC).

How can "he" (a "nation") open "his mouth" and "blaspheme against God" ?! Only a man can and will do this, he is known as the Antichrist. You find this (Rev 13:6 below) back in Daniel 7:25 !

Revelation {13:6} And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

It gives you the caractheristics of the "last kingdom", and of the "last ruler". Both in one (Rev 13 mixed with Daniel 7).

Where does the change takes place in Rev 13 ? Here,

Revelation {13:2} And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as [the feet] of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

In "bold" (from then on, Rev 13:3-18), we start talking about the unholy trinity (Satan, the Antichrist & the False Prophet) and how they'll deceive the world, etc.

Okay brother, I concede that it's the kingdom and it's ruler, you are correct.

Back to the original point I made though about Revelation 13. I'll explain how I have interepeted Rev 13:11 onwards and you can tell me where you think I'm wrong and what you think is right. (Actually now that I've typed it out, I do see problems with it, I'm probably completely off track)

I believe this other beast that rises out of the Earth refers to another kingdom AND ruler and that it is the false prophet and the kingdom he arises out of. And I speculate that this kingdom the false prophet arises out of is the United States. Since Rome arose out of the sea which represents "people, multitudes, nations and tongues", the beast out of the earth, I gather is a nation that rises out of a sparsely populated location. It goes on to say "and he had two horns like a lamb", this seems to draw connotations with Christ and would suggest to me that it's saying that it's a nation that has Christian qualities and yet it "spake as a dragon" suggesting it also has Satanic qualities. And so the next line I would interpret as the false prophet out of America being granted all the power of the Pope of Rome and causing the world to worship the Pope of Rome...

kalongi - November 16, 2010 06:04 PM (GMT)

Well, yes - once we understand we are talking about the caractheristics of the last kingdom (as you correctly mentioned) but also of it's ruler (the AC), suddenly the light shines above our head - we "get it". The Eschatological puzzle starts to shape itself, and our mental image conforms to it.

So, from

Revelation {13:2} And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as [the feet] of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

(in bold) <-- starting there, we go over the caractheristics of the AC and the False Prophet (the two beasts)

Revelation {13:4} And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who [is] like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

Remember, who is able to make war with "him" (a man); if this was still refering to a "nation", it'd say "it" - who is able to make war with "it", but this will be a man, the one who will come arise after the 10 kings (Daniel 7:25) and will "open his mouth" to "blaspheme the true God".

The United States is nowhere to be found in end times Bible prophecy (we find the "Kings of the North", "East" and "South", not from the West thou), which is exactly what we will see taking place in a not so distant future (the collapse of the USA), in order to give room for the last empire (one world government or the revived Roman Empire).

Now from Rev. 13:2 (beginning of this post, starting in bold letters) we get the history of the coming unholy trinity, the 3 "persons" involved in the leadership of this last kingdom that you mentioned. The "dragon" is obviously Satan himself (Rev. 12:9) who will give his power / will "enthrone" the AC (Rev. 13:2), who consequently will be helped by the False Prophet (most likely to be the Pope) via "great wonders" (Rev. 13:13). The Bible gives us no clue as to whom the AC will be. It is futile to speculate about it for many reasons which I won't mention here (or won't do so at this time).

Ok, so it comes down to Rev. 13:11-15 – how can we know these two beasts are referring to the Antichrist and the False Prophet ? Read on, Revelation {16:13} And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs [come] out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.

Here, the unholy trinity mentioned in Rev 13:2 onwards (Rev 13:2-18) . Satan, the Antichrist and the False Prophet.

Revelation {19:20} And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

Again, the False Prophet, who, through "great wonders" (Rev. 13:13), helped out bringing the AC to power, will be thrown into the lake of fire along with the AC ("these two"). Also, people took the "mark of the beast" (the mark of the AC) during the time of Jacob's Trouble (70th week of Daniel), which is the mark of a man (not of a "nation" / "system"), why ?

Revelation {13:18} Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number [is] Six hundred threescore [and] six.

Because the number of the "beast" is ….. the number of a "man". Right there it says it all. The number of a man, the one who will arise after the 10 kings (Daniel 7:25). The "man of sin" (2 Thess 2:3-4), the "beast" (Rev. 13:5-8), and on and on. The Bible calls him (the AC) by many other names.

And if this is not enough, we can still go to,

Revelation {20:10} And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet [are,] and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

The unholy trinity again (leadership of the last kingdom in Daniel's vision), Satan, the AC (called "beast" here again), and the False Prophet, all will be sent straight to the lake of fire. The False Prophet will come like a "lamb" with smooth talking, with persuasive words (just like we see today the Pope speaking at Saint Peters square, it is nothing but smooth talk for the populace, yet "we all" know about their desire for absolute spiritual & temporal power, also known as – the need for a "new world order" / world fascist government). He is a total devil. So it will be with the False Prophet (which even thou there is no Biblical support for this, I totally see the Pope being that character, because the FP will be a "religious leader", while the AC will be a political, economic and military leader – mere speculation here thou). He will speak like a dragon, like a devil and his only mission is to force humanity, again, via miraculous signs & wonders, to worship the first beast (the AC).

People will fall in line, and the Bible tells us that they WILL do so, Rev 13:3 – "and they wondered after the beast". Rev 13:4 – "and they worshipped the dragon". This shouldn't be a surprise at all actually, since so many people throughout this world already worship their TV / Hollywood / sport idols. People worship animals, statues, trees, the moon, the stars, they worship everything but the true & living God of Abraham, Isaac & Jacob (Romans 1:18-25). Nothing new under the sun (Ecclesiastes 1:9).

Going back to the beginning of this post, to finish the point made about the "kingdoms / king" issue .... remember that in the Greek language the word for "king" and "kingdom" are the same, which reinforces what we are getting at here. Talking about the "last kingdom" and it's "ruler / s" (Satan, the AC & the FP). Both in the same place.

Beginning in Rev. 13-11 John wrote about another beast, referred to by many as the false prophet. There are two Greek words that can be translated "another". One is "allos" and means another of the same kind, and the other is "heteros" and means another of a different kind. In Rev. 13:11 the Greek word he used is "allos", meaning the 2nd beast is another of the same kind as the 1st one. Therefore if the first beast was a kingdom, the second beast would have to be a kingdom as well.

Sorry for the lengthy post, hope this makes sense to you - and like you, I always stand to be corrected too. As long as we do it as brothers in Christ, all will be fine. We are here to teach and learn from eachother.

Hebrews {10:24} And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: {10:25} Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some [is;] but exhorting [one another:] and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching.

Romans {12:5} So we, [being] many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

Thanks Brother Kalongi,

So you're in disagreement with most people here who say the last Pope is the Antichrist?

I still think it's the final Pope who is to be the antichrist since he is claiming the absolute spiritual and temporal power over the Earth for himself, and the False Prophet will be someone who is instrumental causing the world to accept the Pope as having the right to this spiritual and temporal power. This is what they've always done in forcing people to accept Roman Catholicism. I don't believe the Pope is suddenly going to give up his claim to spiritual and temporal and invest it in someone else.

I am in agreement with the Bible, yes. The "most people believe this" card does not make anything true, if that were to be the case, in the scientific camp, Evolution would be true.

... but, of course, if you can show me - using the Bible - that the Pope will be the Antichrist, I will stand to be corrected.

Sorry I didn't mean to imply that because most people here believe that is what's true than it must be.

kalongi - November 17, 2010 05:50 PM (GMT)

Ok, sorry - my bad.

Let's review what the Bible says about this man (I may miss some scriptures).

Going “to and fro” between Daniel & Revelation.

The Antichrist:

. He will be a man, no doubts about that, we already reached that consensus in previous replies (Daniel 7:24-25)

. He will confirm a covenant for 7 years (Daniel 9:27). Here Historicists (keep in mind Historicism uses their “day for a year” theory, which is not Biblical, it is a complete allegorization of scriptures in order to fit their man made eschatological view that the Papacy has always been the “Antichrist”, along with many other false statements / heresies - now, they (the Papacy) are certainly antichrist, antichristianity, anti everything that sounds like freedom in this world, we know that, we know the extreme power of the Papacy and their plans for humanity, but the Antichrist will be a man as already showen). Also, Historicism has not been taken seriously by any reputable Bible scholar for a long time now. SDA’s are well known for supporting this eschatological view, Historicism is also well know for the heresy of “date setting”. Here ‘Preterists’ (Jesuit created view) will also tell you that the 70th week of Daniel already took place (as most of the book of Revelation in 70 a.d) – Jesuits will also tell you that Futurism is not Biblical so you run to their system of interpretation (they are, indeed, the masters of deceit), so you run to the Papacy, and of course – people fall for it. We are dealing with a future 70th week for so many reasons, it’s not even funny – but that is beyond the point of this thread / post.

. His 10 nation union will merge into a world government (we are seeing it’s formation right now, before our very eyes, no surprise thou – Bible prophecy, the true God already told you it'd happen long, long ago, the book of Daniel was written around 540 B.C and the book of Revelation around 90 A.D) which he (the AC, the last Führer) will be the head of (Revelation 13:1-2 ; Revelation 17:12-13). It will be a mighty & strong kingdom (Daniel 7:7). This final kingdom will devour the whole earth (Daniel 7:23).

. He will be promoted by promoted / exalted by a religious leader, known as the "False Prophet" (and this is where the Pope REALLY fits in). Can you imagine the "whole world" (Revelation 13:3) wondering after him ?! Let's use some common sense here, tons of people in the secular world are dead tired of religion (just like we, true Christians, are). Tons of people (I'm talking about regular people out there) see the Pope as the joke he is, they do know about their constant crimes related with homosexuality, pedophilia and so on and so forth (it's not much, but lot's of people are not that blind at least). Remember the coming Antichrist will be a boastful man, a really prideful person. He will captivate the masses, he will have tremendous charisma. I'd fall asleep if I had to listen to the Pope speaking over Saint Peters square.

Now, we know the False Prophet will be a religious leader, and again – common sense alone – who better than the Pope himself to be this character ?! Dalai Lama ?

. He will have a fierce countenance and will understand puzzling things (Daniel 8:23).

. He will ascend to power by means of peace, by "peace" he will destroy many (Daniel 8:25).

. He will be empowered by Satan himself (Revelation 13:2).

. The "abomination of desolation" (Matthew 24:15-21) will mark the final 3.5 years (Great Tribulation) of the time of Jacob's Trouble (70th week of Daniel / 7 years). This will take place when he enters the rebuilt temple of Jerusalem, takes away the daily sacrifices from it (Daniel 11:31), claims to be "God", consequently opposing himself against the true God (2 Thessalonians 2:4), magnifying himself above God, speaking great things against the true & living God (Daniel 11:36). Again, he will not regard the God of his fathers, nor any god, because he will magnify himself above all (Daniel 11:37).

. He will plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain (Daniel 11:45)

. He will have power over all kindreds and nations, he will have power to wage a relentless war against the (Tribulation) saints & overcome them (Daniel 7:21-25 / Revelation 13:7).

. He will prosper in everything he does, also destroying the holy people left and right (Daniel 8:24).

. He will have great military power to back him up (Daniel 11:31).

. There will be a mark (the 'mark of the beast') with his number – 666 (Revelation 13:17-18).

. Everyone, except those who have their names written in the Lamb's Book of Life, will worship him (Revelation 15:2 ; 13:3-4). He will have an image made after him (Revelation 15:2 / Revelation 13:14).

. He will fight against Jesus Christ at Armageddon ("Armageddon" meaning "Mountain of Assembly", "Mount / Hill of Meggido – the Valley of Jezreel).

. The Lord will consume / destroy him with the spirit of His mouth (the Word of God), with the brightness of His coming (His glory) (2 Thessalonians 2:8).

. He (along with the False Prophet) will be thrown alive into the lake of fire (Revelation 19:20). Tormented day and night, for ever and ever (Revelation 20:10). Another blatant reason why the Antichrist will be a man (not a system as Historicists speak of) is actually found there in Revelation 20:10, it is worth to post this scripture here,

Revelation {20:10} And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet [are,] and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

The Devil, the “beast” (talking about the Antichrist, the man), and the false prophet were cast into the lake of fire - now, how do you throw a “nation” to hell ?! You don't. We are talking about a man (and the number of the "beast" is the number of a "man" - Revelation 13:18). A man (the last Führer and the last kingdom in Daniel's vision).

Hope it helped & will say it again - I always stand to be corrected (as long as you don’t bring the eschatological view of “Historicism”, which spiritualizes / allegorizes God’s word and I want nothing to do with it - noone even takes it seriously anymore), please show me where in the Bible does it say the Pope will be the Antichrist because I just can not find it !

Now the Pope being the final religious leader (the False Prophet), it sure makes tons of sense. I can so see it happening, the FP who will give his power to the first beast (the AC), a man of charisma (multiply what happened with Obama a thousand times, so many people "worshipped" him), a "great" political / military man, with an amazingly huge ego - but in the meantime we still have the FP rulling it all behind the scenes (just like the Jesuit controlled Papacy has been doing from the very beggining). The Antichrist will simply be the "front cover" you know.

An example of this would be none other than Hitler himself - nothing but a puppet in the hands of the Roman hierarchy, yet - the secular / brainwashed world (with it's rewritten, propaganda controlled books) will tell you Hitler was the man. We know that was not right, he was a Jesuit controlled puppet. Same thing will happen with the Antichrist ?! Makes sense to me, specially when we note the following,

Revelation {13:12} And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

He (the FP) exercises all the power of the first beast (the AC), and causes the whole world to worship him (the AC) - with the possibility of a fake resurrection by the well known copy cat, Satan (Jesus died and resurrected), Satan has no original ideas, so he'll present this sort of "messiah" to the world.

So we see the AC will be enthroned by Satan himself (Revelation 13:2) with the help of that religious leader ! Behind the scenes, you'll still have the Papal hierarchy rulling it all, bringing the world back to the Dark Ages, but to the populace, this is how it will look like (Hitler and the Papacy analogy I used). The Papacy has always been hidden in plain sight, and so it'll be until the glorious return of the King of Kings to install His Millenium Kingdom on earth (where, before it's end, you'll have Satan released from hell to deceive the masses one last time, and the final Gog & Magog found in Revelation, which is not the same found in Ezekiel 38 & 39 - the Russian / Muslim invasion on Israel, will take place).

The Roman Catholic church was, is and will always be, Revelation {17:5} And upon her forehead [was] a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

Revelation {17:2} With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

Revelation {22:20} He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Kalongi,

Didn't Jesuit Francisco Ribera invent futurism?

kalongi - November 18, 2010 10:28 AM (GMT)

No, the earliest views of Bible prophecy found in the Ante-Nicene Fathers (till a.d.325) were futurist.

- As for the allegorical, Historicist view of eschatology - the SDA cult being well known for propagating this, with it's constant date setting heresy ... also the Reformers were Historicists, careful with that / their view. What they did was great, no doubts, but their Biblical interpretation was really bad "nothing but Roman Catholicism repackaged" as others have said here before.

The theory that the Biblical Antichrist (clearly to be a political / economic leader, a man, who will rule the last kingdom) has been a "system" is just false - as we already reached that consensus. The Historicist / post millenial view has it's foundations based on a "day for a year" prophetic theory, which can be so easily refuted, no wonder, as I said before, that noone even takes this view of eschatology seriously anymore (ahh, yes - but they will rapidly attack Futurism, they will attack the Bible for some "odd" reason, as if they did not already do it by allegorizing / spiritualizing scripture with it's "day for a year" theory):

Oil Hits 2-Year High After Supplies Drop More Than Forecast

http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2010-12-22/c...ly-decline.html

Crude oil rose to the highest level in more than two years after government reports showed that U.S. supplies dropped and the country's economy grew more than previously estimated in the third quarter.

Stockpiles fell 5.33 million barrels to 340.7 million last week, the Energy Department said. A 3.4 million-barrel decline was forecast, according to the median of 14 responses in a Bloomberg News survey. The Commerce Department said gross domestic product expanded 2.6 percent in the third quarter, up from a previous estimate of 2.5 percent.

"Today's crude numbers were very bullish," said Andre Julian, chief financial officer and senior market strategist at OpVest Wealth Management in Irvine, California. "The GDP numbers point to extended growth in the U.S. Previously, we were seeing economic and demand growth in China and emerging markets, now it's spreading here."

Crude oil for February delivery rose 66 cents, or 0.7 percent, to $90.48 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest settlement since Oct. 3, 2008. Prices have climbed 14 percent this year.

Brent crude oil for February settlement advanced 45 cents, or 0.5 percent, to $93.65 a barrel on the London-based ICE Futures Europe exchange. It was the highest settlement price since Oct. 1, 2008.

Supplies in the week ended Dec. 17 were 6.8 percent greater than the five-year average for the period, the department said.

Gulf Coast

Stockpiles along the Gulf Coast, which holds almost half of U.S. refinery capacity, dropped 6.08 million barrels to 167.3 million. Some localities in the region levy taxes based on the amount in storage at year's end.

"The draw is not that meaningful," said Hamza Khan, an analyst with Schork Group Inc., a consulting company in Villanova, Pennsylvania. "The drop was largely limited to the Gulf Coast while supplies gained at Cushing. This is why the reaction was muted."

Inventories at Cushing, Oklahoma, the delivery point for New York futures, increased 479,000 barrels to 36.4 million, the highest level since August.

Stockpiles of distillate fuel, a category that includes heating oil and diesel, dropped 589,000 barrels to 160.7 million, the first decline in three weeks. Analysts were split over whether supplies would rise or fall. Stockpiles on the East Coast declined 1.17 million barrels to 66.3 million.

"The big drop along the East Coast was to be expected because of the cold weather," Khan said.

Low Temperatures

Cold air has gripped the New York region since Dec. 14, when a high temperature in the mid-20s Fahrenheit (about minus 4 Celsius) was 20 degrees lower than normal. Weekend highs are expected to be in the mid-30s.

Demand for distillate fuel climbed 7.4 percent to 4.05 million barrels a day, the highest level since Nov. 5.

Heating oil for January delivery climbed 1.21 cents, or 0.5 percent, to $2.5285 a gallon in New York, the highest settlement since Oct. 3, 2008.

"We're seeing another dramatic drop in U.S. oil storage," said Sean Brodrick, a natural resource analyst with Weiss Research in Jupiter, Florida. "We're seeing an increase in economic activity, which will lead to further declines and higher prices."

Today's Commerce Department report showed consumer spending rose at a 2.4 percent pace last quarter, the fastest since the first three months of 2007, while less than the 2.8 percent estimated last month. Spending added 1.67 percentage points to GDP from July through September.

Household spending figures for November, due tomorrow, may show a 0.5 percent gain following a 0.4 percent increase in October, according to the Bloomberg survey median.

Grinding Higher

"We're seeing oil grind higher along with the stock market on increasing optimism about the economy," said Bill O'Grady, chief market strategist at Confluence Investment Management in St. Louis.

The Standard & Poor's 500 Index yesterday completed its recovery from the six-month plunge that followed Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc.'s collapse in September 2008, extending its rally from a bear-market low in March 2009 to 85 percent.

The S&P 500 Index gained 0.3 percent to 1,257.77 at 3:22 p.m. in New York and the Dow Jones Industrial Average climbed 0.2 percent to 11,554.31.

China raised gasoline and diesel prices today by less than half of what crude oil has gained in the past month. The price of gasoline will climb by as much as 4 percent to 310 yuan ($47) a metric ton and diesel by 300 yuan a ton, the National Development and Reform Commission said yesterday, the third increase this year in the second-largest oil consuming country.

'Over the Edge'

"The inventory numbers pushed us over the edge today," said Phil Flynn, a Chicago-based analyst and trader at PFGBest, an investment adviser. "If it were some other day, more attention would have been paid to the Chinese news, which should slow demand."

Oil volume on the Nymex was 344,353 contracts as of 3:23 p.m. in electronic trading in New York. Volume totaled 357,619 contracts yesterday, 47 percent below the average of the past three months and the lowest level since Nov. 26, the day after Thanksgiving. Open interest was 1.37 million contracts.

"With this light holiday volume anything can happen," Flynn said.

Oil pushes closer to $100 as cold snap stokes demand

Oil prices rose closer to $100 a barrel as cold weather in Europe fuelled demand, depleted supplies and stoked inflationary worries.

2:53PM GMT 24 Dec 2010
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/finance/newsbys...kes-demand.html

Benchmark Brent crude hit an intra-day high of $94.74 a barrel in early trading in London on Friday, the highest level since October 2008.

"The latest surge has brought $100 per barrel within range for Brent crude in particular," according to analysts at Barclay Capital in a weekly report.

The rally in Brent crude is partly due to the severe cold snap in continental Europe and Britain, with more freezing temperatures and snow predicted in parts of Europe over the weekend expected to boost fuel demand further.

US crude futures, the global benchmark, are trading at a 26-month high.

Oil prices have climbed more than 30pc climb from this year's low in May, reviving concerns that prices could once again hit economic growth for fuel importing countries.

South Korea's finance minister warned on Friday that the fifth-largest buyer of crude oil buyer could face inflationary pressures sparked by rising global liquidity and commodity prices next year.

In India, the government is expected to decide next week whether to increase state-set fuel prices to cushion domestic oil retailers from the pain of rising crude prices and ease its own subsidy burden.

China, the world's second biggest energy user, raised petrol and diesel prices to record levels on Wednesday as it aimed to encourage refiners to boost supplies to meet demand.

The government said it would prohibit transport companies passing the rise on to the population. But higher commodity prices helped raise Chinese consumer inflation to a 28-month high in November.

Traders will be keeping an eye on the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries for signals about when it might begin pumping more crude.

Arab OPEC ministers are meeting in Cairo this weekend where they may discuss oil production and price, but no formal decision on output will take place. OPEC's next scheduled meeting is for June.

"Once you get around $100, if it is sustained and the US, Euro area, UK and Japan continue to look weak in their economic growth profile, then at that point you might see some action [from OPEC]," said Ben Westmore, a commodities analyst at National Australia Bank. "But that is many months away."

Brent Crude for February delivery ended London trading at $93.77 a barrel.

Oil stays above $91 as OPEC signals no output hike

http://www.google.com/hostednews/ap/articl...ad65b888a43eb74

SINGAPORE (AP) — Oil prices hovered above $91 a barrel Monday in Asia as some OPEC ministers signaled the group doesn't plan to boost output to cool the recent jump in crude.

Benchmark oil for February delivery fell 17 cents to $91.34 a barrel midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

On Thursday, the contract rose $1.03 to settle at $91.51, the highest level since October 2008. Global oil markets were closed Friday for the Christmas holiday.

Arab members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said at a meeting in Cairo over the weekend that the full group would likely not meet until June to discuss production quota policy. OPEC, which accounts for about 40 percent of global crude output, left quotas unchanged at a meeting earlier this month.

Some analysts are concerned that higher oil prices, which have jumped almost 30 percent since September, could fuel inflation and undermine global economic growth. China raised its benchmark lending rate Saturday for a second time in two months in a bid to ease growing inflation pressures.

"High oil prices were one of the contributors to the last global crisis," JBC Energy said in a report. "The largest effect of an oil price shock on the economy occurs around three to four quarters after the price spike."

In other Nymex trading in January contracts, heating oil was steady at $2.54 a gallon, gasoline futures fell 0.77 cent to $2.43 a gallon and natural gas dropped 5.3 cents to $4.03 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In London, Brent crude rose 32 cents to $94.09 a barrel on the ICE Futures exchange.

PETROL COST IS SET TO SOAR BY £100 A YEAR

The price of petrol is set to increase

Wednesday December 29,2010
By Mark Reynolds

http://express.co.uk/posts/view/219946/Pet...r-by-100-a-year

BELEAGUERED motorists are facing two further hikes in petrol prices that will cost them an extra £100 a year, driving groups warned yesterday.

As the cost of oil reaches a two-year high, increases in VAT and fuel duty will also come into force next Tuesday.

This means a typical family with two cars will find its annual petrol costs rising by £104 to more than £1,700, according to the AA.

Prices on the forecourts have continued to shoot up, with drivers typically facing prices of more than 121p in recent weeks. Further increases in the cost of crude oil are also expected to be passed on to consumers.

Yesterday, oil prices in New York increased to more than 93 dollars a barrel.

With freezing conditions affecting America and mainland Europe, experts predict a barrel of oil could soon pass the 100-dollar mark.

The knock-on effects for the British motorist will be “bleak”, the AA is warning.

Drivers will also feel let down by the Government because, during the Budget, Chancellor George Osborne announced an investigation into whether the Government should introduce a “fuel duty stabiliser” to cushion future petrol prices against big shifts in the worldwide price of oil.

The idea would involve temporarily cutting prices at the pump to shield motorists from fluctuations in the cost of oil – all funded by increased taxes on the oil companies when wholesale prices go up.

Such a measure would see fuel duty float, with rates set according to the price of crude. If oil prices rose, the duty imposed per litre would be reduced, but if oil prices fell the tax taken would be increased. Consumers would then avoid some of the price shocks that have become common in recent years.

However, this plan has so far failed to be introduced and motorists continue to have to pick up the bill for rising costs in crude oil. In recent months, petrol prices have risen by over 2 per cent a litre, while the average price of diesel has hit £1.23 a litre, its highest this year.

The AA reported earlier this month that Britain has the tenth highest price in Europe for unleaded petrol and the second-highest diesel prices.

Next Tuesday, VAT will rise from 17.5 per cent to 20 per cent. A further increase in fuel duty, following two increases this year, will add another 0.76p per litre.

Some experts believe the impending rises have given greedy suppliers an opportunity to push through bigger price rises on garage forecourts.

Andrew Howard, from the AA, said: “One of the difficult things to work out is whether prices are being sneaked up before the tax rises.”

The rises are expected to give the Treasury a windfall of at least £500 million this year.

Jo Ganly, of the price comparison website USwitch.com, said: “It is really bad news for consumers at the moment because everywhere they turn they are faced with increases in household bills.”

The vast majority of the country’s 33 million motorists, most of whom still use petrol, spend a total of £8million a day more on fuel than they did a year ago.

The average price of petrol has risen from the record set a few weeks ago of 121.76p a litre to 122.14p, meaning it is sells at the equivalent of £5.55 a gallon.

The AA urged the Government to scrap the scheduled 1p a litre tax rise and the annual “inflation plus 1p” fuel duty hike while prices are so high.

Its president Edmund King added: “This is going to be a bleak midwinter for millions of drivers.”

$5 Gas? It Could Be a Reality in 2012

Gas prices buck winter tread, up 50 cents over last year

December 28, 2010

Could you imagine paying five dollars for a gallon of gas? The president of Shell Gasoline warns that could happen by the end of 2012.

While local experts can't predict the future, they can shed some light on why prices are rising now at a time when demand is usually at its yearly low.

With every swipe of the credit card and every plunge of the nozzle, drivers are cringing at what they see on the price-meter.

"During the holiday season, too. It's about 20 percent, 20 cents a gallon more," Howard Ormond said.

"I'm retired, on a fixed income. We've had no increase of course in our social security for the last two years. So costs are going up for all of us," Bill Ventura said.

The sticker shock reality that Richmond gas prices have shot up 8 cents in the last week, and 22 cents in the last month, comes in direct contradiction to our understanding of yearly price patterns.

"It's really counterintuitive, because we're usually talking about this in the warmer weather rather than the cold weather," Mike O'Connor, who works with the Virginia Petroleum, Convenience and Grocery Association.

O'Connor said the spike coincides with the Federal Reserve Bank's recent decision to print more money.

He says the dollar is getting weaker, and investors are looking to commodities like crude oil for higher returns.

While O'Conner felt short of predicting $5 per gallon gasoline, he does say the price is worrisome.

"We have to remember the infamous day of July 11, 2008 when crude reached its all-time high, $147 per barrel. Today we're at $90. Obviously, that had bad ramifications for the economy, as we saw in 2008. And it's certainly something to be concerned about," O'Conner said.

With the recent rise in prices, a gallon of regular gas in Richmond now costs $2.94. That's roughly 48 cents higher than a year ago at this time.

Oil Surges to Highest Year-End Price Since 2007 on Dollar

By Margot Habiby - Dec 31, 2010 8:58 PM GMT+0000 http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2010-12-31/o...-s-supples.html

Oil surged to its highest year-end price since 2007 as the dollar weakened and gasoline and heating oil futures climbed.

Crude capped its second consecutive year of gains as the dollar dropped against the euro, boosting commodities' appeal as an alternative investment. Oil settled above $91 a barrel after testing technical support near $89. Gasoline and heating oil advanced before the January contracts expired today.

"A weaker dollar and stronger product prices are all bolstering crude," said Jason Schenker, president of Prestige Economics LLC, an Austin, Texas-based energy consultant.

Oil for February delivery climbed $1.54, or 1.7 percent, to settle at $91.38 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices fell 13 cents this week and rose 8.6 percent in December.

Futures advanced 15 percent this year amid signs that the global economic recovery is gaining momentum and stoking demand for raw materials. Commodity prices beat increases in stocks, bonds and the dollar as China led a recovery from the first global economic recession since World War II.

"As you start the new quarter, you'll start to see new capital come into the oil market," said Gene McGillian, an analyst and broker at Tradition Energy in Stamford, Connecticut.

Oil ended the year above $90 a barrel for only the second time since the contract started trading in 1983, after settling at $95.98 in 2007. Prices touched a 26-month high of $92.06 a barrel in intraday trading today.

Dollar, Products

The dollar declined to a two-week low of $1.3425 against the euro as confidence in an economic recovery spurred investors to purchase riskier assets. The euro gained 0.7 percent to $1.3378 at 3:14 p.m. in New York.

Heating oil and gasoline futures had 20 percent advances in 2010 amid forecasts for demand to increase as the economy improves.

Fuel demand is forecast to rise 0.9 percent in 2011 to 19.3 million barrels a day, after a

1.7 percent gain this year, the department forecast earlier this month in its Short-Term Energy Outlook.

Gasoline for January delivery advanced 6.14 cents, or 2.6 percent, to expire at $2.4532 a gallon, the highest settlement since Sept. 30, 2008.

Heating oil for January delivery gained 5.83 cents, or 2.4 percent, to settle at $2.5437 a gallon on the exchange, the most since Oct. 3, 2008.

Fuel Demand

Total products supplied, a measure of fuel demand, gained 3.1 percent last week to 20.7 million barrels a day, the greatest amount since May 2008, according to an Energy Department report yesterday.

Oil fell as low as $89.05 a barrel earlier today. Prices have held above $89 a barrel since Dec. 21.

“We have a very very thin market,” said Peter Beutel, president of Cameron Hanover Inc., an energy adviser in New Canaan, Connecticut, who said that many traders were off for New Year’s Eve. Today’s price swings “strike me as primarily a condition of the market being thin.”

Oil volume in electronic trading on the Nymex was 277,619 contracts as of 3:14 p.m. in New York. Volume totaled 418,292 contracts yesterday, 34 percent below the average of the past three months. Open interest was 1.42 million contracts, the highest level since Nov. 15.

Price Forecast

Oil may fall next week amid speculation refiners will start building inventories at the beginning of the year, a Bloomberg News survey showed.

Eighteen of 31 analysts, or 58 percent, forecast crude oil will decline through Jan. 7. Ten respondents, or 32 percent, predicted prices will rise and three estimated there would be little change. Last week, 53 percent of analysts forecast the market would increase.

Supplies have fallen 12 percent, the most in 30 years, in December along the U.S. Gulf Coast, where refiners have a tax incentive to cut inventories at year’s end.

Brent crude for February settlement rose $1.66, or 1.8 percent, to $94.75 a barrel on the ICE Futures Europe exchange in London, the highest closing price since Oct. 1, 2008.

Ex-Shell president sees $5 gas in 2012

Published on 12-28-2010 Email To Friend Print Version
http://money.cnn.com/2010/12/27/markets/oi...ndex.htm?hpt=T2

The former president of Shell Oil, John Hofmeister, says Americans could be paying $5 for a gallon of gasoline by 2012.

In an interview with Platt's Energy Week television, Hofmeister predicted gasoline prices will spike as the global demand for oil increases.

"I'm predicting actually the worst outcome over the next two years which takes us to 2012 with higher gasoline prices," he said.

Tom Kloza, chief oil analyst with Oil Price Information Service says Americans will see gasoline prices hit the $5 a gallon mark in the next decade, but not by 2012.

"That wolf is out there and it's going to be at the door...I agree with him that we'll see those numbers at some point this decade but not yet." Kloza said.

"The demand is still sluggish enough in some of the mature economies."

Gasoline prices have been steadily rising. Last week, gas prices crossed the $3 mark for the first time since October 2008. According to AAA figures, prices are up 4% from a month ago and 16% from the $2.585 average a year ago.

A study from the Oil Price Information Service estimates drivers will spend $305 on gasoline in December. According to the study, fuel prices are up 13.6% from last December and 76% higher from December 2008.

Gas prices eased off last week's gains but still remained around the $90-a-barrel mark, settling at $91-a-barrel. Prices were down 51 cents from Thursday's close after China unexpectedly raised interest rates over the holiday weekend for the second time in two months.

Oil prices settled above $90 a barrel for the first time since October of 2008.

Oil prices may threaten global economic recovery, says energy agency

As crude oil prices hit $95 a barrel, it is in a 'danger zone' which may derail recovery, says chief economist at Paris's IEA

Dominic Rushe in New York
The Guardian, Wednesday 5 January 2011
http://www.guardian.co.uk/business/2011/ja...onomic-recovery

Oil prices are entering the "danger zone" and threaten to derail the fragile global economic recovery, according to Fatih Birol, chief economist at the International Energy Agency.

The Paris-based government policy adviser calculates that the oil import costs for the 34 countries that make up the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) soared by $200bn over the past year to reach $790bn by the end of 2010.

"Oil prices are entering a dangerous zone for the global economy," Birol told the Financial Times. "The oil import bills are becoming a threat to the economic recovery. This is a wake-up call to the oil consuming countries and to the oil producers."

The price of Brent crude hit $95 a barrel for the first time in 27 months on Monday. Although oil prices have fallen recently, analyst Sanford Bernstein is predicting that crude oil will average $90 a barrel this year, compared with $79.60 in 2010. Roger Read, an analyst at Morgan Keegan & Co, is predicting the oil price will range between $75 and $120 this year.

Birol said: "It is not in the interest of anyone to see such high prices. Oil exporters need clients with healthy economies but these high prices will sooner or later make the economies sick, which would mean the need for importing oil will be less." Birol believes that in the short term oil producers should increase production to bring down prices.

Opec officials recently said that they had no plans to change oil quotas.

Oil consumption will increase by 1.3m barrels a day, or 1.5%, to a record 88.8m in 2011, according to the IEA. Birol said oil consuming nations also need to play their part and reduce their reliance on oil.

The IEA calculates that the EU import bill rose by $70bn during 2010, equal to the combined budget deficits of Greece and Portugal. The IEA also says the ratio of countries' oil import bills to Gross Domestic Product, a key measure of the cost of oil prices on economies, is approaching levels last seen during the financial crisis in 2008. "It is a very telling story," said Birol. "2010 rang the first alarm bells and 2011 price levels could bring us to the same financial crisis times we saw in 2008."

His warning comes just months after International Monetary Fund officials dismissed suggestions rising oil prices would hamper economic recovery.

Oil Price Could Reach $110 in Next Few Weeks: Official

Published: Sunday, 9 Jan 2011 | 10:17 AM ET http://www.cnbc.com/id/40988436

Speculation could push oil prices to rise to $110 per barrel within a few weeks, which may prompt OPEC to raise production, a member of Kuwait's Supreme Petroleum Council said on Sunday.

"Demand will increase slightly, but this increase in price is usually technical, due to analysts' forecasts and speculations," Imad al-Atiqi, a member of the country's highest oil policy body, told Reuters in a telephone interview.

"This (increase) could be a reason to increase production so the oil market does not get worried ... especially if the rise was quick and crossed the $110," he said.

However, OPEC members are unlikely to meet before their scheduled meeting in June if prices [US@CL.1 89.46 0.21 (+0.24%)] reach $100 a barrel, Atiqi said, adding that the global economy could afford a $100 oil price, and that it would not hurt recovery.

"It wouldn't because this is co-ordinated with other strategic commodities like gold, metals, food and basic materials," he said.

Last week Kuwait's oil minister Sheikh Ahmad al-Abdullah al-Sabah said he did not expect OPEC to meet before June unless "something dramatic" happens and did not expect an increase in output in the first half of 2011.

Atiqi said for the time being there was ample supplies of crude oil in the market.

Oil price rises as Alaskan pipeline remains closed

Alaska contains some of the largest US oilfields

11 January 2011 Last updated at 22:46
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12168141

Oil prices have continued to rise as a main Alaskan pipeline remained all but closed for a fourth day, and Norway's Statoil was forced to shut two fields in the North Sea.

The Trans-Alaska Pipeline has now been closed since Saturday, after a spillage at one of its pump stations. It is expected to reopen later this week.

Statoil halted output at Snorre and Vigdis after a gas leak on Tuesday.

US light crude oil ended Tuesday up $1.86, or 2%, at $91.11 per barrel.

London's Brent added $1.91 to settle at $97.61.

It is not yet known when Norway's Statoil will be able to resume production at the two oil and gas fields.

Since Saturday only 5% of typical output has flowed through the Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

The pipeline is important because it carries almost 12% of US crude output, typically 630,000 barrels per day.

Brent oil price at 27-month high

The two Norwegian oil fields have since reopened

12 January 2011 Last updated at 21:10
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12176898

The price of Brent crude oil has touched its highest level in 27 months, as a result of production shutdowns and increasing global energy demand.

Brent reached $98.80, its highest level since April 2009, before trimming gains to close up 51 cents at $98.12.

The rise came after two Norwegian oil fields had to close on Tuesday due to a gas leak. Both have since reopened.

Alaskan oil production also continued to be hit by a pipeline leak. US light crude rose 75 cents at $91.86.

The leak in Alaska caused the US state's main Trans-Alaska Pipeline to be closed to all but 5% of its usual output since Saturday.

However, output through the pipeline was returned to two thirds of its usual level on Wednesday.

Commerzbank oil analyst Carsten Fritsch said Brent was now expected to hit $100 a barrel.

He added: "It seems only a matter of time, if sentiment remains positive and more disruptions on the supply side come in."

The Trans-Alaska Pipeline is important because it carries almost 12% of US crude output. It is due to reopen later this week.

£70 to fill up with petrol: Families hit by yet another stealth tax and soaring oil prices

By Ray Massey
Last updated at 9:04 AM on 13th January 2011
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...-70-petrol.html

Eye-watering: There will be no let up at the pumps as unleaded is set to hit £1.36 by Easter - and diesel will be £1.40

Soaring fuel prices will push the cost of filling up the average family saloon to £70 by Easter, retailers warned last night.

The record high will come in from April 1 as petrol and diesel prices shoot up by 8p a litre thanks to yet another ‘stealth tax’ and rising oil prices.

This will push the cost of unleaded petrol up to £1.36 a litre (£6.18 a gallon) and diesel up to £1.40 a litre (£6.36 a gallon).

It means the cost of filling a saloon with a 50-litre tank will soar to about £70. Only 12 months ago, when petrol was £1.10 a litre, it would have been £56, marking a rise of 25 per cent.

The gloomy forecast for drivers came as Brent crude oil rose to $98 a barrel on London markets yesterday for the first time in 27 months. Experts said breaking the $100 a barrel threshold is ‘imminent’ amid growing global demand.

Petrol retailers have written to George Osborne urging the Chancellor to abandon the next automatic ‘escalator’ rise in fuel duty in his Budget, which will see up to 5p a litre added to the cost of fuel.

Combined with predicted oil price increases, motorists and hauliers face a total rise of 8p.

AA spokesman Luke Bosdet said: ‘Motorists are punch-drunk with these relentless price rises. They are driven by greedy speculators playing the markets and pushing up the price of oil, and therefore petrol and diesel. The pips are squeaking.’

During Prime Minister’s Questions yesterday David Cameron came under renewed pressure to help cash-strapped motorists by introducing a ‘fuel-stabiliser’ – where duty falls to compensate for oil price rises, keeping petrol prices on a more even keel.

After days of apparent dithering on the issue, Mr Cameron was asked by Tory MP Anne McIntosh at PMQs if he would revisit the fuel-stabiliser idea.

Mr Cameron said: ‘Yes, the Treasury are looking at this because clearly there is a case for saying that as the oil price rises, if it can be shown the Treasury benefits from extra revenue, there should be a way of sharing that with the motorist who is suffering from high prices.’

Under the stabiliser mechanism, fuel duty would be cut when oil prices rise, and increased when they fell.

The rule of thumb adopted by the oil and petroleum industry is that every $2 rise in the oil price results in a 1p rise in the pump price. So if oil rises by $10, a fuel-stabiliser would mean the Government should cut 5p off the fixed-rate duty it levies at the pumps, which is currently 58.95p a litre.

The Conservatives pledged to consider a ‘fair fuel-stabiliser’ before last year’s election. However the plan was kicked into the long grass until rising petrol prices, including a 1p-a-litre hike in duty and the VAT rise to 20 per cent, led Mr Cameron to revisit the topic last week.

Days later, however, he appeared to backtrack, telling the BBC: ‘I don’t want to raise people’s hopes too far because it is a difficult issue.’

After a series of almost daily increases, unleaded is currently at a record high of £1.28 a litre (£5.82 a gallon). Meanwhile diesel, at £1.32 a litre (over £6 a gallon), is now ‘perilously close’ to the previous record of £1.33 set in July 2008 and will soon surpass it, say retailers.

Brian Madderson, of the retail motor industry group RMI Petrol, which represents 6,500 independent filling stations, has written to George Osborne asking him to scrap the 'escalator' rise on fuel duty, introduced by Labour, which would see it go up by 1p plus the rate of inflation.

In his letter to the Chancellor, Mr Madderson writes: 'Our pessimistic outlook is that retail prices are likely to rise by as much as 8p-a-litre by Easter.

'This would put unleaded petrol at an average of 136p per litre and diesel at an unthinkable 140p per litre. The effect on industry and inflation is self-evident.'

Warning of 'much more pain in the pipeline', he said yesterday: 'It's time the Chancellor stepped off the fuel tax escalator. The thing about escalators is that when you reach the top, you do get off.'

The Federation of Small Businesses warned that its members were being 'hard-hit' 'at the most fragile of times' as they struggle in the economic downturn.

And Kate Gibbs, of the Road Haulage Association, called the rise 'little more than another kick in the teeth'.

OPEC Pressured to Lift Output as African, Asian Oil Tops $100

By Grant Smith - Jan 21, 2011
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-01-21/o...gy-markets.html

OPEC is facing growing calls to boost oil production as crude prices in Asia and Africa surpass $100 a barrel for the first time in two years.

Nigeria's Bonny Light grade, from which traders gauge the cost of West African oil, rose to $100.12 a barrel on Jan. 17, passing $100 for the first time since October 2008, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. Malaysia's Tapis and Indonesia's Minas breached that level a week ago, trading at $103.36 and $103.21, respectively today.

The International Energy Agency, an adviser to consuming nations, said Jan. 18 that "three-digit oil prices risk damaging" the economic recovery, signaling that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries should raise output. OPEC responded the same day by saying that global supplies are sufficient to meet demand.

With "some Asian crudes well above $100 a barrel, the risks of OPEC acting must be higher," said Lawrence Eagles, New York-based head of oil research at JPMorgan Chase & Co. "We would not be surprised to see the public rhetoric from consuming countries accelerate in the coming weeks. Behind the scenes pressure will no doubt be mounting in parallel."

Investors should "pare risk and take some profits" on the possibility that OPEC unexpectedly increases production, Eagles said in a report yesterday. "There is a rising risk of coming into the office one Monday morning to find OPEC has raised output dramatically."

'Enough Oil'

Oil producers as well as consumers may suffer if crude stays at about $95 to $100 a barrel, the Paris-based IEA said. Stockpiles held by companies in the most developed economies were at 2.742 billion barrels, "near the top of their five-year range," it said.

OPEC, responsible for 40 percent of global supply, issued a statement on its website saying "there is more than enough oil on the market," and promised action in the event of a supply shortage. The group is next due to review production quotas in June, skipping its usual first-quarter conference.

"Any assumption that there is tightness in the market is incorrect," OPEC Secretary-General Abdalla El-Badri said in the statement. "In reality, commercial stocks remain well above the five-year average and forward cover stands at around 60 days. There is more than enough oil on the market."

Crude declined 25 cents, or 0.3 percent, to $89.34 a barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange as of 4:36 p.m. London time. It has gained 18 percent from a year ago. Brent futures, used to price two-thirds of the world's oil, climbed 59 cents, or 0.6 percent, to $97.17 a barrel, for an advance of 30 percent in the past year. Brent reached a 27- month high of $99.20 on Jan. 14.

Lower Sulfur

African and Asian oil grades typically trade at a premium to other oils because of their lower sulfur content and higher gasoline and jet fuel yields. Nigeria, Angola and Gabon supply 15 percent of U.S. crude imports, according to data from the U.S. Energy Department in Washington.

When Brent first exceeded $100 a barrel in February 2008, Bonny Light had breached that level the previous week. Tapis and Minas had broken through $100 three months earlier.

Global oil benchmarks may reach $100 at "any time," the IEA's chief economist, Fatih Birol, said in a Jan. 18 interview with Maryam Nemazee on Bloomberg Television.

"If the oil price goes up, the vulnerability of our economy is going to increase significantly, and this can derail the recovery," Birol said.

'Not Worrisome'

Officials at OPEC, including El-Badri and Iranian Oil Minister Masoud Mir-Kazemi, this year's president, say $100 oil may not curtail economic growth.

"The increase in oil prices toward $100 is not worrisome enough to warrant a call for an emergency meeting," Mir-Kazemi said in Tehran on Jan. 16. "None of the OPEC members considers this figure as being unreasonable."

Rather than heed the IEA's suggestions, OPEC will likely await proof that consumers require additional barrels, according to PVM Oil Associates Ltd., a London-based broker.

"OPEC is more cautious and wants to respond to solid signals such as greater demand for physical oil and low stock levels, rather than responding to a greater demand for oil futures," David Hufton, PVM's managing director, said in a report yesterday.

Petrol price hits record high

AA joins clamour for chancellor George Osborne to scrap the next planned increase in fuel duty on 1 April

Terry Macalister
guardian.co.uk, Friday 28 January 2011 18.08 GMT
http://www.guardian.co.uk/business/2011/ja...ces-record-high

Pump prices hit record levels today, piling pressure on the government to cut fuel duty.

Fuel has now passed the previous high seen in the summer of 2008, pushed up by a combination of a near $100 per barrel crude oil value and a succession of tax increases.

Motoring groups described the increased cost of motoring as the "road to misery" as fuel monitoring group Experian Catalist said the average price of a litre of diesel had hit 133.26p and petrol 128.6p.

George Osborne has hinted in recent days that he is considering freezing duties that are due to increase further on 1 April. On Thursday the chancellor said: "We can override it. We are looking at that."

Pressure to cut prices increased when the RAC motoring organisation said it was joining the Fair Fuel UK campaign started by truckers and the Freight Transport Association.

The AA said the new diesel price meant that drivers were paying 19.21p a litre more than a year ago, adding £9.61 to the cost of a typical 50-litre refill. "Hitting a new record for diesel is yet another milestone along a road of misery for drivers," said the AA's president, Edmund King.

The soaring price of petrol can be expected to trigger anger against BP and Shell when they announce big increases in profits next week. US oil group, Chevron, has just reported a 72% increase in fourth-quarter income to $5.3bn.

Today the price of Brent blend oil rose $2 to hit $99.60 per barrel as traders worried that violence in Egypt could spread to other bigger Middle East oil producing countries.

But at the World Economic Forum in Davos the bosses of BP and Shell insisted they were not in favour of a very high crude price because it threatened to slow down economic growth and cut demand.

Soaring fuel prices were among the key reasons behind inflation's sharp rise in December, when the consumer price index (CPI) went up by 3.7%, against 3.3% in November.

On New Year's Day, a government fuel duty increase added 0.76p to petrol and diesel. Three days later, VAT rose from 17.5% to 20%.

There is growing pressure for a rethink on the further 1p-a-litre rise at a time when petrol prices have soared – in part because of the rapid acceleration of the oil price . Brent crude is trading at $97 per barrel.

"We are concerned about the current price of oil. We don't want [economic] recovery slowed," said Shell's chief executive, Peter Voser. The chairman of BP, Carl-Henric Svanberg, said: "If the price continues to rise, this could hurt recovery."

Much depends on the behaviour of oil cartel Opec, which is holding back production to keep prices up. The organisation's secretary general, Abdullah al-Badri, said he was "sure 100%" the market had enough oil. Oil prices are still well below the record of $147.27 hit in July 2008, and analysts predict an average of slightly more than $90 for the year as a whole.

The Fair Fuel UK Campaign is calling for the planned fuel duty rise in April to be scrapped and for the government to look at further ways to stabilise the price.

RAC motoring strategist Adrian Tink said: "Ordinary drivers and businesses are being crippled by the relentless rise in fuel costs. Action must start with the scrapping of April's planned fuel duty rise – the ninth tax rise to affect the price of fuel in a little over two years."

The Freight Transport Association and the Road Haulage Association are backing the Fair Fuel UK campaign, co-ordinated by Peter Carroll, a haulier who orchestrated previous protests, as well as the successful Gurkha Justice Campaign of 2009 with Joanna Lumley. Carroll has previously warned that he would bring the campaign to Whitehall, raising the spectre of a repeat of the road blockades seen in 2008 and 2000. His formal position during this campaign is against direct action.

The Item Club, a respected group of independent economic forecasters, said in a recent report that if oil averaged $100 over the year it would drive up inflation by a further 0.5% "threatening UK economic recovery".

Oil price jumps with Middle East protest worries

Brent crude oil is at its highest since September 2008 and at near record levels above US WTI oil

14 February 2011 Last updated at 18:09
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12458941

The price of certain grades of oil - including the UK's Brent crude - has jumped amid political protests in the Middle East.

Brent rose by $3.36 (£2.09) a barrel to $104.30 (£65.07) for April delivery, its highest since September 2008.

The US benchmark oil, West Texas Intermediate (WTI) rose by a far smaller 25 cents to $85.84 a barrel.

The gap between the two prices has been at record levels recently, partly because stocks of WTI are high.

Seasonal maintenance of some refineries is also causing spikes in certain grades of crude oil.

There is concern that the recent toppling of regimes in Tunisia and Egypt could lead to further instability in the Middle East and North Africa, which together account for more than a third of the world's oil.

Protests have also taken place in Yemen, Algeria and Iran.

Christopher Bellew, a broker at London's Bache Commodities said: "We're staying up because of the continued risk of further unrest in the Middle East."

OIL PRICES TO SOAR AS DEMAND KEEPS RISING, SAYS SHELL

Shell CEO Peter Voser predicted profound developments in the energy industry

Tuesday February 15,2011
By Andrew Johnson, Deputy City Editor
http://express.co.uk/posts/view/229155/Oil...sing-says-Shell

OIL prices are set to surge in coming years as supply fails to keep up with burgeoning demand from the booming growth in emerging market economies, Royal Dutch Shell said yesterday.

The oil giant's warning came as the Brent Crude price hit a 28-month high of $104 on the back of turbulence in the Middle East and rising imports to China.

In a report published yesterday, Shell said demand for energy in 2050 would triple compared with levels seen in 2000 while supplies may only grow by 50 per cent.

It said improvements in energy efficiency could cut demand by a fifth. This will leave the world having to work out how to close a gap between supply and demand equal to the energy industry's entire output in the year 2000.

"This gap, this zone of uncertainty, will have to be bridged by some combination of extraordinary demand moderation and extraordinary production acceleration," the company said.

Shell predicted that oil production would hit a plateau by the end of this decade but prices would continue to rise before them.

The report said India, China and other developing nations were entering their most energy-intensive phase of growth, putting "pressure on prices and generating volatility".

While coal was abundant and alternative energy, such as biofuels, would become more significant, it said there was no “silver bullet” that would solve the problem.

“Over the next four decades, the world’s energy system will see profound developments,” added chief executive Peter Voser. “Heightened collaboration between civil society and the public and private sectors is vital if we want to address economic, energy and environmental challenges.”

Shell said the financial crisis had accelerated the shift in power from west to east, increasing political uncertainty and the likelihood of price shocks. The company also warned of a growing risk to the environment through carbon emissions.

Among risks to growth, it said, were uncertainty over greenhouse gas emission regulations and the fall-out from BP’s Gulf of Mexico oil spill.

However, there could be growth from huge resources in Iraq and natural gas. The company said it was crucial businesses and governments took the right decisions now.

PETROL TO HIT £6.07 A GALLON

Petrol will soar to £6.07 a gallon if the April 1p fuel duty rise goes ahead, drivers’ warned yester

PETROL will soar to £6.07 a gallon if the April 1p fuel duty rise goes ahead, drivers’ warned yesterday.

Pressure group FairFuelUK blame four per cent inflation announced yesterday and the imminent tax hike.

Unleaded petrol already costs an average of £128.6p a litre – or £5.83 a gallon – with diesel at £133.6p.

But with the hike prices at the pumps will soar, experts warn. AA’s Edmund King said: “Petrol prices are now averaging 1.5p a litre higher than January’s record of 128.7p a litre.”

Here comes $4 gasoline

http://finance.fortune.cnn.com/2011/02/18/...mes-4-gasoline/

U.S. oil prices look reassuringly calm till you look below the surface.

At first blush, a replay of the 2008 gas price spike seems far fetched. The biggest driver of U.S. gasoline prices is the cost of crude oil, and near-month oil futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange have sat out the scorching commodities rally. They lately fetched $85, some 40% below the crisis peak.

But that's where the good news ends for motorists -- and for a U.S. economy that is sputtering even with gas at $3.15 a gallon.

Much of the oil being made into gasoline now actually costs $105 a barrel. For this we can blame a few of the usual suspects – try Middle East unrest and strong overseas economic growth – and one new one, a weak link in the U.S. petroleum supply chain.

Those factors make the Nymex price "irrelevant for the price of U.S. gasoline," says Olivier Jacob, who runs the Petromatrix trading advice firm in Zug, Switzerland.

Even the government agrees. Last week it projected a 1-in-3 chance the gas price will break $3.50 this summer and a 1-in-10 chance it will hit $4. And if anything those estimates may understate how fragile the balance is.

"It would not take much" to send gas prices back to $4, says Jacob. Cold weather, Saudi reluctance to increase production and possible refinery outages could all play their part.

Even a smaller rise could slow the snaillike recovery of the U.S. economy. Jacob and others say $3.50 a gallon this summer looks like a good bet, and a gas price at those levels could kneecap the limping jobs market yet again.

A study released last month by IHS Global Economics says a 25-cent rise in the gasoline price, all else equal, will reduce employment by some 600,000 jobs over the following two years. And the steeper the rise, the more jobs that stand to be lost.

"Suddenness is very important in determining how much damage is done to the economy," says IHS economist Gregory Daco.

So how do you get $4 gas when oil is just $85? The answer starts with some unprecedented behavior in global oil markets, where the benchmark European oil standard, known as Brent crude, is trading at a $20-a-barrel premium to the U.S. benchmark, the West Texas Intermediate futures contract that trades on Nymex. The two typically trade within a few dollars of one another.

Increased flows from Canadian tar sands and the Bakken shale fields in the northern Great Plains have sent oil flooding into Cushing, Okla., where the WTI crude contract is priced. But because pipelines are set to run into Cushing, not out, much of that oil is going into storage rather than into refineries. Oil stockpiles in Cushing hit their highest level in seven years last month.

The glut has disconnected the widely quoted WTI market from a sobering energy market reality. "Cushing isn't worth looking at," says Steve Kopits of energy forecaster Douglas Westwood in New York.

Not everyone shares this view – including, you'll be shocked to learn, the Nymex itself.

Joe Raia, a managing director for energy and metals products at the CME Group (CME), which runs Nymex, contends that Cushing isn't as bottled up as you might think. "Storage at Cushing isn't full," he says.

Raia adds that WTI remains the most liquid, transparent oil contract, with three times the open interest of Brent.

But like it or not, prices on the U.S. East Coast already are linked to Brent, because refineries there use oil imported by the tankerload from Europe. And other regions are feeling the squeeze as well.

Take Louisiana Light Sweet crude, a fuel blend favored by refiners in the south who are cut off from the WTI market. The spread between WTI and Louisiana Light recently hit $21 a barrel, another record.

Running off the WTI glut could ease the pressure on Brent and Louisiana Light prices. But the glut isn't going anywhere any time soon.

Pipelines that take oil out of Cushing are at least two years away, and oil companies that stand to rake in fat refining profits aren't exactly looking to rush that timeline.

Conoco (COP) chief Jim Mulva shot down talk about reversing a pipeline that feeds oil to Cushing from the Gulf Coast, saying, "We don't really think that's in our interest."

Meanwhile, the steep contango in the WTI futures curve – the condition in which the near months are cheaper than future ones – creates incentives to add to the Cushing glut.

A refiner or trader with storage rights can buy the March future today, take delivery when it expires, sell the April contract -- and lock in an easy $1.75 a barrel in practically risk-free profits, says Stephen Schork, who writes the Schork Report newsletter in Villanova, Pa.

"We get on that hamster wheel and it's hard to get off," he says. "That trade is a printing press if you've got the tankage."

The question, then, is not whether we should be paying attention to WTI but how high Brent might go. Gas prices didn't hit $4 in 2008 till crude was approaching $130 a barrel on its way to $147, Jacob says.

But he says we could be treated to $4 gas this year at a much lower price, possibly as low as $115 a barrel, thanks to bigger refining margins and the apparent reluctance of the Saudis, the world's biggest exporters, to increase production.

Prices are likely to rise regardless heading into the summer refining season. If the U.S. recovery gains steam, a replay of the ugly summer of 2008 looks like an unhappily good bet.

"The question is how high do prices have to get before demand starts to wane," says Schork. "There's a pretty good chance we're going to get to the jumping off point."

That doesn't sound enjoyable.

China Increases Retail Fuel Prices After Crude Rises Above $100 a Barrel

By Bloomberg News - Feb 20, 2011 12:35 AM GMT+0000 http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-02-19/c...s-update1-.html

China, Asia's biggest oil consumer, increased retail gasoline and diesel prices for the first time this year after crude in London rose above $100 a barrel.

Prices of both gasoline and diesel will rise by 350 yuan ($53) a ton starting today, or as much as 4.6 percent, the National Development and Reform Commission, the top economic planner, said on its website yesterday. Gasoline in Xinjiang, the lowest among all Chinese cities, cost 8,265 yuan a metric ton and diesel was at 7,630 yuan a ton before the increase.

The government boosted prices after crude in London rose to the highest in more than two years as civil unrest spread in the Middle East. China last increased gasoline and diesel prices by 4 percent on Dec. 22, based on a mechanism introduced in December 2008 that allows the NDRC to revise fuel prices when crude costs change by more than 4 percent over 22 working days.

"This isn't enough if we benchmark against how crude has risen. We'll need another price increase," Brynjar Eirik Bustnes, an analyst at JPMorgan Chase & Co., said by telephone from Hong Kong. "This one will allow refiners to avoid bigger losses but certainly it's not going to give them profits."

Brent crude on the ICE Futures Europe exchange in London has risen 9.5 percent since China's last fuel price adjustment, reaching a 2 1/2-year high during the past week.

China Petroleum & Chemical Corp. and PetroChina Co. are the nation's largest oil refiners.

The ex-factory cost of No. 3 jet fuel will reach 6,340 yuan a ton, rising from 5,990 yuan, according to a separate statement posted on the NDRC's website yesterday.

Higher gasoline and diesel prices will add to costs for manufacturers and farmers. Consumer-price inflation accelerated to 4.9 percent in January from 4.6 percent in December.

For 2010 as a whole, consumer prices rose 3.3 percent, breaching a government target of 3 percent.

China lifts fuel price, raising inflation concerns

China is the world's second-largest oil consumer

21 February 2011 Last updated at 14:37
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12520643

China has raised fuel prices for the second time in three months as it looks to offset a jump in global crude costs.

However, the move has raised questions over government attempts to slow inflation.

China, which subsidies the cost of fuel, increased the price of wholesale petrol and diesel by $53 (£34) per tonne from Sunday.

Further price rises may be needed if the cost of oil keeps rising on the international market, analysts said.

Instability in the Middle East has raised concerns about supply, and the price of oil has climbed to more than $100 per barrel.

Capping demand

China's National Development & Reform Commission (NDRC) said that the price rise was needed to slow demand for oil and fuel in China.

"Excessively fast growth in oil consumption is exceeding the tolerance capacity of our country, economically and environmentally," the NDRC was quoted as saying by the Reuters news agency.

"Therefore there is an urgent need to give play to the role of price levers for adjustment and guidance, constraining the excessively fast growth of oil consumption," it added.

China's latest price increase works out at 4 cents per litre of petrol and 5 cents per litre of diesel.
Inflationary pressures

China like many other countries across Asia and the rest of the world is fighting against a high rate of inflation.

Tight supply of commodities such as food and oil has pushed up prices and it is causing headaches for both governments and consumers.

Earlier this month, China's central bank raised interest rates to 6.06% in an effort to stem price growth.

Some analysts warned that a jump in fuel prices may push up transport costs and impact the price of essential commodities.

According to the latest figures, consumer prices rose 4.9% in January.

Factory output

Meanwhile, Chinese factory output shrank slightly in February.

Qu Hongbin, HSBC's chief China economist, said the contraction was a response to monetary tightening policies.

"The Chinese New Year holiday may be a factor but not the only reason. It also implies that quantitative tightening is starting to filter through, yet more still needs to be done to check inflation," he said.

HSBC's China Manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index fell to a seven-month low of 51.5, from 54.5 in January.

Any value above 50 indicates expansion in the manufacturing sector.

Libya unrest leads to rise in oil price

As violence has spread across Libya, European oil companies have begun to evacuate expatriate staff

21 February 2011 Last updated at 17:48
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12522291

The price of oil has risen in response to the turmoil in Libya.

Brent crude had jumped 2.6% by late afternoon to $105.2 a barrel, its highest level since before the 2008 financial crisis.

European energy companies are evacuating some staff from the country, which is a major oil and gas producer for the European market.

Meanwhile shares in Italian oil firm ENI - which is active in Libya - ended Monday trading 5.1% lower.

Italian connection

The Italian company said on Monday that its operations were unaffected by the violence.

Italy buys about one-third of Libya's oil and gas exports, making it the country's biggest customer by far.

ENI has been buying gas from Libya for decades, and is at the centre of a close political relationship between the two countries, according to one analyst.

In 2008-09, the Libyan government had considered buying an up-to-10% stake in ENI, although the investment did not go ahead.

Some 13% of the company's revenues come from Libya, and 30% from North Africa as a whole, meaning the firm is highly exposed to instability in the region.

Although market concern about the firm is focusing on the short-term impact of the unrest, the analyst said there were also fears that a change in regime could lead to the Libyan assets of ENI and other foreign investors being expropriated.
'Monitoring situation'

The Italian firm said it was bringing home its employees' families and non-essential personnel, and was "further reinforcing the security measures for its people and plants".

ENI is not the only foreign oil company affected by events in Libya.

Shares in Austria's OMV - another European firm that has been active in Libya for many years - ended the day down 4.2%.

OMV, along with Royal Dutch Shell, BP, France's Total and Norway's Statoil, have all said they are repatriating some or all of their non-local staff.

Both BP and Shell are only involved in exploratory preparatory drilling in the country, and neither is currently producing oil there. BP said it had suspended its onshore operations.

The European Union is preparing to evacuate its citizens from the country.

The UK Foreign Office has already advised that those without a pressing need to remain in the country, should leave by commercial means if it is safe to do so, as has the US.

Meanwhile Turkey has already begun flying its 3,000 or so citizens in the country home.
Market anxiety

Commodities markets are worried about more than just Libya, with the threat of unrest escalating in Iran - the second biggest oil producer in the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec).

There is nervousness that even Opec's biggest producer, Saudi Arabia, may yet succumb to instability, although the autocratic regime there has yet to witness any protests.

Oil supplies in Libya and elsewhere have yet to be significantly disrupted by any of the events in the Middle East.

However, the head of the Al-Suwayya tribe in eastern Libya is reported to have said they will attempt to stop oil exports to Europe if oppression of protesters by the Gaddafi regime continues.

Strikes by workers have already shut down the Nafoora oilfield, which is operated by a subsidiary of the Libyan state-owned oil company, and protests have also closed the Rus Lanuf oil refinery, according to local news sources.

"I think markets are more twitchy than they normally would be, mainly because there isn't a huge amount of over-capacity in the market and therefore any interruption to supply from a major producer could see prices spike considerably higher," said Nick McGregor, oil analyst at Redmayne Bentley.

Opec is thought to have an additional 4.7 million barrels-per-day available, compared with Libya's exports estimated at 1.5 million.

Libya is responsible for only 2% of all oil production worldwide, although its share of the European market is estimated at 10%.

Oil production is essential to the Libyan economy, with oil output accounting for 95% of export receipts and 25% of the country's economic output.

Oil price 'could hit $220 a barrel'

Experts at Japanese bank Nomura raise spectre of doubling in oil price if unrest in Libya continues

guardian.co.uk, Wednesday 23 February 2011 18.57 GMT
http://www.guardian.co.uk/business/2011/fe...-since-gulf-war

The continuing violence in Libya and fears that the unrest will spread to other parts of north Africa and the Middle East could create the biggest oil shock since the first Gulf war, analysts have warned.

Up to half of Libya's oil production is now estimated to have been shut down as a result of the crisis engulfing the country – creating supply concerns that pushed the price of Brent crude above $110 a barrel, now experiencing its biggest three-day gain in a year.

Commodity analysts at Japanese bank Nomura raised the possibility that prices could perhaps hit $220 a barrel. In a note to clients the bank warned: "The closest comparison to the current unrest in the Middle East and north Africa is the 1990-1991 Gulf war. If Libya and Algeria were to halt oil production together, prices could peak above $220 a barrel and Opec spare capacity will be reduced to levels seen during the Gulf war and when prices hit $147 in 2008."

The alarmist view was partly backed up by Marco Dunand, chairman and co-founder of Swiss energy trading group Mercuria Energy. Dunand predicts that oil could rise above $150 a barrel, if the unrest continues to spread.

"I don't want to over-hype things, but there are scenarios under which oil could go above $150 without a doubt and those scenarios are to do with stability in the Middle East if things start spreading," he said. Dunand reckoned $150 was a "20% possibility".

Surging oil hit world stock markets, with the FTSE 100 closing down 73.23 points at 5924 and the Dow Jones trading down around 93 points at 12,119 as London traders went home.

Economists typically reckon that a $10 a barrel increase in the price of oil knocks about half a percentage point from global GDP growth. However, in a more measured note, Julian Jessop of Capital Economics said: "We continue to expect oil prices to drop back sharply later this year. In part this is because we think that Libya will be both the first and the last of the major oil producers to see significant disruption (and indeed that the Gaddafi regime itself will fall soon), allowing the risk premium to fade away."

The situation in north Africa and the Middle East, and the knock-on effect on the price of oil, is causing others to reconsider the issue of energy security.

Andrew Horstead, risk specialist at energy and carbon management company Utilyx, warned of the dangers of being too energy dependent on the Middle East. "The unrest we're seeing in Libya is already having an impact on oil supply but the real issue will come if the trouble spills over into Saudi Arabia," he said. "The rise in oil has also hit European gas markets, with UK gas prices for winter delivery rising 9% in a little over two weeks, while there are reports that Libyan gas supplies to Europe have also been stopped.

"The closure has sent jitters through a market already nervous about the potential disruption to Europe-bound liquefied natural gas (LNG) through the Suez Canal. The developments in north Africa and the Middle East highlight just how interconnected the energy market is and how the UK's energy supply is at the mercy of events happening in other countries. It's essential that more emphasis is placed on producing energy within the UK if we are to secure our energy supply."

Libya unrest pushes Brent oil price to $111 a barrel

Market volatility can give opportunities but also cause headaches

23 February 2011 Last updated at 22:27
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12548471

The price of Brent crude oil has hit $111 a barrel, and US crude also rose in price, as worries persist about the unrest in Libya.

Markets are concerned the trouble could worsen in key oil producing countries, affecting supplies and hitting growth.

The price of Brent rose more than $5 a barrel, to $111.25.

And US light sweet crude oil prices hit $100 a barrel for the first time since October 2008, before settling up 2.8% at $98.10 a barrel.

It comes as the White House said it was watching oil prices.

"We are obviously monitoring this very carefully and we are concerned about it," White House spokesman Jay Carney said.

Meanwhile, Total has became the latest European oil firm to act, saying it was "beginning to suspend" its production in Libya.

Spanish oil firm Repsol and Italy's ENI partly suspended operations in the North African country earlier this week.

Libya is the world's 12th-largest exporter of oil and the majority of its output goes to Europe.

Shares in Austrian oil and gas firm OMV fell by more than 5% after the company said it was expecting a temporary fall in Libyan production, and that the unrest in the country could lead to a complete shutdown.

Meanwhile, the AA said that while it had not noted any petrol price increases at UK pumps, motorists should "brace themselves for a short, sharp, shock".

And it said the current situation should put pressure on the government not to go ahead with fuel duty increases.

Saudi Arabia's Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi tried to reassure markets on Tuesday that his country's spare production capacity could help "compensate for any shortage in international supplies".

However, oil industry analyst Mehdi Varzi told the BBC World Service that he estimated that the unrest could be affecting "up to a third" of Libya's total crude oil exports.

Mr Varzi said it would be difficult to compensate for the loss of these supplies.

"They are of extremely high quality in terms of crude... and this kind of crude is very difficult to replace, even if the Saudis want to replace it."

Consequences

The markets have been gripped by uncertainty this week as investors tried to work out the possible impact of the Libyan violence on oil supplies.

With foreign oil companies suspending production, experts pointed out that the state-owned National Oil Company has run Libya's oil fields before and could do so again.

It did so in the 1980s when US oil firms left the country - but production would be hampered without the input of experienced of oil companies.

Operations could also be further disrupted if sanctions were imposed on Col Gaddafi's regime.

French President Nicolas Sarkozy has called on European leaders to suspend economic ties with Libya.

"I ask the foreign minister to propose to our European partners the adoption of quick, concrete sanctions so that all those implicated in the violence know that they will have to assume the consequences," President Sarkozy said in a statement.
Major shift?

Analysts are predicting further oil price rises to come.

"Global investors are now trying to decide if the Middle East crisis means a major shift of geopolitical balance of power in the region," said Masayuki Kubota of Daiwa SB Investments.

He added that there could be "more instability and possible further oil price rises".

If Libyan supplies went completely offline then in the short term the price of crude could rise by another $10 or $20 a barrel, Mehdi Varzi said.

However, if unrest spread further throughout the region then the situation would become much more serious, and develop "a fully fledged international oil price crisis", he added.

On Tuesday, International Energy Agency chief economist Fatih Birol said oil prices were in the danger zone.

He said they could rise further if turmoil continued in the Middle East and that may slow the recovery from the global economic crisis.

"The global economy is more fragile now than it was in 2008," Mr Barratt said.

"Growth has been driven by stimulus packages and austerity measures. I don't see it being able to absorb a rise to $140 like it did two years ago."

Oil May Surge to $220 If Libya, Algeria Halt, Nomura Says

By Grant Smith - Feb 23, 2011
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-02-23/o...omura-says.html

Oil prices may surge to $220 a barrel if political unrest in North Africa halts exports from Libya and Algeria, Nomura Holdings Inc. said.

Crude futures rose to almost $100 in New York today, the highest in more than two years, as violence in Libya threatened to disrupt exports from Africa's third-biggest supplier. Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi vowed yesterday to fight a growing rebellion until his "last drop of blood." Protests in Algeria led to the ending of a 19-year state of emergency.

"If Libya and Algeria were to halt oil production together, prices could peak above $220 a barrel and OPEC spare capacity will be reduced to 2.1 million barrels a day, similar to levels seen during the Gulf war and when prices hit $147 in 2008," the Tokyo-based bank said in a note today.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has spare production capacity of about 5 million barrels a day, according to the International Energy Agency. Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi said yesterday that the organization will boost output if there is a shortage. Algeria produced 1.25 million barrels a day last month, while Libya pumped 1.59 million a day, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. Both nations are members of OPEC.

Crude for April delivery was at $99.68 a barrel as of 12:38 p.m. on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest since Oct. 2, 2008. Futures are up 24 percent from a year ago. Brent for April settlement climbed 5.4 percent, to $111.49, on the ICE Futures Europe exchange.
Gulf War

"The closest comparison is the 1990-1991 Gulf War," during which OPEC's spare capacity dropped to 1.8 million barrels a day and prices surged 130 percent in seven months, Nomura analysts led by Michael Lo in Hong Kong said.

Nomura said the $220 prediction may be an underestimate, as speculative investors trading crude oil who were not active in the early 1990s may amplify the price.

A surge to $220 would trigger demand destruction and a correction lower, according to Stephen Schork, president of the Schork Group Inc. in Villanova, Pennsylvania.

"These are levels that effectively kill the global recovery," Schork said in an interview. "You can never say never, but $220 is blatantly not sustainable."

Nomura forecasts that a jump to $220 would probably cause a temporary collapse in global oil consumption of 2 million barrels a day. That's more than the 1.5 million barrels of daily growth anticipated this year by the IEA.
Scaling Back

Total SA and OMV AG followed Eni SpA, RWE AG and BASF SE's Wintershall unit in scaling back their Libyan operations this week. The moves have reduced production by as much as 300,000 barrels a day, Vienna-based researcher JBC Energy GmbH said in a report today.

Protests in Algeria, while not as violent as in Libya, led to the announcement yesterday of an end to the state of emergency. The measure was imposed after the cancellation of the country's first multiparty elections that Islamists were set to win in 1992.

"I see a higher chance for Libyan production to stop at the moment, but I will not be surprised if this rolls over into Algeria too," Nomura's Lo said by e-mail. "We are hearing a threat to oil infrastructure in Algeria already."

If an export suspension is confined to Libya, rather than both countries, prices would rise to about half of the $220 a barrel forecast, Lo said.

North African Turmoil Could Rocket Crude to $220

By Matt Egan
Published February 23, 2011
http://www.foxbusiness.com/markets/2011/02.../#ixzz1EqrWauuW

If the turmoil paralyzing parts of the Middle East and North Africa brings oil production in Libya and Algeria to a standstill, it could cause crude oil to explode to $220 a barrel, derailing the global economic recovery.

According to a new report from Tokyo-based Nomura, a simultaneous production halt from embattled Libya and neighboring Algeria would reduce OPEC spare capacity to 2.1 million barrels a day and may cause crude to spike from about $97 a barrel today to $220 a barrel.

"The closest comparison is the 1990-1991 Gulf War," the Nomura analysts, led by Michael Lo, wrote, saying crude prices leaped 70% in seven months when OPEC's spare capacity was cut to just 1.8 million barrels a day during that conflict with oil-rich Iraq.

While the $220 figure may sound high, Nomura said it could be an underestimate as speculative oil traders who were not around during the Gulf War may exaggerate the surge during an oil production halt.

The turmoil in Algeria hasn't gotten nearly as much attention, but that government is also believed to be very vulnerable and recent protests have led the government there to lift its state of emergency.

The report comes as Wall Street has grown increasingly fearful the violence slamming Libya, Africa's third-largest oil producer, will eat into the global economic recovery.

Even though the global economy has strengthened considerably in recent months, it's clear $220 oil prices would seriously hurt growth, putting a huge burden on cash-strapped consumers and businesses, especially transportation companies like shipping giant FedEx (FDX: 89.25, 0.00, 0.00%), airliner JetBlue (JBLU: 5.70, 0.00, 0.00%) and cruise operator Carnival (CCL: 42.06, 0.00, 0.00%).

Crude's expiring March contract spiked 8.5% -- its biggest one-day gain since April 2009 -- to a 2 1/2-year high of $93.57 on Tuesday in response to the turmoil in Libya. The surge in oil prices sent the Dow Jones Industrial Average tumbling 178 points, its steepest decline since November.

With no resolution in sight, crude continued its gains on Wednesday, with the commodity's April contract jumping $2.16 a barrel, or 2.30%, to $97.58. Brent crude continues to vault ahead of crude, surging another $3.92 a barrel, or 3.71%, to $109.70.

According to Bloomberg data, Libya pumped 1.59 million barrels of crude a day last month, while Algeria pumped 1.25 million barrels a day.

The markets have been pricing in the possibility the crisis in Libya will break out into an all-out civil war as longtime Libyan leader Muammar al-Qaddafi has refused to step down. In a televised speech on Tuesday, he said, “I will fight to the last drop of my blood.”

Citing a source close to the al-Qaddafi regime, Time Magazine reported late Tuesday the leader has ordered security services to start sabotaging oil facilities. The forces plan to blow up several oil pipelines, cutting off flow to Mediterranean ports, the report said.

According to Italian authorities, the death toll during the political unrest in Libya may have jumped to about 1,000.

ConvictedSinner - February 24, 2011 06:09 PM (GMT)

So essentially what they are saying is that a 5% decrease in world oil production would possibly send the price of oil shooting up more than 100%. That 5% would be a complete stoppage of production from Libya and Algeria. The price has already been climbing because of unrest, which has not halted nor slowed production. That has to be one of the most illogical stories I have ever heard.

Oil nears $120 as Libyan supplies come under attack

Russell Lynch
24 Feb 2011
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard-bus...0-month-high.do

Libya's bloody uprising sent oil prices surging to a 29-month high near $120 a barrel today, as production in the North African nation slumped and oil installations came under attack.

Brent crude jumped more than $8 dollars a barrel to as high as $119.79 at one point, with around a quarter of Libya's output reckoned to be lost and president Muammar Gaddafi's opponents now in control of much of the world's 12th-biggest oil exporter.

China's state-owned China National Petroleum Corporation became the latest producer to pull nearly 400 staff out of the country today after attacks on its oil facilities. CNPC said it was doing "everything possible to protect its projects and assets and ensure the safety of its employees".

Analysts estimated Libya's 1.6 million barrels a day production had fallen by at least 400,000, but the head of the country's biggest producer, Italy's ENI, added that the impact of the unrest could be far greater with around 1.2 million barrels lost. ENI's gas production had fallen by more than half to 120,000 barrels a day equivalent, chief executive Paolo Scaroni said.

The turmoil sent more tremors through markets as the FTSE 100 Index headed for its fifth straight day of losses and experts warned of the impact of the price spike on a fragile economic recovery. Traditional safe haven gold rose more than $5 to $1414.50 an ounce.

Harry Tchilingguirian, head of commodity markets strategy at BNP Paribas, said: "The geographic scope of popular upheavals is perceived by the market to potentially extend to neighbouring countries such as Algeria, and some speculate ultimately Saudi Arabia, which holds the bulk of OPEC's spare production capacity."

Oil prices eased back to around $114 dollars a barrel later, as Saudi Arabia - which yesterday announced a $36 billion (£22 billion) giveaway to stave off threats to its own regime - signalled it was "willing and able" to step in and meet any supply shortfall.

But Brent is still up an eyewatering $20 since the start of the year and Goldman Sachs analyst Jeffrey Currie warned the turmoil had raised the stakes if unrest spreads to other countries.

He said: "The market cannot accommodate another disruption, in our view, with the problems in Libya potentially absorbing half of OPEC's spare capacity. This makes the risks now associated with further contagion much higher than they were several days ago, as further disruptions could now create severe shortages in global oil markets."

Saudi Arabia Pledges OPEC Supplies to Replace Lost Libya Oil

http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-02-24/s...libyan-oil.html

Saudi Arabia and other OPEC nations including those in West Africa are willing and able to replace any lost Libyan oil as soon as companies ask for it, including crude of the same quality, a Saudi Arabian oil official said.

There is no reason for oil prices to rise because Saudi Arabia and OPEC won't allow shortages to exist, the official said by telephone today, declining to be identified by name.

As OPEC's statute indicates, it is the responsibility of the group to ensure that the market is well balanced and that there is no shortage of supply, the official said.

Exporters are under pressure to ensure adequate supplies to the market after violence in Libya, Africa's third-largest producer, sent Brent crude oil futures in London to as high as $119.79 a barrel earlier today, the highest since August 2008. Brent retreated below $114 after the Saudi official's comments were reported.

Some West African oil that goes to Asian markets can be redirected to Europe, and extra Saudi oil can go to Asia to replace the West African supplies, the official said. OPEC's West African members are Nigeria and Angola.

Libya's benchmark Es Sider grade has a low density and low sulfur content, making it similar to North Sea Brent crude and some African crudes that are favored by refiners because they yield more higher-value products such as gasoline.
IEA Stands 'Ready'

The Paris-based International Energy Agency is closely monitoring the situation in Libya and is ready to release supplies from government-maintained stockpiles in the event of a disruption, according to a Feb. 22 statement on its website. There is no change to this policy, an IEA official who declined to be identified said today. Senior IEA officials are in a board meeting today and tomorrow, at which the need for emergency inventories may be discussed.

"The market is looking at the Saudi and IEA statements as declarations of intent, which isn't the same as actually putting physical production on the market," said Harry Tchilinguirian, head of commodity-markets strategy at BNP Paribas SA in London. "The market is now focusing on the potential of lost barrels, not only in Libya but Algeria, and the possibility of protests elsewhere that could easily lead to tightening supply."

Popular uprisings have rocked the Arab world, ignited by the ouster of Tunisia's president last month and fanned by the Feb. 11 fall of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. Protests in Algeria, which produces 1.25 million barrels a day of oil, led to the Feb. 22 announcement of an end to the state of emergency there. Turmoil has spread to Bahrain, Iran and Yemen.

Spare Capacity

OPEC collectively pumped 29.4 million barrels a day last month, according to Bloomberg estimates, and has about 5 million barrels a day of spare capacity, according to the International Energy Agency. Most of the unused capacity is in Saudi Arabia, the organization's biggest producer.

Eni SpA, the largest foreign oil producer in Libya, and other companies including Total

SA and OMV AG said they were curtailing production and evacuating staff after clashes between troops and anti-government protesters in the past few days.

Eni's oil and gas production in Libya has been halved to 120,000 barrels of oil equivalent a day, and the company may stop produicing there altogether because storage tanks at export terminals are filling up, two people will knowledge of the situation said. The flow of gas to Italy from Eni's Libyan fields halted this week.

Libya pumped 1.6 million barrels a day of crude last month, according to Bloomberg estimates. Barclay Capital estimates as much as 1 million barrels a day has been halted, while Goldman Sachs Group Inc. puts the disruption at 500,000 barrels a day.
Unilateral Decision

Saudi oil can flow through the kingdom's East-West pipeline, reducing the time needed for the crude to reach European refineries, the Saudi official said. The line stretches from the kingdom's oil-rich eastern province to the Red Sea port of Yanbu and can transport as much as 5 million barrels a day for export to European markets, according to a U.S. Energy Information Administration website.

Saudi Arabia has previously announced unilateral decisions to boost production without seeking OPEC's approval first, including in 2008 when prices were rallying toward a record.

On May 16 of that year, the kingdom said it would add 300,000 barrels a day from the following month, taking output to 9.45 million barrels a day, and on June 19 it said it would add a further 200,000 barrels a day. At an emergency oil summit convened by King Abdullah in Jeddah on June 22, 2008, the country said it could raise output capacity by an additional 2.5 million barrels a day with new giant fields if needed, lifting its total capacity to 15 million barrels a day.

Oil reached $147.27 a barrel in July 2008 before retreating to less than $40 a barrel at the end of that year.

OPEC's 12 members are Algeria, Angola, Ecuador, Iran, Iraq Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela. The group is due to hold its next formal meeting in early June.

BASF says oil price rises will not be sustained

Juergen Hambrecht, BASF chief executive: 'I do not believe that oil prices will go up constantly'

24 February 2011 Last updated at 12:52
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12563817

Germany chemicals firm BASF has tried to play down fears that already-high oil prices will continue to rise.

BASF, which has oil and gas operations in Libya through its Wintershall subsidiary, said speculation and fear was fuelling the rises in crude prices.

But its chief executive said prices would stabilise as the situation in Libya calmed down.

Juergen Hambrecht made the comments to the BBC as BASF reported strong fourth-quarter results.

BASF said its net profit for the quarter had risen to 1.1bn euros ($1.5bn; £931m), up from 455m euros in the same period a year earlier, as the improving global economy boosted sales.

For the full year the firm reported a net profit of 4.56bn euros, up from 1.4bn euros in 2009.
'Fear priced in'

BASF said it was "concerned" about the situation in Libya, where it has suspended the operations of its Wintershall subsidiary and flown-out all ex-pat employees.

Mr Hambrecht said the situation was "very severe", but also very difficult to judge, as there was a lot of conflicting information coming out of the North African country.

He added that he did not think the oil price would go up "constantly".

"There is a lot of speculation in it, fear priced in," he told BBC World Business Report.

"I believe as we go forward the situation will calm down and the oil price will stabilise again."

"So for the time being I do not see a major impact on our earning power going forward, besides the effect that we stopped production in Libya."

But he added that if oil prices and other factor pushed up inflation rates substantially, this would "eat into" some of its growth.

Raw materials

In its results statement, BASF said it expected "significant sales growth" in 2011.

Mr Hambrecht wrote that he thought BASF was "able to take advantage of the strong economic recovery in 2010, which was more dynamic than we all initially expected".

The company added that it would be able to pass on the costs of increasing raw materials prices to its customers.

Petrol prices 'could reach 140p a litre' say retailers

Prices of oil have been volatile in recent days, leading to issues for drivers

24 February 2011 Last updated at 13:43
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12567988

Sharp movements in the price of oil have raised concerns that the price of unleaded petrol could jump to 140p a litre, retailers have said.

Fuel costs are already at record levels with unleaded petrol standing at 129p a litre on average.

Retailers have put out a warning that a 5p increase is in store and but it could increase further.

Crude oil has been particularly volatile in recent days, owing to unrest in key oil producing countries.

Mounting concern over Libyan supplies and speculation about protests in Saudi Arabia have affected prices.
Predictions

Brent Crude has risen from under $100 a barrel two weeks ago to nearly $120 early on Thursday, before slipping back a little to around $115.

Petrol suppliers said the 5p increase they were forecasting was already working its way through the supply chain, the result of more expensive crude which has already reached the refineries.

"I can see two or three pence on the price of a litre by early next week," said Brian Madderson, of the RMI Petrol Retailers Association, which represents firms with 6,000 garage forecourts, two-thirds of the UK total.

"Then expect another 2p by the end of March."

So increases already working through the supply chain could add 5p to prices over the next few weeks.

The suppliers are also warning that the next increase in fuel duty planned by the government will add a further 5p to the cost of fuel in April, if it goes ahead.
Duty

Duty increases are set in relation to predictions for inflation in the autumn, so it remains to be seen whether the rise would be quite so large.

But the combined effect of higher oil and extra duty could push unleaded close to 140p a litre.

Chancellor George Osborne has come under pressure to abandon the duty rise and ministers have made no secret of the fact that a fuel duty stabiliser has been looked at - a mechanism for cutting duty when oil prices soar.

But the Treasury refused to comment in advance of the Budget on 23 March.

The 140p level could be reached without any further dramatic increases in the cost of crude oil.

Fuel suppliers use a rule of thumb that a $2 rise in crude results in an increase of 1p in the price of petrol. On that measure, if oil approaches $140 a barrel, fuel on the forecourts could get alarmingly close to £1.50 a litre.

Oil prices hit fresh highs on Libya unrest fears

There are concerns that it will not be easy to make up the shortfall in Libya's high quality crude oil

24 February 2011 Last updated at 17:03
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12563063

Oil prices have hit their highest levels in two-and-a-half years after violence in Libya disrupted output and markets feared that the unrest could spread to larger oil producing nations.

Brent crude hit $119.79 a barrel in early Thursday trade, before falling back to $114.65.

US light crude earlier reached $103.41 a barrel before slipping to $99.47.

This has lead to concerns about the impact sustained high prices could have on the world economy.

Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, whose country is the world's biggest oil producer, has said they could be "a serious threat" to global growth.

'Turning point'

The last time prices were this high was in August 2008 and analysts are predicting more gains may be on the way.

BNP Paribas said that it was revising its outlook and expected Brent to continue trading at its current high level.

The bank upped its forecasts to predict an average price of $117 a barrel in the second quarter of this year.

"Given the level of uncertainty, the revision is a conservative stab in the dark," it said.

Meanwhile, Deutsche Bank said that if Brent went above $120 a barrel it would be an turning point for global economic growth.

Oil "is certainly edging closer to a level that is viewed by our colleagues as a key threat to global growth," Deutsche said in a research note.

"$120 a barrel is the level that oil as a share of global GDP starts to move above 5.5%... which has historically been an environment where global growth has come under pressure."

Market reaction

European shares fell on Thursday, extending losses for the fourth consecutive session as investors expressed concern about the impact of the oil price spike on global growth.

In London, the FTSE 100 was down 0.06% at 5919.98, while in Frankfurt the Dax was 0.89% lower at 7130.50. And in Paris, the Cac 40 fell 0.09% to 4,009.64 points

"The general unrest in the Middle East has knocked all the confidence out of the market," said Mark Priest, an equities trader at ETX Capital.

"We cannot see a turnaround unless suddenly the situation is resolved in Libya," he added.
Supply worries

Oil prices have been rising for months, but the uprising in Libya has caused a sharp increase in crude costs.

According to the International Energy Agency, Libya produces 1.6 million barrels per day of crude, 2% of the world's output.

European firms have been suspending production in Libya this week and Barclays Capital estimates that so far about one million barrels per day of production has been shut down, although others are quoting figures nearer half a million.

Saudi Arabia has an estimated 4 million barrels per day of spare capacity and analysts said a move from them - the biggest oil producers in the region - would be crucial in bringing down the oil price.

According to the Financial Times, Saudi Arabia is now in "active talks" with European oil companies about how to make up the shortfall left by Libyan crude.

Riyadh is asking "what quantity and what quality of oil" European refiners want, a senior Saudi oil official told the paper.

However there have been concerns that it will not be easy to make up the shortfall in Libya's high quality light, sweet crude.

Much of the spare capacity among the Opec group of oil producing nations is heavy, high-sulphur - or sour - crude, which can be more difficult to refine.

'High stakes'

Investment banking firm Goldman Sachs issued a report which reflected the nervousness in the markets that any further disruption to oil supplies could create severe oil shortages and require demand rationing.

"The market cannot accommodate another disruption, in our view, with the problems in Libya potentially absorbing half of Opec's spare capacity," said Jeffrey Currie of Goldman Sachs in a research note.

Although Goldman Sachs sees the risk of contagion to other large energy producers as relatively low at the moment, "the stakes associated with further contagion are now much higher, which creates even further upside risk to our price forecasts," Mr Currie said.

Motorists facing £6 a gallon at the pump due to Libya crisis

Motorists are now paying £6 a gallon in garages across the country as oil prices continue to soar amid the crisis in Libya.

By David Millward, Transport Editor 7:00AM GMT 25 Feb 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/motoring/news/8...bya-crisis.html

The cost of unleaded has broken the barrier in 267 forecourts already and the number is set to increase sharply over the next few days.

Brian Madderson, chairman of RMI Petrol, the filling stations' trade body, said motorists will be paying 10 pence a litre more by the end of April because of the looming increase in fuel duty and higher oil prices on the world market.

By the middle of next week £6 a gallon – or £1.32 a litre – will be the norm across Britain, Mr Madderson added.

With the Libya crisis pushing the cost of oil to its highest level on the world markets since August 2008, the cost of motoring, commuting and family holidays are also likely to rise to unprecedented levels.

At one point the price of Brent Crude spiked on the London market, hitting $119.79 a barrel – $8.54 higher than when trading started yesterday morning.

“This is further bad news for motorists and forecourts as this increase looks set to coincide with the introduction of the ill thought out fuel duty escalator adding a further five pence per litre at the pump,” Mr Madderson said.

According to Mr Madderson motorists’ plight is being worsened by retailers difficulties in borrowing money to pay for fuel.

“It means that they don’t have old buffer stocks which were bought at lower prices which they can sell.”

Paul Watters of the AA was equally pessimistic. “Drivers are going to have to brace themselves for a significant increase in fuel prices, perhaps as much as 2p a litre in coming days,” he said.

“Further increases will depend on how long troubles in the Middle East and north Africa continue. We hope that, once these subside or OPEC intervenes to boost oil supply, a drop in oil prices will filter through as quickly to the pumps.”

The US government overnight sought to quell mounting fears that the unrest in Libya would cause a dramatic increase in oil prices.

Barack Obama, the U.S. President, said the world could weather a spike in oil prices while Timothy Geithner, the Treasury Secretary, denied the world would run out of oil, insisting the world had plenty of fuel reserves.

Their comments came after Saudi Arabia offered some respite to fears over Middle East oil supplies by indicating it can cover export cuts resulting from Libya's civil war.

Soaring oil prices have intensified pressure on the Government to forego the next planned increase in fuel duty with motorists demanding that the Coalition honours the Tories’ pre-election pledge of a stabiliser which would cut tax as petrol costs rose.

However it is not only motorists who will have to bear the brunt of the Libyan crisis, even though many transport operators will have “hedged” against future price rises by agreeing a fixed rate in advance.

“Depending on how transport groups are oil hedged they may have no choice other than passing on price rises to customers both freight and passenger,” said Dr. Ashley Steel, KPMG’s global chair for transport.

Rail passengers will be hit hard as well as inflation increases on the back of dearer oil.

This is because commuter fares are linked to the Retail Price Index. The cost of millions of season tickets is certain to go up by more than 10 per cent next January because of the Government’s decision to allow regulated fares to rise by three per cent above July’s RPI.

Air travel is also likely to become dearer. British Airways has already imposed a new fuel surcharge, which added £24 to the cost of a return long-haul economy flight.

Industry experts expect other carriers to follow.

There was little cheer for bus passengers either from the Confederation of Passenger Transport, which represents the industry,

“It will depend on how bus operators have hedged their fuel, but obviously it will have an impact on running costs.

“Bus operators will not rush to push up fares, but increases be unavoidable if oil prices continue to climb.”

Spain to lower speed limit as oil prices rise

Spain will lower motorway speed limits, cut train prices and use more biofuel in a bid to combat rising oil prices due to Libya unrest guardian.co.uk, Friday 25 February 2011 16.19 GMT

http://www.guardian.co.uk/environment/2011...imit-oil-prices

Spain will lower motorway speed limits, cut train ticket prices and use more biofuel under an emergency energy-saving initiative because of soaring oil prices brought on by unrest in Libya, an official said Friday.

The Libya crisis has sharply reduced exports from the oil-rich nation, and about 13% of the oil Spain consumes comes from Libya.

Deputy prime minister, Alfredo Pérez Rubalcaba, said Spain's energy supply is not in danger, despite shutdowns by oil companies operating in Libya, but the national energy bill will rise significantly because of the sharply higher petroleum prices.

He said a €10 per barrel (£8.50 per barrel) increase in oil prices will cost Spain an extra €500m (£425m) per month.

Spain's energy saving measures will be approved formally next week and take effect on a temporary basis on 7 March.

The maximum speed limit on Spanish motorways is 120kph (75mph) and this will be reduced to 110kph (68mph). The government will rush to print new signs to alert people of the change.

"We are going to go a bit slower and in exchange for that we are going to consume less gasoline and therefore pay less money," Pérez Rubalcaba said. For instance, he said, a car running on petrol will use 15% less fuel at the new, lower speed limit.

The government also will order a 5% reduction in fares on commuter and middle-distance trains by the state railway system Renfe.

"We are going to wage a major campaign to promote public transport, which is always welcome but which in this case is absolutely necessary for us," he said.

Finally, oil companies will also have to add more biofuel to the gasoline and diesel they produce – from the current mandatory 5.8% proportion, up to 7%, the deputy prime minister said.

U.S. Can `Ride Out' Libyan Oil Supply Disruption With Reserves, Obama Says

By Kate Andersen Brower and Nicholas Johnston - Feb 25, 2011 5:01 AM GMT+0000 http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-02-25/u...obama-says.html

President Barack Obama sought to assure markets and the public that the U.S. economy can withstand any disruption in Libya's oil production caused by the revolt against Muammar Qaddafi's regime.

Obama and members of his administration said the ability to tap reserves held by major economies and the capacity of other oil-producing countries to pump more crude will blunt the impact from the loss of shipments from Libya, which accounts for about 1.8 percent of global supply.

“We’ll be able to ride out the Libya situation, and it will stabilize,” Obama said yesterday as he joined the first meeting of his advisory council on jobs and competitiveness at the White House.

Crude oil retreated from the highest level in 29 months after the statements by Obama and members of his administration and assurances from Saudi Arabia and the International Energy Agency that they can compensate for any loss of Libyan production. Oil for April delivery declined 82 cents, or 0.8 percent, to settle yesterday at $97.28 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract touched $103.41, the highest intraday price since Sept. 29, 2008. Futures are up 22 percent from a year ago.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner, who also attended the advisory council meeting, said that the world’s major economies could dip into strategic reserves “in the event that we were faced with some particular risk of sustained supply disruption.”

‘Excess Capacity’

In addition, he said, “there’s a fair amount of excess capacity in parts of OPEC” that will make it less likely that the market will build up higher prices over time.

The comments by Obama and Geithner were part of a concerted effort by the administration to assuage concerns that the unrest across the Middle East and North Africa will cause the U.S. economy to stumble as the recovery from the worst recession since the Great Depression is taking hold.

Earlier in the day, Austan Goolsbee, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, said that the U.S. economy can withstand oil price increases so far.

“Anything like we have seen so far neither we nor the private sector has forecast that would derail our recovery,” Goolsbee said yesterday at a breakfast with reporters organized by the Christian Science Monitor.
Gasoline Prices

Goolsbee said that as the economy has grown more energy- efficient, fuel price increases have had less impact on economic growth than they did during the oil price shocks of the 1970s. Still, gasoline prices have risen 20 percent from a year ago to a nationwide average of $3.189 a gallon, according to Department of Energy figures.

While the cost of gasoline has “some psychological impact,” he said, consumer confidence recently has been strengthening.

“We start from a more optimistic place for 2011 than we have been in some time,” Goolsbee said.

Consumer confidence climbed last week to the highest level since April 2008 as Americans grew less pessimistic about their finances.

The Bloomberg Consumer Comfort Index, formerly the ABC News U.S. Weekly Consumer Comfort Index, was minus 39.2 in the period to Feb. 20, compared with minus 43.4 the prior week, a report yesterday showed. Forty-nine percent of those polled held positive views on their financial situation, the most in a year.
Petroleum Reserve

The rise in oil prices brought a call yesterday for Obama to consider tapping the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which holds 726.5 million barrels of crude oil in four caverns created in salt domes along the Texas and Louisiana Gulf Coasts.

In a letter to Obama, Democratic U.S. Representatives Edward Markey of Massachusetts, Rosa DeLauro of Connecticut and Peter Welch of Vermont asked the president to use the reserve to mitigate any rapid increase in prices that may hit during the summer driving season.

“Releasing even a small fraction of that oil could have a significant impact on speculation in the marketplace and on prices,” the lawmakers wrote in the letter, which was released by their offices. “It would also remind the world that the U.S. is ready, willing and able to use the SPR aggressively and effectively if needed.”

White House press secretary Jay Carney declined to directly respond to the letter.

Options Open

While the U.S. has “the capacity to act in the event of a major supply disruption,” Carney said, “I’m not going to preview what might happen if a further disruption happens and what our options are.”

In August 2008, as a candidate for president, Obama called for the government to swap light crude in the reserve for heavier oil at a time when crude oil was at more than $120 a barrel and the average retail price of gasoline was about $3.90 a gallon. He previously opposed tapping the reserve as a brake on prices. When oil peaked at $147.26 a barrel in July of that year, President George W. Bush resisted calls to release some reserves to drive down prices.

The reserve was established in a 1975 law as a buffer on supply disruptions. Oil was released for emergencies during the first Persian Gulf War in 1991 and following Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

Saudi ruler offers $36bn to stave off uprising amid warning oil price could double

The king of Saudi Arabia last night announced $36bn (£22bn) of extra benefits for his people in an attempt to stop the wave of Arab uprisings spreading to the world's biggest oil exporter, as experts warned Brent crude could hit $220 a barrel.

By Ambrose Evans-Pritchard 6:42AM GMT 24 Feb 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/finance/finance...uld-double.html

King Abdullah's support package offers to give 18m lower and middle-income Saudi's inflation-busting pay rises, unemployment benefits and affordable housing.

The cash-rich Saudi government pledged to spend a total of $400bn by the end of 2014 to improve education, health care and the kingdom's infrastructure.

Charles Robertson, an analyst at Renaissance Capital, said investors are very concerned about what might happen in Saudi Arabia's oil rich Eastern Province, the home of the kingdom's restless Shi'ite minority. The Saudis produce 11.6pc of world output, but a much higher share of exports.

"There is potential for serious tension, and not just among the Shia. High unemployment and the youth bulge means unrest could be country-wide. If Saudi Arabia or Iran are engulfed, we have a serious problem," Mr Robertson said.

The king of neighbouring Bahrain freed about 250 political prisoners and offered a dialogue with protesters in the hope of quelling unrest there.

The growing turmoil in the region led experts to warn last night that Brent crude oil prices may double from the $111 a barrel mark it peaked at yesterday if the crisis continues to spread to other Middle Eastern countries.

Nomura's commodity team said oil prices risk vaulting to uncharted highs over coming weeks if chaos hits Algeria as well, reducing global spare capacity to the wafer-thin margins seen just before the first Gulf War.

On Wednesday, Brent crude rose more than 5pc to almost $112 a barrel, threatening levels that could derail the global economy. It closed at $111.25.

"We could see $220 a barrel should both Libya and Algeria halt oil production. We could be underestimating this as speculative activiites were largely not present in 1990-1991," said Michael Lo, the bank's oil strategist.

The warning came as Italy's ENI announced a suspension of supplies through Libya's gas pipeline, and a string of foreign companies evacuated staff and shut production. Libya holds Africa's biggest oil reserves and produces 1.6m barrels a day (b/d), mostly for export to Europe.

The German driller Winthershall halted its 100,000 b/d production in Libya, while ENI stopped at a string of sites, vastly reducing its flow of 550,000 b/d. A number of producers have declared "force majeure".

Barclays Capital said 1m b/d of Libyan output is "shut in", with the other 0.6m at risk. While Saudi Arabia can step in by raising output, this takes time and its oil is not a substitute for Libya's "sweet crude".

The escalating crisis set off further falls on global bourses. Wall Street was down 1pc in early trading and the FTSE 100 fell 1.2pc. The Dow has shed more than 300 points over the past three days to 12,075.

Nomura said a shut-down in both Libya and Algeria would cut global supply by 2.9m b/d and reduce OPEC spare capacity to 2.1m b/d, comparable with levels at the onset of the Gulf War and worse than during the 2008 spike, when prices hit $147.

Both price shocks preceeded – or triggered – a recession in Europe and the US. Fatih Birol, chief economist for the International Energy Agency, said the latest price rise had already become a "serious risk" for the fragile economies of the OECD bloc.

Some analysts fear the underlying picture is worse that officially recognised, doubting Saudi claims of ample spare capacity. A Wikileaks cable cited comments by a geologist for the Saudi oil giant Aramco that the kingdom's reserves had been overstated by 40pc. A second cable cited US diplomats asking whether the Saudis "any longer have the power to drive prices down for a prolonged period".

Nomura's report, which does not examine the catastrophic scenario of a full-blown Gulf crisis, said past oil shocks have shown a three-stage pattern, with a final blow-off in prices in the final phase. The current crisis is at stage one.

Surging oil prices create a nasty dilemma for central banks since they are inflationary if caused by robust global growth, but deflationary if caused by a supply crunch that acts as a tax on consuming nations. The big oil exporters tend to save extra revenues from price spikes at first, so the initial effect is to drain global demand.

The current picture contains elements of both, with an added twist of liquidity created by the US Federal Reserve that is leaking into the global system and playing havoc with commodity pricing.

US Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner said on Wednesday that the world economy is stong enough to "handle" the oil shock, insisting that central banks "have a lot of experience in managing these things".

The European Central Bank (ECB) responded to the oil spike in July 2008 by raising rates even though Germany and Italy were in recession by then. Nout Wellink, the ECB's Dutch governor, said this had been a policy error.

Circumstances are different this time yet also murky. ECB chief Jean-Claude Trichet signalled last month that the bank will "look through" the short-term price hump, but ECB rhetoric has since turned more hawkish. Fed doves will undoubtedly give more weight to the deflationary risks.

Jeremy Leggett, a leader of the UK industry task force on peak oil and energy security, said the Mid-East crisis "shows the extreme fragility of the global system. People don't realise how close we are to a potential precipice if this unrest reaches critical mass in enough OPEC countries. Governments need to draw up emergency plans and get cracking on proactive measures while we still have time," he said.

Gunmen mount bomb attack on Iraq's largest oil refinery

Beiji refinery is among two to be shut down on the same day after fire at smaller refinery in Iraq's south guardian.co.uk, Saturday 26 February 2011 16.50 GMT

http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2011/feb/2...aq-oil-refinery

Gunmen attacked Iraq's largest oil refinery before dawn, killing a guard and detonating bombs that sparked a fire and forced the facility to halt operations, officials said.

A few hours later, a small refinery in the south shut down after a technical failure sparked a fire in a storage unit, an official said.

If not fixed swiftly, the two shutdowns could translate into long lines at fuel stations and longer electricity outages. The dearth of reliable electricity – some Iraqis get just a few hours a day – was one of the leading complaints of protesters during violent anti-government demonstrations across Iraq yesterday.

The attack on Iraq's largest refinery, Beiji, began at about 3.30am. Assailants carrying pistols fitted with silencers attacked guards and planted bombs near some production units for benzene and kerosene, said the spokesman for Salahuddin province, Mohammed al-Asi. One guard was killed and another wounded, al-Asi said.

Iraqi oil ministry spokesman Assem Jihad said an investigation would be launched and that he hoped operations could resume shortly.

The Beiji refinery, located about 155 miles (250km) north of Baghdad, has two sections. The attackers targeted the installation's North Refinery, which handles 150,000 barrels a day. The second section, the Salahuddin Refinery, is under renovation. It used to process 70,000 barrels per day.

At the height of the insurgency from 2004 to late 2007, the Beiji refinery was under control of Sunni militants who used to siphon off crude and petroleum products to finance their operations.

Hours after the Beiji facility was attacked, a small refinery in Samawa, a city on the Euphrates River about 230 miles (370km) south-east of Baghdad, went offline due to a fire in the storage unit, according to a local official.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the fire was caused by a technical failure, not foul play. He would not say when work would resume at the plant, which has the capacity of 30,000 barrels of a day.

Iraq's overall refining capacity is currently slightly more than 500,000 barrels per day. Its three main oil refineries – Dora, Shuaiba and Beiji – process slightly more than half of the 700,000 barrels-per-day capacity they had before the 2003 US invasion.

Iraq sits on the world's third-largest known oil reserves with an estimated 115bn barrels, but its production is far below its potential due to decades of war, UN sanctions, lack of foreign investment and insurgent attacks.

Iraq has been importing refined products since 2003 because of the dilapidated refining sector and booming local demand.

The closures could spell trouble for Iraqi consumers, especially at a time when the weather is just beginning to warm and more citizens will be relying on their air conditioning.

Also today, health officials and police said two teens, ages 12 and 18, died of injuries sustained in the anti-government protests, bringing the death toll for the day to 14.

On Friday, thousands marched on government buildings and clashed with security forces in cities across Iraq in an outpouring of anger, the largest and most violent anti-government protests in the country since political unrest began spreading in the Arab world weeks ago.

The protests, billed as a Day of Rage, were fueled by anger over corruption, chronic unemployment and shoddy public services from the Shiite-dominated government.

LIBYAN PROTESTS - FEARS CRISIS WILL HIT OIL-RICH SAUDI ARABIA

Saudi Arabia currently produces one in every four of the world's oil barrels

Saturday February 26,2011
By Mark Reynolds
http://express.co.uk/posts/view/231278/Lib...ch-Saudi-Arabia

OIL prices continued to rise yesterday amid fears that the unrest in Libya could spread to Saudi Arabia – completely crippling world supplies.

With the knock-on effects likely to be seen in rising petrol prices in the UK as soon as next week, analysts warned that a shifting of the violence to Saudi Arabia could be disastrous.

Saudi Arabia currently produces one in every four of the world's oil barrels.

Adam Sieminski, chief energy economist with Deutsche Bank summed up the growing concerns of many economists. He said: "The big fear is that the unrest will spread to other major producing countries such as Algeria, or God forbid, Saudi Arabia." Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has unveiled a £22billion welfare package to stave off protests.

But leading intellectuals in the country warned that such grand financial gestures were no substitute for meaningful political reform and called on the royal family to learn from recent uprisings in the Gulf and North Africa.

They also urged him to start listening to the voices of the kingdom's young people, some of whom are planning a "day of rage" on March 11.

Saudi Arabia currently produces one in every four of the world's oil barrels

Unlike in other Gulf states, some of which boast close to full employment, 40 per cent of 20 to 24-year-old Saudis are out of work.

Lawmakers urge Obama to release emergency oil

By Tom Doggett
WASHINGTON | Thu Feb 24, 2011 4:28pm EST
http://www.reuters.com/article/2011/02/24/...24?pageNumber=2

(Reuters) - Three U.S. lawmakers on Thursday urged President Barack Obama to consider tapping America's emergency oil supply to help lower crude prices that have spiked above $100 a barrel over disruptions in Libya.

The International Energy Agency, which coordinates policy among the world's consumer nations, has said it would likely let OPEC move first to address any supply shortages. But the call by the Democratic Representatives suggests pressure is starting to build for Obama to get more involved.

The lawmakers wrote in a letter that releasing oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve would help prevent the kind of runaway increase in oil prices that occurred in the summer of 2008, when crude reached a record $147 a barrel and gasoline hit an all-time high of $4.11 a gallon.

"We therefore urge you to consider leveraging the SPR to respond to these supply disruptions and combat the rapid price escalations resulting from rampant speculation in the oil markets," the lawmakers said in their letter to Obama.

The lawmakers did not recommend how much oil to release, but said pulling out even "a small fraction...could have a significant impact on speculation in the marketplace and on prices."

The letter was signed by Representatives Ed Markey, a relatively influential lawmaker who ran the House's erstwhile committee on climate change and energy independence, plus Rosa DeLauro and Peter Welch, all Democrats from Northeast states.

U.S. law allows the president to order the government to tap the reserve during a national energy supply shortage that raises petroleum prices and could damage the economy.

U.S. oil prices on Thursday touched $103.41 a barrel, the highest since September 2008, before settling at $97.28. Retail gasoline prices hit a national average of $3.19 a gallon this week, the highest pump price in nearly 2-1/2 years.

White House spokesman Jay Carney, asked about the lawmakers' request, declined to preview options to deal with lost Libyan oil exports and high petroleum prices.

"We have the capacity to act in case of a major supply disruption," said Carney. He added the United States was speaking with the International Energy Agency and major oil producing countries about oil supplies and prices.

Obama, in his campaign for president in 2008, said he would use the reserve to bring down high oil prices at the time.

The U.S. Department of Energy has released SPR stocks a handful of times -- most recently when Hurricane Katrina knocked out Gulf Coast refineries in 2005. DOE has generally said it would only dip into the 727 million barrel oil caverns in the event of a severe supply disruption.

While Libya's 1.3 million barrels per day (bpd) of oil exports is meaningful for the global oil market, the United States imports only about 77,000 bpd from Libya, around 0.4 percent of U.S. consumption. Saudi Arabia has already begun speaking to European refiners who buy most of Libya's oil.

The administration could have an impact on prices even if it said it was thinking about tapping the reserve, they said.

"Signaling your intent to consider selling oil from the SPR in the near term would send a strong signal to oil markets responding to the unrest in the Middle East," the lawmakers said.

They said releasing reserve oil has a proven record of driving down oil and gasoline prices.

They pointed out that when oil was released from the stockpile after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, oil prices immediately fell by more than 33 percent.

Oil prices fell by 9 percent when the reserve was tapped in 2005 following Hurricane Katrina.

The reserve was created by Congress in the mid 1970s after the Arab oil embargo and stores emergency supplies at four sites in Texas and Louisiana.

QUOTE

Lyrics:

Now that we've reached the new millennium

Let's stop a while and re-adjust our minds

Cause this oppression has gone on to• long

World leaders are brain washing all mankind

Unveil the mystery of iniquity

Religion's been the backbone of our strife

When you go back into history

False prophet's have misguided our lives, Hey!

Find some way, There must be a way, Let's do it today

Find some way, There must be away, Let's do it today

Stop them break these invisible chain

As we go down the systems avenue

Of corridors with• horrors and loud screams

When you cross over to the other side

You realize that life's not what it seems

That's the work of Illuminati

That's made a plan for you to run that course

But never bow down to the Antichrist

Beware 666 behold• a pale horse, yes I know

Find some way, There must be a way, Let's do it today

Find some way, There must be away, Let's do it today

Stop them break these invisible chains

That control us

That control us yes

There must be a way

Let's do it today

There must be a way

Make no delay

There must be,• there must be

There must be, there must be a way I say heh heh yes!

Codex Alimentarius - 89 min - Jun 22, 2008

In the words of the National Health Federation[i], the aims and objectives of Codex Alimentarius are as follows: * Only low-potency, “me too” supplements available that will do nothing for your health. * All or most foods genetically-modified. * Beneficial supplements unavailable or sold by prescription only. For many people, this agenda is so outrageous, they cannot believe such goals are achievable; yet this may well be the reality as soon as 31st December 2009, if the Codex Alimentarius Commission continues to disregard input from those who offer a counter perspective to the combined forces of Big Farmer & Big Pharma.

Interesting video, seems that those pig$'in'power can't be stopped...

About the "Codex"... they can only do that in mayor cities of some countries, and stop counting: it is impossible to achieve that at a global scale, there are too many people in the world growing natural foods and wanting to eat natural!

I admit there are lot's of genetically modified seeds sold over the world, to "feed" those who have no natural food sources.
People eating natural, have nearly no diseases, and no supplements are needed.
The "Codex Alimentarius" can only affect those people of the world that depend upon a supermarket to eat (and they are hundreds of millions..., that is money for the "mafias")

Is it right my view of this "Codex Alimentarius" cycle:
"Big farmer" => Supermarkets (mostly unnatural foods) => Diseases => Medical mafia => "Big pharma"?

If people (can) get out of the system and plant the seeds their grandfathers grew, they'll be free from that cycle. (If they can't... diseases and death).

Greetings from Spain!

craig-oxley - October 13, 2008 11:40 PM (GMT)

This is why Dr John Christopher made sure people knew how to grow and gather herbs. He knew before what would come from the Maltese Medical Inquisition. My God they'd imprisoned him enough for curing Cancer and more. Learn fast folks or else these inquisitioners will destory you.

People scare everyone about sugar but the health of people prior to sweeteners was much better today and less fat. White sugar is• used by Chinese doctors depending on your needs and the Chinese use a lot of red Sugar and nutritional dense sugars. I do agree that processed sugar isn't something you want to be taking in typical Westerner fashion and remember its very stimulating to the Spleen this is why you can't do weights etc straight after consuming sugar as the Spleen controls the muscles

Caffeine causes destruction of the adrenal/kidney glands by stripping all your reserve energy leaving you eventually with adrenal fatigue. If this is your problem then you will• need herbal medicine made up of adaptogens suitable for whatever health environment your body has at the time.

In Chinese Traditional Medicine you will find they love animal fats as long as they're all in balance or buffered with correct foods and herbs. In the Chinese system they adore eggs especially from the Duck but they also highly regard Chicken eggs for health. They adore Duck and Chicken meat for health. Note how Chicken• helps increase the essence of your Kidney which is very important.

Absolutely correct about how important animal fats really are for the body and the likes of Coconut oil. We need saturated• fats not rancid vegetable oils which kill the Spleen and Kidneys leading to weight gain and thyroid destruction. This feeds The Worshipful Company of Apothecaries and The Worshipful Company of Barbers.

Smoking is not the problem its the chemicals added to the in-organic tobacco which is the problem. Yes nicotine is addictive no doubt about it but tobacco can if taken in balance have an aid on the body as well. Now for those who understand nicotine they will know that its one of the most powerful anti-inflammatory herbs in the World and certainly can• help fight real cytokine storm pandemics. Also remember the herbs Boldo and Boneset also work well against the cytokine storm.

Please remember how its The Worshipful Company of Apothecaries along with The Worshipful Company of Barbers who control the Medical system Worldwide for the Crown and all are controlled by the Grand• Priory of England based at St John's Wood, England. This Maltese rule of the Crown has been so since the 14th Century taking over from the Templars before them who controlled it since 1215 when the Magna Carta came forth with King John of England.

When people eat butter this must be from organic cows and it must come from GRASS fed cows so you have the added Vitamin K2. Butter from grain fed cows is not the same thing at all. You want the cattle outside and in the Sun to aid the Vitamin D content of their• byproducts. For your brain you need Omega 3 but ideally the DHA version coming from fermented Cod Liver Oil.Walnuts and Flax Seeds are good for people stupid to be on a Vegan diet.Walnuts not only help your brain they also aid Kidneys

I talked about the Adrenal glands in the first part. Hypoglycemia is an adrenal dysfunction and may I advise you that the adrenals need feeding every four hours and once of the very best adaptogens• is Licorice root if you can take it. Three of the best adaptogens are Withania somnifera, Gotu Kola and Siberian Ginseng.

It is true that taking processed sugars lowers your• immunity and remember it all goes again back to the Spleen which controls your immune system.

Carbohydrates also create fat especially if you do not burn off excess that left after a fuelling. You should fuel your body with saturated fats and this is the proper fuel where you won't put on weight. Remember weight comes from Spleen damage at the core so if you keep• your Spleen working you will be fine but all foods must be in balance following the Traditional Chinese Medicine system.

Your digestion is controlled• by the Spleen and therefore foods for this organ are very important. Therefore you want to consume a balance of Yellow and Sweet foods to aid this area. Foods like Jujube (Ziziphus) dates and Eggs etc along with herbs like Astragalus and Hoelen.

Cod Liver Oil is excellent if its a quality fermented product with the correct ratio of Vitamin A to D at ratios between 10:1 and 5:1. This really feeds your brain and has no problems with mercury which they love to scare you about. Mercury is water soluble and no threat to Livers.

I looked at a packed of salted peanuts and guess what was in them? Vegetable oil that rancid poison wrecking everyones Spleen, Thyroid and Digestive function. Why do they need to put vegetable oil in salted peanuts?

TheUnhivedMind - March 21, 2011 12:50 AM (GMT)

This guy is too much like a doctor with his part tunnel vision mind and followings. First of all there is no hiv virus even if believes there is or not. Yes people with AIDS will have various viruses and bacterial infections but not a hiv virus. Whats the reason we have bacteria and viruses attacks like this? Filth! Wake the hell up people its all filth mostly from damaged Spleen function. Do you think this man is repairing the Spleen function? No! All he's doing is relying on is his coating in bringing an immune response. Theres no making sure the filth is removed or that the immune system is heightened to 100% functioning as God intended. He looks to see what your weakened immune system can actually utilize at the moment then just puts that into the body. Did he strengthen your immune system? No! Did he correct your Spleen and Kidney function at the heart of your Bone Marrow function providing immunity? No!

Lets take a homosexual who's doing various chemical drugs including natural cocaine but laced with bleach etc. This homosexual uses his mouth against mens anuses on a regular basis, has very little sleep and also not much within the true biological clock of the body. He's breaking down his system daily. Remember all the rampant sex he's having multiple times per week and at one session at a time. His Kidney essence is depleting rapidly which is having a negative pull on his Spleen and Liver function for starters.

What does this do? Lowers immunity, blood cleansing and makes you vulnerable to bacterial and viral attack. Now since his anus antics with his mouth have being going on he will most likely have a stomach full of parasites. Do you people see where I'm going with this?

This man is in a way no different from Dr. Simoncini with his Sodium Bicarbonate treatment. They both do not go to the real cause even though they believe they are. If your Spleen is functioning your immune system will be functioning and your internal filth level will be lower especially with correct balances of mucus producing foods. The Pancreas is very important against Cancer and if its working correctly you don't need to have coating injected into the system. The Pancreas produces all the natural proteolytic enzymes for breaking the coating and exposing the positive polarity problem for the negative charged immune system response attack. What controls the Pancreas function? Its once again the Spleen. Why do you think when you have an accident and they remove your Spleen they fear you catching infections? Make the connection please. So I agree with him on certain issues and his work is of some importance but he's too cocky as if he's a God of the Cancer reversing process whilst attacking methods that do work and in fact work better if you understand what I've explained so far.

These doctors and the normal minded populace want quick easy way out options like a vaccine. They don't want to put the effort in to clear the toxin which bought about the problem. Think about it, if he's correct about the lifespan of a cell via stimulation then whats going to happen to the next cell which probably is almost in the same condition as the last one which had Cancer? Its the same thus soon enough that toxin will stimulate this new cell and you'll be back to square one. So in truth whats the real answer? Is it correct the Spleen? Well yeah of course but if its a stimulation issue then having a good Spleen won't always help either will it? Well this would then come to the Liver as the great detoxifier that it really is as just one way of keeping the body clean and rid of poisons along with a working colon system for removal of poisons. This is where Ozone has its usages against Cancer via the oxidisation process which is a cleanser. You need to make sure you're not putting poison into the body in the first place. In todays World this is almost impossible so you're left with having to make sure that the Liver, Kidney and Spleen function is tip top which would also include addressing Lung and Heart functioning.

If someone wishes to use his products and information feel free but make sure during or after that you cleanse up your body and lifestyle whilst feeding the organs you should be with the correct nutritious foods specifically for your problems. May I finally remind you that breaking the hermetic seal (inoculation) of the body is not natural and was never meant to happen and neither is taking an x-ray even if its to check up on a Cancer treatment. Why would we want to lower the lifespans of those cells further?

The Story of Dr Sam

The Truth Will Set You Free

http://www.mnwelldir.org/docs/cancer1/sam.htm

We're not very big on the so-called "conspiracy" theories surrounding the suppression of medical breakthroughs. Conspiracies, by their very nature, are impossible to prove. Rather than run the illusive gamut of trying to prove that this group did this for that reason or that group did that for this reason, let us begin at a point of no contention at all.

I think we can all agree that modern medicine in these United States is a profit driven force. If we don't get sick, medicine doesn't make money. The head of the largest HMO is America once compared a hospital to a whorehouse: "You don't make money unless the beds are full."

It's all about money. Can there be any doubts? "The oil lobby, perhaps the most powerful lobby on earth, is almost matched by hospital owners and doctors." U.S. President Jimmy Carter (June 8th, 1979).

We've already pointed out the Pharmaceutical Industry's interests in health care. If you haven't seen this article, just click here. And for a complete history of how modern medicine has become a rich monopoly, see this: Health Care for Dummies.

So let me tell you about a cure for cancer and, sadly, how the entrenched medical forces tried to suppress it. First we want to distinguish between curing and healing. A cure gets rid of the problem, usually done by a doctor or health care provider, whereas healing means getting rid of the problem by going to the root cause and eradicating it. Healing takes place within the individual, because of the individual and her/his efforts to change his/her life and lifestyle. Cures come from someone outside the individual. This is the story of a cure.

In the Beginning....

A young boy in Australia watched his father die slowly from multiple myeloma, a terrible form of cancer that does not respond to chemotherapy or radiation. With every new medicine hope grew and grew until it just ran out as his father got sicker and sicker. This bright young teen felt driven by his father's suffering. The news was filled with breakthroughs in cancer, but still his father lay dying a horribly painful death as his bones began to crush under the weight of his body. Sam Chachoua felt his calling. He would be a doctor, despite the limitations of modern medicine he had witnessed in those painful years. However, because of those same limitations, Sam decided early on that the secret lay elsewhere, way beyond the toxic chemicals and radiation that, to him, either killed or cured, and sometimes left the patient worse off than the disease itself.

He began to question the way in which modern medicine looked at cancer. He began to investigate the phenomenon of "spontaneous remission," why in some people the cancer just went away and why some organs seem to fight off cancers better than others do. He was driven not by fame and fortune, but by the memory of his father. He would find a way to cure cancer and end suffering.

At the age of eighteen, Sam Chachoua (pronounced Cha-CHOO-wa) presented an original paper on cancer before the Clinical Oncology Society of Australia. He was the youngest presenter ever. He graduated from medical school with honors and as his research into cures for cancer took off, he developed some very effective therapies against a host of ailments using non-toxic medicines. Dr Chachoua believed firmly in the first law of medicine: Do no harm. It made no sense to him to stress the body or disrupt the immune system in an attempt to cure a disorder. This thinking remained the foundation of his cancer research.

While focusing on those factors that trigger spontaneous remission, Dr Chachoua developed sera (the plural of serum), extracts, and vaccines. He recognized that in cancer, as well as in AIDS, the immune system has trouble recognizing diseased tissue. Cancer has a real stubborn habit of hiding from the immune system. In metastases, cancer cells bond with fibrin (the clotting agent in the blood) and travels throughout the body unrecognized by the immune system. Dr Chachoua also studied the immune response; the various triggers in the body once it spots an invader like a cold or flu virus. He theorized that if he could "tag" a cancer cell with a cold or flu virus, the cancer would no longer be able to hide from the immune system, and would light up like a Hollywood movie premiere.

Chachoua's sera consisted of concentrated genetic materials that could tag cancer cells (or cells infected with AIDS, damaged heart cells, and even damaged brain cells in Alzheimer's patients). With healthy cells, foreign genetic materials will be attacked and destroyed if they attempt to infiltrate. However, diseased cells do not have this response. Additionally, Dr Chachoua studied autoimmune diseases (such as lupus and rheumatoid arthritis) realizing that this response held therapeutic potential, as patients suffering from these diseases could provide him with cultures that could save the lives of others. Patients with lupus lack enzymes to digest invaders, so the immune system compensates with a very unique response that enters cells for correction or defense. Dr Chachoua borrowed his theories from the wisdom of the body itself. Today, his Induced Remission Therapy (IRT) has no equal in the annals of medicine. The effectiveness of his sera and vaccines is unequaled and for those who are terrified at the prospects of an AIDS vaccine passing on the AIDS virus, Dr Chachoua's vaccines consist of healthy cells, not diseased cells. There is no cancer in his cancer vaccine; there is no HIV, no virus, dead or alive, in his AIDS vaccine.

Dr Chachoua's sera and vaccines have been tested. They've proven to be more effective than anything else in history. His cancer serum has been proven to be 85% effective against cancers while his AIDS serum is 99% effective in putting AIDS into remission for six months to upwards of three years. These figures beg the question, "Why haven't we heard of Dr Chachoua?"

Those of us who have heard of Dr Chachoua in the past probably didn't hear of him in a good light. Quackwatch, a web site dedicated to promoting the hard lined AMA/ Pharmaceutical Company interests, calls Chachoua a confirmed quack and crybaby suing everyone for his failures. The news media has, on numerous occasions, called him a quack and a charlatan, at times resorting to claims that he's never had any medical training. That is, up until August, 2001, when NBC news headlined this story: THE MOST EFFECTIVE TREATMENT FOR AIDS AND CANCER IN HISTORY.

What caused this change? Very simply, Dr Chachoua sued his detractors in court and won a 10 million dollar settlement. When you win, even NBC, the network that has lied to us about vitamins and minerals, about the dangers of organic foods, about the efficacy of alternative practices, even they had to finally tell us the truth after he took his detractors to court and won.

Modern Medicine: Welcome to the obstacle course!

Dr Chachoua developed his theories, his sera, and his vaccines on his own. Not affiliated with a large university or backed by a pharmaceutical company, he's not found an easy path. His papers went unpublished. His work went ignored. To prove his theories, he's traveled the world over giving lectures, curing patients with cancer, heart disease, AIDS, and Alzheimer's. He offered anyone willing to prove or disprove his theories an unprecedented half a million dollars. It looked like no one would take up his offer until he connected up with Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. They designed a program to test IRT, but Chachoua would have to turn over all his research and all his sera holding back nothing. Chachoua, thinking that they were seriously interested, did just that.

Early results were spectacular as Cedars reported a 99% cure and claimed to have discovered in Chachoua's IRT an "exciting new world of therapeutic opportunity!"

Then Dr Chachoua's world began to systematically fall apart. Some people, former acquaintances and associates of Chachoua's and supporters who he had cured using his IRT, opened a clinic in Mexico claiming to be affiliated with the good doctor. They showed videos of his speaking engagements and sold vials of water at exorbitant prices to people seeking cures. People died, fingers were pointed, and a scandal grew. Chachoua quickly had the clinics closed, but then they'd quickly open under another name. He even went to Mexico to personally put a stop to these charlatans when he was arrested. He could not prove he was a real medical doctor (who carries their diploma with them) and the Mexican authorities had been bribed by the charlatans to lock him away.

This was just the excuse Cedars-Sinai Medical Center needed. They denied ever having any relationship with him, issued press releases stating this, and denied ever testing his sera and vaccines.

Instead of giving Dr Chachoua credit for his research, one of the principle investigators who had tested Chachoua's vaccines, wrote and published a paper on the possibilities of curing cancer and AIDS with sera from people with autoimmune disease.

We could go on, telling you how much grief Dr Chachoua had to endure. Let's face it, Chachoua's association with Cedars-Sinai Medical Center began in 1996. The trial ended in August of 2000. That's four full years of abuse, and at the trial one witness even exclaimed that Cedars had committed "premeditated manslaughter" because of the number of lives lost to AIDS alone during this 4 year struggle.

Chachoua endured hell during this time from physical attacks to threats on his life, and the entire medical profession was all over him like fleas on a Tennessee hound dog. The 10 million dollar verdict is nothing compared to the loss of life during this period, or the loss of dignity of this human being whose only desire was to cure the sick. But it was enough to get NBC to finally tell the truth about an alternative cure for cancer.

The trial was exciting, though. Every time Cedars made a claim, a letter was brought out to prove them to be liars. We never tested it: poof, a letter showing the results. They never tested toxicity: poof, a letter showing they could not explain how the sera were so nontoxic and yet they powerfully inhibited the HIV virus. The final blow came when a person suffering from AIDS was called to testify.

Cedars never returned Dr Chachoua's sera. The good doctor was bankrupt. He could not possibly make more of his vaccines, but he did have one dose of his most powerful vaccine left; something he'd held back from Cedars. This last remaining dose just might have achieved more for humanity than any other medicine in history.

Michael arrived to testify. He'd been taking conventional protease inhibitors, the drug cocktail promoted by Cedars for years as everything but the cure. His T-cell count had deteriorated to 124 as the virus took hold of him. However, when asked how he felt, he responded "Exceptionally well." When asked why he felt well, he told the jury that he'd had a dose of Dr Chachoua's vaccine the previous day and that his immune function had doubled (T-cells rising to over 200). In other words, he had gone from full-blown AIDS to remission in one day.

When asked by Chachoua's attorney, "And how do you know that your immune system doubled?" he responded that he'd had several blood tests taken. Where? "Cedars-Sinai Medical Center," replied Michael.

The verdict was unanimous.

Induced Remission Therapy

Ten million bucks is nothing in a world of medicine controlled by a multi-billion dollar cartel we know as the Pharmaceutical Industry.

We focused on AIDS above in our description of the trial, but Chachoua's own research has shown his sera to be just as effective on cancer, heart disease (growing back diseased tissues modern medicine claims is impossible to re-grow), and Alzheimer's (growing back brain cells).

Now that the truth is out, you can expect more and more news releases on "genetic" cures for cancer to be in the headlines. The race is on. Everyone wants to beat Dr Chachoua to the punch. The big players, cancer institutes, pharmaceutical industries, major university medical schools all want to beat Dr Chachoua at the game of curing cancer. No more wasted money. For years every donation to some cancer organization put some researcher's kid, some doctor's kid, some association president's kid through college while cancer patients suffered and died at the same rates since WWII. We've been lied to, beaten up, and buried. But now, with a cancer cure recognized by a jury of twelve and announced by NBC news, the cure will have to come. Right?

Only one hurdle stands in front of Dr Chachoua: the FDA. Now, if we'd all written our representatives in Congress and in the Senate, this step might not be necessary. The FDA must approve a drug based upon effectiveness. Yes, they check safety, but to be approved it has to work, and that costs money and takes time. To prove it's safe is relatively easy and cheap. Had we all written our representatives asking them to pass the Health Freedom act, which would allow us to use any medicine (even unproven) as long as it has proven itself to be safe, we'd all have access to Induced Remission Therapy. But we don't. Yet.

Click here for an article on Induced Remission Therapy [sorry, it's still being written].

Update on Dr Chachoua — September 2001

The judge reversed himself on a technicality and awarded Dr Chachoua his original investment of eleven thousand dollars. This means that Dr Chachoua is bankrupt. After battling the system for ten years, Dr Chachoua wins the battle but loses the war. He is so broke he cannot even purchase the organisms he needs to create his cures.

Dr Chachoua's organization came to us recently asking for help. They discovered this article and were very impressed at our reporting. They had hoped we could help them get a study going here in America. I am doing my damndest, making phone calls, writing letters, etc., but we here at the International Wellness Directory are mere volunteers and we have little pull in the world of medicine.

Dr Chachoua wants to do a study on heart disease or AIDS. He refuses to touch cancer anymore because the Cancer Industry is just too powerful. Isn't that wonderful. The Cancer Industry, after searching for a cure for some 40 years spending/earning some gazillion dollars for their struggle, have finally had their first major victory: they have suppressed a cancer cure that would have put them out of business. They've finally guaranteed the deaths of hundreds of thousands of individuals. They can do all this, and still show a profit. Ahhh, ya gotta love em.

Dr Chachoua will do anything to get a study going. His organization has contacted hundreds of AIDS organizations, but since they are funded by our government, no one wants to help him with a study, even though he proved in a court of law that he can put AIDS into remission. Our government just doesn't want to cure AIDS yet; there are just too many undesirables out there with the bug.

What I see happening is Dr Chachoua will go to Africa or Asia where they do want to cure AIDS because it is a rampant epidemic. Or, Dr Chachoua will die and his therapy will die with him.

Because he is working at a genetic level, here is what his therapies can do:
Reverse AIDS for a period of six months to a year (though Michael, mentioned above, went six years before his illness returned).
Reverse cardiac myopathy (dead tissue is replaced with healthy tissue) and scar tissue in the heart.
Reverse atherosclerosis without surgery.
Repair a heart valve without surgery.
Reverse nearly all forms of cancer (especially the deadliest ones).

If anyone out there has any idea where Dr Chachoua can get a study done, please contact us at 763-689-9355. Perhaps you know a rich person who is dying of one of the above maladies? This is what it's going to take. It is going to take money. Hell, look how much we've spent already and gotten what in return? The Poison of the Month Club. Buy 12 poisons for a penny each and just one more poison at regular rates, and if it works, fine, if it doesn't, too bad.

Update on Dr Chachoua — November 2001

Dr Sam has been taking a beating by our judicial system. He's out of money and cannot afford to fight back. So, he's losing. We all know in America that justice goes to whoever can afford it. So with his health failing, the courts reversing practically everything so that they've left the door open so his detractors may now sue him, and his detractors slandering his name all over the country, Dr Sam is not finding many supporters. Ever web sites that once spoke highly of him are suddenly silent. Most have disappeared.

The good new is this: because of you and us together, we have found three (possibly) four locations that might be able to help Dr Sam test his therapy. He will probably be leaving America. Africa sure can use him, seeing how people are dying by the thousands with AIDS.

Update on Dr Chachoua — June 2005

Dr San Chachoua is in good health and is away researching another theory he's come up with. However, his therapies for HIV/AIDS, Heart Disease, and Cancer are now available. All you need is a physician willing to administer it.

The price is APPROXIMATELY $10,000.00 per therapy. Each therapy is administered in seven injections over a 15 day period. People with cardiovascular disease report that they begin to feel better within minutes of the first injections.

Dr Sam is willing to work with your physician. If you wish to have Dr Sam contact you, write to us: info@mnwelldir.org.

A Victory for Life and Truth - Dr. Sam Chachoua

http://www.pinoyexchange.com/forums/showthread.php?t=399044

This a well documented article that never got headlines in major dailies thru out the world, is once again proof of BIG PHARMA, on suppressing the Truth on Alternative treatments to cancer/HIV Aids, which they saw as a threat to their industry in a profit driven field of Medicine (big pharma never want a cure to every diseases)... In the Philippines 2009 projected sales of BIG PHARMA is P123BILLION and they are practically controlling our healthcares since day 1 till we die. My friends when will we wake up?

Dr. Sam Chachoua defeats Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in an American Federal Court. The jury awarded this Australian doctor over $10,000,000 in damages after hearing of the conspiracy to suppress and destroy him and his new field of medicine described as promising to be "THE MOST EFFECTIVE THERAPY AGAINST CANCER AND AIDS IN HISTORY." NBC NEWS (AUGUST, 2000)

The Verdict
August 11, 2000
After eight days of trial and two days of jury deliberation, a milestone in legal justice was achieved. The people spoke in a Los Angeles federal court and their voice rocked a system that had thought itself invincible.

For days, the panel of eight had heard of suppression of a new technology against AIDS, cancer, heart disease and other terminal illnesses. They heard and saw remarkable successes: individuals who had struggled in the face of death and reclaimed their life and well being. The eight-member jury witnessed the incredible results of testing at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

Thirty-six vaccines were presented, almost all of which were more than 99% effective against AIDS. It is a new promise that offered both prevention and treatment of this modern plague -- an answer to so many prayers and dreams. Then suddenly there was public denial and suppression by the very institute that had achieved these incredible results. Massive attacks were launched to destroy the inventor both physically and in the press and a cover up was begun to deny mankind of what Cedars itself had once described as an "exciting new world of therapeutic opportunity!"

Hope was stolen and dreams were shattered. Cedars-Sinai had refused to acknowledge their own results and failed to return the original prime source material to the inventor so that his work could continue. They further engaged in activities to discredit him and destroy his reputation in a campaign that spanned the globe and severely limited his ability to continue or even publish his work.

The number of lives affected and the number of lives lost to AIDS alone during this four year struggle moved one witness to exclaim that Cedars had committed "premeditated manslaughter." A ten million-dollar verdict suggests that the jury agreed.

The Struggle
Major institutes can be an overwhelming force for good when they function as they are intended to. The same power, wielded for evil and deceit, can destroy a researcher, deny his patients continued therapy and keep real hope from the masses.

For years, Dr. Chachoua lived under a constant barrage of slander and denial that had tainted his credibility and would have destroyed any lesser man. Cedars-Sinai Medical Center had not only refused to return his sera and cultures, they denied ever having any relationship with him. They issued press releases denying any association with him and therefore labeling their own results as fake.

All avenues and agencies that could damage this man were explored at a time when he was pleading with them to continue the work so that mankind would benefit. Cedars allied themselves with a group that was claiming to be providing his vaccines to the public but selling tap water instead, to victims at its Mexican clinic and throughout the United States. Dr. Chachoua had been battling this group, legally, yet the group was not above gross lies, vulgar slander, and bribery of officials and attempted murder.

The writer does not wish to extend the fifteen minutes of fame these maggots have already enjoyed, so he will not refer to them by name but he has seen a videotape where they lament that attempts on Dr. Chachoua's life had so far failed.

Cedars took the 'high ground' -- a simple liaison with UCLA to deny any relationship with Dr. Chachoua and labeling him a charlatan. Their attacks always appeared through official, political and media channels. Even an assemblyman was recruited on their behalf to influence the plaintiff's former attorneys to drop the lawsuit against Cedars-Sinai. The associates that they supported with press releases and confidential documents regarding Dr. Chachoua and those they sought out in written correspondence to help them with the Chachoua problem were not limited to any civilized tactics.

Dr. Chachoua endured physical attacks and fell victim to corrupted lawyers and government officials. Documents were forged to implicate him in deception; Mexican immigration officials were paid to detain him and threaten him. A media frenzy started by and based on the denial of his existence in any capacity by Cedars-Sinai, denounced him as a charlatan and gave voice to associates who defamed him with lies and vulgar slander.

Each situation was met and defeated by the young doctor. He would not allow a Mexican clinic to lure victims by using his name in their advertisements so he fought them into bankruptcy. The lawyer who provided him with documents faked at the request of his adversaries is now looking at jail time. An entire delegation of immigration officials in Mexico was removed from office after being found guilty of violating his human rights. They now face criminal action. Even faced with the medical monoliths Cedars-Sinai and UCLA, Dr. Chachoua would not back down. "It is not just for my own life that I am fighting," he explained.

What is it that fueled this man? How could he triumph against a system so stacked against him? What were his motivations and how did he generate the power and determination to bring establishment to its knees?

To better understand this modern day David and Goliath saga one must return many years in the past.

The Beginning
As a young boy, Sam Chachoua realized the limitations of modern medicine in a cruel manner that we all are familiar with. His father was diagnosed with multiple myeloma, a cancer of the bone marrow. The disease progressed over several years, resisting chemotherapy and radiation. With every new drug that was tried, hope would be raised only to be rapidly shattered as the cancer progressed relentlessly.

Even in the seventies, cancer breakthroughs were announced almost on a weekly basis. How then could this great industry of medical science prove so impotent in the treatment of cancer? How could a young teenager fathom, let alone compete with conventional modes of cancer therapy? He was smart enough to know that he could not and that his work would have to involve avenues never before explored. He looked for signs of promise from natural phenomena and situations -- the cancer resistance of certain organs, the ability of some to defeat this disease. An unexplored pathway promised undiscovered hope. He was not motivated by personal fame or by the vast fortunes that feed the cancer industry. His was a mission fueled by his heart.

The Interview
A freelance reporter interviewed Dr. Chachoua last year. It was a particularly difficult period in his life where letters published by Cedars-Sinai Medical Center had been used to shatter his credibility and paint him as a fraud. His work was almost brought to a standstill as this mighty institute used its influence to intimidate and persuade other researchers, institutes and foundations to avoid working with the good doctor. His will was unfazed, his determination steady. His pain was at the tragic loss of life taking place during this suppression. The oppression was felt in his soul.

Dr. Chachoua managed a small smile, "At this point it seems that everything has come to a sad ending...but the last chapter has not yet been written. This technology cannot be allowed to disappear...people must be given this chance at life...as bad as things look right now, a sad ending can also be just an unfinished story..."

Sam Chachoua might someday deserve to be mentioned in the same breath as Dr.

Louis Pasteur or Dr. Fleming, the discoverer of penicillin. But for now, Chachoua, (pronounced 'Cha-choo-wa') a brilliant doctor and medical researcher who has made great strides in discovering potential cures for cancer, AIDS and heart disease, is fighting seemingly insurmountable odds in attempting to get his story told and his findings accepted. Instead of encouraging and helping to further fund the research that has led to the discovery of his amazingly successful vaccines, the major medical establishments have turned their collective backs on this Egyptian born, Australian educated doctor. Driven by profoundly personal reasons to eradicate the diseases that have been mankind's scourge, Chachoua must instead devote his energies to fighting back against those who should support him most, while at the same time attempting to repair his reputation in the medical community. The tangled tale of his scientific discoveries, successful application of vaccines on human patients, and eventual betrayal by parasites he encountered is almost beyond belief. However, as this complex case continues to be unraveled by this nation's legal system, the court documents available indicate that every word of the following story is true.

As a child growing up in Australia in the 70s, Sam Chachoua loved and respected his father, a preeminent local physician. Like most children, he saw his father as an indestructible hero who could overcome all obstacles. The single most traumatic incident in young Sam's life occurred when his father was diagnosed with terminal cancer, and modern medicine proved ineffective in combating the disease. He philosophized about his deepest beliefs many years later in his book, The Challenge, The Promise, The Cure. "Every child has dreams and aspirations, major contributions to make, marks to be left, fame to be found, and what feels like an eternity in which to accomplish these objectives," writes Chachoua. "Curing cancer, growing up to be a hero, saving mankind, these must be some of the commonest fantasies of the young. Impossible tasks seem achievable because there is so much time; time to study, time to grow, time to prepare. Time allows for attainable fantasies, for pleasant dreams. When age or situation shortens time, when there is a need for rapid realization of the dream, reality destroys fantasies. Dreams are either abandoned or are often transformed into tangible despair that mourns the loss by cutting more harshly than reality ever could."

After standard therapies proved ineffective in preventing his father's death, Sam became disillusioned with modern medicine and determined to devote his professional efforts to improve treatment for those suffering from incurable illness. A penetrating mind and indomitable will to succeed propelled Sam towards academic excellence. He developed and presented an original paper on cancer treatment at the Clinical Oncology Society of Australia at the age of 18, the youngest such presenter in the Society's history. He completed his medical training with honors, picking up a physics medal in the process. Most importantly, as his research began in earnest, he began to develop a wide range of non-toxic and spectacularly effective therapies for a host of different ailments. Chachoua refused to believe that cancer was an unbeatable foe and an unforgiving killer nor that the disease was unstoppable, uncontrollable and irreversible. He eschewed the typical modern treatments whereby patients of similar ages, size and cancer type are treated with the same tried and failed protocols. Instead he chose to concentrate on individual evaluation, care and therapy. Fascinated by spontaneous remission, the doctor hoped to control and perhaps replicate these occasional "miracles," where a dying patient suddenly recovers, and the disease melts away as if in answer to a prayer. Researchers knew cancer cells can be destroyed or even turned back into healthy cells by certain infections, fluctuations in temperature, magnetic fields, hormones, chemicals, changes in environment, and primitive immune responses, among other reasons. But little time and money were devoted to investigating these phenomena. The majority of cancer research funds are directed to poison and other "therapeutic" agents.

Dr. Chachoua searched for non-toxic biological agents that could duplicate the findings in spontaneous remissions. He developed a range of antisera, vaccines and microbiological extracts that could target the cause of the disease and remove it from the body. In cancer, AIDS, and other conditions where the body cannot recognize or adequately deal with the disease, he developed "tagging agents" that could stick to the body of the disease, allowing it to be seen and then eliminated by the body's immune response. In short, if a cancer cell can be made to look like a cold or flu, by "tagging" it with cold or flu fragments, then the body will eliminate it as it would a common infection. Perhaps the most dramatic capacity of this technology is its ability to repair cellular damage at the genetic level; purifying infected cells from HIV, regenerating hepatitis damaged livers, scarred heart tissue and even atrophied brain tissue in Alzheimer's patients.

Graphic Proof

Figure 1. Represents a cell in structural distress carrying a very heavy viral load. Virus can been seen as small dark particles throughout the cytoplasm. This cell was representative of a field isolated by flow cytometry. Amazingly the patient on protease inhibitors had an undetectable PCR count. Other patients with PCR levels over 200,000 had fewer intracellular viral particles and more efficient immune response bringing to doubt the validity of common techniques employed to diagnose and evaluate the progress of this disease.

Fig. 1. Prior to vaccine.T-cell infected with multiple viral particles seen here as small dark circles in the cytoplasm. The cell is in distress with irregular and disintegrating outer membrane.

Fig. 2. Three days after application of vaccine.T-cell membranes are more regular, diminishing number of viral particles with occasional viral halo, possibly representing lysosome formation.

Fig. 3. Six days after application of vaccine. Markedly decreased number of viral particles in cell. Halo effect more pronounced around disintegrating viral particles, more suggestive of lysosome or other intracellular immune/disease rejection phenomena. Cellular structure appears increasingly more stable.
Fig. 4. Nine days after application of vaccine. Formation of intra-nuclear dense body representing vaccine expression in the cell nucleus accompanied by expulsion of viral matter and elimination of cytoplasmic virus. Cellular structure now essentially normal.

Some Answers

As HIV molds intricately into the fiber of our DNA no cure will be complete until this genetic aberration is corrected. Toxic modalities may encourage mutation and accelerate disease progress. The Induced Remission Therapies being presented here in preliminary communication, seeks not to destroy viral mechanisms but to use them to displace the virus from its genetic locus. Genetic and other fragments originating from the patients own cells and/or non-pathogenic organism are used to eliminate the virus from its nuclear and cytoplasmic habitat. Many of these vaccines, by using the viruses own reverse transcriptase, insert themselves in the vicinity of the viral DNA, resulting in the latter's removal and expulsion. This represents a new age in AIDS therapeutics aimed at genetic editing and correction. These vaccines do not harbor toxic effects, are therapeutic as well as preventative and are not made from HIV or fragments thereof. (Thus eliminating the theoretical risk of contagion associated with HIV based vaccines.)

The following serial photography obtained at USC demonstrated the process. [See figures 2, 3, & 4 with captions.]

The Scientific Duplication of Miracles
Induced Remission Therapy is based on features and mechanisms of biological agents that render the disease immunologically visible, treat the cause and regenerate damage incurred during the illness.

By addressing the causes of disease, IRT brings about amazing healing responses in many illnesses including heart disease.

Fig. 5 Fig. 6

The two EKGs above represent improvement in R-wave progression indicating enhanced cardiac function after only two days of treatment. The patient's triglycerides were slashed to one third of the previous abnormal level. Cholesterol and glucose levels also improved in this 50-year-old diabetic patient with a history of severe cardiac disease. The limitless scope of IRT includes inflammatory diseases, asthma, MS, lupus and chronic fatigue in addition to many other disorders.

The ability of Induced Remission Therapy to act at the genetic level leads to almost limitless applications. Success has been obtained with Arthritis, Lupus, Asthma, Psoriasis, Dementia, MS as well as a host of other diseases including cardiovascular disease. Hospital documentation verifies the return to normal function and disappearance of scar tissue as well as valve repair following treatment.

This next case is perhaps the most difficult to treat -- liver cancer. Once cancer has reached the liver, metastasis from another location, it is very hard to treat. Fig. 7 is a slide of the liver. The smallcircled dot at the top, is a cyst the patient was born with. The other larger circle is cancer. This cancer was tagged with a staphylococcal infection using dead bacterial extracts, "which are harmless to the patient." Fig. 8 shows the cancer is gone after only two weeks of treatment. As a proof that that is the same patient, fig. 2 shows the cyst the patient was born with and no trace of cancer.

This next case is a 32-year-old female who is a body builder, with Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. In fig. 15 the large white mass in the center is cancer. She received therapy for about a week. The patient has an X-ray taken after one week of treatment and the cancer is nearly gone (fig.16).

Chachoua's Relative Anonymity
There are two major reasons why Dr. Sam Chachoua's remarkable findings are virtually unknown to this day. The first reason has to do with his "outsider" status in the medical community, and the second is a series of misfortunes that have befallen him as a result of the rampant greed and opportunism that accompany any major new discovery. "Medical research is not a profession that yields financial comfort for any but a few leaders who are well placed both politically and within the university institutes," explains Chachoua. "The systems exist within boundaries; researchers must be part of a major institute before their work can be readily published. Have you ever heard of a cancer breakthrough or other medical advancement that did not come from a university or a hospital's PR machine?" Chachoua doesn't fit any of the standard molds. He has developed his methods independently and has funded himself throughout the process. He didn't beg or compete for financial grants, and this independence has allowed thought to mature to practical applications in dramatic fashion. Most research focuses on a minutia that never sees practical application, such as interesting laboratory findings or rare enzyme and gene configurations. By contrast, Chachoua's work has made the gigantic leap through the lab and animal studies and right into successful human applications -- all without the help of a university, hospital or pharmaceutical company. However, his freedom and independence came with a price tag attached. Without institute backing, publication in major journals was difficult. His young age and the enormous implications of his work further complicated the situation. The simple truth is that a lack of affiliation with major institutes limits publication opportunities, and the same institutes that monopolize the system frowns upon unpublished work. The doctor chose to combat this untenable situation by lecturing at medical conferences and public gatherings worldwide, not only presenting his findings to a larger audience, but even proposing to fund research and revalidation of his technology. Over the years, he has offered up to $500,000 in grants, an unprecedented offer for a researcher to pay for others to prove or disprove his work.

The second reason for Chachoua's relative anonymity is a convoluted and ongoing tale that involves elements of treachery, deceit and betrayal. After reversing an advanced case of prostate cancer with his radical techniques, world renowned researchers at UCLA and Cedars-Sinai Medical Center approached Chachoua to test his vaccines against cancer and AIDS (USC and other major institutes would later be involved).

Testing commenced in the fall of 1994, and the response from the medical community was extremely encouraging. "The data demonstrates profound inhibition of infection with many of the serum samples tested," offered Eric Daar, MD, the Director of the AIDS & Immune Disorders Center at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. Paul Terasaki, a Ph. D. and Professor of Surgery at UCLA School of Medicine, wrote that the tests provided "interesting results...larger scale experiments have been initiated." Shlomo Melmed, MD, of the UCLA School of Medicine, suggested that Dr. Chachoua's work represented an "exciting new world of therapeutic opportunity."

As Chachoua's reputation grew, the first hints of trouble began. A group of former acquaintances, associates and onetime supporters who had praised him for saving their lives, formed a clinic in Mexico. A woman named (person's name not mentioned at this time) was the ringleader of this nefarious operation, and she claimed that they owned Chachoua's vaccines and technology. (person's name not mentioned at this time) and her henchmen, (person's name not mentioned at this time), are some of the names that appeared in brochures touting cures for cancer, AIDS and other diseases. They even used Dr. Chachoua's name and videos of his lectures to recruit victims, charging thousands of dollars for useless products that often bore no resemblance whatsoever to the genuine vaccines. Henig would later admit in a court of law that she was selling simple distilled water as one of the "miracle cures."

As he became aware of the scandal, Chachoua took urgent steps to shut down these clinics. Justice was swift, and the doctor was successful in having these renegade operations terminated. But the clinics would reopen under different names a short time later, only to be shut down again. Several of (person's name not mentioned at this time) patients died. There were numerous complaints to the Mexican government, but money continued to change hands and records disappeared. In early 1996, Chachoua was forced to file suit in the United States against the principals of the clinic and to warn the Mexican public about what was taking place. The backlash of his actions was both surprising and violent. Attacks on his home, his life and even his partner were, in retrospect, the actions of cornered animals who were threatened with the loss of a multimillion dollar enterprise. (Person's name not mentioned at this time), exposed as a charlatan and a fake, nevertheless proved to be a worthy adversary in the courtroom. Under guidance from her Mexican attorneys, UCLA and Cedars-Sinai Medical Center issued statements including a "Denial of Relationship" with Chachoua. Their damning statements served to invalidate the spectacular test results achieved earlier and raised questions about Chachoua's credibility.

Others might have crumbled and disappeared under the weight of such adversity. But at stake was the lives and well being of literally millions of sufferers, and Chachoua was determined that his research and efforts to thwart disease would continue forward. In Australia, an MBBS is the equivalent of an MD degree, but when doubts were raised in the courtroom about the validity of this medical degree, Chachoua spent more than $20,000 to obtain a Mexican revalidation of his Australian license. His intention was to show the Mexican and United States citizens a license they might better understand, but his attempts to provide clarity and comprehension caused him a tremendous setback. A traitorous Mexican attorney, (person's name not mentioned at this time), hired by Chachoua to produce the new medical license, instead chose to stab the doctor squarely in the back. (Person's name not mentioned at this time) had surreptitiously paid off (person's name not mentioned at this time) to provide a false medical license and officials in Mexico Immigration detained Dr. Chachoua, in order to prevent him from completing his appearance in his San Diego lawsuit against her in the summer of 1997. For two days the doctor was denied food and water, threatened and attacked, but he managed to be released in time to appear and win the lawsuit. (Person's name not mentioned at this time) cried that she was broke and dying. Dr. Chachoua never sought large financial damages but simply asked that the defendant cease her illegal activities. The Judge, biased by UCLA's and Cedars support of (person's name not mentioned at this time), suggested that the jury award the doctor only one dollar. This judge would then grant Henig an interview for publication while she (still claiming poverty) asked for reimbursement of $99,000 that she spent on the suit. She would then publish journals and finance international conferences over the next four years, while still claiming to be broke and dying.

With what seemed to be the Mexican immigration and legal system corrupted against him, Dr. Chachoua was advised to return home. Certainly, that would have been the easy option, but he refused to allow his name to be tainted. (person's name not mentioned at this time) had verified the authenticity of the Mexican license to at least three U.S. attorneys, and letters were revealed showing that immigration officials had received funds to detain the doctor while the plot was carried out. Chachoua fought all charges, and The Human Rights Committee found members of the Mexican Immigration office guilty of many violations, which led to the dismissal of a number of high-ranking officials. The doctor's lawsuit against his former attorney, (person's name not mentioned at this time), continues to this day. Chachoua was eventually found to be innocent of all charges, yet his enemies roam free and profit from the smear they initiated.

Dr. Sam Chachoua, a man who's inventive and revolutionary research skills are surpassed only by his tenacity and dogged determination, continues to fight the medical monoliths to this day. It seems inconceivable that internationally renowned institutions like UCLA and Cedars-Sinai would deny knowledge of such powerful and potentially life altering research, but they continue to claim that they have no knowledge or relationship with the doctor that they themselves approached in 1994. For more than two years, Chachoua has been involved in litigation with both UCLA and Cedars-Sinai in an attempt to bring this technology to the public. His career is at a virtual standstill. All his energies are directed towards the validation and acknowledgment of his previous work, and he has neither the time nor the resources to build on the many exciting discoveries, which interested the medical institutions in the first place.

It appears at this juncture that there might have been a relationship or association between the American institutes and the charlatans in Mexico. Correspondence suggests that they shared patients, with perhaps both UCLA and Cedars giving credibility to experimental, illegal and ultimately useless products from (person's name not mentioned at this time) and accomplices. Whatever the association might be, it seems the American institutes were only too compliant in following the guidance of the Mexican quacks in issuing their attacks on Chachoua. They appear ready to deny all knowledge of him, and either bury or steal his technology. The question that cannot be answered is "Why?"

Dr. Chachoua has recently made it very easy to resolve the situation. If the court documents representing the incredible efficacy of Dr. Chachoua's vaccines and the excitement of major researchers at UCLA and Cedars prior to their betrayal of Dr. Chachoua, including the chart of 20 out of 22 vaccines being more than 99% effective against HIV; if the letters from Melmed, Daar and Terasaki are untrue copies; and if the institutes really never tested his vaccines and technology, then he offers to pay them the sum of $10,000,000. If, on the other hand, these documents are real, he expects them to pay him $10,000,000. And, more importantly, he demands they explain their outrageous behavior to a public literally dying for the cures he has discovered. Dr. Chachoua has also demanded that his prime cultures be returned. Amazingly, Cedars has to date refused to return to Dr. Chachoua his own material.

Dr. Sam Chachoua's vaccines are at a point of efficacy that is unmatched, but that still can be improved upon. Millions of dollars can be spent to raise their efficacy even further, resulting in a higher cure rate and eventual FDA approval. This radical technology promises to defeat so many aspects of death and can regenerate healthy tissue to an extent that might even impact our life span, but it is clearly beyond one man's ability to finance and perfect. The world needs these cures, and Chachoua's search for truth and validation must be supported. Our current medical system is geared to allow new products to be registered only by the powerful, wealthy enterprises whose income seems threatened by this man's work. Should we continue to support entities with billions of dollars that are wasted in meaningless experiments, or should we divert our energy and support a technology that has already proven itself to be capable of "medical miracles" on numerous occasions? In a world full of increasingly complex choices, this seems to be one decision that should be easy to make.

Back To The Present

The previous article was prophetic. However, Cedars never responded to the ten million dollar challenge; the jury responded for them.

Dr. Chachoua was able to present some of his technology during the trial. The jury would hear of how he would develop tagging complexes (microbiological extracts from living cultures, which would attach to diseased cells and even organisms such as HIV and other diseases including cancer). These products would not only "light up the target for immune destruction" but would also genetically modify the cells so that damage would be corrected at the nuclear level. The results would be either suicide (or apoptosis), cellular normalization or immune destruction of a disease, which had been modified to look like an appetizing target. (With several disease conditions, the body cannot effectively deal with or eliminate the underlying pathology. The immune arm dedicated to it does not adequately contain cancer, and HIV actually feeds on the T-cells that challenge it. By changing the appearance at the cellular and nuclear level AIDS and cancer can be made to look strongly foreign and rejected from the body as material from an outside source, another species or common infection.) The defenses activated against the tagged disease are radically different and are more powerful than the standard human response. To further secure elimination of the target, Dr. Chachoua explained to the jury that the patients could also be provided with an immune response purified and matched to their bodies, which would overwhelm the tagged disease. In many patients, the human body becomes so depleted by illness that it necessitates not only the tagging of disease to make it more visible, but also the infusion of a powerful immune system to facilitate an immune recovery.

The cultures from which the tagging complexes were extracted have taken many years and a large amount of money to isolate. They were unique. The jury would also hear of how an effective immune response was searched for and identified for use against cancer and AIDS.

In his search for an adequate immune response and using similar logic to his search for prime cultures for his tagging agents, Dr. Chachoua tested and screened volumes of patients in search of any sign of improvement or resistance. His observations led him to believe that in cases of autoimmune disease, (diseases such as rheumatoid arthritis, lupus and mixed connective tissue disease) the same immune response that attacks the patient's own cells, had strong therapeutic potential. These patients would generate anti-sera which would penetrate cells without destroying them and which Dr. Chachoua hoped could be trained to remove HIV from the body of the cell and even neutralize viral or cancer genes at the DNA level, particularly in association with tagging complexes. It appeared that in autoimmune disease, the intra-cellular defense mechanisms were inactive (defense mechanisms within cells usually protected against mutation and infection.) In cancer and AIDS patients the cells inner defenses are failing. In autoimmune disease, enzymes designed to digest foreign invaders are deficient, so the body compensates by generating a unique immune response capable of entering the cell, correcting and defending it. This was Dr. Chachoua's reasoning and an approach that remains both unique and unchallenged in brilliance and efficacy. It also stands alone as it provides a range of therapeutic goods that can both prevent and treat disease. Unlike other vaccines, Dr. Chachoua's Induced Remission Therapy, (IRT) does not use the disease itself in its makeup. Both the difficulty and danger associated with cancer and HIV vaccines that use cancer or HIV in their structure is that even fragments of disease can be harmful and can promote mutation of disease. Dr. Chachoua's therapies therefore have added safety.

Cedars-Sinai initially argued that Dr. Chachoua had not allowed them to carry out toxicity studies and that his vaccines could have been toxic and no more than bleach, to bring about the incredible laboratory results they saw. And yet the jury would see a toxicity test carried out by Cedars, which showed that at therapeutic doses not only was their no toxicity found but the number of healthy cells actually doubled when exposed to the vaccines. (This incredible regeneration capacity of the vaccine has helped in reversing damage from heart and neurological disease, even Alzheimer's disease.) The jury would then hear from Cedars-Sinai that the technology was never tested on humans but then see letters from Cedars and hear their own witnesses testify that they had been presented with and impressed by Dr. Chachoua's clinical successes on patients. They would shake their head in disbelief when they heard of how Cedars issued press releases denying any relationship with Dr. Chachoua. Then they manipulated the media into labeling him a charlatan based purely on their denial of him, and repeatedly interfered with his attempt to further his work at USC, Wayne State University and even Karolinska, (the Noble Prize Institute in Sweden.)

The jury was aghast when they learned that only six weeks after denying a relationship with Dr. Chachoua and destroying his credibility, the principle investigator from Cedars (who had tested Dr. Chachoua vaccines) co-authored and published a paper on the possibilities of the use of autoimmune sera from arthritis, lupus and mixed connective tissue diseases in the treatment of AIDS. Cedars had published a large part of Dr. Chachoua's technology without crediting him.

In Federal court, therefore, Cedars' attorneys had the difficult task of not only down playing their own letters of the profound results obtained, but also discrediting a technology that they themselves have published.

Cedars-Sinai repeatedly insulted the jury telling them that the vaccines were toxic, although the jury saw Cedars' own letters and results attesting to the safety and efficacy of the therapy. In fact, the vaccines were so non-toxic that the researchers could not explain their profound inhibition of HIV. According to Cedars own testing, they were so non-toxic that the cell survival increased instead of decreasing and often doubled after exposure.

Cedars then attacked the technology as not being FDA approved, but the jury would learn of the Health Freedom Act and the Compassion Act, which allow for the use of non-FDA approved agents in the treatment of terminal patients. These vaccines further enjoyed a defined legal status outside of the United States and any American doctor can implement the technology itself legally if he wishes to. Having failed in these attacks, Cedars successfully argued that all data, experiments and evidence from other institutes should not be admitted as evidence since they were not relevant to this case. They would then argue to the jury that no other institute has ever tested Dr. Chachoua's work -- a smug deception as the jury would never see the volume of evidence relating to the successful human use and investigations carried out at other major institutes. That information was denied the jury in court as much as it was denied the public when Cedars and associates painted Dr. Chachoua a charlatan and claimed that all of the results (including their own) were fake.

The only results Cedars had to explain in court were their own, but how do you say that something is useless when your own tests show it to be more than 99% effective? How do you say something is toxic when your own data show incredible safety? How do you deny a technology when you yourself have attempted to steal and publish it?

A killing blow was still awaiting Cedars-Sinai. Dr. Chachoua had seen lawyers intimidated and corrupted during this trial. He knew much had been lost by legal negligence and what would later appear to be collusion. He felt that many of his proofs would be kept from the jury's eyes, so he arranged for a patient with full-blown AIDS to be a witness.

Michael arrived. He had in his possession one dose of one of the most powerful vaccines that Cedars had tested but had refused to return Dr. Chachoua. (In the absence of the prime cultures, the sources of origin of many of these vaccines were entrusted to Cedars for storage and cataloging. Dr. Chachoua could produce no more of these vaccines but this last remaining dose may have achieved more for humanity and justice than any other medicine in history.)

The jury would hear of how Michael had deteriorated while taking protease inhibitors, "the medication that Cedars had presented to be all but a cure -- a drug cocktail in use today." The jury would hear how Michael's T-cell count had deteriorated down to 124 within the last few days with massive increases in viral load. When asked how he felt, Michael replied, "Exceptionally well." When asked why, he stated that he had taken a dose of Dr. Chachoua's vaccine the day prior to testifying, and that his immune system had doubled. (His T-cells had risen to well over 200 and therefore in one day his status had changed from full-blown AIDS into a remission made temporary only by the lack of his ability of follow up therapy.)

"And how do you know that your immune system doubled?" asked Dr. Chachoua's attorney? "I had several blood tests," replied Michael. And where did you have these tests taken? "Cedars-Sinai Medical Center," replied Michael.

The jury heard that a patient suffering from full-blown AIDS and receiving conventional cocktail therapy continued to deteriorate, as proven by tests at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center but was put into remission from full-blown AIDS by a single dose of vaccine again as proven by tests at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. The same institute which had tried so hard to destroy Dr. Chachoua had once again demonstrated and documented the incredible effects of his work before the jury and the world in the most dramatic moment in legal and medical history. The same people who had tried so hard to destroy the inventor of this research documented this.

The jury would also hear from Terry Dreyfus, the first patient in the world to achieve a two and a half year remission from full-blown AIDS by receiving Dr. Chachoua's vaccines. He fell out of remission only when the therapeutic supply ran out, after Cedars refused to return Dr. Chachoua's cultures. The jury would also be shocked to hear that Cedars had sent a detective to Terry's home the day prior to trial. Cedars admitted this. The detective threatened and intimidated Terry in an attempt to keep him from testifying. The jury would hear of all this as well as of Cedars' knowledge of Terry's remission. After witnessing testimony from Mr. Dreyfus, a living miracle, and delighting with Michael over the news of his remission, it appeared that the jury then became numb to the lies of Cedars' attorneys and repulsed by the ongoing suppression.

The jury deliberated for two days. Their verdict was unanimous.

Dr. Chachoua has developed a few new cultures. However, the tragedy of the loss of his most powerful vaccines will be felt for years to come. It will take time, money and the support of the public that has until now been kept in the dark to rediscover them.

The judgment awarded for over ten million dollars does not even begin to compensate for the lives that have been lost and will continue to be lost because of this travesty. Dr. Chachoua's work can be salvaged. It is only a question of time, money and public support. If we only refuse to allow the truth to be silenced, if we focus our energy and support to this proven therapy then it can be quickly returned to us. The mechanisms of Induced Remission Therapy offer a future without disease and suffering. Dr. Chachoua has pledged every penny of the judgment and his every waking moment towards that goal. It is not a battle he should fight alone.

Title: HOW TO TACKLE RADIATION THE MUNG BEAN WAY

TheUnhivedMind - April 12, 2011 12:34 AM (GMT)

I was informing a friend via phone today of some of the ways she could prevent radiation damage and I was reminded of the wonderful Mung Bean and my Cancer reversal information on this amazing food. I strongly suggest people start using this protocol at a minimum 250 grams a day. This should help chelate many poisons from the body, its one of the best and also fights Cancer aided along by its saponin compounds.

Heres some smart people thinking on the same lines of me with Mung Beans. I also take Nettle daily and have done for quite some time. Buy dried nettle for the time being rather than picking your own due to the radiation at the moment outside.

Radiation fears spark boom in seaweed and mung bean sales

By Krista Siefken - Cowichan News Leader Pictorial
Published: March 23, 2011 1:00 PM
http://www.bclocalnews.com/vancouver_islan.../118467424.html

Sea vegetables and nettles and mung beans.

They're just a few of the interesting items flying off the shelves at Duncan's Community Farm Store.

Because despite repeated assurance by health officials that West Coasters are not at risk of radiation from Japan, the fact is many Cowichanians are skeptical.

And they're protecting themselves by stocking up on everything from liquid potassium iodide to the contents listed on the Community Farm Store's anti-radiation diet list.

Store owner Nicolette Genier said a slew of people started showing up at the organic outlet on Sunday, asking about iodine and stocking up on iodine-rich seaweed.

"Next thing you know, all the seaweed has been swept off the shelves," Genier said. "People were in the beginning stages of feeling afraid. We decided it warranted some research right away, so people could feel empowerment rather than fear."

That fear stems from the natural and nuclear disasters that have plagued Japan since March 11.

Radiation reaching Canada's West Coast had been pegged at "minute" levels by Tuesday, but B.C.'s provincial health officer, Dr. Perry Kendall, says the consumption of iodide tablets is not necessary.

"Even if radiation from Japan ever made it to British Columbia, our prediction based on current information, is that it would not pose any significant health risk," he said last week.

Sybille Sanderson, the Cowichan Valley Regional District's acting general manager of public safety, pointed out the public safety department had not received any calls about radiation as of Friday.

"Yesterday, my staff and I participated in a conference call hosted by EMBC (Emergency Management B.C.) with doctors and scientists with expertise in radiation issues," she added.

"We were reassured that this is not, and is not expected to be, an issue for us."

But Genier said anti-radiation foods are the same fare recommended for cleansing, cancer prevention and optimal health.

And it's better to be safe than sorry.

"Even if the situation doesn't come to anything in Japan, even if it doesn't affect us, this is the time we're living in: nuclear plants are everywhere, and humans are fallible," she said.

"We can't put a lot of stock and faith into projected statements like, 'By all means the public will be kept safe.' We sure wish there was no such thing as nuclear power, but once again we're facing the result of putting economics before common sense."

Genier found during her research that those who survived Hiroshima and Chernobyl were those with a long history of eating things such as miso and seaweed.

And eating healthily is always recommended.

"There's no such thing as junk food — it's either junk or it's food," said Genier.

"We would never advocate a diet just because you're scared of something, but this is about strength and resilience and clear-thinking, and that's what we need to be inhabitants of this planet right now.

"It's not a fad, it's a way of life. And your life may depend on it."

The anti-radiation diet

• Miso (classic food for prevention of radiation damage)

• Sea vegetables and their products (kelp and dulse are excellent natural sources of iodine and much safer than drinking iodine or eating potassium iodide)

• Nettle infusions (high in iodine and other nutrients)

• Reishi mushrooms (reduces damage from radiation)

• Burdock root (removes radioactive isotopes from the body)

• Orange and dark green vegetables (kale, spinach, collards, sweet potatoes, winter squash to reduce damage from radiation)

• Cruciferous vegetables (broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, etc, protects cells from radiation damage)

• Dried beans (mung beans and lentils, etc, contain protease inhibitors known to block and prevent the formation of tumour cells)

• Black and green teas (boast radio-protective effects whether taken before or after exposure to radiation)

Title: Guided healing and cleansing meditation

TheUnhivedMind - March 22, 2011 12:28 AM (GMT)

Best with headphones - sit back, close your eyes and relax. Even better if you can lie down.

So here goes, step by step explanation.

1. As I do this work on a daily basis, I recommend you to also do the following on a daily basis for maximum effect and benefits. At least I do recommend you to perform it at times you feel you need that extra "boost" and healing/spiritual/psychic energy to reach you for the purpose you have chosen.

2. The procedure iself is fairly simple. All you have to do is a very basic relaxation meditation, be open minded, and accept to receive the energy I send to you.

3. This is done as follows - Find a comfortable position at any time you prefere, either sitting or lying down. Doing it before going to sleep is a good time as you are more open to receiving external energy and input in a sleep mode. As you sit or lay down, relax your body, and visualize yourself open up to receive the energy of me, Edward Alexander, and say to yourself that you accept the energy I send out to reach you and benefit you and help you with your desired goals.

You may also ask your Spirit Guides and Guardian Angel to oversee the process and protect you and assist you in receiving the energy.

Then take 13 deep inhalations through your nose, where you hold the breath as long you can for each one, and slowly blow it out through your mouth. As you do this, feel your body and muscles getting more and more relaxed for each breath and each exhalation - your body becoming soft and heavy and comfortable.

Feel how you become more peaceful and at rest both physically and mentally from this simple breathing exercice.

Once the cycle of 13 inhalations have been done, send your awareness to your body, and feel how relaxed it it, how at peace you are. Imagine at this point a great brilliant pink light in the shape of a ball above your head. Make it grow stronger, try feel and visualize it above your head, and feel yourself becoming even more relaxed from this comfortable, peaceful light that is filled with love and serenity.

As the ball of brilliant pink ligh fills up, imagine it open up and sending a beam of light down trough your head, and this is the energy I am sending you, filled within that ball sent there for you - along with peace, love, relaxation, protection, cleansing and guidance in addition to the goals you have for yourself with this energy.

Feel this great light, as it enters your head, filling up your head, until your whole head is filled up completely with its great pink light and my energy flowing through you and manifesting within you the goal you have set for this energy. Imagine it spreading down from your head, down your throat, filling you up more and more with great powerful energy that will make you able to reach all of your goals. It moves down further from your throat, through your chest, filling up your chest with great pink light, and then proceeds down through your belly and all the way down to the tip of your toes. Now you are completely filled with this great pink energy light, filling you all up with your intended purpose for what you are seeking from this energy, and as it does so you feel yourself becoming more relaxed, more filled with love, and see the energy start radiating out of your body so it now also surrounds your body and make your whole body surrounded by a great glowing sphere of brilliant pink light and this powerful energy, your whole body vibrating and radiating this energy, as it is growing stronger and stronger, knowing that this power will make you reach your goals and that you are in deep contact with the spiritual energy I've sent to you as well as the great divine energy of the endless source of all that is.

Stay in this state for a while and just enjoy it, know that you are being filled with the powers and great energies to help and assist you and attune you towards your goals. Relax and let it flow through your body, up and down from head to toes, several times. Then gently make it fade away and become invisible, but know that it is still there within you and empowering you, and that you are connected with the great source of divine energy and the energy I am sending you.

At the end, once you've made it fade away, but still feel its great effects, and still know its there just that now invisible, send a thought of love and thanks to me and the Divine Source for helping you and giving you this oppurtunity. Stay with the feeling of love and joy in your being for a while, before you either go to sleep if you did it at night, or take a nice good deep breath, blow it slowly out, get up and do your daily business if done at day knowing that the energy is now within you and that each time you perform this meditation the effects will increase and the powers will be more strong and effective.

The more often you perform this exercise, the better results - as said daily basis is recommended, and it is not something that demands a lot of time, once you get into this meditation you can easily perform it all within 5 minutes or so, tough I recommend at least spending 15 minutes to half an hour on it for best effects as long you have the time on your hands.

And as mentioned, for those who wish to proceed further and be initiated into a specific healing system they may contact me once they have practiced the above for one to two weeks on a daily basis. Follow your intuition to feel when you are ready for the next step after having practiced this exercise first for some time.

May you find this useful, and great blessings be with you

TheUnhivedMind - March 6, 2011 08:05 PM (GMT)

Please note how Dr Stanley Bass speaks of the studies conducted on Vegans etc and how our lifespans are supposedly lower and so forth. Interesting when you consider that the populace of the future are to be turned vegan by the State huh? I did always wonder on those lines as I know these cretins detest us such as Knight of Malta, Heinz Kissinger (DVD) and his 'Memorandum 200'. You also have that DVD agent, Mikhail Gorbevoc and the 'Global 2000' report from the Club of Rome.

Wolveshater - March 6, 2011 08:59 PM (GMT)

Makes one wonder which way to go..

I'm mostly raw vegan, fruits, nuts, beans, fish..

Some birds, and some red meats.

TheUnhivedMind - March 7, 2011 04:17 PM (GMT)

Well I'm doing a little test on myself at the moment and I will report when I'm happy either way. I will say just look to the Chinese who eat most things but cleverly in both small portions and mixed with soups made of powerful healing foods/herbs. So for instance you'll notice the use of say the Chinese date with a meat dish and the date will boost the digestion but most importantly the Spleen. This aids Pancreas function etc but will aid in removing much of the mucus/phlegm which a normal westerner wouldn't stand a chance of doing with their weak Spleens. Its certainly well proven that a calorie controlled eat system promotes longevity and health. This has been seen time and time again in mice and other species too.

This guy was on a talkshow in NZ debating all the District DHB's in NZ where they have come out saying there is no evidence in Vitamin C,if you get admitted to Hospital,they;ll just kill you no questions asked just heard we should be saving our orange peels and let them dry a little, then grind them up into powder, add to a little water and drink. heard it's good for vitamin C and probably more purer than store bought supplements. i'm pretty sure you can buy straight up orangle peels too from internet herb stores.

Jeffrey M. Smith: The GMO Threat

TheAlexJonesChannel | 10 November 2010

Jeffrey M. Smith, author of the #1 GMO bestseller Seeds of Deception, talks about his campaign to force mass rejection of genetically modified foods in order to expunge them form the market entirely. Smith explains how the FDA allowed GMO foods to enter the market with no safety testing whatsoever, and that the man primarily responsible for this is now food safety czar in the Obama administration.

Smith notes how Obama has broken his pre-election promise that every GMO food should be properly labeled, and also installed pro-GMO executives in the USDA and FDA who have close ties to Monsanto and the biotechnology industry.

Smith documents how consumption of genetically modified foods has been directly linked with reproductive problems, immune system deficiencies, accelerated ageing, organ damage and gastrointestinal problems. The immune system problem has been seen consistently in mice and rats who are fed GMO food, explains Smith, and now since humans have started consuming genetically modified foods, auto-immune diseases and allergies have increased.

Smith explains how research exposing the dangers of genetically modified food has been censored and shut down by the establishment, with scientists involved in such studies finding themselves blacklisted and shunned by their peers before being fired from their jobs in many cases as big agriculture throws its weight around.

Smith covers a plethora of vital issues in this one hour interview, and offers workable solutions to phase GMO out of the market, by pushing for proper labeling standards and an intensive education outreach that will help people realize how big a threat genetically modified food poses to their health.

View Full Version: High Fructose Corn Syrup & Liver Disease

Title: High Fructose Corn Syrup & Liver Disease
Description: Poisons to make you ill

Ken Ardel - March 22, 2010 01:49 PM (GMT)

Sweetener may aggravate liver disease

http://www.cbc.ca/health/story/2010/03/18/...yrup-liver.html

High-fructose corn syrup, a cheap liquid sweetener, is found in beverages, baked goods and many other processed food products. (Mark Blinch/Reuters)
The daily consumption of high-fructose corn syrup might aggravate liver damage in people who suffer from non-alcoholic fatty liver disease, a U.S. study suggests.

The common sweetener is found in beverages, processed foods such as gummy bears and some bread and baked goods. The syrup made from corn is a cheaper alternative to sugar or sucrose and easier to blend and transport because of its liquid form.

As a mixture, the chemical composition of high-fructose corn syrup differs from sucrose, and might act differently on the human body. Some suggest there's a link between the increased use of high-fructose corn syrup and the growing incidence of diabetes and obesity in North America.

"We found that increased consumption of high-fructose corn syrup was associated with scarring in the liver, or fibrosis, among patients with non-alcoholic fatty liver disease," Dr. Manal Abdelmalek, an associate professor of medicine at Duke University Medical Center, said in a news release Thursday.

Scarred livers
About 30 per cent of adults in the U.S. have non-alcoholic fatty liver disease (NAFLD), the researchers said. When fat builds up in the liver, it can cause inflammation, then scarring known as cirrhosis of the liver — permanent damage to the liver that leads to a blockage of blood flow through the organ.

A cirrhotic liver no longer removes toxins effectively, leading to accumulation in the blood that, can in turn, impair mental function and lead to personality changes and possibly a coma, according to the Canadian Liver Foundation.

In the study, Abdelmalek and her colleagues looked at 427 adults with non-alcoholic fatty liver disease at eight clinical centres in the U.S.

The team found that 52 per cent of the study subjects consumed between one and six servings a week of fructose-containing beverages and only 19 per cent said they didn't consume any.

Twenty-nine per cent of the subjects said they drank fructose-containing beverages daily. The people in that group were 2.6 times more likely to show high degrees of fibrosis than those who consumed no fructose-containing beverages.

The researchers factored in other elements that have been shown to influence NAFLD, including age, sex, body mass index, Hispanic ethnicity and total calorie intake.

Fructose consumption was estimated based on patients' reports of drinking non-diet soda, fruit juices and other sweetened beverages.

In 2008, Abdelmalek published a study on a small group of patients showing high-fructose corn syrup was associated with non-alcoholic fatty liver disease. The new study, published online in the journal Hepatology, goes a step further, linking consumption of the sweetener to progression or worsening of liver injury.

While only a minority of patients with NAFLD progress to cirrhosis, all are at increased risk of liver failure and liver cancer, which may require a liver transplant. There is no treatment for NAFLD.

Diet changes for patients
"Our findings suggest that we may need to go back to healthier diets that are more holistic," Abdelmalek said. "High-fructose corn syrup, which is predominately in soft drinks and processed foods, may not be as benign as we previously thought."

The study, as well as previous laboratory research on human and animal tissue, suggest the body metabolizes high-fructose corn syrup in a way that affects insulin sensitivity. Most dietary fructose is processed in the liver.

The results suggest that for patients with NAFLD, reducing the intake of high-fructose corn syrup might be a way to avoid worsening of their disease, the study's authors concluded.

The effect could be similar to the way that low-fat diets reduce the risk of heart disease, Abdelmalek said, even though research on the effect of diet-modification isn't as advanced for liver disease as it is for heart disease.

The next step in the research is to do formal studies that evaluate whether limiting or cutting out high-fructose corn syrup from a patient's diet pays off in health benefits.

Consumers looking to reduce their intake of high-fructose corn syrup can cut back on soft drinks and sweetened beverages, limit candy, cookies, cakes, pies, doughnuts, granola bars, pastries and other baked goods with "glucose-fructose" on the label.

The Corn Refiners Association has launched an aggressive advertising campaign to counter criticism of high-fructose corn syrup, saying it "has the same natural sweeteners as table sugar."

The Center for Science in the Public Interest notes that high-fructose corn syrup and sucrose are identical nutritionally, and the harmful effects of high-fructose corn syrup could just be an urban myth. Nevertheless, the group includes the sweetener in its list of additives to be wary of, advising it "may pose a risk and needs to be better tested. Try to avoid."

One of the study's authors has written a book on the potential role of fructose in obesity and fatty liver disease and has a patent on lowering uric acid to reduce fatty liver disease. No other authors had conflicts of interest.

Low-fat, Mediterranean and low-carb diets 'help heart'

Fatty deposits in arteries iincrease the risk of stroke and heart disease

Tuesday, 2 March 2010E-mail this to a friend Printable version http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/health/8543372.stm

Three diets - Mediterranean, low-fat and low-carbohydrate - are equally effective in helping reverse blocked arteries, say Israeli researchers.

The study of 140 people, reported in the journal Circulation, found diet could reduce the fatty build up in arteries.

The Ben-Gurion University team found that by the end of the two-year study, the arterial wall had been cut by 5%.

Experts said the study was interesting, but diet was not a "magic bullet".

Atherosclerosis is a progressive condition in which the arteries thicken with fatty deposits, increasing the risk of heart attacks and strokes.

The authors of this Israeli study, which was carried out in collaboration with researchers in the US, Canada and Germany, set out to see if this natural part of ageing can be reversed through diet.

Volunteers followed one of three diets - a low-fat diet, a low-carbohydrate diet or a Mediterranean diet, which is based on eating lots of fruit and vegetables, and using olive oil as the main source of fat.

They were asked to stick to the diet for two years, and record what they ate in food diaries.

The study was carried out among overweight volunteers, mostly men, who were aged 40 to 65.

Using three-dimensional imaging, the researchers measured the volume of the wall of the carotid artery, the large artery in the neck which takes blood up to the brain. This was done at the start of the study and again after two years.

Clogged arteries

Lead researcher Iris Shai said: "It was very interesting to see that these very different diets had a similar effect.

"Some people suggest that low-carbohydrate diets are more likely to clog arteries, but we did not see that."

The research paper suggested the link could be related to falling blood pressure caused by the change in diet.

The findings were welcomed by UK experts.

Dr Charles Knight, secretary of the British Cardiovascular Society and a consultant cardiologist, said although the study was "relatively small" and was not able to follow through to find out how many people eventually had heart attacks or strokes, the results were nevertheless "very interesting".

He pointed out that the study adds weight to the growing body of research that suggests that atherosclerosis is a modifiable disease.

Ten to 15 years ago, it was thought that fatty build-up in the arteries was irreversible, but since then drugs trials have shown that it is possible for fatty deposits to be cut.

"This study shows you can do something to reduce plaque build-up, even without pills," Dr Knight said.

"It sends an effective message from a public health perspective."

However, he warned that the scale of reduction in the volume of artery walls was relatively small and that changing diet, although helpful, was "no magic bullet".

A Documentary Film by Stephen Kroschel Awarded Honorable Mention in the Feature-Length Documentary Category 2006 New York International Independent Film and Video Festival Filmmaker, Stephen Kroschel, sets out to find hard evidence of the effectiveness of the Gerson Therapy, a long-suppressed natual cancer treatment. His travels take him across both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, from upstate New York to San Diego to Alaska, from Japan to Holland and Mexico. In the end, he presents the testimony of patients, scientists, surgeons and nutritionists, who testify to the effectiveness of the Gerson Therapy and shows the hard scientific evidence to back up their claims. The question that remains is, "Why is this powerful curative therapy still suppressed, more than 75 years after it was clearly proven to cure degenerative disease?"

The Swine Flu vaccine scandal - with full backstory.

On 29 April 2009, Superhuman Radio interviewed Aajonus Vonderplanitz, who explained the true nature of what's going on with the "Swine Flu". Vonderplanitz delves into historical data tying together facts relating to vaccines, the Tamiflu scandal, planned global depopulation, and AIDS - revealing who is behind this man-made conspiracy, and what we can do.

QUOTE

craig-oxley Aug 22 2009:

How do viruses work?

In order to understand how a natural antiviral can counteract a virus, one needs to know a little of how viruses work.

A virus is not alive as we understand life. Outside of a host it is just a speck of DNA or RNA, (genetic material which controls the identity and function of living cells), usually surrounded by a protein coat. It cannot move, divide or do anything by itself. A virus enters your body through a cut, mucous membrane (mouth etc.) or insect bite, and moves with body fluids until it is either discovered by your immune system and destroyed or comes across a type of cell to which it can attach. (Different cells have different receptors which attach to proteins and other substances they need, and the virus coat resembles these proteins).
The cell then ingests (swallows) the virus which releases its genetic material inside the cell. The genetic material gets into the cell nucleus or stays in the surrounding fluid depending on the type of virus and overrides the cell's own genetic material, using the cell's energy and resources to multiply itself rather than the proteins which the cell would normally make in order to function.
Eventually the cell fills up with new viruses and bursts, or they are expelled, depending on the type of virus, enabling them to attach to the adjoining cells and start the process again. There are variations to this process but the aim is always to infiltrate and take over the cell. This usually leads to cell exhaustion and death while the viruses multiply.

I watched The Omen 3 the other day, the one in which Damien Thorn is a grown man (played by Sam Neill) who heads the multi-national corporation Thorn Enterprises. It was noticeable that the logo for the corporation was a pretty blatant OTO, as in the Ordo Templi Orientis. As most people here probably know, the OTO is a group with which Aleister Crowley was very much involved.

bovvered - January 10, 2011 01:45 AM (GMT)

Here are a couple of articles by William Ramsey:

September 11th---The Occult Connection

On September 11th, 2001, four rogue commercial airplanes flew through the skies of the eastern United States, headed toward high value targets in New York and Washington, D.C. Two of the planes, Flights 11 and 175, struck the World Trade Center in lower Manhattan, and within an hour, both massive structures (which should have withstood the impact of each plane) exploded, imploded and collapsed into dust. Flight 77 (or some other aircraft) struck the Pentagon, killing over 200 military personnel. Another commercial airplane, Flight 93, crashed (or was shot down) in the skies above Pennsylvania.

The 9/11 attacks upon the people of the United States, deceptively blamed upon radical Muslims, initiated revolutionary change in the U.S. and the world. The September 11 attacks led to:

1. An imperial presidency in the United States
2. Two wars of aggression in Iraq and Afghanistan, as well as secret conflicts and assassinations throughout the world
3. The renunciation of individual and human rights in the U.S. and Europe
4. The use of torture and the elimination of 900 years of tradition in the revocation of habeus corpus
5. Massive increases in military spending

6. An innovative, technocratic, cradle-to-grave surveillance state in many Western countries
7. The transformation of the character of political institutions in the United States and throughout the world towards globalization.

The false-flag 9/11 attacks provided the Bush administration with an ideal pretext, a new Pearl Harbor, to aggressively push for American global domination. The 9/11 magic show, utilizing the latest advances in technology and propaganda, tricked many people into military and political policies they would otherwise reject, solidifying support in the United States and the world for wars aggression. The attacks also provided the rationale for a Bush administration takeover of the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

The events of September 11th heralded a dark, new standard in American and world affairs. A New World Order, much discussed by American elites in the decades preceding the events of 9/11, began at Ground Zero in Manhattan. A new war began, including a war on an idea--Terror. While one can clearly identify the evils that were wrought from the smoldering ruins of the 9/11 event, is there a darker, more sinister agenda at work? Is there a more malevolent, evil connection to the occult?

The Great Beast

Aleister Crowley (1875-1947), the foremost occultist of the early 20th century, dedicated his life to the dark arts. A wealthy, Cambridge-educated world traveler, Crowley (rhymes with holy) associated with the artistic and cultural luminaries of his era, including such noted figures as Ernest Hemingway, W. B. Yeats and H. L. Mencken. Fully committed to the transformation and illumination of the entire world, Crowley (also known as the Great Beast) wrote numerous books detailing his vision of the ideal society: the strong over the weak, the maintenance of a patriarchal aristocracy ruling over a slave state, and the Darwinian killing of the unfit. According to the Beast, a small elite must rule over the masses: "You will observe that I am advocating an aristocratic revolution. And so I am!"

Is there a connection between Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order that has been overlooked? Has Crowley influenced the ideology of the New World Order? Is there a secret numerical code in the events of 9/11 not understood by the general public? Is there a deeper meaning to the numbers used for the planes on the day of the event? Why are those numbers relevant to Crowley?

The 9/11 Working

If one considers the multitude of numerically significant markers connected to Aleister Crowley, the certainty of occult influence in the events of 9/11 must be concluded. Each of the plane numbers involved in the 9/11 incident refer directly to the prime numbers of Crowley’s system. The numbers of the flights are respectively: 11, 77, 93, 175. Aleister

Crowley wrote about each of these numbers specifically, and emphasized their importance as shown below:

“Firstly”, 11 is the number of Magick in itself. It is therefore suitable to all types of operation.
“Secondly”, it is the sacred number par excellence of the new Aeon. As it is written in the Book of the Law:

> QUOTE
>
> ...11, as all their numbers who are of us. [1]

77:

The sublime and supreme septenary in its mature magical manifestation through matter…written in Hebrew Ayin Zayin (OZ)…Capricornus, the Devil of the Tarot; which is the picture of the Goat of the Sabbath on an altar. [2]

77 also represents half of the formulation of sexual magic in both the O.T.O. and the Kabbalah. [3] It is also the 77 infernal names of the Devil in The Satanic Bible by Anton LaVey. [4]

93:

The cabalistic gematria [5] values of the Greek words Thelema (Will), Agape (Love) and, Aiwass [6] in Crowley's magical system equate to the number 93.

>
> The matter is of extreme importance; because Aiwass in dictating The Book of the Law repeatedly makes use of correspondences in Greek, such as Thelema, Will, 93 --- Agape, Love, 93. 718 = Stele 666, and so on...Thus his own name spelt in Hebrew has the value 93. [7]

175:

Liber 175 in Crowley's magical system is a ritual used to invoke any deity by adoration.

> QUOTE

> There are three main methods of invoking any deity:
>
> The first method consists of devotion to that deity... being mainly mystical in character, they may not be dealt with in this place, especially as a perfect instruction exists in Liber 175.
> The second method is the straightforward ceremonial invocation…
> The third method is the dramatic, perhaps the most attractive of all; certainly it is so to the artist temperament, for it appeals to his imagination through his aesthetic sense. [8]

These numbers are essential to the occult, magical system devised by Aleister Crowley. Thus, Crowley's most important numbers, or "prime" numbers, were inserted in to the 9/11 event intentionally. The likelihood that the numbers appear at random are infinitesimal. I also argue that the numbers 11, 93, 77, and 175 represent a signaling function to all Crowley's followers in the global occult community that the events were an "inside job."

Thus, based on the numerical markers, we can observe the demonic, Crowleyean influence upon the events of 9/11 and sense the hidden, occult agenda behind the event. To better understand Crowley's connection to September 11th, a detailed explication of this hidden tie is contained in my book Prophet of Evil: Aleister Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order, available on Kindle and at my website: www. occult911. com.

False Flag Terror---The Occult Connection

During the imperial Bush presidency, many ostensibly terrorist-inspired bombings took place throughout the world. In particular, there were attacks in the following cities:

New York, United States
Bali, Indonesia
Madrid, Spain
London, England
Amman, Jordan

These attacks shocked the world and convinced the global populace that a "War on Terror" was necessary to ensure their safety. However, upon investigation, many of the so-called terrorist bombings and/or attacks were revealed to be false flag operations. These false flag operations seem to have the intent to propel a covert agenda of global war and globalization. Does this secret agenda have an even darker connection to the occult? Do the dates of these attacks have particular meaning in the occult?

Prophet of the New Age

Aleister Crowley, born October 12th, 1875 was born into a wealthy family in Warwickshire, England. Crowley (rhymes with holy) rebelled against the Christian morality of his parents and committed himself to a life of occultism. A well-educated and talented litterateur, Crowley wrote many volumes of occult works detailing his dark vision of the future. He believed that, "despite all its drawbacks, there was never a better social system than the feudal, so far as it derived from the patriarchal." [1] He also stated that the government must lord over and manage hordes of ignorant masses:

> We should have no compunction in utilizing the natural qualities of the bulk of mankind. We do not insist on trying to train sheep to hunt foxes or lecture on history; we look after their physical well-being, and enjoy their wool, and mutton. In this way, we shall have a contented class of slaves who accept the conditions of existence as they really are, and enjoy life with the quiet wisdom of the cattle. [2]

Is there a connection between Crowley and the false flag terror events that has been overlooked? Is there a deeper meaning to the dates of the terror events? Why are those numbers relevant to Crowley?

Occult Numerology

The number 11 is the number most important to Aleister Crowley. He learned of the symbolic meaning of the number from his research into the occult in the later part of the nineteenth century. As a member of the quasi-Masonic magical group The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, he was exposed to writings of the groups founders. William Wynn Westcott, one of the original organizers of the Golden Dawn, refers to the number eleven in his book Numbers: Their Occult Powers and Mystic Virtue:

>
> Upon the Number Eleven. This seems to have been the type of number with a evil reputation among all peoples. The Kabbalists contrasted it with the perfection of the Decad, (10) and just as the Sephirotic number is the form of all good things, so eleven is the essence of all that is sinful, harmful and imperfect; with the Ten Sephiroth they contrasted the Eleven Averse Sephiroth, symbols of destruction, violence, defeat, and death. [3]

Aleister Crowley wrote about the number 11 frequently, and emphasized it's importance as shown below:

> QUOTE
> Firstly”, 11 is the number of Magick in itself. It is therefore suitable to all types of operation. “Secondly”, it is the sacred number par excellence of the new Aeon. As it is written in the Book of the Law: ...11, as all their numbers who are of us. [4]

Crowley's much repeated phase "Do What Thou Wilt Shall Be The Whole Of The Law" (which he considered the dictum of the New Age), has eleven words and eleven syllables. Based on the preceding information, eleven is a crucial number in Crowley's religious system.

The number 77 also has an important meaning to Crowley and his followers. According to Crowley, 77 is the:

>
> ...sublime and supreme septenary in its mature magical manifestation through matter…written in Hebrew Ayin Zayin (OZ)…Capricornus, the Devil of the Tarot; which is the picture of the Goat of the Sabbath on an altar. [5]

77 also represents half of the formulation of sexual magic in both the O.T.O. and the Kabbalah. [6] It also refers to the 77 infernal names of the Devil in book The Satanic Bible by Anton LaVey. [7]

88 is an important number for what can be termed the Illuminati and refers to number of squares on a chess board, a symbol of the capacities of the human mind. [8]

10/12 is an occult feast celebrating the birth of the Prophet of the New Aeon--Aleister Crowley.

Thus, 11, 77 and 88, and 10/12, the satanic feast for Aleister Crowley's birthday, called Crowleymas, are significant numerical markers for the occult practitioner. Did each of these terror attacks have an occult numerical marker? Were the attacks situated on certain dates for occult reasons?

Here are the following events in the phony “War on Terror” with occult, numerical significance:

10/12 (2000)---U.S.S. Cole Bombing. A false-flag terrorist attack against the United States Navy destroyer U.S.S. Cole on October 12, 2000 while it was harbored and refueling in the Yemeni port of Aden. 17 American sailors were killed, and 39 were injured. The attack occurred on Crowleymas, Aleister Crowley’s birthday.

9/11 (2001)---9/11. The false-flag September 11 attacks used four commercial passenger jet airliners. Two of the airplanes, Flights 11 and 175, crashed into the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in New York City, killing everyone on board and many others in the buildings. Both buildings imploded within two hours. A third airplane, Flight 77, crashed into the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia. The fourth airplane, Flight 93, crashed (or was shot down) near Shanksville in rural Pennsylvania. The attacks killed 3,000 people.

10/12 (2002)---Bali Bombings. The false-flag Bali bombings occurred on October 12th, 2002 in the tourist district of Kuta on the Indonesian island of Bali. The coordinated attack involved the detonation of three bombs: a backpack-mounted device carried by a suicide bomber; a large car bomb, both of which were detonated in or near popular nightclubs in Kuta; and a third much smaller device detonated outside the United States consulate in Denpasar, causing only minor damage. The bombings killed 202 people and injured 240. The bombings occurred on Crowleymas, Aleister Crowley’s birthday.

3/11 (2004)---Madrid bombings. The false-flag Madrid train bombings consisted of a series of coordinated bombings against the commuter train system of Madrid, Spain on the morning of March 11th, 2004 The Madrid bombings occurred three days before Spain's general elections. The bombings killed 191 people and roughly 1,800 injured. The bombing occurred 911 days after the September 11th attacks.

7/7 (2005)---London "7/7" bombing. The false-flag London bombings (often referred to as 7/7) were a series of coordinated suicide attacks upon London's public transport system. Four unwitting patsies were guided to locations in the London Underground.

where three bombs were exploded. A fourth bomb exploded an hour later on a red double-decker bus in Tavistock Square. The bombings killed 52 people and roughly 700 were injured.

11/9 (2005)---Amman, Jordan bombing. The false-flag bombings were a series of coordinated bomb attacks on three hotels in Amman, Jordan, on November 9, 2005. The bombings killed 60 people and injured 115 others.

8/8 (2008)---an attempted U.S. war with Russia, using Georgia as a proxy. During the night of August 8th, Georgia launched a large-scale military attack against South Ossetia, in an attempt to conquer the territory. The following day Russia reacted by deploying combat troops in South Ossetia and launching bombing raids deep into Georgia.

Clearly, these major terrorist bombings were situated on dates containing the numbers 11, 77, 88 and Aleister Crowley's birthday. Based on the numerical significance of the dates of these false-flag terror events, an occult correlation can be made. When the bombings are listed together, one can clearly discern the hidden, occult agenda for war and greater global control. A detailed analysis of Crowley's connection to these events is contained in my book Prophet of Evil: Aleister Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order, available on Kindle and at my website: www.occult911.com.

8. The Law of Octaves was first suggested by Pythagoras in ancient Greece. Having observed that the eight notes of the conventional Occidental musical scale were governed by definite mathematical relationships, Pythagoras proceeded to create a whole cosmology based on 8s. In this octagonal model Pythagoras made numerous mistakes, because he was generalizing from insufficient data. However, his work was the first attempt in history to unify science, mathematics, art and mysticism into one comprehensible system and as such is still influential. Leary, Crowley and Buckminster Fuller have all described themselves as modern Pythagoreans. In China, roughly contemporary with Pythagoras, the Taoists built up a cosmology based on the interplay of yang (positive) and yin (negative), which produced the eight trigrams of the I Ching, out of which are generated the 64 hexagrams. In India, Buddha announced, after his illumination under the Bodhi tree, the Noble Eightfold Path. Patanjali subsequently reduced the science of yoga to eight "limbs" or, as we might say, eight "steps." The game of chess appeared, somewhere in the East, with a grid based on 8x8 (64) squares. Peter Levenda - Secret Space Program & NASA's Nazis
February 27, 2011

QUOTE

Peter Levenda is an author who focuses primarily on occult history. Peter has visited more than 40 countries and gained access to temples, prisons, military installations, and government documents for his research. He is president of the international division of a telecommunications company and the author of Unholy Alliance. Peter Levenda's quest for the truth began in 1979 while reading Aftermath: Martin Bormann and the Fourth Reich, by Ladislas Farago, about how Hitler's former Riechsleiter had escaped to South America after the war pretending to be a priest, protected by the "underground railroad" of Nazi sympathizers that operated and still operate all over that continent. In this program, he discusses his work and research on the theme of the secret space program of NASA and the connection to the occult agenda of the Nazis. Peter details how the background of this philosophy spawned from people involved in various Catholic orders, adopted and refined by the Nazis and later it transitioned over to NASA via Project Paperclip. In his book "Unholy Alliance: A History of Nazi Involvement with the Occult" he describes this research in detail. He is also the author of the "Sinister Forces Triology", "Stairway to Heaven: Chinese Alchemists, Jewish Kabbalists, and the Art of Spiritual Transformation" and "The Secret Temple: Masons, Mysteries, and the Founding of America". Topics Discussed: America, Nazi connections, Ratlines, Klaus Barbie, Martin Bormann, Walter Dornberger, Vatican, peadophilia, Spelman, Knights of Malta, Secret Space Program, paranoiac Egypt, religion, theosophy, Ahnenerbe, theosophy hijacked, Jörg Lanz Von Libenfeldt, Guido Von List, Cistercian order, 1939 expedition to Tibet, Operation Condor, Bruno Beger, flying saucers, 1947 and Nazi ideology.

Peter Levenda - South American Nazis, Operation Condor & NASAs Space Program
February 27, 2011

QUOTE

In the second hour with Peter Levenda, we talk about the Nazis escape after World War II. The Vatican Ratlines took many to South America. We talk specifically about Augusto Pinoche, the Fascist dictator in Chile, Colonia Dignidad (Villa Baviera) and Operation Condor. How much of the illegal drug trade has been a means of funding for ex-Nazis? We also talk about the development of alternative energy, star drive and what the secret space program is all about. Peter talks about NASA and what they have been doing all these years while private companies are now going into space. Topics Discussed: Pinoche, Chile, Colonia Dignidad, Fascists, drugs, Iran Contra, Operation Condor, Secret Space Program, alternative energy, star drive, Bendix Corporation, private companies, Boeing, Raytheon, Lockheed Martin, NASA and more.

> Called by Wired Magazine an "authority on the hermetic and alchemical traditions," and "erudite conspiracy hunter," Jay Weidner is a renowned author, filmmaker and hermetic scholar. Considered to be a "modern-day Indiana Jones" for his ongoing worldwide quests to find clues to mankind's spiritual destiny via ancient societies and artifacts, his body of work offers great insight into the circumstances that have led to the current global crisis. He is the producer of the documentary films, "2012 The Odyssey", its sequel "Timewave 2013" and "Infinity; The Ultimate Trip". Jay joins us to discuss his latest film "Kubrick's Odyssey: Secrets Hidden in the films of Stanley Kubrick". The acclaimed American film director Stanley Kubrick told an important story with all his films and they all connect with each other and communicate a message. The question is if Kubrick was murdered considering what he trying to reveal with his films. We start to examine the film "Eyes Wide Shut" and how it connects with mind control, the elite, satanic, archonic, and demonic forces. We also discuss the Brotherhood of Saturn, the secret space program and Arthur C. Clarke. Topics Discussed: Kubric's Odyssey, Eyes Wide Shut, Operation Monarch, occult, sex-cults, Kubrick murdered, storytelling with films, A.I., pedophilia, Archons, Demons, Lolita, bear symbolism, Jim Garrison, Lee Harvey Oswald, NASA, the real space program, Babalon Bunch, Saturnian Society, JPL, the ringmakers, hexagonal rings on Saturn, Jupiter, Zeus, Saturn, Set, Buzz Aldrin comments on the Monolith Phobos, Lord of the Rings, Iapateus, Sargon, rings of Saturn, time trap and more.

Jay Weidner - The Clash of Civilizations & Pike's Three World Wars
March 6, 2011

QUOTE

In the second hour with Jay Weidner we begin to discuss Albert Pike's letter to Giuseppe Mazzini detailing a plan for three world wars. The letter described how Islam, Zionism and Christianity will destroy each other and in the process start a third world war. We also talk about the clash of civilizations, problems with multiculturalism, urban civil war, culture wars, gang wars and the insanity of religion. Current developments in both Europe and America are suggesting that clash of civilizations now is a reality. We also talk about 2012 with Jay, the information revolution, knowledge as solution and the rebellion of the intelligent. Don't miss this important second hour two with Jay Weidner. Topics discussed: Albert Pike's plan of three world wars, Abrahamic religions, Leo Strauss, religion, Islam, Christianity, Zionism, mind control, Clash of Civilizations, A.I., Mecca, mecha, gang wars, losing humanity, 2012, messiah complex, information revolution, knowledge, the Illuminati, Max Keiser, buying silver crashing J.P. Morgan, rebellion of the intelligent, problems with multiculturalism and more.

Tracy Twyman - Alconomics, Money & Magic - mp3
February 15, 2011

QUOTE

Tracy Twyman is a prolific author and commentator who approaches historical research from an esoteric perspective.She is probably best known for her book The Merovingian Mythos and her underground cult magazine Dagobert's Revenge, in recent years she has pioneered what she calls "Alchenomics": the study of relationship between alchemy, economics, and the evolution of money through the ages. Her works on this subject include her 2005 book Solomon's Treasure: The Magic and Mystery of America's Money and her most recent book, Money Grows on the Tree of Knowledge. In this interview, Tracy talks about her latest work. Topics Discussed: ritual magic, alchemy, the origin of the dollar sign and the word, the Hapsburg dynasty, "Plus Ultra", Chez Republic, tallers, Tyer, currency, rod of Asclepius, healing, serpent icons, Nehushtan, Jesus, Nicholas De Vere, Bretton Woods, L A Waddell, monetary system an alchemical system, trust in God, green, talismans, Francis Bacon, the Unitas, the bancor, SDR's (special drawings rights), magic tricks and more.

Aaron Franz - The Philosophical Roots of Transhumanism - mp3
February 20, 2011

>
> Aaron Franz is an author, filmmaker, and researcher whose work covers various subjects including: technological singularity, transhumanism, public relations, propaganda, occult symbolism, esoteric religion, eugenics, geopolitics and mind control. In this program, Aaron talks about his new book,"Revolve." Is technology speeding up human evolution or are we just spinning our wheels? Artificial intelligence, nanotechnology, implantable chips, and life extension and many other technologies are being promoted as the way for humanity to become something radically different. The transhumanist movement claims that by applying them to our biology, we will become posthuman. A new religion for a new age is being born, and it centers around man's scientific attainment of eternal life. Topics Discussed: Revolve, revolution, AI, TV-series, transhumanism, privacy, the mind of god, the new man, the new system, technology, manifesting yourself, dissolution, free will, manipulation of perception, eugenics movement, philosophies, telepathy, artificial revolution, people devoid of spirituality and human evolution.

Aaron Franz - Technological Revolution, Hope & Dystopia

> QUOTE

In the second hour, Aaron talks about where modern civilization is heading and what it might be like for those who say no to the technological revolution. We also talk about how virtual video game reality is slowly merging with reality. Aaron talks about how converging technologies are dismantling every human value that we hold sacred in this age. He delves into the occult side of this project. It uncovers many aspects of a hidden esoteric religion that has existed globally for thousands of years. The ancient mysteries are alive and well today, and they are actually the inspiration for scientific progress. We are being hit with powerful messages persuading us to "upgrade," that employ ancient and powerful alchemical motifs. Later, Aaron discusses the aspects of hope in the dystopian picture of the robotic future.

The Informer is by profession a researcher of 40 years and worked for major 500 companies. He started the legal research into government as a whole in 1979 and went heavy into the taxation part, all phases, in 1981, and continues to this day. He is retired and uses his cognitive skills of 40 years to continue studying. His history research came about because of the government research that uncovered many inconsistencies in what people perceive to be true about government, but which is not. His inquiries and study led him to other historical researchers nationwide. These findings show governments are run by people other than the common man and woman of America and is not the "representative form" as people believe.

Vyzygoth has recently put some of the Informer's writings up on TOBE as PDFs - http://www.thinkorbeeaten.com/informer/index.html

James Corbett - Geopolitics, Eugenics & Depopulation
January 21, 2011

QUOTE

From Canada, James Corbett is an independent journalist who has been living and working in Japan since 2004. He has been writing and producing The Corbett Report, an online multi-media news and information source, since 2007. His forthcoming book, Reportage: Essays on the New World Order, will be available for purchase in early 2011. He joins us from Japan to discuss the big picture from a geopolitical and conspiratorial point of view. We highlight areas such as the manipulation of the financial system and currencies. We talk about the banks and the bailouts. Then, we connect the eugenics agenda and the ongoing chemical castration of men with estrogen mimicking chemicals in waterbottles and many other plastic products. Is this part of the de-population agenda? Later, we talk about the GMO and pharmacological agenda that is being ran by the psychopathic elite with the aid of the corporate media. Topics Discussed: the Corbett Report, news and media in Japan, the financial system, international news, Amero, North American currency, Washington DC, the philosophy of the panopticon, international currency, the surveillance society, eugenics, Galton and Darwin interbreeding, Bisphenol-A, psychopathic elite, economic system, generational, doing good, compartmentalization, Syngenta, Monsanto, John P. Wheeler III, dead microbiologists, swine flu and bird flu.

James Corbett - Transhumanism, Neofeudalism & the Green Movement
January 21, 2011

QUOTE

Don't miss our second hour together with James Corbett as we proceed to discuss where the establishment is heading next with transhumanism, new technology, robotics and cyber warfare. We move on and discuss James' coverage of the climategate issue and detail the ongoing fraud of anthropogenic global warming while a neo-feudalist socialist style of government is being built up around us. The green movement is far darker than most people know and the suggestion of a global carbon tax is just the beginning. Topics Discussed: transhumanism, eugenics, commercial robot development, de-centralize control, EU, law, bureaucracy, will they crumble under their own weight, artificial intelligence, new technology, free energy, climategate, CRU, neo-feudalism, socialism, green movement, real climate, carbon tax, leaked, cyber warfare, Wikileaks, planned agenda, alternative currency, local exchange trading systems and more.

She does not prove the nuclear detonation wrong at all. You're still trying to counter intelligence Dimitri it seems. I tell you what lets see this Judy Wood walk down a street in the U.S. and watch her go about her daily life no problems at all. Now lets take Dimitri to the U.S. and let him walk down the same street. What do you think is going to happen to Dimitri very quickly indeed? He will be taken or even shot dead there and then. Doesn't this tell you something?

I agree, no individual proves the nuke theory wrong. It's the available evidence that proves the nuke theory wrong.

You can either accept all of the data or ignore all the data that doesn't fit in with whatever theory you prefer, as the authorized 9/11 "truth movement" does.

>
> You're still trying to counter intelligence Dimitri it seems.

If that's just a way of saying that I don't accept his nuke theory, does that also mean that you are trying to counter intelligence Dr Judy Wood?

> QUOTE
>
> I tell you what lets see this Judy Wood walk down a street in the U.S. and watch her go about her daily life no problems at all.

I don't know whether Dr Wood has any such problems in her daily life or not. I do know that one of her students was murdered, and I believe that she has received death threats.

Assuming that's true, it tells you that people want him dead.

Obviously that doesn't prove his nuke theory correct. The evidence is not negated by the fact that there are people who want someone dead, whether that someone ignores some of the evidence or not.

Judy Wood - Where Did the Towers Go?
January 18, 2011

QUOTE

Judy D. Wood is a former professor of mechanical engineering with research interests in experimental stress analysis, structural mechanics, optical methods, deformation analysis, and the materials characterization of biomaterials and composite materials. She is a member of the Society for Experimental Mechanics (SEM), co-founded SEM's Biological Systems and Materials Division, and has served on the SEM Composite Materials Technical Division. Dr. Wood received her B.S. (Civil Engineering, 1981) (Structural Engineering), M.S. Engineering Mechanics (Applied Physics), 1983), and Ph.D. (Materials Engineering Science, 1992). Dr. Wood started to question the events of 9/11 on that same day when what she saw and heard on television was contradictory and appeared to violate the laws of physics. Since that day she has used her knowledge of engineering mechanics to prove that the collapse of the World Trade Center twin towers could not have happened as the American public was told. In this interview, Judy Wood talks about her book "Where Did the Towers Go?" The book is the culmination of years of work and study that she's been presenting on her website DrJudyWood.com about the destruction of the World Trade Center buildings on 9/11 2001. She has been tracking and collecting many of the anomalies witnessed on that day and found evidence for a strange effect related to the work of John Hutchison called "The Hutchison Effect. We discuss how directed-energy weapons might have been involved in destroying the towers. Topics Discussed: forensics, interference energy, John Hutchinson, hurricane Erin, tornados, towers turning to dust, anomalies, strange effects, physics, WTC4, WTC7, NIST, classified technology, the billiard ball example and more.

Part 2

Judy Wood - 9/11 Anomalies & Directed-Energy Weapons
January 18, 2011

QUOTE

In our second hour with Judy Wood, we proceed to discuss more of the anomalies surrounding 9/11 and why the towers were destroyed. Were there planes involved in the destruction of the towers? If not, what happened to the hijacked planes? We address the "jumpers", the people that jumped from the towers and why many of them were missing shirts and other clothing. There have been a number of other strange effects observed and witnessed that we address. Where did all the rubble go? What is the physics behind the Hutchison Effect and how was it produced? We conclude discussing Judy's theory about the dead birds that recently fell out of the sky in many countries across the world and the strange radar data possibly showing evidence for the use of advanced energy weaponry.

THE SATANIC ROOTS OF ROCK

by Donald Phau
http://www.av1611.org/othpubls/roots.html

NOTE. Through out the article we (Dial-the-Truth Ministries) have added some additions/comments. Our comments are in BLUE.

Today, at almost any "heavy-metal" rock concert one can hear the audience being exhorted to rape and murder in the name of Satan. Lyrics such as the following are typical:

"We come bursting through your bodies

Rape your helpless soul
Transform you into a creature
Merciless and cold
We force you to kill your brother
Eat his blood and brain
Shredding flesh and sucking bone
Till everyone's insane
We are pestilent and contaminate
The world Demonic legions prevail"
"DEMONS" by Rigor Mortis

Any loving parent today would be horrified and shocked to learn that their sons and daughters are eagerly listening to such evil. Perhaps though, some may think privately, "If only we could return to the 'good old days,' with the music of the Beatles." Little do most people suspect that it was with those innocent-looking Beatles, that most of the trouble started.

Modern electronic-rock music, inaugurated in the early 1960s, is, and always has been, a joint enterprise of British military intelligence and Satanic cults. On the one side, the Satanists control the major rock groups through drugs, sex, threats of violence, and even murder. On the otherside, publicity, tours, and recordings are financed by record companies connected to British military intelligence circles. Both sides are intimately entwined with the biggest business in the world, the international drug trade.

The so-called "rock stars" are pathetic puppets caught in a much larger scheme. From the moment they receive their first recording royalties, the groups are heavily immersed in drugs. For example, much-admired "stars" such as John Lennon of the Beatles and Keith Richard of the Rolling Stones, were heroin addicts. Richard had to obtain blood transfusions, replacing his entire heroin-laced blood supply, in order to get a visa to enter the United States. (Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.319)

The "rock stars" are also totally artificial media creations. Their public image, as well as their music, is fabricated from behind the scenes by controllers. For example, when the Beatles first arrived in the United States in 1964, they were mobbed at the airport by hundreds of screaming teenage girls. The national press immediately announced that "Beatlemania" had besieged the U.S.A. But the girls had all been transported from a girl's school in the Bronx, and paid for their screaming performance by the Beatles' promoters.

The money of the 1960s rock groups, which in somes cases mounted to hundreds of millions of dollars, was also totally under the control of mob-connected promoters. From 1963 to 1970, the Rolling Stones made over $200 million, yet the group's members were all nearly bankrupt. None of them had any idea of where their money went.

Between 1963 and 1964 the Beatles and the Rolling Stones laid siege to Western European and American culture. This two-pronged invasion from England was well-planned and well-timed. America had just suffered the shock of the assassination of President John Kennedy, while in the streets the mass-based civil rights movement had just held a Washington, D.C. rally, led by Martin Luther King, of 500,000 people. The rock counterculture would be used as a weapon to destroy such political movements.

Later in 1968 and 1969, years which saw a mass strike of students and workers in the United States and Europe, huge, open-air rock concerts were used to head off the growing discontent of the population. The rock concerts were devised as a means for mass recruitment to the drug-saturated, free-sex counterculture. For the millions who came to these concerts, thousands of tablets of the hallucinogenic drug, LSD, were made freely avaliable. These drugs were secretly placed in drinks such as Coca-Cola, turning thousands of unsuspecting victims into raving psychotics. Many committed suicide.

Less than a half century ago, our young children studied violin and piano, learning about the great classical composers such as Bach, Mozart, and Beethoven. As will be shown, the same record companies who today promote Satanic "heavy-metal" rock have run covert operations to destroy the musical heritage of these great classical composers.

For the past thirty years, Western society has been under the gun of a deliberate plan of cultural warfare, with the purpose of eliminating Judeo-Christian civilization as we know it. These plans must not succeed. So that the reader can better combat this evil, we'll go back nearly thirty years, when those four innocent lads from Liverpool, England, the Beatles, were just starting out.
Creating the Beatles

The Beatles first began performing in the late 1950s in jazz clubs in England and West Germany. These clubs, always located in the seediest part of the cities, served as a marketplace for prostitution and the circulation of drugs. Beatle biographer Philip Norman writes: "Their only regular engagement was a strip club. The club owner paid them ten shillings each to strum their guitars while a stripper named Janice grimly shed her clothes before an audience of sailors, guilty businessmen and habitues with raincoat-covered laps." (Philip Norman, Shout! The Beatles in Their Generation, p. 81)

The Beatles got their first big break in Germany, in August 1960, when they obtained a booking at a jazz club in Hamburg's notorious Reeperbahn district. Describing the area Norman writes it had, "red-lit windows containing whores in every type of fancy dress, all ages from nymphet to granny...Everything was free. Everything was easy. The sex was easy... Here it came after you." (Philip Norman, Shout! The Beatles in Their Generation, p. 91)

Far from the picture of innocence, the Beatles, even in their first performances, were always high on a drug called Preludin, "John (Lennon), would be foaming at the mouth, he'd have so many pills inside him...John, began to go berserk on stage, prancing and groveling...The fact that the audience could not understand a word he said, provoked John into cries of `Sieg Heil!' and `F____ing Nazis' to which the audience invariably responded by laughing and clapping." (Philip Norman, Shout! The Beatles in Their Generation, pp. 152,91)

Off the stage, the Beatles were just as evil. Norman continues, "while in Hamburg, John, each Sunday would stand on the balcony, taunting the churchgoers as they walked to St. Joseph's. He attached a water-filled contraceptive to an effigy of Jesus and hung it out for the churchgoers to see. Once he urinated on the heads of three nuns."(Philip Norman, Shout! The Beatles in Their Generation, p. 152)

While in Hamburg, in June of 1962 the Beatles received a telegram from their manager, a homosexual named Brian Epstein, who was back in England. "Congratulations," Epstein's message read. "EMI requests a recording session." EMI was one of Europe's largest record producers, and their role in promoting the Beatles would be key in the future.

Under the the strict guidance of EMI's recording director George Martin, and Brian Epstein, the Beatles were scrubbed, washed, and their hair styled into the Beatles cut. EMI's Martin created the Beatles in his recording studio.

Martin was a trained classical musician, and had studied the oboe and piano at the London School of Music. The Beatles could neither read music nor play any instrument other than guitar. For Martin, the Beatles musicianship was a bad joke. On their first hit record, "Love Me Do," Martin replaced Ringo on the drums with a studio musician. Martin said Ringo, "couldn't do a [drum] roll to save his life." From then on, Martin would take the simple little tunes the Beatles would come to him with, and turn them into hit records.
Lockwood and EMI

EMI, led by aristocrat Sir Joseph Lockwood, stands for Electrical and Mechanical Instruments, and is one of Britain's largest producers of military electronics. Martin was director of EMI's subsidiary, Parlophone. By the mid-sixties EMI, now called Thorn EMI, created a music divison which had grown to 74,321 employees and had annual sales of $3.19 billion.

EMI was also a key member of Britain's military intelligence establishment.

After the war, in 1945, EMI's European production head Walter Legge virtually took over control of classical music recordings, signing up dozens of starving German classical musicians and singers to EMI contracts. Musicians who sought to preserve the performance tradition of Beethoven and Brahms, were relegated to obscurity while "ex-Nazi" Party members were promoted. Legge signed and recorded Nazi member, the late Herbert Von Karajan, promoting him to superstar status, while great conductors such as Wilhelm Furtwangler were ignored.

From the beginning, EMI created the myth of the Beatles' great popularity. In August of 1963, at their first major television appearance at the London Palladium, thousands of their fans supposedly rioted. The next day every mass-circulation newspaper in Great Britain carried a front page picture and story stating, "Police fought to hold back 1,000 squealing teenagers." Yet, the picture displayed in each newspaper was cropped so closely that only three or four of the "squealing teenagers" could be seen. The story was a fraud. According to a photographer on the scene, "There were no riots. I was there. We saw eight girls, even less than eight."(Philip Norman, Shout! The Beatles in Their Generation, p. 188)

In February 1964, the Beatles myth hit the United States, complete with the orchestrated riots at Kennedy Airport, previously mentioned. To launch their first tour, the media created one of the largest mass audiences in history. For an unprecedented two Sundays in a row, on the Ed Sullivan Show, over 75 million Americans watched the Beatles shake their heads and sway their bodies in a ritual which was soon to be replicated by hundreds of future rock groups.

On returning to England, the Beatles were rewarded by the British aristocracy they served so well . In October 1965, the four were inducted into the Order of Chivalry, and were personally awarded the accolade of Member of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham palace.
Up from the Dregs:

The Rolling Stones

The credit for the origination of today's blatantly Satanic "heavy metal rock," goes to the English group, the Rolling Stones. Their rise to fame was closely connected with that of the Beatles.

The Stones, as they were called, were widely characterized as the counterparts to the Beatles. "The Stones" were "mean," "dirty" and "rebellious," whereas the Beatles were the well-groomed "Fab Four." Though seemingly competitors, they were merely two sides of the same operation. The Stones' first hit record was actually written by the Beatles, and it was Beatle member George Harrison who set up the arrangements for their first recording contract.

Following the same game plan as the Beatles, in the spring of 1963 the Rolling Stones appeared on one of England's most popular family television shows, Thank Your Lucky Stars. Only this time, the reaction by the middle-aged viewers was quite different from that to the Beatles. Hundreds of angry letters were sent, with a typical letter stating "It is disgraceful that long-haired louts such as these should be allowed to appear on television. Their appearance was absolutely disgusting."

The program, however, had exactly the planned effect. Rolling Stones' manager Andrew Oldham was elated at the response. He told the group, "We're going to make you exactly opposite to those nice, clean, tidy Beatles. And the more the parents hate you, the more the kids will love you. Just wait and see."(Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.17)

In 1964, the Rolling Stones appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show, as the Beatles had done earlier. This time though, the coast-to-coast audience beheld the spectacle of the television studio being ripped to shreds by Stones fans. Sullivan said on the air afterward, "I promise you, they will never be back on our show." The publicity, however, was exactly what was wanted. Within a few months, the group's records were selling millions of copies.

The plan was now to use both the Beatles and the Rolling Stones as the means to transform an entire generation into heathen followers of the New Age, followers which could mold into the future cadre of a Satanic movement and then deploy into our schools, law enforcment agencies and political leadership.
Enter Satan

In his book, The Ultimate Evil, investigator-author Maury Terry writes that between 1966 and 1967, the Satanic cult, the Process Church, "sought to recruit the Rolling Stones and the Beatles." During this period, Terry reports that a photo of Rolling Stones leader Mick Jagger's longtime girlfriend, Marianne Faithfull, appeared in an issue of The Process Magazine. The picture shows her supine, as if dead, clutching a rose. Terry's book goes on to implicate the Process Church cult in the Charles Manson and Son of Sam multiple murders. It was the former lawyer for the Process Church, John Markham, who recently ran the frameup trial against Lyndon LaRouche.

A key link between the Rolling Stones and the Process Church is Kenneth Anger, a follower of the "founding father" of modern Satanism, Aleister Crowley. Anger, born in 1930, and a child Hollywood movie star, became a devoted disciple of Crowley.

Crowley was born in 1875 and was called the "Great Beast." He was known to practice ritual child sacrifice regularly, in his role as Satan's high priest or "Magus." Crowley died in 1947 due to complications of his huge heroin addiction. Before dying, he succeeded in establishing Satanic covens in many U.S. cities including Hollywood. Anger, like Crowley, is a Magus, and appears to be the heir to Crowley.

Anger was seventeen years old when Crowley died. In that same year, 1947, Anger was already producing and directing films which, even by today's standards, reek of pure evil.

During 1966-1967, when the Process Church is reported to be recruiting in London, Anger was also on the scene. Author Tony Sanchez describes that Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger and Keith Richard, and their girlfriends Marianne Faithfull and Anita Pallenburg, "listened spellbound as Anger turned them on to Crowley's powers and ideas."(Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.155)

While in England, Anger worked on a film dedicated to Aleister Crowley, called Lucifer Rising. The film brought together the Process Church, the Manson Family cult, and the Rolling Stones. The music for the film was composed by Mick Jagger. Process Church follower Marianne Faithfull went all the way to Egypt to participate in the film's depiction of a Black Mass. The part of Lucifer was played by a guitarist of a California rock group, Bobby Beausoleil. Beausoleil was a member of the Manson Family, and Anger's homosexual lover.

A few months after filming under Anger's direction in England, Beausoleil returned to California to commit the first of the Manson family's series of gruesome murders. Beausoleil was later arrested and is now serving a life sentence in prison along with Manson. Having lost his star performer, Anger then asked Mick Jagger to play Lucifer. He finally settled upon Anton La Vey, author of The Satanic Bible and head of the First Church of Satan, to play the part. The film was released in 1969 with the title Invocation To My Demon Brother.

In London, Anger had succeeded in recruiting to Satanism the girlfriend of one of the Rolling Stones, Anita Pallenberg. Pallenberg had met the Rolling Stones in 1965. She immediately began sexual relations with three out of the five members of the group.

Anger, commenting on Anita, said, "I believe that Anita is, for want of a better word, a witch...The occult unit within the Stones was Keith and Anita...and Brian. You see, Brian was a witch too."

One of the group's friends, Tony Sanchez, writes of Pallenberg in his book, Up and Down with the Rolling Stones, "She was obsessed with black magic and began to carry a string of garlic with her everywhere--even to bed--to ward off vampires. She also had a strange mysterious old shaker for holy water which she used for some of her rituals. Her ceremonies became increasingly secret, and she warned me never to interrupt her when she was working on a spell."(Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.159)

He continues, "In her bedroom she kept a huge, ornate carved chest, which she guarded so jealously that I assumed it was her drug stash. The house was empty one day, and I decided to take a peep inside. The drawers were filled with scraps of bone, wrinkled skin and fur from some strange animals."(Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.159)

In 1980, the seventeen-year-old caretaker of Keith Richard's New England estate was found shot to death in Anita Pallenberg's bed. The death, ruled a suicide, was with Pallenberg's gun. Richard's house was located near the East Coast headquarters of the Process Church. According to an article in the English newspaper Midnite, a Connecticut police officer, Michael Passaro, who had responed to the "suicide" reported "strange singing" from the woods a quarter mile from the Richard's mansion.

The newpaper continues, "There have been several bizarre satanic rituals in the area over the past five years. A local reporter attributed the outbreak of occultism to 'rich people taking Acid.'"

In 1967, reflecting their ongoing association with Anger and the Process Church, the Rolling Stones released their first rock album openly celebrating the Devil, titled, Their Satanic Majesties Request. A few months earlier, the Beatles had released their first album dedicated to the promotion of psychedelic drugs, Sargeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. The album contained a fantasized version of an LSD trip, called "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds", or L.S.D. for short. It became a top seller.

Clearly, the Beatles' album was dedicated to Satanist Aleister Crowley. It was released 20 years, nearly to the day, after Crowley's death in 1947, and its title song began with the lyrics, "It was twenty years ago today..." The album's cover featured a picture of Crowley.

One month after the album's release, the Beatles shocked the world by announcing, publicly, that they were regularly taking LSD. Beatle member Paul McCartney, in an interview with Life magazine said, "LSD opened my eyes. We only use one-tenth of our brain." They also publicly called for the legalization of marijuana.

The cat was now out of the bag, but the protests were few and minor. In England, the BBC banned "A Day in the Life," and in the U.S.A., Maryland Governor Spiro T.Agnew, who would later be watergated, launched a campaign to ban "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds."Dial-the-

ROCK MUSIC AND ALIESTER CROWLEY

Aliester Crowley is without a doubt, the main spiritual "teacher" of rock music. Crowley's mission in life was to destroy Jesus Christ and Christianity, while exalting sex perversion, drugs, magick and Satan.

Aliester Crowley spews his hatred of Jesus Christ in The World's Tragedy:
"I do not wish to argue that the doctrines of Jesus, they and they alone, have degraded the world to it's present condition. I take it that Christianity is not only the cause but the symptom of slavery." (Aleister Crowley, The World's Tragedy, p. XXXIX)

"That religion they call Christianity; the devil they honor they call God. I accept these definitions, as a poet must do, if he is to be at all intelligible to his age, and it is their God and their religion that I HATE and will DESTROY." (Aleister Crowley, The World's Tragedy, p. XXXI)
In the introduction of The World's Tragedy, Israel Regardie says:
"This long, almost epic poem is one of the most bitter and vicious diatribes against Christianity that I have ever read."
Crowley's most famous teaching, "Do what thou wilt shalt be the whole of the law" became the "mantra" of the 60's revolution of drugs, sexual perversion and anti-Christianity. "Do your own thing" — "If it feels good do it".

THE BEATLES & CROWLEY

According to The All Music Guide, The Beatle's Sgt. Pepper album, "will forever be known as the recording that changed rock & roll". Time magazine said, Sgt Pepper's was "drenched in drugs." (Time, Sept. 26, 1967, p.62)

The cover of Sgt. Pepper's showed the Beatles with a background of, according to Ringo Starr, people "we like and admire" (Hit Parade, Oct. 1976, p.14). Paul McCartney said of Sgt. Pepper's cover, ". . . we were going to have photos on the wall of all our HEROS . . ." (Musician, Special Collectors Edition, - Beatles and Rolling Stones, 1988, p.12)

One of the Beatle's heros included on the cover of Sgt. Pepper's was — the infamous Aliester Crowley! Most people, especially in 1967, did not even know who Crowley was — but the Beatles certainly did.

Sgt. Pepper

". . . we were going to have photos on the wall of all our HEROS . . ."

"Hero" Aliester Crowley is second from left on the top row:

The Bealtes apparently took Crowley's teaching very serious — Beatle John Lennon, in an interview, says the "whole idea of the Beatles" was — Crowley's infamous "do what thou wilt":
"The whole Beatle idea was to do what you want, right? To take your own responsibilty, do what you want and try not to harm other people, right? DO WHAT THOU WILST, as long as it doesn't hurt somebody. . ." ("The Playboy Interviews with John Lennon & Yoko Ono", by David Sheff & G. Barry Golson, p. 61)

"They're COMPLETELY ANTI-CHRIST. I mean, I am anti-Christ as well, but they're so anti-Christ they shock me which isn't an easy thing."
Derek Taylor, Press Officer for the Beatles (Saturday Evening Post, Aug. 8, 1964).

"Jesus El Pifico, a garlic-eating, stinking little yellow, greasy fascist bastard catholic spaniard."
(John Lennon, A Spaniard in the Works, p.14)

"Christianity will go, it will vanish and shrink. I needn't argue about that. I'm right and will be proved right. . . .We're more popular than Jesus now."
John Lennon (San Francisco Chronicle, April 13, 1966, p.26)
LED ZEPPELIN

One of Crowley's most devout disciples is Led Zeppelin guitarist, Jimmy Page. Page, even bought Crowley's "house of horrors" — Bokestine, located on Lock Ness. Boleskine was the home Crowley performed his "satanic-magick", including blood sacrifices. Crowley was buried inside a dark chamber in Boleskine. Crowley's most famous teaching was "Do what thou wilt shalt be the whole of the law". Page had inscribed in the vinyl on Zeppelin's Third album, Led Zeppelin III, "Do what thou wilt. So mete it Be." Unbeknown to concert goers, Page would actually perform Crowley rituals during some of Zeppelin's concerts.

OZZY OZBIURNE

Ozzy Osbourne called Crowley a "phenoomenon of his time" (Circus, August, 26, 1980) Ozzy even recorded a song of tribute to Crowley — Mr. Crowley:
. . . You fooled all the people with magic
You waited on Satan's call . . .
Mr. Crowley, won't you ride my white horse

Mr. Crowley - Ozzy Osbourne

Ozzy, known for uncontrollable and violent acts, confessed in an interview:
"I really wish I knew why I've done some of the things I've done over the years. I don't know if I'm a medium for some outside source. Whatever it is, frankly, I hope it's not what I think it is - Satan".

Ozzy Osbourne (Hit Parader, Feb., 1978, p.24)

THE DOORS

Jim Morrison, superstar of the Doors, who died "mysteriously" on July 3, 1971 was deeply involved in the occult . Morrison married his wife at a Wicca wedding standing in a pentagram and drinking each others blood.

The backcover of the Doors album "13", shows the group gathered around a bust of Aliester Crowley.

Morrison admitted that Satan was the source of his music:
"I met the Spirit of Music. . . . An appearance of the devil in a Venice canal. Running, I saw a Satan or Satyr, moving beside me, a fleshly shadow of my secret mind, . . ."
(The Lost Writings of Jim Morrison, p. 36-38)

Ray Manaxrek of the Doors, says of Morrison:

"He was not a performer. He was not an entertainer. He was not a showman. He was a shaman. He was possessed."

"While [Jim Morrison] he was staying at the Chateau Marmont, he spent a few wild nights with a buxom neighbor . . . once waking up in a tangle of bloody sheets after they shared champagne glasses of each other's blood."
(Pamela Des Barres, Rock Bottom, p. 208)
Many other rock artists "studied" Crowley such as: Marc Bolan, David Bowie, Graham Bond, Sting, Daryl Hall, King Daimond, Bruce Dickinson, Stiv Bators, et al.

Creating the Counterculture

The year 1967 marked a significant escalation in open cultural warfare against the youth of the United States. The year saw the beginning of mass, open-air rock concerts. In the two years which followed, over 4 million young people attended a series of nearly a dozen of these "festivals," becoming the victims of planned, wide-scale drug experimentation. Mind destroying hallucinogenic drugs such as PCP, STP, and the Beatles-promoted LSD, were freely distributed at these concerts. These millions of attendees would afterward return to their homes to become the messengers and promoters of the new drug culture, or what came to be called the "New Age."

The first rock festival, "The First Annual Monterey International Pop Festival," was attended by over 100,000 youngsters. The real purpose of Monterey Pop was the widespread distrubution of a new type of drugs, classified as psychedelics or hallucinogens, such as LSD. At Monterey, thousands of younger teen-agers were introduced to the new hallucinogenic drugs.

The first experimentation with LSD was begun in the early sixties, in the Haight-Ashbury section of San Francisco. The project was run by a joint CIA-British intelligence task force under the code-name MK-Ultra. Part of the project called for the free distribution of 5,000 tablets of LSD through a commune known as Ken Kesey's Merry Pranksters. LSD's after-effects were then closely studied.

"We must always remember to thank the CIA and the army for LSD, by the way. That's what people forget. . ."
("The Playboy Interviews with John Lennon & Yoko Ono", by David Sheff & G. Barry Golson, p. 123)
Dial-the-Truth Ministries - ADDENDUM

Kesey, a so-called "poet" and convicted drug felon, became famous for driving around California in a painted-up bus with his commune, the Merry Pranksters, distributing LSD-laced Kool Aid to the unsuspecting.

The effect of LSD is to make the victim psychotic, along with the inability to discern reality from drug-induced hallucinations. For many, this psychosis (also called a "bad trip") could and did lead to suicide. When an individual is given LSD without his knowledge, the psychosis-producing capabilities of the drug are amplified, and usually leave the victim with permanent brain damage.

The organizer of the Monterey festival was John Phillips, a member of the rock group the Mommas and the Papas. Phillips, as we shall see, was a drug pusher and closely tied in with the network of Satanists around Charles Manson and director Roman Polanski.

Phillips appointed a board of directors to promote and finance the concert. The members of the board brought together a network of British intelligence operatives and Satanists. The board of directors included Andrew Oldham (the Rolling Stones manager), the Stones leader Mick Jagger, Beatle Paul McCartney and Phillips' friend, record producer Terry Melcher, the son of Doris Day.

The concert, including the staging and the huge innovative outdoor amplification, was run by Phillips. It was the first time that an American audience was exposed to such openly demonic British groups as The Who, and Jimi Hendrix. At the conclusion of their act, The Who, in a drug-crazed frenzy, destroyed all their guitars, amplifiers, and drums. Hendrix simulated masturbation with his guitar, on stage, while performing at ear-splitting volume levels.

There was massive, open use of drugs. Author Robert Santelli, in his book, Aquarius Rising, writes "LSD was in abundance at Monterey. Tabs of `Monterey Purple' were literally given to anyone wishing to experiment a little." The police made no arrests, setting another precedent for future outdoor concerts.

There was a larger scheme in operation. The scheme was tied into MK-Ultra and it involved using Satanists around Phillips, along with agents such as Ken Kesey and Timothy Leary. The plan was to turn nearby San Francisco into a Satanist gaming preserve, mass recruiting and perverting young run-away teenagers.

Phillips had earlier written the music to a song called "San Francisco" which sold over 5 million copies. The song called for youth throughout the country to come to San Francisco "with flowers in their hair." The song was a rallying cry to tens of thousands who came flooding into San Francisco in the summer of 1968 to join the new "hippie" movement, misnamed the Summer of Love. Some who came became the prey for the likes of Charles Manson, who recruited his cult-"family" exclusively from runaway youth.

TIMOTHY LEARY AND ALIESTER CROWLEY

Timothy Leary, an Harvard psychologist, who was the LSD "guru" of the 60's. Leary preached spiritual "enlightenment" could be obtained by LSD. Many rockers, like the Beatles, were deeply influenced by Leary. The Beatle's song "Come Together" was dedicated to Leary, and Leary even sang background on Lennon's "Give Peace A Chance".

Leary was also a very serious follower of Crowley. On PBS Late Night America, Leary admitted to being an "admirer" of Crowley and Leary believed he was carrying on Crowley's work:
"Well I've been an admirer of Aleister Crowley. I think that I'm carrying on much of the work that he started over a hundred years ago, and I think the 60's themselves. . . He was in favor of finding yourself, and 'Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law' under love. It was a very powerful statement. I'm sorry he isn't around now to appreciate the glories he started."

Manson and the Rock Stars

Charles Manson has been portrayed as a lone psychotic who had hypnotic power over his "Family". In reality, Manson was well-known to a whole network of Hollywood actors, actresses, promoters, partners and rock stars, and was providing sex and drugs to many of them.

In his autobiography, Papa John, Phillips tells of an invitation he received to join Terry Melcher and Beach Boy member Dennis Wilson, at Wilson's mansion. Wilson said, "This guy Charlie's here with all these great-looking chicks. He plays guitar and he's a real wild guy. He has all these chicks hanging out like servants. You can come over and just screw any of them you want. It's a great party."

Manson's entire "Family" moved into the Beach Boys' mansion for nearly a year. The Beach Boys, who have performed at the White House, are the top recording group of EMI's subsidiary, Capitol Records.

On Sunday, August 10, 1969, Manson sent four members of his cult for their last visit to Melcher's house. This time Melcher wasn't there, but the actress Sharon Tate, wife of movie director Roman Polanski, and three others, were. When the group left, Tate and the others had been savagely mutilated and murdered. As for Phillips, in June 1980, he was arrested for running a large-scale drug wholesaling operation.
The Age of Aquarius

The largest concert after Monterey Pop, the "Woodstock Music and Art Fair," would be what Time magazine celebrated as an "Aquarian Festival"' and "history's largest happening." The term "Aquarian" was carefully chosen. The Aquarian age signified that the "Age of Pisces," which is the age of Christ, had come to an end.

At Woodstock, a small town in upstate New York, nearly half a million youth gathered to be drugged and brainwashed on a farm. The victims were isolated, immersed in filth, pumped with psychedelic drugs, and kept awake continously for three straight days, and all with the full complicity of the FBI and government officials. Security for the concert was provided by a hippie commune trained in the mass distribution of LSD.

Once again, it would be the networks of British military intelligence which would be the initiators. Woodstock was the brain child of Artie Kornfeld, the director of EMI's Capitol Record's, Contemporary Projects Division. The original funding was provided by the heir of a large Pennsylvania-based pharmaceutical company, John Roberts, and two other partners. It was another pharmaceutical company, the Swiss-based Sandoz Laboratories, which had first synthesized LSD. Roberts would later be accused of using his company for the mass drugging of the attendees.

Little adequate preparations were made for the nearly half a million people who came. Joel Rosenman, one of the three partners, writes, as the concert neared, "Food and water were clearly going to be in short supply, sanitary facilities overtaxed, tempers short, drugs overabundant. Worst of all, there was no way for anyone who wanted to, to leave." Sitting in your own excrement was actually part of the plan, as John Roberts jokingly wrote, "We're going to hand out bananas at the gate to bind our patrons."

A hippie commune called the Hog Farm, had a special role at Woodstock. The Hog Farm was led by a man nicknamed Wavy Graver, who was a former member of Ken Kesey's MK-Ultra operation, the Merry Pranksters. Communes like the Hog Farm were commonly found in the remote parts of California and served as the breeding grounds for Satanic cults, as well as terrorist groups. Members of these communes continually interchanged with other communes and were the recruiting grounds for the Process Church and Manson. Hog Farm member Diane Lake was a member of Charles Manson's Family, at the time of the massacre of Sharon Tate and her guests.

On August 14, one day before the scheduled opening, the entire festival security force, comprised of 350 off-duty New York City cops, pulled out. A spokesman for the New York police claimed that no official arrangement was ever made with the city, a claim the promoters vehemently denied. In an August 15, 1969 New York Times article, the head of Woodstock's security said, "Now I don't have any security at all. I've been struck. We're having the biggest collection of kids there's ever been in this country without any police protection." Not surprisingly, the Hog Farm was put in charge of security.

Woodstock funder and director John Roberts, openly admitted that he was well aware of the Hog Farm's connection to drug distribution. He writes, "their fee was simply transportation to and from the festival... a peace-keeping force that looked, talked, and smelled like the crowd would be both highly credible and highly effective... and the most important, they were wise in the ways of drugs, knowing good acid from bad, good trips from bummers, good medicine from poison, etc."

The Hog Farm at the time was living in New Mexico's mountains. Roberts chartered a Boeing 727, at a cost of $17,000, and flew 100 of them to New York.

To clear the final path for the planned drugging of half a million youngsters, the district attorney for the area agreed privately that there would be no arrests or prosecutions for violations of drug laws. John Roberts writes, "The District Attorney...recognized early on that many of our customers would be using illegal drugs, but also recognized that such use would be the least of our problems over the course of the weekend. He acted, therefore, with compassion and good grace throughout." Roberts also writes that he was meeting continuously with the FBI up to and including one day before the start of the concert, and had their full cooperation.
The Experiment Begins

Two days before the scheduled start of the concert, 50,000 kids had already arrived in Woodstock. Drugs immediately began to circulate. Many people brought their babies and, as Roberts says, even they were drugged. Roberts writes that at a nearby lake, "the tots swam naked, smoked grass, and got into the music."

A poll conducted at the festival by the New York Times showed that 99 percent of those attending were using marijuana. Local sheriff deputies, totally overwhelmed, reported that no arrests were being made for drug use. The New York Times of August 17 quoted one deputy," If we did (make arrests), there isn't enough space in Sullivan or the next three counties to put them in."

The use of marijuana was not the worst. Following the design of the original MK-Ultra project, the mass distribution of LSD came next, much of it in LSD-laced Coca Cola, as Kesey's Pranksters had done five years earlier. Roberts jokingly relates the following, "a particularly abrasive cop ....had been handed an LSD-spiked Coke while directing traffic. Long after all automobiles in the area had congealed to a standstill, the hardhat was still out on the road waving them on. Finally they led him away."

For the next three days, the nearly half a million young people that arrived were subjected to continual drugs and rock music. Because of torrential rains, they were forced to wallow in knee-deep mud. There were no shelters, and no way to get out. Cars were parked over eight miles away. Rosenman writes that the key to the "Woodstock experiment" was "keeping our performers performing around the clock...to keep the kids transfixed..."

Within the first 24 hours, over 300 kids reported to medical authorities, violently ill. The diagnosis: they were having "bad" LSD trips. Thousands more would follow. On August 17, the New York Times reported: "Tonight, a festival announcer warned from the stage, that 'badly manufactured acid' (a term for LSD) was being circulated. He said: 'You aren't taking poison acid. The acid's not poison. It's just badly manufactured acid. You are not going to die.... So if you think you've taken poison, you haven't. But if you're worried, just take half a tablet.'"

The advice, to nearly 500,000 people, "just take half a tablet" was given by none other than MK-Ultra agent Wavy Gravy.

With a growing medical emergency on hand, a call went out to New York City for emergency medical personnel. Over 50 doctors and nurses were flown in. By the end of Woodstock, a total of 5,000 medical cases were reported.
Altamont: the Making Of a Snuff Film

The last major rock "festival" of the 1960s was held at Altamont racetrack, outside San Francisco. The featured performers were the Rolling Stones, who now reigned supreme in the rock world, since the Beatles had broken up. The suggestion for the concert came from MK-Ultra agent Ken Kesey.

This time, the audience was whipped into a frenzy, in open praise of the Devil. The result was a literal Satanic orgy. At its conclusion, four people were dead and dozens beaten and injured. Mick Jagger, the lead singer of the Rolling Stones, played the part of Lucifer. The performance marked the beginning of the "heavy-metal" concerts of today.

Over 400,000 people attended the Altamont concert with far less preparation than even Woodstock. Food, and even water, were nearly unavailable. But plenty of drugs were to be found. Like Woodstock, the concert would become the vehicle for the mass experimentation of drugs, especially LSD. Author Tony Sanchez describes the scene as people gathered at Altamont:

"By midmorning there were more than a quarter of a million people milling around, and things were becoming chaotic. There was a lot of bad acid (LSD-DP) around, and people were freaking out all over the place. Everybody was getting stoned out of his skull to pass the long hours before the music was to start--Mexican grass, cheap California wine, amphetamines ..." (Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.195)

"By midday virtually everyone was tripping...A man was almost killed as he tried to fly from a speedway bridge--another acid case. On the other side of the site a young guy screamed for help as he fell into the deep waters of a drainage canal. The stoned-out freaks looked on bemused as he sank beneath the surface. No one seemed sure if he had been real or an hallucination. It didn't matter anymore anyway, he was dead. Elsewhere doctors were kept busy delivering babies to girls giving hysterical premature birth." (Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.195)

The descent into Hell would continue. The Rolling Stones had hired, for a reported $500 worth of free beer, the motorcycle gang Hell's Angels to act as security guards for the concert. Their real payment, however, was in drug sales. The Hell's Angels, an outlaw gang made up of robbers, rapists and murderers, were the known controllers and sellers of drugs on the entire West Coast.

When the festival did open, the crowd of nearly half a million people waited for more than one and a half hours for the Stones to appear. It was only when nightfall arrived, allowing for the use of special lighting effects, that the group finally came on stage. Mick Jagger, the lead singer, was dressed in a satin cape, which glowed red under the lights. Jagger was imitating Lucifer.

Author Sanchez next describes what he calls a preplanned "Satanic ritual." As the group began playing, "strangely several of the kids were stripping off their clothes and crawling to the stage as if it were a high altar, there to offer themselves as victims for the boots and cues of the Angels. The more they were beaten and bloodied, the more they were impelled, as if by some supernatural force, to offer themselves as human sacrifices to these agents of Satan." (Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, p.199)

Standing in the crowd in front of the stage, with his girlfriend, was a black man by the name of Meredith Hunter. Hunter would soon be singled out for human sacrifice.

The Stones had just released a new song entitled, "Sympathy for the Devil." It had quickly become the number one record in the country. The song begins with Mick Jagger introducing himself as Lucifer. As soon as he began to sing it at Altamont, the entire audience rose up and began dancing in a wild frenzy.

Sanchez descibes what happened next, "A great six foot four grizzly bear of a Hell's Angel had stalked across to Meredith (Hunter) to pull his hair hard in an effort to provoke a fight ...A fight broke out, five more Angels came crashing to the aid of their buddy, while Meredith tried to run off through the packed crowd. An Angel caught him by the arm and brought down a sheath knife hard in the black man's back. The knife failed to penetrate deeply, but Meredith knew then that he was fighting for his life. He ripped a gun out of his pocket and pointed it straight at the Angel's chest... And then the Angels were upon him like a pack of wolves. One tore the gun from his hand, another stabbed him in the face and still another stabbed him repeatedly, insanely, in the back until his knees buckled."

"When the Angels finished with Hunter, several people tried to come to his aid, but an Angel stood guard over the motionless body. `Don't touch him,' he said menacingly. `He's going to die anyway, so just let him die.'"(Tony Sanchez, Up and Down WIth the Rolling Stones, pp. 201,202)

It was never proven that Meredith actually had a gun. Later, arrests were made. No one was ever indicted because no one person would step forward as a witness out of fear of retaliation by the Angels.

Throughout the bloody killing the Rolling Stones continued to play "Sympathy for the Devil." The entire group watched from the stage as Meredith Hunter was killed right before them. In addition, incredibly, the entire murder was professionally filmed by a film crew hired to film the concert. Shortly thereafter the film was released throughout the country with the title of a Rolling Stone's song, "Gimme Shelter."

Was the murder preplanned by Satanists? In his book, The Ultimate Evil, author Maury Terry tells how Satanic cults circulate among themselves films of their human sacrifices. These films are called "snuff films." Terry relates that one of the seven Son of Sam murders in New York City was actually filmed from a nearby parked van. The film was then purchased by a rich Satanist. "Gimme Shelter," which was a box-office hit, can still be purchased or rented today for only a few dollars, at your local video store.
Behind "Heavy-Metal" Rock

The same year as Altamont, 1969, marked the beginning of the evil career of Ozzie Osbourne. Osbourne formed the band Black Sabbath. The group modelled itself on the Rolling Stones. The next fifteen years would witness a procession of young drugged-out rock performers, like Osbourne, each competing for the "big money" and the recording contracts that came with it. The key criteria of those who would "make it" was their ability to portray decadence and evil. These were the "heavy-metal" groups.

In 1985, New Solidarity newspaper, which has since been forcibly shut down by the federal government, conducted an interview with Hezekiah Ben Aaron, then the third-ranking member of the Church of Satan. Ben Aaron is now a devout Christian. In the interview, Aaron revealed that it was his Church that started such "heavy-metal" rock groups as Black Sabbath, The Blue Oyster Cult, The Who, Ozzy Osbourne, and many others. The Church of Satan was then led by its high priest, Anton LaVey. Many report, however, that LaVey, a former circus lion tamer, was just a front man for the real high priest, Kenneth Anger, the man who earlier recruited the Rolling Stones to the occult.

The following is an excerpt from that interview: "I was working for the Church...the Church had other people who were middlemen for other companies. There were middlemen for Apple [set up by the Beatles], Warner Brothers, and other record companies. Someone would come to me and say, `I have a tape recording, and I'd like for you to check it out. I'd like to see if you would be interested in sponsoring a Rock group.' I'd say `All right, I'll check it out.' A few days later Ben Aaron would call back and set up another meeting. He continues, `I'd hand you $100,000, and you wouldn't sign anything. What you wouldn't know is that a mirror on the back of the wall is a one-way mirror and we're tape recording and photographing, or video taping everything that goes on. The payback, if you fail to make the group work, is really bad. Sometimes it's up to 60% on the dollar."

Aaron's interview continued: "we send you to a store, we provide you with uniforms and we provide you with amplifiers. It's all paid through the money we gave you. We set you up with a road tour. We set you up with engagements. We book you."

Aaron then explained that if the group did not make it he was given orders to collect the money or make other "arrangements." These "other arrangements," perhaps, are the key to the dozens of reported rock star "suicides." The underworld drug mafia has ample means to eliminate non-payers. Some readers may remember the following statement Beatle John Lennon made to the international press back in 1966:

"Christianity will go. It will go. It will vanish and shrink. I needn't argue about that. I'm right and I will be proved right. We are more popular than Jesus now."

Hopefully, he will be proven to be wrong.

HE WILL. . . HE WAS. . .

John Lennon was murdered by Mark David Chapman, one of his admirers, on December 8, 1980.

I am one of those who grew up with The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Neil Young, Black Sabbath, Alice Cooper, Led Zeppelin etc. I thought it was GREAT music and I was totally into it.

I am a musician and a composer myself, influenced from the artists and groups above. At that time, in my teens and twenties, I was not very well educated on the situation on this planet; even though I thought something must be very wrong. Often I thought the rock musicians had the answers.

I know many of you might feel the same and therefore you may get upset about what I'm now going to tell you. But believe me, I've gone through all that myself, and after all – I was a rock musician too. The story that I will tell you makes a whole lot of sense (unfortunately), and the glamour of rock music fades quite a bit. I have received quite a few e-mails from people who work in the music business, and also from different musicians in different genres, and they testify to what I say.

The following is an excerpt from Dr. John Coleman's book "The Committee of 300", which is very informative on the subject of the Illuminati and is highly recommended reading. Very much of what he "predicted" in the early 80's happened exactly the way he said it would. The book in itself is from the early 90's. Dr. Coleman is a former Intelligence Officer and nowadays a devoted Christian, but whether you are a Christian or not, this information applies.

The Beatles and the Aquarian Conspiracy

An outstanding example of social conditioning to accept change, even when it is recognized as unwelcome change by the large population group in the sights of Stanford Research Institute, was the "advent" of the BEATLES. The Beatles were brought to the United States as part of a social experiment which would subject large population groups to brainwashing of which they were not even aware.

When Tavistock brought the Beatles to the United States nobody could have imagined the cultural disaster that was to follow in their wake. The Beatles were an integral part of "THE AQUARIAN CONSPIRACY," a living organism which sprang From “THE CHANGING IMAGES OF MAN,” URH (489)-2150-Policy Research Report No. 4/4/74. Policy Report pre-pared by SRI Center for the study of Social Policy, Director, Professor Willis Harmon.

[img]http://www.jesus-is-savior.com/False%20Religions/Wicca%20&%20Witchcraft/lennon_satan.jpg[/img]
Anything suspicious? -ed

The phenomenon of the Beatles was not a spontaneous rebellion by youth against the old social system. Instead it was a carefully crafted plot to introduce by a conspiratorial body which could not be identified, a highly destructive and divisive element into a large population group targeted for change against its will. New words and new phrases–prepared by Tavistock was introduced to America along with the Beatles. Words such as “rock” in relation to music sounds, “teenager,” “cool,” “discovered” and “pop music” were a lexicon of disguised code words signifying the acceptance of drugs and arrived with and accompanied the Beatles wherever they went, to be “discovered” by “teenagers.” Incidentally, the word “teenagers” was never used until just before the Beatles arrived on the scene, courtesy of the Tavistock Institute for Human Relations.

As in the case of gang wars, nothing could or would have been accomplished without the cooperation of the media, especially the electronic media and, in particular, the scurrilous Ed Sullivan who had been coached by the conspirators as to the role he was to play. Nobody would have paid much attention to the motley crew from Liverpool and the 12-atonal system of “music” that was to follow had it not been for an overabundance of press exposure. The 12-atonal system consisted of heavy, repetitive sounds, taken from the music of the cult of Dionysus and the Baal priesthood by Adorno and given a “modern” flavor by this special friend of the Queen of England and hence the Committee of 300.

Tavistock and its Stanford Research Center created trigger words which then came into general usage around “rock music” and its fans. Trigger words created a distinct new break-away largely young population group which was persuaded by social engineering and conditioning to believe that the Beatles really were their favorite group. All trigger words devised in the context of “rock music” were designed for mass control of the new targeted group, the youth of America.

The Beatles did a perfect job, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that Tavistock and Stanford did a perfect job, the Beatles merely reacting like trained robots “with a little help from their friends”–code words for using drugs and making it “cool.” The Beatles became a highly visible “new type”– more Tavistock jargon–and as such it was not long before the group made new styles (fads in clothing, hairstyles and language usage) which upset the older generation, as was intended. This was part of the “fragmentation-maladaptation” process worked out by Willis Harmon and his team of social scientists and genetic engineering tinkerers and put into action.

The role of the print and electronic media in our society is crucial to the success of brainwashing large population groups. Gang wars ended in Los Angeles in 1966 as the media withdrew its coverage. The same thing will happen with the current wave of gang wars in Los Angeles. Street gangs will wither on the vine once media saturation coverage is toned down and then completely withdrawn. As in 1966, the issue would become “burned out.” Street gangs will have served their purpose of creating turbulence and insecurity. Exactly the same pattern will be followed in the case of “rock” music. Deprived of media attention, it will eventually take its place in history.

[img]http://ahrcanum.files.wordpress.com/2010/06/tavistock20cover300w.jpg[/img]
Following the Beatles, who incidentally were put together by the Tavistock Institute, came other “Made in England” rock groups, who, like the Beatles, had Theo Adorno write their cult lyrics and compose all the “music.” …

…The newly-created group and its “lifestyle” swept millions of young Americans into the cult. American youth underwent a radical revolution without ever being aware of it, while the older generation stood by helplessly, unable to identify the source of the crisis, and thus reacting in a maladaptive manner against its manifestation, which were drugs of all types, marijuana, and later Lysergic acid, “LSD,” so conveniently provided for them by the Swiss pharmaceutical company, SANDOZ, following the discovery by one of its chemists, Albert Hoffman, how to make synthetic ergotamine, a powerful mind-altering drug. The Committee of 300 financed the project through one of their banks, S. C. Warburg, and the drug was carried to America by the philosopher, Aldous Huxley.

The new “wonder drug” was promptly distributed in “sample” size packages, handed out free of charge on college campuses across the United States and at “rock” concerts, which became the leading vehicle for proliferating the use of drugs. The question that cries out for an answer is, what was the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) doing at the time? There is compelling circumstantial evidence that would appear to indicate that the DEA knew what was going on but was ordered not to take any action.

With very substantial numbers of new British “rock” bands arriving in the U. S., rock concerts began to become a fixture on the social calendar of American youth. In tandem with these “concerts,” the use of drugs among the youth rose in proportion. The devilish bedlam of discordant heavy beat sounds numbed the minds of listeners so that they were easily persuaded to try the new drug on the basis that “everybody is doing it.” Peer pressure is a very strong weapon. The “new culture” received maximum coverage from the jackal media, which cost the conspirators not one single thin dime.

Great anger was felt by a number of civic leaders and churchmen over the new cult but their energies were misdirected against the RESULT of what was going on and not against the CAUSE. Critics of the rock cult made the same mistakes that had been made in the prohibition era, they criticized law enforcement agencies, teachers, parents anybody but the conspirators.

Alan Ginsberg

Because of the anger and resentment I feel toward the great drug plague, I make no apology for using language which is not customary for me to use. One of the worst drug slobs ever to walk the streets of America was Alan Ginsberg. This Ginsberg pushed the use of LSD through advertising which cost him nothing, although under normal circumstances it would have cost millions of dollars in TV advertising revenues. This free advertising for drugs, and LSD in particular, reached a new high in the late 1960's, thanks to the ever-willing cooperation of the media. The effect of Ginsberg's mass advertising campaign was devastating; the American public was subjected to one cultural future shock after another in rapid succession.

We became over-exposed and over stimulated and, again, may I remind you that this is Tavistock jargon, lifted from the Tavistock training manual, overwhelmed by its new development and, when we reached that point, our minds began to lapse into apathy; it was just too much to cope with, that is to say, "long range penetration had taken hold of us." Ginsberg claimed to be a poet but no greater rubbish was ever written by anyone who ever aspired to becoming a poet. Ginsberg's designated task had little to do with poetry; his main function was to push the new subculture and force acceptance of it upon the large targeted population group.

To assist him in his task, Ginsberg cooped the services of Norman Mailer, a writer of sorts who had spent some time in a mental institution. Mailer was a favorite of the leftwing Hollywood crowd and so had no problem with getting maximum television time for Ginsberg. Naturally Mailer had to have a pretext– not even he could blatantly come out with the true nature of Ginsberg's television appearances. So a charade was adopted: Mailer would talk "seriously" on camera with Ginsberg about poetry and literature.

This method of getting wide television coverage at no cost to themselves was followed by every rock group and concert promoter who followed the example set by Ginsberg. The electronic media moguls had big hearts when it came to giving free time to these dirty verminous creatures and their even dirtier products and filthy ideas. Their promotion of horrible garbage spoke volumes and, without abundant help from the print and electronic media, the drug trade could not have spread as rapidly as it did in the late 1960's-early 197O's, and probably would have been confined to a few small local areas.

Ginsberg was able to give several nationally televised performances extolling the virtues of LSD and marijuana, under the guise of "new ideas" and "new cultures" developing in the art and music world. Not to be outdone by the electronic media, Ginsberg's admirers wrote glowing articles about "this colorful man" in the art and social columns of all of America's largest newspapers and magazines. There had never been such an across-the-media-board free advertising campaign in the history of newspaper, radio and television and it cost the promoters of the Aquarian conspiracy, NATO and the Club of Rome not one red cent. It was all absolutely free advertising for LSD, only thinly disguised as "art" and "culture."

One of Ginsberg's closest friends, Kenny Love, published a Five-page report in the New York Times. This is in accordance with the methodology used by Tavistock and Stanford Research: If something is to be promoted which the public has not yet been fully brainwashed to accept, then have someone write an article, covering all sides of the subject matter. The other method is to have live television talk shows in which a panel of experts promotes the product and or idea under the pretext of “discussing”, it. There are point and counter-point, both pro and con participants airing their support or opposition. When it is all over, the subject to be promoted has been dinned into the public mind. While this was new in the early 1970’s, today it is standard practice on which talk shows thrive.

Love’s Five-page pro LSD pro Ginsberg article was duly printed by the New York Times. Had Ginsberg tried to buy the same amount of space in an advertisement, it would have cost him at least $50,000. But Ginsberg didn’t have to worry; thanks to his Friend Kenny Love, Ginsberg got the massive advertising all for free. With newspapers like the New York Times and the Washington Post under the control of the Committee of 300, this kind of free advertising is given to any subject matter, and more especially to those promoting decadent life styles–drugs-hedonism– anything that will confuse the American people. After the trial run with Ginsberg and LSD, it became standard Club of Rome practice to call upon major newspapers in America to give free advertising on demand to people and ideas they were promoting.

Worse yet–or better yet, depending upon the viewpoint– United Press (UP) picked up Kenny Love’s free advertising for Ginsberg and LSD and telexed it to HUNDREDS of newspapers- and magazines around the country under the guise of a “news” story. Even such highly respectable establishment magazines as “Harpers Bazaar” and “TIME” made Mr. Ginsberg respectable. If a nation-wide campaign of this magnitude were presented to Ginsberg and the promoters of LSD by an advertising agency, the price tag would have run into at least $1 million in terms of 1970 dollars. Today the price tag would be nothing less than $15-$16 million dollars. It is no wonder that I refer to the news media as “jackals.”

I suggest that we try to find any media outlet to do an expose on the Federal Reserve Board, which is what I did. I took my article, which was a good expose of the greatest swindle on earth, to every major newspaper, radio and television station, magazine house and several talk-show hosts. A few made promises that sounded good–they would definitely air the article and have me discuss it–give them about a week and they would get back to me. Not one of them ever did, nor did my article ever appear in the pages of their newspapers and journals. It was as if a blanket of silence had been thrown over me and the subject I was endeavoring to promote, and indeed that was precisely what had happened.

Beatles, Rock'n'Roll & Mind Control

Get some music instruments and make your own mind controlling music. With the power of your electric guitar and the beat of the drums you can start sending the right message to music lovers everywhere. Check out the latest music news and keep up with the times.

I am one of those who grew up with The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Neil Young, Black Sabbath, Alice Cooper, Led Zeppelin etc. I thought it was GREAT music and I was totally into it.

I am a musician and a composer myself, influenced from the artists and groups above. At that time, in my teens and twenties, I was not very well educated on the situation on this planet; even though I thought something must be very wrong. Often I thought the rock musicians had the answers.

I know many of you might feel the same and therefore you may get upset about what I'm now going to tell you. But believe me, I've gone through all that myself, and after all – I was a rock musician too. The story that I will tell you makes a whole lot of sense (unfortunately), and the glamour of rock music fades quite a bit. I have received quite a few e-mails from people who work in the music business, and also from different musicians in different genres, and they testify to what I say.

The following is an excerpt from Dr. John Coleman's book "The Committee of 300", which is very informative on the subject of the Illuminati and is highly recommended reading. Very much of what he "predicted" in the early 80's happened exactly the way he said it would. The book in itself is from the early 90's. Dr. Coleman is a former Intelligence Officer and nowadays a devoted Christian, but whether you are a Christian or not, this information applies.

The Beatles and the Aquarian Conspiracy

An outstanding example of social conditioning to accept change, even when it is recognized as unwelcome change by the large population group in the sights of Stanford Research Institute, was the "advent" of the BEATLES. The Beatles were brought to the United States as part of a social experiment which would subject large population groups to brainwashing of which they were not even aware.

When Tavistock brought the Beatles to the United States nobody could have imagined the cultural disaster that was to follow in their wake. The Beatles were an integral part of "THE AQUARIAN CONSPIRACY," a living organism which sprang From "THE CHANGING IMAGES OF MAN," URH (489)-2150-Policy Research Report No. 4/4/74. Policy Report pre-pared by SRI Center for the study of Social Policy, Director, Professor Willis Harmon.

The phenomenon of the Beatles was not a spontaneous rebellion by youth against the old social system. Instead it was a carefully crafted plot to introduce by a conspiratorial body which could not be identified, a highly destructive and divisive element into a large population group targeted for change against its will. New words and new phrases--prepared by Tavistock(1)-- were introduced to America along with the Beatles. Words such as "rock" in relation to music sounds, "teenager," "cool," "discovered" and "pop music" were a lexicon of disguised code words signifying the acceptance of drugs and arrived with and accompanied the Beatles wherever they went, to be "discovered" by "teenagers." Incidentally, the word "teenagers" was never used until just before the Beatles arrived on the scene, courtesy of the Tavistock Institute for Human Relations.

As in the case of gang wars, nothing could or would have been accomplished without the cooperation of the media, especially the electronic media and, in particular, the scurrilous Ed Sullivan who had been coached by the conspirators as to the role he was to play. Nobody would have paid much attention to the motley crew from Liverpool and the 12-atonal system of "music" that was to follow had it not been for an overabundance of press exposure. The 12-atonal system consisted of heavy, repetitive sounds, taken from the music of the cult of Dionysus and the Baal priesthood by Adorno and given a "modern" flavor by this special friend of the Queen of England and hence the Committee of 300.

Tavistock and its Stanford Research Center created trigger words which then came into general usage around "rock music" and its fans. Trigger words created a distinct new break-away largely young population group which was persuaded by social engineering and conditioning to believe that the Beatles really were their favorite group. All trigger words devised in the context of "rock music" were designed for mass control of the new targeted group, the youth of America.

The Beatles did a perfect job, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that Tavistock and Stanford did a perfect job, the Beatles merely reacting like trained robots "with a little help from their friends"--code words for using drugs and making it "cool." The Beatles became a highly visible "new type"-- more Tavistock jargon--and as such it was not long before the group made new styles (fads in clothing, hairstyles and language usage) which upset the older generation, as was intended. This was part of the "fragmentation-maladaptation" process worked out by Willis Harmon and his team of social scientists and genetic engineering tinkerers and put into action.

While this was new in the early 1970's, today it is standard practice on which talk shows thrive.

Love's Five-page pro LSD pro Ginsberg article was duly printed by the New York Times. Had Ginsberg tried to buy the same amount of space in an advertisement, it would have cost him at least $50,000. But Ginsberg didn't have to worry; thanks to his Friend Kenny Love, Ginsberg got the massive advertising all for free. Not one of them ever did, nor did my article ever appear in the pages of their newspapers and journals. It was as if a blanket of silence had been thrown over me and the subject I was endeavoring to promote, and indeed that was precisely what had happened.

Without massive media hype, and without almost around the clock coverage, the hippie-beatnik rock, drug cult would never have gotten off the ground; it would have remained a localized oddity. The Beatles, with their twanging guitars, silly expressions, drug language and weird clothes, would not have amounted to a hill of beans. Instead, because the Beatles were given saturation coverage by the media, the United States has suffered one cultural shock after another.

The men buried in the think tanks and research institutions, whose names and faces are still not known to but a few people, made sure that the press played its part. Conversely, the media's important role in not exposing the power behind the future cultural shocks made certain that the source of the crisis was never identified. Thus was our society driven mad through psychological shocks and stress. "Driven mad" is taken from Tavistock's training manual. From its modest beginnings in 1921, Tavistock was ready in 1966 to launch a major irreversible cultural revolution in America, which has not yet ended. The Aquarian Conspiracy is part of it.

Thus softened up, our nation was now deemed ripe for the introduction of drugs which was to rival the prohibition era in scope and the huge amounts of money to be made. This too was an integral part of the Aquarian Conspiracy. The proliferation of drug usage was one of the subjects under study at the Science Policy Research Unit (SPRU) at Tavistock's Sussex University facility. It was known as the "future shocks" center, a title given to so-called future oriented psychology designed to manipulate whole population groups to induce "future shocks." It was the first of several such institutions set up by Tavistock.

"Future shocks" is described as a series of events which come so fast that the human brain cannot absorb the information. As I said earlier, science has shown that there are clearly marked limits to the amount of changes and the nature of them that the mind can deal with. After continuous shocks, the large targeted population group discovers that it does not want to make choices any more. Apathy takes over, often preceded by mindless violence such as is characteristic of the Los Angeles street gangs, serial killers, rapists and child kidnapers.

Such a group becomes easy to control and will docilely follow orders without rebelling, which is the object of the exercise. "Future shocks," says SPRU, "is defined as physical and psychological distress arising from the excess load on the decision-making mechanism of the human mind." That is Tavistock jargon lifted straight from Tavistock manuals--which they don't know I have.

Just as an overloaded electrical circuit will activate a trip switch, so do humans "trip out," which is a syndrome that medical science is only now beginning to understand, although John Rawlings Reese conducted experiments in this field as far back as the 1920's. As can be appreciated, such a targeted group is ready to "trip out" and take to drugs as a means of escape from the pressures of so many choices having to be made... What started with the Beatles and sample packages of LSD has grown into a flood-tide of drug usage which is swamping America.

The drug trade is controlled by the Committee of 300 from the Top down. The drug trade started with the British East India Company and was closely followed by the Dutch East India Company. Both were controlled by a "Council of 300." The list of names of members and stockholders of the BEIC read like something out of Debretts Peerage. BEIC established the "China Inland Mission," whose job it was to get The Chinese peasants, or coolies, as they were called, addicted to opium. This created the market for opium which the BEIC then filled.

In much the same way the Committee of 300 used "The "Beatles" to popularize "social drugs" with the youth of America and The Hollywood "in-crowd." Ed Sullivan was sent to England to become acquainted with the first Tavistock Institute "rock group" to hit the shores of the United States. Sullivan then returned to the United States to draft the strategy for the electronic media on how to package and sell the group. Without the full cooperation of the electronic media and Ed Sullivan, in particular, "The Beatles" and their "music" would have died on the vine. Instead, our national life and the character of the United States was forever changed.

Now that we know, it is all too clear how successful the "Beatles" campaign to proliferate the use of drugs became. The fact that "The Beatles" had their music and lyrics written for them by Theo Adorno was concealed from public view. The prime function to "The Beatles" was to be discovered by teenagers, who where then subjected to a non-stop barrage of "Beatle music," until they became convinced that they liked the sound and adopted it, along with all that accompanied it. The Liverpool group performed up to expectations, and with "a little help from their friends," i.e., illegal substances we call drugs created a whole new class to young Americans in the precise mold ordained by the Tavistock Institute.

So far Dr. John Coleman.

It's not mentioned here, but the Rolling Stones were created from the same source and with the same purpose. Beatles were supposed to be the "good guys" while the Rolling Stones were the "bad guys". Also, the Rolling Stones were experts in creating repeating "riffs", meaning a musical phrase that's looping over and over again (like in "Satisfaction", "Jumping Jack Flash" etc.). These repeating riffs trigger the mind and make one receptive to whatever sub-message you want to transfer into the minds of the listener. In the case of the Rolling Stones we have satanic messages in their lyrics, and they have repeated that over and over through the years (a more recent example is the "Bridge To Babylon" album). Those riffs, listened to while being under the influence of certain drugs, put you in a hypnotic state, but they can also make you hyper-energetic under other circumstances. It is nothing wrong with using riffs in music, but many musicians also add lyrics and/or subliminal messages to it, and it all hits your subconscious in whatever way they want. Rock music is a very powerful tool for the Illuminati.

The Beatles were made "Members of the British Empire" by Queen Elizabeth II of England in the 60's. The Queen is one of the highest Illuminati members on this planet. If the Beatles were so "rebellious" and against the system as John Lennon always said they were, how come the Queen accepted them? Quite recently Paul McCartney was knighted as well. Elton John is another example of a number of artists and actors who have been knighted. The ONLY ones being knighted by the Queen of England are those who have served the Illuminati Agenda well. Things are not what they seem to be. We have been severely tampered with and extremely deceived.

> QUOTE

John Coleman has been writing and speaking for nearly 35 years. He's been stationed in fourteen different countries around the world and he speaks six languages. John Coleman is the author of “The Conspirators' Hierarchy: The Committee of 300”, “The Tavistock Institute of Human Relations”, “What You Should Know about the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights”, “The Club in Rome”, “We Fight For Oil: A History of US Petroleum Wars” and many others. Also, since 1970, he has produced “World in Review”, a bimonthly news magazine. In this program, John discusses "The Committee of 300" and his thoughts on the current state of the United States. We attempt to find the origin of the group of 300. How far back into history does this group go and how have they kept their agenda alive and strong throughout the years? More topics discussed: G20 in South Korea, United States as Empire, Sam Irvin, India House, Chatham House, The British Museum in London, background in military service, Walter Rathenau, the Beatles, Scarab symbolism, Bavaria, Illuminati, abdication, British East India Company, Opium Wars, King Edward VI, John F Kennedy, Princess Diana, Queen Victoria, South Africa, gold, Cecil Rhodes, resources, De Beers, Anglo American, diamond trade, the Diamond Coast, diamond propaganda.

Merry Christmas folks

Who are the Jesuits?

Some say they are the most wise and influential prophets of the world. Others say they are part of a global conspiracy towards domination.
http://www.biblebelievers.org.au/jesuits.htm

We will be speaking with:

Fr. Joseph Fessio, S.J., Th.D., is a Professor of Theology and theologian in residence Ave Maria University. He is the Founder and Editor of Ignatius Press. He also founded both the St. Ignatius Institute of the University of San Francisco and Campion College before coming to Ave Maria University. He has taught philosophy and theology courses at several schools. Fr. Fessio wrote his dissertation on the ecclesiology of Hans Urs von Balthasar under the direction of Pope Benedict XVI (then Professor Joseph Ratzinger). He holds the degrees of B.A. and M.A. from Gonzaga University; M.A. from the FourviÃ¨re Jesuit Faculty of Theology in Lyons, France; and Th.D. from the University of Regensburg in Germany.

Remember in that old dictionary I read from an elderly neighbour I once had, it clearly stated the definition for a Jesuit as 'a clever person who deceives the people'. I will never forget that wonderful old dictionary I only wish I'd bloody remembered its title as well. This Jesuit Fessio is both a little clever and very sneaker, I'm not impressed by his intelligence.

TheUnhivedMind - November 18, 2010 02:17 AM (GMT)

Fessio believes the Vatican has little gold, this is a complete joke. Please view again the video below highlighting what we all know about the Vatican wealth. Lets not forget Avro Manhattan's book 'The Vatican Billions'. Notice how he tries to claim Donald Trump has more land than the Vatican. What he forgets to tell you is that Donald Trump is a Papist within the Knights of Malta subordinate to Cardinal/Grandmaster Matthew Festing and the Pope. The Vatican owns more land in more Countries than any other person or corporation on Earth. The Queen owns a lot of land but not in no where near as many Countries as the Vatican has. When it comes to the illegal immigrants in the U.S. this is nothing more than the execution of the The Inter Caetera from the evil Borgia family. Every Country has a right to their sovereignty? Is that right Fessio? Is this why Rome destroyed the sovereignty of America in 1871.

Craig, would that be the Concise English dictionary, literacy scientific and technical, by Charles Annandale.

I flogged it off my grandmother just sitting around gathering dust, the first thing I did when I saw it was look up Jesuit as I remember reading your comment that the old dictionary's had an accurate definition of them.

the definitions it gives are

Jesuit: one of the order or society of Jesus. One of a religious order belonging to the Roman catholic Church. founded by Ignatius Loyola in the 16th century; a crafty person ; an intriguer

Jesuitical, pertaining to the Jesuits or their principals and arts; designing; cunning; deceitful; prevaricating

Jesuitically, In a Jesuitical manner; craftily

TheUnhivedMind - November 18, 2010 06:49 PM (GMT)

Dear Craig,

To begin with, the interview was poorly done. There should have been no call-ins allowed. All questions, including those of the regular listeners, should have been pre-written by the host or hosts so as to obtain straight and simple answers from the Jesuit, and a very accomplished Jesuit at that. (His referring to a Jesuit RCC Bishop in Siberia is most helpful to understanding the Order's gulag system still in Russia.) There should have been nothing posed that would have led to the breakdown of the "interview" that ensued. Debates are to be limited to specific questions and overseen by a referee enforcing agreed upon rules of debate including time restraints. If I had been in his shoes, I would have felt insulted by the defensive demeanor of the apparently Bible-believing man that was a co-host. And I would have been especially offended by the disrespectful diatribe of the Black Coptic American Christian who was rude and condescending in no uncertain terms. But then again, this is typical Black American protocol when in juxtaposition with Whites, they always asserting their "Black Supremacy" as a matter of, so it seems, "religious conviction."

From the content, the interview was given in 2008. Fessio then had been in the Order for 47, years since 1961. He never stated that he had taken the "simple Fourth Vow" the Society openly admits to, whereby the Jesuit gives a special promise to do whatsoever the pope commands as admitted by Fessio. And of course, he denied the real Fourth Vow and for a logical reason. Fessio obviously has never heard of the Extreme Oath of Induction, correctly recited by not only ex-Jesuit Albert Rivera but by several other ex-priests, and thus was a perfect agent of the Order to address the questions of the hosts. American J. C. Brownlee, in his reprinted The Secret Instructions of the Jesuits (1857), speaks of these Jesuits who are neither a party to the Extreme Oath nor to the Secret Instructions in his introduction. He writes on pages 19-21:

"The SECRET INSTRUCTIONS formed a code of the laws of Jesuitism. They were not allowed to be made known even to many members of a certain class of Jesuits. They had bold, daring, bad men to achieve desperate deeds, and take off their enemies by steel or bullet, or poisoned chalice. These knew something that others did not. The had also disguised agents, men in mask. These Jesuits knew something not imparted to others of the same order. They had shrewd, crafty, courteous, and most polished men, who courted nobles, insinuated themselves into the favor of princes, kings, and rich widows, and young heirs and heiresses. These had their "INSTRUCTIONS" from their general. They had fine scholars, decent, steady, serious, moral men. These were not at all let into the secret of CERTAIN INSTRUCTIONS. They were sent out as traps to captivate the serious, the unsuspecting, the religious. These had it in charge to give a captivating representation of their Society of Jesus. These taught that they mingled in no politics, sought no riches, kept strictly their vow of poverty. Their sole object, was by the help of heaven, to convert the world, and put down Protestantism and all herecies [heresies]! And in these details these classes of this sect were honest. For they were not initiated into "the Secret Instructions." And hence they could, with an honest conscience, deny, and even swear on the cross, that no such Instructions were ever given, or ever received. And the initiated Jesuits took special care to push forward these decent, amiable, moral and trustworthy men, to declare to the world that no such rules, and no such maxims as these of THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS ever existed among them. And from the high character of these men, their testimony was of great weight with kings, nobles, and even Protestants.

"This throws light upon the mystery and contradictory statements made by honest Jesuits and historians; and by Protestants. The profligate, the cunning, the daring, and all similar classes in this motley sect, with their general, and the host of his spies crawling like the frogs, and flying like the locusts of Egypt, over all the land, were fully initiated into the secret of these "Instructions:" and they acted on them, ever day. Hence the horrid marks of their footsteps of pollution and blood!!!"

Therefore, since Fr. Fessio appears to be one of these class of Jesuits, he was calm, cogent and openly honest with no audible evidence of concealing any secret design of those monsters who rule the Society of Jesus. He entered and exited the interview with a clear and open presentation, and was completely approachable not stumbling at any question or rivaling statement. Now as to his stated errors, as a result of his many years of indoctrination and brainwashing, I will name only a few:

1. The Society of Jesus is not a Military Order. Clearly the Order is formally called "The Company" of Jesus. It even has a magazine published in America titled "Company."

2. He put the Order in only a good light, the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus, while never adding that his Order was created to "fight and down Protestantism" as stated by Jesuit Thomas Sherman, the son of burn-em-up General T. Sherman.

3. The Bible is generally "the Bible," with no significant differences in any English translation. If so, then why is the epic Reformation English Bible, the AV1611, still on the list of forbidden books by the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, formerly the Holy Office of the Inquisition. Clearly there are major differences between Bibles. The Order's Counter Reformation Council of Trent, of which the Jesuits must enforce today, states that the Hebrew and Greek scriptures are not the Scriptures, rather Jerome's Latin Vulgate is the Scripture.

4. The AV1611 and the RSV are essentially the same Bible. This is utter nonsense: for the underlying Greek text of the RSV springing from the secretly compiled, Westcott and Hort Greek text, differs from the Textus Receptus in at least 5,788 places as per the analysis of F. H. A. Scrivener, the only honest man on the English Revision Committee (1871-1881). The RSV of 1952 is an outwork of this corrupt committee that attacked the AV1611 Bible, the foundation for White Protestant Western Civilization and the White Protestant British Empire.

5. The Constitutions of the Society of Jesus is a public document; true, but only as a result of the French government of Louis XV forcibly bringing it to light in 1762 during a famous lawsuit. That manifestation of the diabolical workings of the order led to the expulsion of the Company in 1764, for which France suffered the loss of her king and the ensuing French Revolution.

6. The Society of Jesus is not the bodyguard of the pope. Clearly, this is false according to several histories, a few of which are Roman Catholic. Further, as mandated by Canon Law, the confessor of the pope must always be---a Jesuit!

7. The Society of Jesus has changed from its original workings. Nonsense! The Order enforces its designs via trusted third parties, such entities as the RIIA and the CFR of which the Jesuit knew nothing. I find this to be deceptive, especially when Fr. Joseph A. O'Hare, former president of Fordham University in the Bronx, is a Presider---as is David Rockefeller---in the CFR. Fessio's Jesuit superior at the University of San Francisco is President Stephen A. Privett, a friend of many CFR members including Hillary Clinton and Michelle Obama, knows O'Hare personally.

8. He speaks of Dominican Thomas Aquinas in a positive light. Aquinas wrote in his Summa Theologica stating it is no murder to kill a heretic, VAIII quoting the entire text.

9. He claims to believe in national sovereignties, yet, via Jesuit duplicity, defends the Alien Roman Catholic Mexican Invasion of America under the guise of lawful immigration premised upon economic necessity, failing to state the reason for the poverty of Mexico is the nation's Roman Catholic religion. He believes in international socialist-communism, that nations---historic White Protestant nations---do not have the right to financially excel over other nations, nations that are Roman Catholic. For the vast majority of "immigrants" into the US are from Roman Catholic nations such as Mexico, those in Central America, those in South America, Haiti, Dominican Republic, etc., and these people are then registered into the socialist-communist Democratic Party.

10. He dares to own Johann Sebastian Bach, the German Lutheran Protestant and greatest composer in world history. The purpose of the Company is to destroy such men and their works.

11. He dares to give the impression that the Jesuit Order is not wealthy. Surely he knows the Order controls the Bank of America founded in San Francisco by an Italian Knight of Malta, Amadeo Giannini, in 1904. Further, he makes no mention of the Order's controlling stock in America's aircraft manufacturers as proven in Avro Manhattan's The Vatican Billions.

12. He dares to state that only 3,000 people were put to death during the reign of the Holy Office of the Inquisition. He states that it existed for only 300 years. Both are tacitly false, as it is a statement by John Dowling in his The History of Romanism that 50 million were murdered. According to The Great Apostasy Identical with Papal Rome; Or, An Exposition of the Mystery of Iniquity, and the Doom of Antichrist, by Joseph F. Berg (Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co., 1842) pp. 139, 167, the Holy Office, from the time of its real inception under the damnable Pope Innocent III in 1207 to its suppression by Napoleon in 1808, 68 Million were murdered. In this, the Jesuit is a brazen liar, especially when one can traverse Europe and find scores of the Inquisition's torture chambers especially in France and Germany.

Now let us review questions that any interviewer should ask any guest Jesuit:

1. Do you uphold the pope's Spiritual Power, that every person must be subject to the Roman Pontiff?

2. Do you uphold the pope's Temporal Power, that every government should be subject to the Roman Pontiff?

3. Do you believe the doctrines put forth by Jesuit Francisco Suarez justifying regicide?

4. Is the Society of Jesus a separate entity of the Roman Papacy, since no Jesuit is answerable to any non-Jesuit priest?

5. Was the Society of Jesus involved in the assassination of French King Henry IV? the attempted assassination of Queen Elizabeth I? the assassination of Abraham Lincoln? the assassination of John F. Kennedy? the assassination of Benito Juarez? the attempted assassination of Otto von Bismarck? the assassination of William of Orange I?

6. Was the Society of Jesus involved in St. Bartholomew's Massacre in France (1572)? inciting the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648); the tyranny of King Charles I that let to the Puritan Revolution (1642-1652)? the French Revolution (1789)? all of which a Jesuit hand can be evidenced?

7. Does not the Jesuit Superior General commanding the Company of Jesus, in fact, control the pope who in turn controls the entire Roman Papacy thanks to the imposition of "Infallibility" during the First Vatican Council (1870)?

8. Does not the Jesuit Order seek to rid the world of Muslims and Jews in accordance with the words of Jesuit Francis Xavier as recorded in ex-Jesuit. Dr. E. Boyd Barrett's Rome Stoops to Conquer (1935) on page 180 that states:

"The spirit of the Order can be gleaned from the extraordinary prayer of the greatest of Jesuit saints, Francis Xavier: 'Put me some place where there are non-Jews or Moslems,' cried Francis."

9. Is the purpose of the Order in attempting to destroy Protestantism and claim Jerusalem for the Order still in effect, as Loyola sought to set up his headquarters in Jerusalem during his presence there in the 1520s?

10. Did the Jesuit Order perfect the tenets of Socialist-Communism on their 59 Paraguayan Reductions in South America (1609-1759)?

11. Why did Pope Clement XIV suppress and extinguish the Society of Jesus in 1773?

12. Was not the French Revolution and Napoleonic Wars a result of the Suppression and Extinction of the Society in 1773

These are a few of the most important questions.

Lord Bless,

Brother Eric

Anton Mifsud - Malta's Ancient Megalitic Temples, Giants & Traces of the Lost Atlantis

October 3, 2010

Anton Mifsud joins us from Malta to discuss his research and work on Maltese Prehistory, the Megalithic Temples at Tarxien, Mnajdra, Gozo and the possibility that Malta is a remnant of the lost Atlantis. Anton is the author of "Malta: Echoes of Plato's Island", "Dossier Malta - Evidence for the Magdalenian" and he's been featured in Graham Hancock's "Underworld". We talk about the History of the Island, the waves of colonization and the different people and cultures that have been interested in the island and inhabiting Malta. We also talk about the legend of the Giants that is said to have built the megalithic temples and the mystery of Malta's long-headed skulls. Topics Discussed: The Ice Age, Stonehenge, Conquest & Colonization of Malta, SMOM, Tarxien Temples, Megalithic Temples of Malta, Phoenicians, Tyre, Crete, Giants, Elongated Skulls, Malta's Long-Headed Skulls, Astronomical alignments, Bulls, Goats, Cult of the Bull, Libation Wholes, Gozo, Straits of Gibraltar, Atlantis, Plato, Solon, Egyptian, 2000 B.C., Noah's Flood and more. In hour two we discuss diving and finds in the water around the island. We talk about the carved irrigation canals found on the island, the Vatican archives, references to Atlantis, de' Medici, Minoan Civilization, Crete & Cretans, Bull Sacrifice, The Boat Building Industry, The Maltese Language, Trilithons & Giants and what Anton think of Göbleki Tepe in Turkey.

Believing in god is not for everyone

It`s something very personal.

Many never get it.

It`s a very strong personal conviction.

Every person need to make his or he own chooses.

I have to many questions that the bible will never give me an answer to.

I am only read the bible when nothing else gives meaning.

I mostly like the book of job.

That`s how i see it.

No offence.

14april2000 - October 3, 2010 02:30 PM (GMT)

The terrible, and for Jews unthinkable, truth about the State of Israel.

Our legitimate desire to return to our ancestral Homeland was distorted out of all recognition first by Theodore Herzl, who wanted to convert all the Jews to Catholicism, then by the Rothschild family (Herzl chronicled this fact) and then, from the 1930s, was overrun by the Nazis who were smuggled in, passed themselves off as German-speaking Jews and infiltrated every vital office and service in the fledgling Jewish settlement.

This is one of the most important videos ever made in Israel.

yes2truth - September 26, 2010 07:45 AM (GMT)

This is how far removed the Druid William's is from The Truth.

1 Tim 3:1-5 (KJV) 1 This is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. 2 A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach; 3 Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous; 4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; 5 (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)

This means that all his BS about celibacy is.....BS.

Tom Friess admitted to me in an email from 3 years ago that he "had to be careful with what he is doing online and on-air since he lived in a home owned by a Freemason"...yea - because HE is the FREEMASON (I still have this email)...the house he and his wife live in (either rented or owned) is just 3 blocks down the street from the ROWLEY MASONIC HOME of which his wife is the administrator... Rowley is a small town outside of Des Moines Iowa and is known for it's high percentage Masonic populace...can't ya just see 'Ole Tom here with his Fez on ?... would a REAL "Christian" who is NOT a FREEMASON allow his "Christian" wife to work as THE secretary/administrator of a MASONIC home ?...NO...would Lucinda Friess be the ADMINISTRATOR of the ROWLEY MASONIC HOME if she were NOT Eastern Star herself ?...NO...would a REAL "Christian" be married to a member of the MASONIC EASTERN STAR who has high level connections to the GRAND LODGE of IOWA if he were NOT a FREEMASON and just (as "advertised") a DEVOUT CHRISTIAN who publicly has CONDEMNED FREEMASONRY?...NOT A CHANCE....would a REAL "Christian" continue to defend an abundantly PROVEN PEDOPHILE like Tony Alamo if he was not corrupted by being a DECEPTIVE MASON ?...I don't think so...

Join us for our second interview with blogger / video producer Celtic Rebel. During the show we will discuss issues related to symbolism, subliminal messages,television, mind control, and the entertainment industry.

While not building his ark or planning to escape the soul-trapping matrix, this Celtic Rebel spends his time searching for the truth which has been buried under a history of lies and manipulation. He reaches beyond politics into the realm of his listener's daily lives. Celtic Rebel continues to dissect the subversive imagery found in today's popular culture.

Celtic Rebel has recently premiered his new documentary film "Don't go west". We will spend a great deal of time discussing this film so I encourage you all to view the film prior to the interview. The film can be found at the following link:

Wallace Thornhill - The Electric Universe

March 11, 2010

Author and researcher Wallace Thorhill joins us to discuss his work and book "The Electric Universe". He has been working closely with David Talbot over at thunderbolts.info and he's one of the voices in the "Thunderbolts of the Gods" DVD. Previously we've had Donald Scott and Rens van der Sluijs with us on the program, also contributors to thunderbolts.info, now Wallace joins us for an excellent two hour program as we explore the exciting theory of the electric universe. Topics Discussed: Immanuel Velikovsky, The Saturn Myth, Ancient Solar system, Gravity, Electricity, Journal of Classical Physics, Einstein, the Electric Universe Theory, Quasars, Black Holes, The Standard Model of the Sun, Solar Activity, Anode, Glow Discharge, Photosphere, Magnetism, Twisted Pairs, DNA shape of a Galaxy, Dark Currents, Fractal, The Nature of Gravity, Infinite Speed, Nerve Signaling Speed, Tom Van Flandern, The Origins of the Universe, Longitudinal System, Tesla, Free Energy and more. Don't miss hour two coming up with Wallace Thornhill for Red Ice Members, a very interesting continuation as we talk about Deep Impact, Temple One, Comets, Gravity, Discharge, Lightning, Sprites, Earthquakes and the relationship between the Earth, the Sun, the Galaxy and the Universe. We also go into the very fascinating area of Proto-Saturn, Saturn as a Brown Dwarf, this is our origins, we talk about what Wall calls "the Purple Dawn of Creation" and where the mythology and stories comes from in terms of our ancient past with two suns. Our solar system used to be a Binary Star system. So what happened to Saturn, we can still see effects of that today with the rings of Saturn and the hexagonal glow at its poles? We talk about Venus, Mars, the Sun, The Moon and comet's. We also get Wall's take on the "Norway Spiral". We talk about Plasma Discharge, Time Travel and the search for E.T. as well.

The EU is a mere stepping stone for their One World Government as this President gets rid of all those who dare stand in the way of that goal. If you let in the front door all these isms, Communism, Fascism, Catholicsm, and Islam, you can say goodbye to all your freedoms including your freedom of worship. China is your example.

Pentagon reveals rejected chemical weapons 15 January 2005

THE Pentagon considered developing a host of non lethal chemical weapons that would disrupt discipline and morale among enemy troops, newly declassified documents reveal.

Most bizarre among the plans was one for the development of an "aphrodisiac" chemical weapon that would make enemy soldiers sexually irresistible to each other, provoking widespread homosexual behavior among troops would cause a "distasteful but completely non lethal" blow to morale, the proposal says.

Other ideas included chemical weapons that attract swarms of enraged wasps or angry rats to troop positions, making them uninhabitable. Another was to develop a chemical that caused "severe and lasting halitosis", making it easy to identify guerrillas trying to blend in with civilians. There was also the idea of making troops' skin unbearably sensitive to sunlight.

The proposals, from the US Air Force Wright Laboratory in Dayton, Ohio, date from 1994. The lab sought Pentagon funding for research into what it called "harassing, annoying and 'bad guy' identifying chemicals". The plans have been posted online by the Sunshine Project, an organization that exposes research into chemical and biological weapons.

Spokesman Edward Hammond says it was not known if the proposed $7.5 million, six year research plan was ever pursued.

Lenny & Mrs. Steele reported the week's machinations from the Civilian Media News desk. These events reinforced and bolstered the hidden patterns from previous shows. News items included the abominations of pedophile priests, (Bishop Lahey in Nova Scotia); Beauty (Maria Schriver) and the Priest-Beast ('14th Dolly Llama'); the Papal Vaccination Inquisition that is killing our children. They exposed Rome's creation of a worldwide parasitic Corporate-State (Pay Pal= Papal) and the Nihilistic Global Machine State that has enslaved mankind.

Briefings by Stefan Grossmann highlighted the legal history behind the "Popish Person's" 'Great Game' that changed the USA from a Nation-State into an Orwellian/ Machiavellian Fascist State of sheep, ruled by wolves, owned by pigs with money as the lifeblood. The Black Pope's Agenda has enslaved mankind by removing their freedoms and transmogrifying them into automatons without a soul.

A Briefing by Catherine Austin Fitts, former Asst. Secretary of Housing (Bush 1) highlighted the fact that the owners of the system had fleeced the American Treasury long ago out of Billions and burst the bubble leaving America beggared and buggered.

Keep ahead of the parade during the week with Bloom & Steele at www.twitter.com/ bloomlenny & www.twitter.com/mrsjanesteele. Lenny & Mrs. Steele will be reporting in live next week from abroad while on their spy agency worldwide tour. Don't miss our Second Annual Halloween-Gate/Guy Fawkes Gunpowder Plot Show at the end of this month along with more briefings from Catherine Austin Fitts, Dr. Stefan Grossmann, Barry Chamish and Sherman Skolnick, and many, many more.

Lenny and Mrs. Steele stayed ahead of the contrived and manipulated events of the Military News while scraping the bullshit off the truth. As the ongoing Papal Intelligence Inquisition continues to enslave the sheeple, Bloom & Steele enlighten the people with shock therapy. Lenny and Mrs. Steele went backstage in the Global theatre to show the 'Prince of the Power of the Air', "The Great Electric Engineer"as the Grand Master Pyramid Puppeteer behind the White Pope (Hitler Youth Member Ratzinger) and the Black Pope (Adolph St. Nick Nimrod). As modern day Intellectual Thugs, Bloom & Steele continue to steal state secrets from the Black Nobility and give vital information to the victims of malevolent Secret Societies including Gnostics, Rosicrucians, Freemasons & Popery. Topics included Bill Clinton's afternoon departure from Ted Kennedy's funeral to a Toronto 9/11 2B meeting, Haarpicane Jimena, Swine Flu & Other Club of Rome Bioweapons, Super-Sleuths Bloom & Steele reported on living in the moment, connecting the dots, and organizing ignorance for discovery. That meant, watching the People being manipulated by the Chair of Peter with Inquisitional Wars and Revolutions. The Prince of the Power of the Air, the Great Electric Engineer's ultimate goal is to destroy all of Mankind.

Heterosexual Extortion-Resistant Man, HERM-ites Lenny and Jane joked in 'Pinky and the Brain Style', about how ironic and amusing it is that Jesuit plans backfire, and leave a trail exposing their covert commando operations. ('Black Ops').

The Knights of Malta, The U.R.E.'s (Unholy Roman Empire) Praetorian Guards have infIltrated the People's Worldwide Government Structure, which was originally created to Protect the Individual from the heavy hand of Government and It's Maniacal Egomaniacs.

Charlotte Gerson speaks out about the cancer industry and natural cancer remedies

March 16, 2010
by Mike Adams, the Health Ranger
http://www.naturalnews.com/028382_Gerson_T...ncer_cures.html

MP3; http://www.naturalnews.com/podcasts/Interv...otte-Gerson.mp3

Dr. Max Gerson is known around the world as the father of natural cancer cures. Through his innovative and far-ahead-of-his-time natural healing therapies, many tens of thousands of people have cured their own cancers going all the way back to the 1930's. Today, the daughter of Dr. Gerson, Charlotte Gerson, carries the torch for the Gerson Therapy and the Gerson Institute (www.Gerson.org).

We were recently able to interview Charlotte Gerson, and this 47-minute conversation became one of the most fascinating dialogs I've ever heard about the history of mainstream oppression against cancer cures and leading anti-cancer doctors. This goes all the way back to the Nazis, IG Farben and the history of pharmaceutical companies like Bayer, which were implicated in the chemical torture of concentration camp prisoners.

Hear the entire interview or download it as a free and DRM-free MP3 file from here:
http://www.naturalnews.com/podcasts/Interv...otte-Gerson.mp3

What is Gerson Therapy?

Gerson Therapy is a powerful self-healing therapy based on organic juicing, detoxification and cleansing to activate the body's own innate ability to prevent and reverse cancer. Cancer has a cure! It's working today all around the world.

The Gerson Institute remains one of the most bold and effective organizations offering true health and healing services that focus on teaching patients how to heal their own degenerative diseases. As described on the Gerson website:

"Founded by Charlotte Gerson (Dr. Gerson's daughter) in 1977, we are the true source of information on the original, unmodified, proven Gerson Therapy. We refer people to licensed Gerson clinics and treatment centers, practitioners and caregivers. We also train health professionals, patients and others who want to learn this natural therapy."

The Beautiful Truth

The history of Gerson Therapy and the cancer industry has been captured in a fascinating documentary called The Beautiful Truth.

Check out that movie here (you'll be glad you did):
www.TheBeautifulTruthMovie.com

The recent documentary Food Matters also features Gerson Therapy.

Watch Charlotte Gerson LIVE

Charlotte Gerson joins our Healing Miracles LIVE event kicking off this Friday evening, March 19th, 2010. The event continues all day Saturday, March 20th. Tickets to attend the event in person have long since been sold out, but you can watch the event live from your computer via our real-time streaming technology for less than what it would cost to be there in person.

Plus, you'll get access to the full video archives of the entire event at no extra charge. Grab a seat for this rare event and you'll see Dr. Julian Whitaker, the Health Ranger, Charlotte Gerson and many other fascinating natural health pioneers giving LIVE presentations.

Limited number of seats available for the live streaming. Get details here:
http://www.naturalnewsuniversity.com/heali...clesonline.html

Enjoy the full podcast interview with Charlotte Gerson! Seriously: This is a must-listen interview for anyone suffering from cancer. If you even know of someone who has cancer, send them this link to the audio file!

Mustaffa - August 30, 2009 10:55 PM (GMT)

Radio interview:
http://podcast.wor710.com/wor/384249.mp3

Sarno on 20/20:
http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-6660313127569317147

Sarno's most notable (and controversial) achievement is the development, diagnosis and treatment of TMS, which is not recognized by mainstream medical science. According to Sarno, TMS is a psychosomatic illness causing chronic back, neck, and limb pain which is not relieved by standard medical treatments. He includes other ailments, such as GI problems, dermatological disorders and repetitive-strain injuries as TMS related. Sarno claims to have successfully treated over ten thousand patients at the Rusk Institute by educating them on his beliefs of a psychological and emotional basis to their pain and symptoms.[1] Sarno's theory is, in part, that the pain or GI symptoms are an unconscious "distraction" from the deep emotional issues. Sarno believes that when patients recognize that it is only a distraction, the symptoms then serve no purpose, and they go away. Supporters of Sarno's work hypothesize an inherent difficulty in performing the clinical trials needed to prove or disprove the diagnosis, since it is difficult to use clinical trials with psychosomatic illnesses.

Radio Panel: Swine Flu Hoax Exposed, 3 hour Roundtable Hosted by Dr Bill Deagle

Aug. 28, 2009

This is an important 3 hour radio show hosted by Dr Bill Deagle that blows HUGE holes through every contrived aspect of the World Homicide Organization (WHO)/CDC/ Kathleen Sebelius/Nancy Napolitano/Arne Duncan Swine Flu Propaganda Road Show and replaces the official lies, misrepresentations, and hoaxed 'pandemic' ruse with FACTS that will make it clear to anyone who is in doubt that we are on the precipice of the greatest act of mass vaccine genocide in the history of humanity.

A word to the wise: don't find out AFTER you get the Swine Flu killer vaccine that the info presented in this radio program is an accurate assessment of the planned Swine Flu genocide operation because, for you, it won't matter what you find out because you will be a member of the Walking Dead. The time to come up to speed about this Final Push of the NWO satanists to take over this planet is NOW, before they attempt to enforce mandatory vaccinations and your only recourse will be to shoot to defend yourself.

I suggest you download the these three mp3 audio files to your hard rive and then use whatever player you wish to use to hear the show or download the files onto your MP3 player. I quickly downloaded these files just moments ago from Dr Deagle's GNC web archives, so I didn't a chance to remove the commercials (if someone has the time to do that and send back me the mp3 files, free of commercials, that would be nice and much appreciated).

For the time being, you can simply move the cursor bar forward on your player to jump past the commercials.

I will add though for people to study Dr Rebecca Carley on the subject of autism and vaccines, she's the authority; http://www.drcarley.com/

Use the Christopher eye formula for Macular Degeneration along with Goji Berries, Liver herbs, Blood herbs, Bowel herbs and Mucusless Diet Liver herbs; Greater Celandine, Berberis, Boldo, Vervain, Artichoke, Milk Thistle

For hard water you should utilise either a steam distiller or reverse osmosis system. These rock minerals will end up causing disease via localised constipation (blockage).

For Candida I'd recommend making sure you use Virgin Coconut Oil 1 tablespoon 3x daily. This kills candida fungus whilst repairing the intestines and increasing energy.

How do you import media files from mediafire to Itunes or something gneiss, I saw your starting to use this instead of Megaupload. Is Megaupload not as good or something? Just curious because I'm not sure how to use mediafire personally.

Hi truthersseeker01,

Thanks for your message.

Mediafire seems to be faster and easier to upload to; on the other hand
I think that Megaupload has better retention times. Thanks for the feedback, I'll continue uploading Eric's shows to Megaupload also, so you can import them to Itunes.

best regards

Truthseeker, it's same as megaupload, only you don't have to wait for the timer countdown, as soon as you click on mediafire link you will see "Download" in blue, just click and it will pop up "Save As" window. Download to wherever you want to, desktop for ex.

Blackstone looks to buy Southern Cross debt

Private equity group Blackstone could acquire a new interest in Southern Cross Healthcare by buying debt secured against the beleaguered company's care homes.

By Graham Ruddick
5:45AM BST 07 Jun 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/finance/newsbys...Cross-debt.html

In a new twist to the Southern Cross saga, which has seen Blackstone criticised over its role as former owner of the care homes operator, the American private equity group is believed to be trying to secure control of debt backing 91 Southern Cross homes.

Blackstone owned Southern Cross from 2004 to 2006 and has been accused of supporting the sale-and-leaseback model which has left the care home group with a rising rent bill of almost £250m.

Southern Cross, which has 31,000 residents in 750 homes, is on the brink of collapse because it can no longer afford the rent bill. It has asked landlords to cut rents by 30pc over summer and will update shareholders on its financial health on July 12.

Blackstone has denied it is to blame for Southern Cross's plight and claims the vast majority of leases were agreed before and after it owned the company.

The US firm, however, could now have a new involvement with Southern Cross. Royal Bank of Scotland is believed to have named Blackstone on a shortlist of four private equity groups to acquire a £1.6bn portfolio of loans from the bank.

Within this portfolio, there is roughly £60m of debt used to finance the purchase of Southern Cross care homes by London & Regional, the property company controlled by the billionaire property tycoons Ian and Richard Livingstone.

L&R bought the homes' freeholds in 2005 and, according to documents, was backed by a consortium of banks providing £330m of debt. RBS provided 17pc of this debt and that is now part of Project Isobel.

Research conducted for the state-backed bank shows the annual rents on the property are £25m and the capital value is £294m, below the value of the debt. The failure of Southern Cross to pay the rent could therefore have serious repercussions.

A decision on a buyer for the £1.6bn portfolio is expected this month. The other shortlisted parties are Lone Star, Starwood Capital and Westbrook Partners.

All parties declined to comment last night.

Meanwhile, the GMB union yesterday published a report naming the financial institutions and advisers that bought into Southern Cross's sale-and-leaseback model.

The list included the Permanent Secretary to David Cameron, Jeremy Heywood, who was co-head of UK investment banking at Morgan Stanley when it advised Blackstone on Southern Cross's flotation.

How did they get away with all of this!!??

Wolveshater - March 18, 2010 03:19 AM (GMT)

It was easy, we all went on a picnic and they did it..

No need as one link may go down and another still up. Thanks for making this more available to the people map - March 20, 2010 08:46 PM (GMT)

the presentation is much easier to digest for the novice than the massive 3rd edition VA book.

:(

ANNOUNCED ALL OF SUDDEN TODAY WAS EJP STATING HE HAS ENDED HIS BROADCAST WITH LIBERTY LIVE RADIO...

I HOPE HE GETS BACK UP SOON WITH BLOG TALK RADIO OR SOMETHING LIKE THAT WHICH HE CAN DO BY HIMSELF AND FOR FREE.

zenmodi - November 17, 2009 11:45 PM (GMT)

one of the greatest researcher and dots connecter of our time. he gotta start new and hopesfully reaches a much larger floor than till now. always liked it the most when he was on other radio hosts explaining stuff to noobmoderators. maybe he will travel again through that different channels as guest, would be great, he could reach much more new people.

 PLEASE MAKE SURE YOU DOWNLOAD THIS VIDEO BEFORE ANY SUPPRESSION ***

Welcome finally to the real truth behind the 9/11 attacks. Much of what you've heard by the alternative media has been twisted by the National Security Agency and the Intelligence network in order to suit their needs and the beliefs they would like the awakening people to follow. The information provided may shock you if you've never come across any of it before. This 9/11 attack was nothing like you imagined after being steered by the Intelligence false alternative media for all this time. Now is the time for the truth and here it is, enjoy.

Merkel and Sarkozy: their plans to turn Europe into a Greater Germany

04 February 2011 2:59 PM
http://synonblog.dailymail.co.uk/2011/02/m...er-germany.html

I'm at the European Council meeting, and just out from a press briefing by Angela Merkel and Nicolas Sarkozy. It was meant to be an explanation of the 'grand bargain' the two are right now presenting over lunch to the other 25 heads of state and government. The 'bargain' is a deal all about how the eurozone is going to make itself competitive by means of a centralised European economic government.

Pause for a moment and think about how ludicrous that idea is. The individual eurozone countries have all either blasted apart their banking systems or destroyed their countries with debt, or both. Yet it is from these same economically-idiotic countries that the new centralised economic government will be drawn: somehow the 'magic' of 'more Europe' is meant to turn the politicans and bureaucrats of these nations, all of them proven incompetents, into round-eyed versions of Hong Kong dynamos.

The German chancellor assured us all that in her plan the role of the other eurozone states was to decided which member states had best practice in economic matters and then agree to impose that same 'best practice' across the eurozone.

Nobody was fooled by what she meant: any working groups set up will find -- hey, here's a surprise -- that Germany has best practice in everything. Not that it actually does. As Charles Dumas of Lombard Street Research says: 'The widely-held belief in the strength of the German economy is a delusion.'

But since Merkel has taken control of the formation of a eurozone economic government -- Sarkozy is very much the junior partner, whose role is mostly to act as cover for the fact that Germany is the driver of this policy -- she will get what she wants. Which is: the Germanification of the EU.

This shows how far Sarkozy's policy of making himself Tonto to Merkel's Lone Ranger has damaged French influence in the EU. Historically, when the French drove the creation of the (then) Common Market, the community/union was meant to be building the Continent into a Greater France. Now the 27 countries are being forced into building a Greater Germany.

And I do mean the 27. Cameron and Osborne may stand to one side of this and say, 'We're not eurozone, nothing to do with us, mate,' but that is not the way the whirlpool of Brussels works: in the end, everyone is sucked in.

First the eurozone will be sucked in, mostly because too many people imagine Germany has been powering along for years, so they ought to start doing things the Berlin way. It is worth remembering this: for most of the time since 2000, the German economy has stagnated. The undervaluation of the euro is what has given the Germans their 'bounce' in the last 18 months. Nobody sane wants to have his economic government run by the too-often-flat-lining Germans.

Already Lombard Street Research has started refering to the weak 'Club Med' members of the eurozone as 'the new East Germany.'

German Börse in Talks to Buy the Big Board

By MICHAEL J. DE LA MERCED and JACK EWING
February 9, 2011, 9:00 pm Mergers & Acquisitions http://dealbook.nytimes.com/2011/02/09/nys...erger-talks/?hp

Traders at the Frankfurt Stock Exchange in Germany, whose owner is negotiating to purchase the New York Stock Exchange.

The New York Stock Exchange, a symbol of American capitalism for more than two centuries, may soon have new owners — in Europe.

The exchange, facing pressure from electronic upstarts that have taken business away from it, said on Wednesday that it was in advanced talks on a merger with the operator of the Frankfurt Stock Exchange. A deal would create the world’s largest financial market, with a presence in 14 European countries as well as the United States.

A merger would potentially let customers trade stocks in New York, options tied to those shares in Paris and derivatives linked to them in Frankfurt.

A combination, after the mergers of other exchanges, would be another illustration of how globalization and technology have changed marketplaces. The New York Stock Exchange is a giant among exchanges, yet in a world of around-the-clock trading and rapid-fire algorithmic programs, its significance to investors has diminished. Once known for chief executives who were prominent cheerleaders for the stock market, the exchange now has a more muted public presence.

While the ringing of the opening bell every morning and images of anxious or joyful workers on the trading floor represent the stock market to millions of people, increasingly trades are being executed by computers far from Wall Street, in places like Jersey City and Kansas City.

The Big Board has already undergone a radical transformation in just a few years: from a clubby nonprofit organization where brokers on the floor handled most trades to a profit-making multinational corporation engaged in largely electronic trading. Some 1,300 equities and options traders now work on the floor of the exchange, down from nearly 3,000 a decade ago. As a public company, its stock price has slumped 64 percent from a high in 2006.

So while news of the merger negotiations was the talk of Wall Street on Wednesday, some had already accepted that further change was needed.

“You probably need more consolidation,” said Barry Smith, 44, a financial technology executive, who sat drinking beer with two friends at Bobby Van’s Steakhouse and Grill across the street from the exchange.

Under the terms being negotiated, the New York Stock Exchange — which began in 1792 when brokers gathered beneath a buttonwood tree in Lower Manhattan to trade five securities of the new nation — would still have a headquarters in Manhattan. But the Deutsche Börse would own as much as 60 percent of the new company, which would be incorporated in the Netherlands.

If a deal is reached, it could still face several hurdles, including regulatory and political resistance. New York City leaders have been particularly vocal about maintaining the city’s status as the leading financial capital.

Competition among exchanges has grown more intense in recent years as investors seeking speed, lower costs and greater liquidity have flocked to electronic platforms that pay little heed to financial centers or tradition. Exchanges are under pressure to get bigger to cut costs and invest in technology that will allow them to host as many transactions as quickly as possible.

“There is a race toward exchanges becoming ever bigger,” said Elie Darwish, an analyst at Exane BNP Paribas in Paris. “This would give NYSE Euronext-Deutsche Börse an unchallengeable position.”

Much of the $411 million in expected cost savings from a combination of the New York Exchange and the Deutsch Börse is expected to come from combining the two companies’ technology systems and back-office operations. Fewer than 1,000 job cuts are expected, with less than 100 in New York, said a person briefed on the matter who spoke anonymously because he was not authorized to discuss it.

Still, a merger could raise l questions about the importance of the exchange to the vitality of the financial industry in New York. The role of the exchange’s professionals on the floor may become more limited as a result.

Michael Pagano, a professor at the Villanova School of Business, said those floor specialists could help during times of market stress like the “flash crash” of May. “They could become something like the Maytag repairman,” he said. “He doesn’t necessarily do anything all day, but he’s there when you need him."

The joint statement by the two companies closely followed the announcement of an all-stock merger of the London Stock Exchange and the Toronto Stock Exchange.

While NYSE Euronext and Deutsche Börse confirmed that they were in "advanced discussions" about a deal, they cautioned that the talks may still fall apart. Deutsche Börse has a history of trying to merge with other exchanges, including the Big Board and the London Stock Exchange, without success.

Still, a merger could be announced as soon as the middle of next week, according to the person briefed on the matter. NYSE Euronext shareholders are expected to receive a roughly 10 percent premium to their shares, this person added.

The last six years have yielded several big exchange unions, including the Chicago Mercantile Exchange's purchases of the Chicago Board of Trade and Nymex Holdings and the Singapore exchange's proposed acquisition of the Australian Stock Exchange.

NYSE Euronext itself is the product of the New York Stock Exchange's takeovers of Archipelago Holdings, which gave it an electronic trading platform, Euronext and the American Stock Exchange.

Wednesday's announcements will probably put additional pressure on smaller players, like the Nasdaq Stock Market, to seek additional partners to keep up.

Deutsche Börse's chief executive, Reto Francioni, would serve as chairman from Frankfurt. Duncan L. Niederauer, the chief executive of NYSE Euronext, would serve the same role for the combined company, whose name has not been determined. The names of the local markets, including the New York Stock Exchange, would remain, in part to try to mitigate political backlash.

NYSE Euronext and Deutsche Börse held merger talks twice before, in 2008 and 2009, before resuming discussions again late last year, according to the person briefed on the matter.

David Jolly and Colin Moynihan contributed reporting.

Craig, congratulations, this is quite a piece of work, and takes us into new territory (speaking for myself at least)

At the risk of impertinence, I have a few questions (observations,comments) although in respect to your work, I will of course watch all 12 segments again..

I see you have posted the 'directed energy' scalar weapons information again (update) and so my first question is this; do you not think it a more plausible explanation, than say the use of a thermonuclear device?

The idea that the planes themselves would have been ditched in the ocean cannot be right. The risk of wreckage being found, not to mention bodies (no matter how unlikely) would introduce an element of risk and of certain exposure. It's not a risk, in my opinion, any agency would consider. It would be an unacceptable risk.

I have to confess, I also find it somewhat easier to accept the wider conspiracy en masse scenario, rather than a rogue element (DVD) operating in the midst of other agencies, and being able to pull this off. I mean, a surgical strike is one thing, but a strike in which even the media have played a part is hardly 'surgical' - the Zapruder film may well be full of cuts, but the footage around those twin towers on that day, is no less cut, and riddled with trickery (not even good trickery)

Picking up on your point about how an aircraft could not penetrate so many walls at the Pentagon, then neither could an airliner's nose cone emerge from the other side of one of the towers after such an impact! (having ripped through the entire building) all of the steel and out the other side, in a frame by frame continuous movement....which leaves a serious question over what exactly we are looking at in these video releases

One final point. Quite how was a fatally damaged Concorde going to be directed/steered into the 747 of Chirac? Sure, the secret squirrels are well versed in making aircraft incidents appear like accidents - but the idea this would actually take out Chirac, seems laughable, even in the script of a Bond movie...not exactly a weapon of choice, despite the fact it is highly symbolic!

Anyway, if memory serves, does this not tend to fly in the face of Vialls work on this incident....the late Joe Vialls that is.

France wants new global finance system

Updated: 11:37, Monday, 14 February 2011
http://www.rte.ie/news/2011/0214/g20-business.html

France will help the transition to a global financial system based on 'several international currencies', the French Economy Minister said today.

France, as current head of the Group of 20 countries, will help the transition to a global financial system based on 'several international currencies', French Economy Minister Christine Lagarde said today.

Lagarde, speaking ahead of a G20 finance ministers meeting in Paris on Friday and Saturday, said the world had to move on from the 'non-monetary system' it now has to one 'based on several international currencies'.

Accordingly, France wants to see less need for countries, especially the emerging economies, to accumulate huge foreign reserves, she said.

At the same time, international capital flows should be better regulated and the role of the Special Drawing Rights issued by the International Monetary Fund should be reinforced by the inclusion of China's yuan in the system.

China, whose booming economy now ranks second only to the US in size after overtaking Japan, has accumulated massive forex reserves of more than $2.5 trillion on the back of its sustained trade surpluses and foreign fund inflows.

Washington says the build-up reflects an unfair undervaluation of the yuan, a charge Beijing rejects.

France has previously said it wanted to see the global financial system reduce its reliance on the dollar for a more broad-based arrangement.

Obama awards Merkel Washington's highest civilian honor

Awards | 16.02.2011
http://www.dw-world.de/dw/article/0,,14844437,00.html

Merkel will pick up the medal on a future White House visit
Washington has bestowed America's highest civilian honor on German Chancellor Angela Merkel. US President Barack Obama paid tribute to Merkel's accomplishments and called her one of his closest allies.

US President Barack Obama has awarded Chancellor Angela Merkel America's highest civilian honor, the Presidential Medal of Freedom, praising her as a "trusted friend."

Although Merkel was not present to receive the award personally on Tuesday, Obama paid tribute to her achievement in becoming the first former East German, and the first woman, to become chancellor.

"Growing up in communist East Germany, Angela Merkel dreamed of freedom," said Obama. "And when the Wall finally crumbled and Germany was reunited, she broke barriers of her own."

"To America, Chancellor Merkel and the country she leads are among our closest allies. To me, she's a trusted global partner and a friend."

Medal honors 'exceptional contributions'

Obama praised Merkel, saying she had broken barriers

The medal is awarded to individuals considered to have made "exceptional contributions" to the interests of the United States, world peace, or to cultural or other significant endeavors.

Merkel, who was in Bratislava at a meeting of prime ministers from the Visegrad Group of Central European states, is to pick up the award on her next visit to Washington.

Among the 14 other recipients of this year's awards, collectively praised as "some of the world's most extraordinary people" by Obama, were former US president George Bush (senior), Polish-born Holocaust survivor and author Gerda Weissmann Klein and billionaire philanthropist Warren Buffett.

ILFC Plans to Buy $11.8 Billion Worth of Airbus, Boeing Jets

By Susanna Ray and Mary Jane Credeur - Mar 8, 2011
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-03-08/a...20neo-jets.html

American International Group Inc. (AIG)’s jet-leasing unit said it will buy 100 Airbus SAS aircraft and 33 Boeing Co. (BA) 737s, $11.8 billion in planes at list prices, as airlines refresh their fleets amid rising travel demand.

International Lease Finance Corp. said its deal with Airbus consists of 75 A320neo narrow-body jets, as the model fitted with new, more fuel-efficient engines is called, and 25 A321neo planes. That replaces a plan to buy 10 A380 superjumbo jets, which list for about $375 million each, ILFC said today.

The purchase will be Los Angeles-based ILFC’s first since 2007 as it seeks to resume growth after AIG’s bailout during the 2008 financial crisis. ILFC Chief Executive Officer Henri Courpron said in July he was starting negotiations about an order to add to the company’s fleet of about 930 aircraft.

“It’s encouraging to see that ILFC is firmly back in the game,” said Rob Stallard, an analyst with RBC Capital Markets in New York. “We expect their leasing peers to also be looking at follow-on orders this year.”

Boeing rose $1.16, or 1.6 percent, to $72.04 at 4:01 p.m. in New York Stock Exchange composite trading. Airbus parent European Aeronautic, Defence & Space Co. rose 54 cents, or 2.8 percent, to 19.84 euros in Paris.
Aging Fleets

Airlines’ demand is being fueled by aging fleets in North America and Europe and the growth of low-cost carriers in emerging markets, said Peter Arment, a Gleacher & Co. Securities analyst in Greenwich, Connecticut. Boeing and Airbus are boosting output to record levels as orders rebound after the recession.

ILFC’s plans are a “sign that leasing activity from one of the industry’s top players is back,” Arment said.

AIG’s rescue by the federal government eventually swelled to $182.3 billion. Shut out of capital markets for more than a year, ILFC had to be propped up by AIG, sold 53 planes to Macquarie Aerospace Ltd. for $2 billion in April 2010 and named Courpron, a former Airbus executive, as CEO in May.

Airlines’ efforts to blunt rising fuel costs helped drive the order, Courpron said in an interview today, a day after crude oil rose to a 29-month high in New York.

“Customers are saying fuel is becoming a significant factor in their cost, and it is a sense of history - you can’t stop progress,” Courpron said. “Engine manufacturers have made significant progress in offering technology, aircraft makers need to avail themselves of that.”
Boeing Deliveries

ILFC will start taking the 737 deliveries in 2012. Toulouse, France-based Airbus, which unveiled the A320neo on Dec. 1, has said the first of the new jets would reach customers starting in 2016. Today’s memorandum of understanding marks the first intended order for the larger A321neo model.

“This brings to 302 the number of airplane commitments for the A320neo,”‘ John Leahy, Airbus’s chief salesman, said in an interview. “That’s the fastest rate of sales we’ve ever seen on any plane.”

The loss of the A380s “is not a big blow” for Airbus because ILFC doesn’t operate the jets itself and was buying the planes to lease to airlines, Leahy said.

The A320neo has a list price of $91.2 million, while the published price of the A321neo is $105.9 million. Boeing’s 737-800 lists for $80.8 million. All are similar single-aisle jets, which are the workhorses of the global airline industry, flown chiefly on domestic routes.
Watching Boeing

Boeing has said it is leaning toward developing an all-new successor to the 737, the world’s most widely flown airliner, instead of mimicking Airbus by offering upgraded engines. Airlines have signaled more interest in a replacement jet with better operating efficiency, according to Boeing.

"We continue to monitor the market and see how airlines are responding to the neo order and what Boeing may or may not do," Courpron said. He said the A321neo is a "potential strong replacement" for Boeing's single-aisle 757s, which went out of production in 2005.

ILFC chose Pratt & Whitney's geared turbofan engine to power 60 of the twin-engine Airbus planes, giving the unit of Hartford, Connecticut-based United Technologies Corp. (UTX) its biggest order to date for the technology.

Pratt & Whitney didn't disclose financial terms and hasn't announced a list price for the engine. Pratt's offering competes with the new Leap-X engine from CFM International, a joint venture of General Electric Co. (GE) and Safran SA (SAF) of France, on Airbus neo models. Boeing's 737-800s are exclusively powered by CFM's existing CFM56 model.

"This is the first win for the new Pratt & Whitney engine on the A320neo," RBC's Stallard said. "Given the quality of the customer, I'd say it is a strong endorsement of the potential qualities of this engine."

Courpron said ILFC is still in talks with CFM on the Leap-X and hasn't ruled out buying Bombardier Inc. (BBD/B)'s CSeries jet, which competes with smaller versions of the A320 family and the 737.

"As we get smarter and get more information, we may decide to place an order for the CSeries, or we may decide to stay away from it," Courpron said.

It was reported that Flight 93 was in fact grounded in or around Cleveland. I believe that. I also once saw a youtube video of a supposed series of cell phone calls made from that plane. What it claimed was that the plane landed, people made those phone calls at gunpoint, and then they were all shot. There was even a muffled voice that seemed to be coaching the callers that could barely be heard saying, "you did great" afterwards. I agree this is speculation on Craig's part, and that I don't agree with him, but if what happened with flight 93 IS A MISTAKE, then I would say Craig's opinion is the next best option.

A wider conspiracy scenario? As in what? The CIA, FBI, MI-6 and Mossad? That does seem wide, yes. But how can the inclusion of French, German and Russian intelligence along with Israeli intelligence not also be wide? If you want to know where Craig is getting his claim that French, German and Russian intelligence met to decide to attack America in revenge for their attempted attack on the Concorde, then you need to study the work of Joe Vialls. He wrote a long article on it which I just found on the internet. Lots of his mirror sites, as well as his original site is gone. We are lucky that Craig has preserved as much as he has from Vialls. The article is called "France, Russia, Germany Responsible for 9-11: Sabotage of Concorde 4590 was one giant leap too far" Vialls was murdered according to Craig and I believe him. Another person told me Vialls had contacts in British as well as French intelligence that were feeding him information. I believe that as well.

You may be asking yourself, how can there be any German involvement? Well, if you study the Bush family, and how they are in fact, going back to George Bush the first, they are the khazarian, German-Jewish family Scherff. This was first reported in the Idaho Observer a few years ago and then picked up and pushed around the net by Greg Szymanski, Craig Oxley and also Eric Orion, the latter whom wrote a book about the Bush (Scherff) money connections to the Nazis. Now when you combine this with the nazi infiltration of America through project paperclip and other things, and when you consider how Truman in fact was deceived by people in his own intelligence agencies into accepting German scientists into America after world war two who were in fact Nazis (because his intelligence staff messed with immigration forms to say former nazis were not nazis), and when you study the work of Christopher Story, not least of which include his book NEW UNDERWORLD ORDER, and some issues of Soviet Analyst, the German connection makes sense. ESPECIALLY when you also know that German Jew Andreas Strassmeier played a role in bombing of the Murrah building in Oklahoma City, which, according to Story, housed a lot of records of current locations nazi war criminals who were hiding in America.

> Thus, when the Murrah Building was bombed, several birds were killed with one exploding stone: both Sessions' sensitive documents AND the tell-tale Nazi papers, were incinerated.
> http://www.worldreports.org/news/117_child...illary_black_op

But keep in mind the Germanic-British CIA also worked with Mossad to pull this off. The ADL is a Mossad wing and needed to demonize the patriot movement who were at least catching on to the Zionist aspect of things. Judicial-inc covered the Jewish angle to Oklahoma really well.

If I remember correctly, Craig has a serious problem with this as well. In fact, he goes so far as to accuse the NSA of messing with the 9-11 tapes and putting THAT, among other things, in there, to deceive people.

Does Vialls not show how a Concorde that was tampered with could in fact be directed into Chirac's plane? I will have to read that again.

Craig, great video series. After watching it, it's clear to me who your main sources are. Joe Vialls, Deimitri Khalezov, and Christopher Story. Two of these men are dead, and one has been attacked relentlessly. Good job at bringing their work forward. Kudos!

Let me start by saying, that I am also grateful and respectful of Craig's work. Perhaps I should have taken greater care to frame a few of my points as questions, and not statements...as it was not my intention to attempt a de-construction or critique these videos as such..

The truth is, I come here in search of understanding, trying to make sense of the world around me, and not to bite the hand of those who would otherwise help and guide us.

What I meant by 'wider conspiracy' (and fully accept your point about those 'involved') was that I thought the US involvement likely ran deeper than just the DVD elements embedded within the US agencies. There are a number of sites and videos that make a compelling case for quite extensive video trickery...not to mention 'false ID's' of 'victims' on the aircraft, and supposedly in the towers on that day. Of course, I may be under estimating the reach of the DVD...

I have also spent time reading and following the work of Christopher Story, with 'world reports' having been part of my staple diet these past few years, until the 'departure' of CS (however that actually transpired) and in common with many here, I was not blind to Story's own 'blind spot' as far as the monarchy was concerned. When CS and others were quick to jump on the Frankfurt School and to the DVD, it seemed to all too conveniently point away from Tavistock, Rand and from the CFR...

You see, what I tend to struggle with, is the idea that these agencies (families, bloodlines) are all mounting operations and/or campaigns against each other, as being counter productive and counter intuitive, given that they are all under the auspices of, and controlled by the very same Jesuit masters. That said, perhaps this is just another layer and aspect that I do not yet fully understand..

Thanks for the links to more of Joe Vialls work...

The Jesuits manipulate these Nations to do their bidding, there would have been Jesuits working behind the scenes convincing these countries that they needed to retaliate against America. Then this helped fulfill the Jesuits goal of having America turned into a fascist country by the D.V.D Nazi Bush's and co and to eventually bankrupt and destroy it. Afterwards America will take the blame for its own demise. That's my short simplistic answer anyway.

Excellent work by the way Craig. I only have problem with those finer point issues that I mentioned on the youtube.

Do you think the Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst operation is some small affair in the United States? They have assets in every agency and organisation as would any skillful infiltrator would or wish to achieve. Remember they have Knight of Malta, Heinz Kissinger as a member, do you realise his power within the United States and Worldwide political scene? He's the political adviser to the Pope. They have Knight of Malta, George H.W. Bush do you realise his power within the United States and his contacts? Remember its true that he is really the head of the Central Intelligence Agency and that Knight of Malta, Leon Panetta sings to Bush's tune. This is a clever skillful operation that can easily bring down three poxy towers in New York and destroy The Pentagon with ease. Don't think they're a little group just because you had never heard of them. These are deep agents well embedded and well aware of the system because they are the system when it comes to the workings of the United States. You don't get much bigger than those two members I mentioned in the United States. Forget David Rockefeller, in truth George H.W. Bush could have him whacked in the blink of an eye. Why? Well although Rockefeller is a cretin, Bush is far dirtier as he's closer to the actual ground so to speak more in direct involvement with the people who commit the crimes such as his big buddy and dirty work pay off criminal, Michael Harari for instance. I wish Bush would have the crippled Rockefeller horizontalized.

Elizabeth Mary the treasonous false Queen of England has no power in the league of what most people have believed. She has far less power in the United States than believed. She's apart of The Crown but she isn't its ruler and this has gone on all the way back to 1215 onwards with all the Monarchs. Its the Magna Carta which lost them their rule due to going back on the original agreements with the Pope this voided their rule under him over the Kingdom. So its The Crown who controls the United States and this is controlled by the Knights of Malta. So when Chris spoke of her power being over exaggerated he was absolutely correct. Again people really need to focus on King Juan Carlos of Spain more than the false Queen. Just because the control center is The City of London, the proxy of Borgo Santo Spirito doesn't mean the Queen rules as she has no rule over The City of London, in fact she has to ask permission to enter this square mile. If she entered she would have to walk behind the Mayor in subordination and she cannot wear her robes of rule she would normally. Remember The City of London is a sovereign nation and its The Crown.

Airbus claims U.S. helped Boeing deal

By Pilita Clark and Stephanie Kirchgaessner, FT.com

http://edition.cnn.com/2011/BUSINESS/03/08...x.html?hpt=Sbin

(FT) -- Airbus lost a large Chinese passenger jet order to US rival Boeing, prompting a senior executive of the European aircraft maker to claim that Washington brought political influence to bear in the deal.

"We understand there was a lot of political pressure from Washington on that transaction," said John Leahy, Airbus chief operating officer for customers.

"Even Obama and Hu Jintao were talking about it during the visit to the US," he added, referring to the Chinese president's state visit in January.

A White House official said that the contract had not been raised and the administration had no knowledge of the order. It is not clear what leverage the US could have had over China on the deal, and Chinese airlines have consistently bought aircraft from both Airbus and Boeing in line with Beijing's own political interests.

One Washington lobbyist who works on foreign transactions said the accusation by Airbus was "crazy" and "far fetched".

Boeing announced on Tuesday it had done a deal to sell five of its 747-8 aircraft, a new version of its jumbo jet, to Air China, China's national carrier, in a transaction worth $1.5bn at advertised, or list, prices.

Mr Leahy, who several hours later announced a big order of Airbus jets to leading aircraft lessor International Lease Finance Corporation, said he had been trying to sell Airbus's rival A380 to Air China instead, but had lost to Boeing.

"That was very disappointing," he told the Financial Times. "We did think we had a better offer with the A380 at that particular juncture. You win some, you lose some. So far I'm outselling the 747-8 10-to-one, so I guess they're entitled to win one occasionally."

Boeing said it had worked with Air China to do a "thorough analysis" of the 747-8's performance. "Air China decided the 747-8 is the right aeroplane at this time for its long-haul needs," the company added.

Air China could not be immediately reached for comment.

Airbus and Boeing announced jet orders worth more than $20bn at advertised prices on Tuesday, in a fresh sign of optimism in the industry.

ILFC said it planned to buy 100 of Airbus's new A320 family of jets with upgraded engines, worth about $9.5bn at catalogue prices.

The deal replaces a prior agreement to buy 10 of Airbus's A380 superjumbos, the world's largest passenger jet, which had a list price of more than $3bn. ILFC also signed a purchase agreement for 33 of Boeing's 737 aircraft, a rival to Airbus's A320s.

Hong Kong Airlines has also signed a preliminary agreement to take 38 aircraft, including 32 of Boeing's much-delayed 787 Dreamliners, and six 777 freighters.

The Hong Kong and Air China deals are worth about $10bn at advertised prices, though the actual prices paid are almost always much lower.

9/11 firefighter dies of cancer linked to toxic dust

By Dana Garrett, CNN Senior Producer
March 3, 2011
http://edition.cnn.com/2011/HEALTH/03/02/n...rk.firefighter/

New York (CNN) -- Firefighter Randy Wiebicke who, like so many New York City firefighters, toiled in and around ground zero in the months after 9/11, died Wednesday following a nearly three-year battle with multiple myeloma, an aggressive and fatal blood cancer.

Wiebicke underwent an experimental stem cell transplant procedure last summer, when his cancer was in remission. But just two months after the transplant, he developed viral infections that, ultimately, his weakening body could no longer fight.

Wiebicke's wife, Madeline, said Randy was "a man who lived his life in the spirit of what being a firefighter meant to him. When others were in danger, running out of a burning building, he was there to run in," she wrote in an e-mail. "He lived his life beautifully, in a way that inspired everyone around him. Having Randy around not only made you want to be a better person, but it showed you how to get there," she wrote.

Hundreds of firefighters and other ground zero workers have died of cancer in the years following the attack on the World Trade Center, according to New York state health officials. So far, however, doctors have been reluctant to link those cancers to 9/11, saying that most cancers take longer than nine years to develop.

But a 2009 study published in the Journal of Occupational and Environmental Medicine suggested a link between the type of cancer Wiebicke had and exposure to the toxic dust at ground zero. "We found a predominance of multiple myeloma in younger folks than we would have expected," said Dr. Jacqueline Moline, the study's author.

Moline is the former director of the World Trade Center Medical Monitoring and Treatment Program at Mount Sinai Hospital. She said doctors monitoring the health of first responders are paying close attention to blood cancers, since they usually develop in a shorter time frame than other cancers.
Rare cancer threatens 9/11 worker

"Those are the things that all of us in the World Trade Center programs have been focusing on and we're working to see if there are patterns," she said. "We know that it looks like people (with multiple myeloma) might be affected at an earlier age."

Typically, multiple myeloma, a type of blood cancer that affects blood plasma cells in the bone marrow, affects people over age 70. "So seeing folks in their 30s and 40s with myeloma was striking to us," Moline said. Randy Wiebicke was diagnosed with the cancer when he was 52.

Though it will take many more years of study to prove a link between ground zero and cancer, Moline said her gut tells her that "we are going to find that myeloma is in some fashion involved with the World Trade Center."

Wiebicke, who was stationed at a firehouse just blocks away from the twin towers, was not scheduled to work on the morning of 9/11, but raced to get there following the attack. In an interview last summer, Wiebicke told CNN's Deborah Feyerick that he rushed into the city with the mistaken notion that he would be rescuing people.

"I started getting equipment together, you know ropes and things, and I stopped at the local firehouse and got stretchers and went down and went right to the site and there was hardly anybody," he said, tearing up as he spoke. "It was just silent. Nothing, nothing, nobody alive."

Madeline Wiebicke said her husband came home after three days working in "the pit" with his gear covered in soot and ash. In the months that followed, she reminded him in an interview, "every time you drove to work and would come home you'd have a coating of dust on your car."

He soon developed the respiratory problems that came to be known as the "world trade center cough." But after retiring in 2002, the cough faded and Wiebicke looked forward to spending time on home projects, like building a new chicken coop in the backyard. "I thought I was bulletproof," he said last summer, while sitting near that almost-completed coop.

In the summer of 2008, he began feeling sick and, in what he described as "hitting a brick wall," his kidneys began to fail. "It was like somebody shut a switch on my whole digestive system and, you know, it felt horrible."

The kidney failure was only a symptom of a larger problem, however. A blood test proved what doctors suspected, that the source of the kidney problems was multiple myeloma.

The Wiebickes said that many of the doctors they saw believed the cancer was related to his work at ground zero.

"When I told them I was a fireman they, you know, immediately put two and two together and suspected that it had something to do with, you know, 9/11" Wiebicke said.

After dialysis helped his kidneys recover, it was time to attack the cancer, and in February 2009 he underwent chemotherapy and a stem cell transplant.

By last summer, Wiebicke's doctor told him that he was in remission. But the good news was tempered with a harsh reality. The Wiebickes were told that Randy's cancer was very aggressive and would come back sooner rather than later.

It was with that understanding that Wiebicke decided to undergo an experimental type of stem cell transplant in August that has been shown in clinical trials to lead to a much longer remission.

Dr. Guenther Koehne from the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center pioneered the procedure. He explained that traditional stem cell transplants for multiple myeloma frequently had poor outcomes. In the experimental procedure, officially called a "t-cell depleted allogeneic bone marrow transplant," the immune cells or "t-cells" are removed from the bone marrow stem cells before being transplanted in the patient, reducing the chances of the graft vs. host disease that is often fatal.

Koehne said while he couldn't promise Wiebicke the procedure would be a cure, his hope was "to achieve a long-lasting duration of a remission with the best quality of life."

Watching her husband fight through his illness brought Madeline Wiebicke back to the days after 9/11.

"I just thought that it was over with," she said in the interview last summer. "You know, we went through six months of crying and funerals and I thought it was over. I didn't expect to have to go through it all again."

In addition to his wife, Randy Wiebicke leaves behind a son and two daughters. Services are scheduled for Monday.

Kaye: Why are Ground Zero workers getting sick?

By Randi Kaye
POSTED: 1419 GMT (2219 HKT), September 12, 2006
http://edition.cnn.com/2006/US/09/11/kaye.btsc/index.html

Editor's note: In our Behind the Scenes series, CNN correspondents share their experiences covering news and analyze the stories behind the events.

NEW YORK (CNN) -- Could this be a coincidence? Is this for real? How will we ever know? Those are just some of the questions I asked myself when writing about workers and emergency responders from Ground Zero who now claim they're sick from the toxic cocktail to which they were exposed.

I got to know two guys in particular. They are former New York Police Department detectives Rich Volpe and John Wolcott, partners for 11 years in the narcotics division.

They worked together on the pile at the World Trade Center site for nine months. Now Wolcott has leukemia and Volpe has double kidney failure. Both blame their illnesses on the toxins at Ground Zero, like benzene and dioxin.

They weren't given respirators to wear, they say, until weeks into the cleanup, only to be told that the respirators had the wrong filters and they would need new ones to properly protect themselves.

Wolcott told me black soot would spill out of his ears in the shower and onto his pillow at night for months. The shower floor, he said, looked like the bottom of a barbecue grill.

Doctors at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City are operating the largest screening program of its kind for 9/11 responders. We spoke to Dr. Stephen Levin, who heads the program.

He acknowledges seeing a rise in respiratory ailments and concludes that is from the dust and the poisonous air at the site. But Dr. Levin will not go so far as to say there is a direct link between cancers that are developing in responders and their work at Ground Zero five years ago.

I asked Dr. Levin how long it normally takes for cancer to develop in someone exposed to these toxins. "There is generally a minimum of 15 years that has to pass from the exposure to a cancer-causing agent to the time you can really diagnose that cancer. And frankly, in most cancer types, that latency period, that delay, is more often 20 and 25 years," he said.

So what are we to make of this? Could this be some horrible coincidence? Could these people have been predisposed to these cancers? One attorney I interviewed, David Worby, said he has 8,000 clients who got sick at Ground Zero. More than 60 of them are already dead, he said.

On top of this, there is the political backpedaling taking place behind the scenes. Why were workers allowed on the site if the air was dangerous?

Former EPA Administrator Christine Todd Whitman said in 2001, "If there's any good news out of all this, it's that everything we've tested for, which includes asbestos, lead and VOC's [volatile organic compounds] have been below any level of concern for the general public health. Obviously, for those who are down there, these [respirators] are very important."

But this week, in an interview with 60 Minutes, Whitman blamed the City of New York, saying it was the city's job to make sure workers were protected.

Former Deputy Mayor Joe Lhota told CNN: "The city repeatedly instructed workers on the pile to use their respirators." The city says it supplied more than 200,000 respirators to responders.

The challenges for the people who are sick just keep coming. Their claims are being denied by insurance companies and many are too sick to work. They don't have 20 years to wait for a conclusion to be made about how and why they are sick. And the funding for Mount Sinai's study may run out in a few years anyway. They need help now. And they want some answers.

Airbus owner EADS returns to profit in 2010

EADS expects Airbus to deliver 520-530 planes this year

9 March 2011 Last updated at 10:03
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12684975

European aerospace and defence giant EADS has reported a return to profit in 2010 as airplane orders picked up following the global downturn.

Net profit at the group, which owns planemaker Airbus, came in at 553m euros ($768m; £476m) compared with a loss of 763m euros in 2009.

Group revenues rose by 7% to "a new high" of 45.8bn euros, with revenue at the military division rising 20%.

Separately, Cathay Pacific announced a multi-billion dollar deal with Airbus.

The Hong Kong-based airline said it would be buying 15 A330-300 airplanes.

The deal was announced at the Hong Kong air show, where on Tuesday Airbus' US rival Boeing said it had signed a $1.5bn (£930m) deal for five 747-8 aircraft with Air China.

Following the deal, Airbus raised questions over the sale, according to the Financial Times newspaper.

"We understand there was a lot of political pressure from Washington on that transaction," said chief operating officer John Leahy, the FT reported.
'Significant progress'

EADS said orders had increased by 81% to 83.1bn euros in 2010, driven by Airbus.

The group added that it bolstered its cash position to a record 11.9bn euros.

Shares in the company rose by 3% in Paris following the announcement.

"[Last year] was a year of significant progress for EADS," said chief executive Louis Gallois.

"Commercial aircraft orders exceeded expectations and our cash flow generation was excellent."

EADS said revenues this year would be higher than in 2010.

It said it expected to deliver 520 to 530 Airbus planes this year, compared with 508 in 2010.

It's a shame you don't have access to Story's book THE NEW UNDERWORLD ORDER like I do. In it, you would find that Story spends a bit of time talking about the Rand corporation. He also talks a lot about Tavistock. He claims that Tavistock started out by John Rawlings Reese to study the effects of shell shock on troops was a good idea with good intentions. However, he says Kurt Lewin, a German Jew penetrated the institute and began to abuse it for evil purposes. He also talks about the fraud of psychoanalysis of Jew Sigmund Freud and how his false ideas crept into that institute. Story also has an appendix to one of his chapters dissecting the Frankfurt school and the harmful affects the ideas of these Rosicrucian German Jews had on the world. Maybe later I will put those excerpts up in the Story section.

Getting back to Tavistock, we know for a fact that Reese was a scumbag. If not, then he really didn't understand what his masters were using him for.

Tavistock Institute Of Human Relations

(layer of The Committee of 300)

This group was formed at Oxford University, London, by the Royal Institute of Of International Affairs in 1922. Major John Rawlings Reese, a British Army technician, was instructed to set up the largest brainwashing facility in the world at the Tavistock Institute for Human Relations as a part of Sussex University.

This became the core of Britain's Psychological Warfare Bureau. It was Tavistock-designed methods that got the United States into the Second World War and which, under the guidance of Dr. Kurt Lewin, established the OSS, the forerunner of the CIA. Lewin became the director of the Strategic Bombing Survey, which was a plan for the Royal Air Force to concentrate on bombing German worker housing while leaving military targets, such as munition plants, alone. The munition plants on both sides belonged to the international bankers who had no wish to see their assets destroyed. The idea behind saturation bombing of civilian worker housing was to break the morale of the German worker.

It was not designed to affect the war effort against the German military machine. Lewin and his team of actuaries reached a target figure, that if 65% of German worker housing was destroyed by nightly RAF bombing, the morale of the civilian population would collapse. The actual document was prepared by the Pru-dential Assurance Company. The RAF, under the command of "Bomber" Harris, carried out Lewin's plans, culminating in the terror firestorm bombing of Dresden, in which over 125,000, mainly old men, women and children, were killed.

The truth of "Bomber" Harris's horror raids on German civilians was a well kept secret until long after the end of WW II. Today its primary mission is to establish a global brainwashing and opinion forming network. This institute is the originator of the Aquarian Conspiracy, designed to weaken the nations of the world by encouraging drug use, free sex, homosexuality and lesbianism. It has been very successful in the United States. It works through many research institutes and think tanks. The principal ones in the United States are the Stanford Research Institute, Rand Research and Development Corporation, the Institute For Policy Studies, the Aspen Institute, the Hudson Institute, and the Brookings Institute. Tavistock runs over 30 research institutions in the United States.

These Tavistock-U.S. institutions have in many cases grown into gargantuan monsters, penetrating every aspect of our government agencies and taking command of all policy making. One of Tavistock's chief wreckers of our way of life was Dr. Alexander King, a founder member of NATO and a favorite with the Committee of 300, as well as an outstanding member of the Club of Rome.

When it was decided that a super-body would control European affairs, the RIIA founded the Tavistock Institute, which in turn created NATO. For Five years NATO was financed by the German Marshall Fund. Dr. King was assigned by the Club of Rome to destroy America's education by taking control of the National Teachers Association and working in close conjunction with certain law makers and judges. Scientists engaged in the process of conditioning are called "social engineers" or "new-science social scientists" and they play an integral part in what we see, hear and read. The "old school" social engineers were Kurt K. Lewin, Professor Hadley Cantril, Margaret Meade, Professor Derwin Cartwright and Professor Lipssitt who, together with John Rawlings Reese, made up the backbone of new-science scientists at Tavistock Institute.

Brice Taylor (A REAL SUVIVOR AND NOT AN AGENT LIKE BARBARA HARTWELL), had this to say.

QUOTE

"The Tavistock Institute of Human Relations was set up in London in 1921 to study the "breaking point" of humans. Kurt Lewin, a German psychologist, became the director of the Tavistock Institute in 1932, about the same time Nazi Germany was increasing its research into neuropsychology, parapsychology and multi-generational occultism. Interestingly, a progressive exchange of scientific ideas was taking place between England and Germany, most notably in the field of eugenics: the movement devoted to "improving" the human species through the control of hereditary factors in mating. > Because of the intensive artillery barrages of World War I, many soldiers were permanently impaired by shell shock. In 1921, the Marquees of Tavistock, 11th Duke of Bedford, gave a building to a group which planned to conduct rehabilitation programs for shell shocked British soldiers. The group took the name of "Tavistock Institute" after its benefactor. The General Staff of the British Army decided it was crucial that they determine the breaking point of the soldier under combat conditions. The Tavistock Institute was taken over by Sir John Rawlings Reese, head of the British Army Psychological Warfare Bureau. A cadre of highly trained specialists in psychological warfare was built up in total secrecy. In fifty years, the name "Tavistock Institute' appears only twice in the Index of the New York Times, yet this group, according to LaRouche and other authorities, organized and trained the entire staffs of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), the Strategic Bombing Survey, Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, and other key American military groups during World War II. During World War II, the Tavistock Institute combined with the medical sciences division of the Rockefeller Foundation for esoteric experiments with mind-altering drugs. The present drug culture of the United States is traced in its entirety to this Institute, which supervised the Central Intelligence Agency's training programs. The "LSD counter culture" originated when Sandoz A.G., a Swiss pharmaceutical house owned by S.G. Warburg & Co., developed a new drug from lysergic acid, called LSD. James Paul Warburg (son of Paul Warburg who had written the Federal Reserve Act in 1910), financed a subsidiary of the Tavistock Institute in the United States called the Institute for Policy Studies, whose director, Marcus Raskin, was appointed to the National Security Council. James Paul Warburg set up a CIA program to experiment with LSD on CIA agents, some of whom later committed suicide. This program, MK-Ultra, supervised by Dr. Gottlieb, resulted in huge lawsuits against the United States Government by the families of the victims.
>
> The English Tavistock Institute has not restricted its activities to left-wing groups, but has also directed the programs of such supposedly "conservative" American think tanks as the Herbert Hoover Institute at Stanford University, Heritage Foundation, Wharton, Hudson, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Rand. The "sensitivity training" and "sexual encounter" programs of the most radical California groups such as Esalen Institute and its many imitators were all developed and implemented by Tavistock Institute psychologists.
> One of the rare items concerning the Tavistock Institute appears in Business Week, Oct. 26, 1963, with a photograph of its building in the most expensive medical offices area of London. The story mentions "the Freudian bias" of the Institute, and comments that it is amply financed by British blue-chip corporations, including Unilever, British Petroleum, and Baldwin Steel. According to Business Week, the psychological testing programs and group relations training programs of the Institute were implemented in the United States by the University of Michigan and the University of California, which are hotbeds of radicalism and the drug network.

Agreed, I would/should like the opportunity to read Story's books. That said, I am familiar with Dr John Coleman's 'Committee of 300' - although my path into this was largely as a result of reading Greg Hallett's work..

I am also firmly of the opinion that the British establishment were well aware of mind control, possibly from their experiences in India (possibly earlier) As it is both clear and unambiguous in the writing of the academic elitists throughout the 1800's, namely the coefficients, that their Anglo American plans state the use of mind control, almost 100 years before the founding of Tavistock..

Thanks for the steer on Cathy O'Brien. I have skimmed much of the MK Ultra stuff that's out there, simply because the term appears over used as a kind of lazy shorthand, a 'catch all' that fails to recognise the scale or the true history of this subject. Again, it's all conveniently dropped on the CIA as a continuance from 40's Germany and Paper-Clip

Acknowledgement: Web Master; Yes, I stand corrected. As you say, it appears that I have somewhat under estimated the reach of the DVD. As it has been said before, by those with far greater insight; the depth of these conspiracy's is way beyond the comprehension and grasp of many..

Spain: of course! The Nazi Intel units were already fully operational in Spain before the end of WWII and ready to continue the fight...

Lt. Col. North: Sarkozy Now 'Leader of Free World'

Lt. Col. Oliver North contends that President Barack Obama, in effect, has ceded the title of "leader of the Free World" to French President Nicholas Sarkozy by not outlining a defined mission for the United States in its Libyan intervention.

Lt. Col. Oliver North

"What you now have is very clearly an effort now to support the rebel movement in a civil war to get to Tripoli and unseat Moammar Gadhafi — this brutal despot — who has ruled the country for 40 years and killed thousands of people," North told Fox News' Sean Hannity Monday.

"Nicolas Sarkozy has no doubt about the mission — he is now the leader of the free world.

"It doesn't bother him what [Russian Prime Minister Vladimir] Putin says or anybody else for that matter. In fact, I'm told that the message he delivered, very straightforward, was: We're going with you or without you," North said.

"And that forced Obama's hand. And Obama then sent [Secretary of State] Hillary Clinton off to try to do what she could in Paris to salvage it," he continued. "At that point you already had on the ground, in Benghazi, French and British commandos, to control the airstrikes that saved Benghazi."

North said the bottom line is that Obama tries to please everyone.
"He's done nothing but apologize for America, literally since he's been in office. And now, he's in a position where he has to be the commander-in-chief — and it is just beyond him," North said.

"If you try to please everyone, you will end up pleasing no one."

101 (block): This 1992 25-story tower is the headquarters of the Building Services Employees International Union. [It's directly across from 100 Avenue of the Americas – where a BBC film crew featuring correspondent Jane Standley announced WTC7's collapse before it happened. Who had provided them with the advance script?]

Sauret's exceptional WTC footage: Aired on CNN at an unknown time. Professional quality. His shot features the earth apparently shaking ~10 seconds before the "collapse." Comparing other videos finds no verification of the phenomenon (see for instance Rick Siegel 911 Eyewitness Hoboken compared).

Camera location at 145 Ave of the Americas was about 1.54km away, and considering the time it takes for seismic waves to travel ("surface waves" (?) being half as fast as primary waves, or sound waves... the speed of sound through granite is 5,000 m/s), the shake would have taken about a second to travel to Sauret's camera.

To use his video as proof of demolition (or at least to prove NIST lied in their exterior column failure claim), analysis of the slow motion video shows the antenna dropped first. The collapse initiated inside the core.

The acclaimed Sauret documentary is titled "WTC: The First 24 Hours." Scenes from the film were featured in the famous Naudet documentary "9/11," among many others. The footage of Ground Zero, empty and quiet, is particularly striking. The DVD is really 2 films, one artistically short and one extended.

http://3.bp.blogspot.com/_0HA6BJh-6tw/S0ja...400/Camera2.jpg

We have chosen a well known video clip of the collapse associated with French film maker, Etienne Sauret. The Sauret clip has advantages over many others. It is a single, continuous sequence with no changes in camera angle and no zooming in or out. There is a very slight shift in the camera position relative to distant objects caused by a trembling of the camera several seconds prior to the collapse, but this is irrelevant to us since all our measurements are taken after the shift. The camera is very steady throughout the time we are making our measurements, as we can confirm by measuring the position of the picture frame relative to stationary objects. In addition, the image of the north face of the North Tower is exceptionally clear in these images.

"The Missing Jolt: A Simple Refutation of the NIST-Bazant Collapse Hypothesis": journalof911studies.com/volume/2008/TheMissingJolt.pdf

U.S. Naval War College geostrategist/pontificator Thomas Barnett referred to 9/11 as the "first live-broadcast, mass snuff film in human history"; and what seems to be the clearest and best video footage of the 9/11 "snuff film" was taken by Etienne Sauret, or a cameraperson (Anne Labro?) associated with Sauret. The live footage was shot from SoHo Terrace (145 Avenue of the Americas, 7th floor), Sauret's production studio in the Hudson Square/SoHo neighborhood of Manhattan – a location with a superb view of the north face of World Trade Center 1, the surface that was struck by the "Flight 11" drone at 8:46:40 A.M. on Sept. 11, 2001. Sauret or an accomplice was filming the North Tower carnage prior to the second drone striking the south face of World Trade Center 2 at 9:02:59 A.M.; you can view evidence of this second strike in the live footage, as debris from the "Flight 175" drone bursts through the South Tower.

Thus, had the videographer(s) at SoHo Terrace been "lucky" enough to have been there at that fateful hour – and had they been caught completely unawares by the first plane impact – he/she would have had only 16 minutes to set up a tripod at a suitable spot on the roof, prepare and focus a videocamera, and begin shooting the remarkable live footage that we've seen. What is more probable: that the SoHo Terrace videographer(s) "got very lucky" – or that they had already set up their equipment to film the strike on WTC1 because they had been contracted to do so? Abel Danger deduces that Etienne Sauret and his partner(s) had foreknowledge; and were most likely willing and eager participants – a similar scenario to the deranged mentality displayed in Jules and Gédéon Naudet's snuff film 9/11, and in Chris Korda's "I Like to Watch"; also observe Luc Courchesne's cool reaction as he films WTC2 being struck by a droned plane. We're also wondering: What is the professional and/or personal relationship between Etienne Sauret and Jules and Gédéon Naudet? Why were so many French videographers on the scene before, during, and after the 9/11 attacks on the WTC?

Planning a "live-broadcast snuff film"?

Unique top floor terrace overlooking downtown New York City. Perfect for Film, Video, Fashion and Photo shoots. Gorgeous scenic backdrop of the quintessential Manhattan water tower skyline. Convenient location. Near all transportation. Fantastic exposure from Sunrise to Sunset.

Our Terrace

SOHO TERRACE is a unique 3500 sf+ space wrapping around the 7th (top) floor of a SoHo residential/office building. Overlooking downtown with a gorgeous scenic view of the quintessential Manhattan water tower skyline, the location is also easily accessible and near all transportation. Over the years the space has been home to many productions in the film, video and fashion industries with great success.

Amazing light throughout the day and fantastic exposure from sunrise to sunset have served as a key benefit to this wonderful location. With a length of more than 70 ft on one side of the terrace and more than 120 ft on the other both with widths of 20ft in depth, this exceptional environment allows for great freedom of movement and an endless variety of camera setups for the most demanding of filmmakers. Natural wood and lush gardens with seasonal plants and flowers add an extra feel and a rich look to this one-of-a-kind oasis complete with the most striking of urban downtown views.

Details

Total Area: 3500 sf+

After the World Trade Center buildings were demolished, Sauret was given access (by whom?) to many areas in the wreckage of 'Ground Zero' and was able to videotape some rather stunning scenes amid the collapsed buildings. Some of this footage appears in his 2002 documentary "WTC: The First 24 Hours", co-produced by David Carrara and Jeremy Rivera, with editing by Tracy Granger:

Abel Danger is intrigued by the correspondence between SoHo in Manhattan (South of Houston – pronounced "housed un" – Street), where Etienne Sauret has had his studio; and Soho, the notorious red-light and snuff-film district in London. How were SoHo and Soho connected during the 9/11 attacks?

> SOMEWHERE on the information superhighway lies Sohonet, a little purpose-built enclave that Neil Harris likes to describe as a "garden suburb of the Internet". But it's a garden suburb with metropolitan ambitions.
>
> Mr Harris is managing director of Sohonet (http://www. sohonet.co.uk) which, as its name suggests, is a network linking the film post-production companies clustered in London's Soho district with each other and, more importantly, with big players in Hollywood. As a digital network dedicated to one specific industry, Sohonet is a world first.
>
> Established in 1995, Sohonet was a logical response to the film industry's switch to digital equipment and computer processing. Using next-generation asynchronous transfer mode (ATM) technology, which works just like the Internet, only faster, Sohonet provides a means of transferring enormous files directly from one computer to another at high speeds and across continents, eliminating the need to haul bags of tape from site to site.
> A post production company can send moving pictures to Hollywood instantaneously, have video-conferences with clients and edit footage accordingly, in real time. Clients can even send film scenes attached to e-mails. "Our network doesn't choke under that kind of pressure," Mr Harris says.

May I remind you of the connection of Hillary Clinton to the French-American Foundation. Are you starting to see the picture I'm building for you as in my video on the 'Darker Side of 9/11 and the French connection?' Don't forget her connection to 9/11 with the now newly named Systron Donner Inertial GyroChip going back to when she patented it for BEI.

Boeing subsidies illegal, says World Trade Organization

The dispute between Boeing and rival Airbus has been going on for six years

31 March 2011 Last updated at 17:25
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12925024

US aircraft manufacturer Boeing received at least $5.3bn (£3.3bn) in unfair aid from Washington, the World Trade Organization (WTO) has concluded.

The subsidies included money for research and development from the Nasa space agency, a panel of international trade judges has ruled.

Last year the WTO said that Boeing's arch rival Airbus had received illegal aid from European governments.

The two companies have been at war over state aid for almost six years.

The case is one of the most complex ever brought before Geneva-based WTO, which has issued 2,000 pages of rulings.

Both companies claimed that the WTO's latest ruling bolstered their case.

"It's time for Boeing to stop denying or minimising the massive illegal subsidies it gets," said Rainer Ohler, head of public affairs at Airbus.

But Boeing said that the WTO's ruling on the size of its aid, $5.3bn, was dwarfed by the $20bn that Airbus had received.

"This WTO ruling shatters the convenient myth that European governments must illegally subsidise Airbus to counter US government assistance to Boeing," said Michael Luttig, general counsel at Boeing.

Europe had claimed that Boeing had received ten sorts of illegal subsidies worth $19.1bn between 1989 and 2006.

The WTO did not uphold all of the claims.

But it said that some of the subsidies, including the Nasa contracts and some tax breaks, had had a serious impact on Airbus' interests.

"The effect of these subsidies was displacement and impedance of Airbus large civil aircraft from third country markets, significant price suppression and significant lost sales," said the WTO in a statement.

It has recommended that the US withdraw the subsidies.

Make sure you're aware that the 'Front De Liberation Du Quebec' have not died and are thriving and up to the overthrow of the U.S. and U.K. all tied into Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst. May I also make you aware of two powerful French groups behind 9/11 these being the French-American Foundation and also the Thales Group. The later being the one behind the the No Pilots Required flight control systems tied with the BEI Tech QRS11 GyroChip now known as Systron Donner Inertial. Note both Bill and Hillary Clinton's connections to the French-American Foundation. My friends I'm showing you clearly the real power behind the attacks of September 11th 2001. Raytheon and Air Force exercise GPS landing in case of plane hijacking

August 25, 2001 - Raytheon and the U.S. Air Force successfully auto lands a pilot-less FedEx Boeing 727 six times at Holloman AFB, NM using a military GPS landing system that will enable ground control to take control of a hijacked airplane and force land it.

http://www.worldtradeconspiracy.com/index....plane-hijacking

(TRANSLATED): A forced landing system developed in the USA will make plane hijackings more difficult: in case of emergency the crew operates a switch - and the machine steers automatically to the next airport.

The times for an airplane kidnapper are becoming harder: in America engineers are working to land kidnapped machines in the future by an improved autopilot without assistance of the cockpit on the nearest airport - an emergency switch, that a ground control operates crew; the levers in the airplane are then blocked and the kidnappers can no longer control the plane from the hand controls.

According to a recent news release, technicians of US aviation and arms company Raytheon already in August landed a passenger aircraft six times successfully on the military airport at Holloman, New Mexico. The plane was equipped with a special forced landing system without any pilots.

The Boeing 727 oriented itself not, as usual, with the radar signals at the end of the runway, but by a combination of GPS satellite and ground signals, which help, to exactly compute the altitude and thus the necessary angle of approach with deviation no greater than one meter." - Der Spiegel (10/28/01) [Reprinted and translated at: Cooperative Research]

A government-industry team accomplished the first precision approach by a civil aircraft using a military Global Positioning System (GPS) landing system Aug. 25 at Holloman AFB, N.M., Raytheon Company (NYSE: RTN) announced today.

A FedEx Express 727-200 Aircraft equipped with a Rockwell-Collins GNLU-930 Multi-Mode Receiver landed using a Raytheon-developed military ground station. Raytheon designed and developed the differential GPS ground station under an Air Force contract for the Joint Precision Approach and Landings System (JPALS) program. The JPALS system is being developed to meet the Defense Department's need for an anti-jam, secure, all weather Category II/III aircraft landing system that will be fully interoperable with planned civil systems utilizing the same technology. Raytheon and the U.S. Air Force have been conducting extensive flight testing for JPALS at Holloman over the last three months.

The FedEx Express 727-200 aircraft at Holloman successfully conducted a total of sixteen Category I approaches. After completing a number of pilot flown approaches for reference the aircraft conducted six full autolands using the JPALS ground station. "The consistency of the approaches allowed us to proceed to actual autolandings with very little delay," said Steve Kuhar, Senior Technical Advisor Flight Department for FedEx Express. The aircraft was guided by differential GPS corrections, integrity information, and precision approach path points transmitted from the Raytheon developed JPALS ground station. Although the approaches were restricted to Category I, accuracies sufficient to meet Cat II/III requirements were observed.

Raytheon is the world leader in designing and building satellite-based navigation and landing solutions for civil and military applications. In addition to developing JPALS for the Department of Defense, Raytheon is also developing both the Local Area Augmentation System (LAAS) and the Wide Area Augmentation System (WAAS) for the Federal Aviation Administration. The JPALS and LAAS will provide an interoperable landing capability for military and civil applications." - PR Newswire/Raytheon (10/01/01) [Also: Space Daily; Microcom's Space Newsfeed]

"The current flight testing was a continuation of Raytheon's LAAS ground station test program which also included flight tests in August 2001 with a FedEx Express Boeing 727-200 aircraft equipped with a Rockwell-Collins GNLU-930 MMR with GLS software. During those tests, civil-military interoperability of LAAS was demonstrated with Raytheon's civil LAAS ground station in Salt Lake City, and its military joint precision approach and landing system (JPALS) ground station at Holloman AFB in Alamagordo, N.M." - Raytheon (02/21/02)

"Rockwell Collins has successfully completed light tests of the industry’s first Microwave Landing System (MLS) receiver fully integrated in a Multi-Mode Receiver (MMR). Technical Standard Order approval for the Rockwell Collins MMR is expected in the first quarter of next year. Initial production deliveries will be made to the United States Air Force to meet their MLS requirements.

The flight tests included more than 100 MLS approaches at twelve airports in the United States and Europe equipped with military and commercial MLS ground stations from four providers. The results demonstrated the Category IIIb capabilities of the MMR’s integrated MLS module. The flights were conducted with U.S. Federal Aviation Authority and European Civil Aviation Authority oversight, and with cooperation of National Aerospace Laboratory of the Netherlands.
In addition to the MLS Cat IIIb demonstration, Rockwell Collins recently demonstrated GPS Landing System (GLS) Cat I capability at Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico. " - Rockwell Collins (11/01/01)

'Doomsday Plane' Would Save President and Joint Chiefs in Apocalypse Scenario

By MICHAEL MURRAY
June 7, 2011

http://abcnews.go.com/US/doomsday-plane-sa...ory?id=13782736

In the event of nuclear war, a powerful meteor strike or even a zombie apocalypse, the thoroughly protected doomsday plane is ready to keep the president, secretary of defense, Joint Chiefs of Staff and other key personnel in the air and out of danger. It may not deflect a Twitter photo scandal, but it can outrun a nuclear explosion and stay in the air for days without refueling.

The flight team for the E-4B, its military codename, sleeps nearby and is ready to scramble in five minutes. It was mobilized in the tumultuous hours after planes crashed into the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and southern Pennsylvania on 9/11.

"If the command centers that are on the ground in the United States have a failure of some sort, or attack, we immediately get airborne. We're on alert 24/7, 365," Captain W. Scott "Easy" Ryder, Commander, NAOC, told ABC News' Diane Sawyer as she traveled to Afghanistan with Secretary of Defense Robert Gates on the apocalypse-proof plane. "Constantly there's at least one alert airplane waiting to get airborne."

All E-4B aircraft are assigned to the 55th Wing, Offutt Air Force Base, Neb. The modified 747s can travel at speeds up to 620 miles per hour, 40 miles per hour faster than their commercial counterparts.

The $223 million aircraft is outfitted with an electromagnetic pulse shield to protect its 165,000 pounds of advanced electronics. Thermo-radiation shields also protect the plane in the event of a nuclear strike.

A highly-trained security team travels with the plane.

"The first people off of the airplane are these guys, they'll position themselves appropriately around the airplane," Ryder said to ABC News. "The secretary also has his own small security staff that does similar things. So these guys are predominately designed to protect our airplane, and the secretary's staff protects him, as an individual."

Even though it carries VIPs, their staff and security personnel, the plane is highly fuel efficient. The plane can stay in-flight for days without refueling, a necessity if circumstances demanded the plane's use by the nation's top officials.

A precision tech team mans the sensitive electronic technology found on the plan. There is so much powerful electrical equipment onboard a specially upgraded air-conditioning system is necessary to keep it cool and functional.

"Give us the phone number of anybody, anytime, anyplace, anywhere on earth, we can get a hold of them," Master Sgt. Joe Stuart, US Air Force, told Diane Sawyer.

It can even communicate with submerged submarines by dropping a five-mile-long cable out the back of the plane. "[We] drop is down and [it] transmits coded message traffic to US submarines," Ryder told ABC News.

Although the extreme amount of survival technology on the plane more than makes up for it, the plane lacks the amenities found in bases on the ground.

"It's like being Fedexed," Gates told Sawyer. "It's fairly Spartan, with no windows or anything."

Even the Secretary of Defense only gets a tiny bathroom with a sink, but no shower. A small trade-off for being able to board this plane as the rest of us dive for cover in a worst-case scenario.

Some more details on the general characteristics of the plane, according to the official U.S. Air Force website:

Primary Function: Airborne operations center

Contractor: Boeing Aerospace Co.

Power Plant: Four General Electric CF6-50E2 turbofan engines

Thrust: 52,500 pounds each engine

Wingspan: 195 feet, 8 inches (59.7 meters)

Length: 231 feet, 4 inches (70.5 meters)

Height: 63 feet, 5 inches (19.3 meters)

Weight: 410,000 pounds (185,973 kilograms)

Maximum Takeoff Weight: 800,000 pounds (360,000 kilograms)

Fuel Capacity: 410,000 (185,973 kilograms)

Payload: communications gear permanently installed on aircraft

Speed: 602 miles per hour (523 knots)

Range: 6,200 nautical miles

Ceiling: Above 30,000 feet (9,091 meters)

Crew: Up to 112 (flight crew and mission crew)

Unit Cost: $223.2 million (fiscal 98 constant dollars)

Initial operating capability: January 1980

Inventory: Active force, 4

SKIN CANCER RISK FOR UK

Almost 100,000 British adults are diagnosed with skin cancer every year

Tuesday May 24,2011
http://www.express.co.uk/posts/view/248425...cer-risk-for-uk

MORE than a third of Britons are ignoring the dangers of skin cancer by failing to wear sunscreen lotion in the UK.

Almost 100,000 British adults are diagnosed with skin cancer every year. Regular unprotected exposure to high levels of UVA and UVB rays can cause skin damage yet 48 per cent of those who wear sunscreen when abroad would not use it here in summer. And 13 per cent do not use sunscreen at all, even when on holiday in hot countries, says the poll commissioned by skincare firm La Roche-Posay. Dr Jonathan Bowling of Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust said: “New cases of melanoma are rising at a rapid rate compared with countries such as Australia where they have hot weather all year round.

“Even on a cloudy day, UV rays can penetrate the skin which is a leading cause of skin cancer.” He recommends a broad-spectrum, water-resistant sunscreen of no less than 30SPF for effective skin protection and says moles should be checked regularly for signs of cancer.

The year smoking will die out around the world: table

British American Tobacco is to buy the second largest cigarette company in Colombia for $452m (£277.7m). Here, we list the date smoking will die out in 18 different countries from the UK to New Zealand.

11:12AM BST 26 May 2011

"The percentage of smokers is declining across the developed world, and the declines are more or less in a straight line in most markets. If these trends continue, then by 2050, many important tobacco markets will have gone to zero smoking," Citigroup said.

The table below illustrates the year the trend hits zero in each of the following nations:

% of the population that smokes Citi's earliest prediction for end of smoking Australia 17 2030
Belgium 20 2051
Canada 18 2040
Finland 21 2093
France 25 2118
Germany 23 2280

Is Your Sunscreen More Harmful Than Being in the Sun?

Posted by Martha Rosenberg at 12:01 pm
May 26, 2011
http://blogs.alternet.org/speakeasy/2011/0...ing-in-the-sun/

Most people have enough fear of skin cancer and photo-aging to give tanning salons wide berth, pun intended. But how safe are sunscreens themselves? Weeks after the New York Times exposed the caprice in assignment of sun protection factors (SPF) last year, Sen. Charles Schumer (D- New York) called on the FDA to investigate reports that an ingredient in most sunscreens — retinyl palmitate – actually causes cancer.

In one FDA study on animals, dismissed by a dermatologist consultant to sunscreen companies as “very premature to even cast doubt about the safety of this chemical,” retinyl palmitate accelerated tumors and lesions in the sun by 21 percent! (Similar studies on humans not animals would be “unethical” say scientists)

And there are other sunscreen doubts. Many people don’t apply the needed amount of sunscreen to protect themselves from UVA and UVB sunrays because the products are expensive (and no one wants to be a goo monster). But when they do, they still may not be safe since ingredients like oxybenzone — which is an endocrine-disrupter, as are most fragrances — and titanium dioxide are now thought to penetrate the skin and enter the bloodstream. THAT wasn’t in the brochure.

Once upon a time, before links between skin cancer and sun bathing were confirmed, people didn’t use sunscreen. They used baby oil and iodine to enhance the sun’s effect, literally sautéed themselves in the sun and using reflectors. (They were also smoking Tareytons or Kents which also wasn't seen as self-destructive.) Having the best suntan in the room was like being the thinnest person in the room decades later: a badge of social status and sex appeal. Who knew that wrinkles would develop? Who believed they would live past 30?

Then the pendulum swung and the sun was as bad as, well, cigarettes. The era of sunscreens and long sleeves began and spray-on tans, often carrot-orange, were the rage, with Hollywood leading the way.

In fact the sun-avoidance pendulum swung so far, sunscreens began to be blamed for a possible national Vitamin D deficiency. The sun presumably couldn't find bare skin on which to make Vitamin D anymore. Patients everywhere were told to seek sun instead of avoid it!

But last year, an Institute of Medicine report suggested that the deficiency fears might have been an over reaction. "The number of people with vitamin D deficiency in North America may be overestimated because many laboratories appear to be using cut-points that are much higher than the committee suggests is appropriate," it said. Now, some are hoping the Institute of Medicine will address the sunscreen ingredients retinyl palmitate and oxybenzone.

Meanwhile, enjoy your shade.

As I've highlighted in the video above, this is a very dangerous mindset which will ruin peoples health which is the desire of the Club of Rome and its master The Worshipful Company of Apothecaries working for the Crown. Now think about it for a minute, theres a massive sunscreen in place daily called aerosols (chemtrails) if anyone ever looks up and uses the brain which God gave them. Therefore you're even less likely to suffer from the Sun if you wanted to even believe in this terrible mindset anyway. So they have a screen up there and want you to screen with the same barium chemicals on the skin, its ludicrous. Its time all this nonsense was stopped but they need the death rates and profits from the health misery inbetween the deaths. Homeschool your children of God because if they go to school then The Worshipful Company of Haberdashers will turn them into kids of Satan and program them with utter nonsense to harm them and the family.

Nursery owner invents wristband that warns children when to stop playing in the sun

Last updated at 3:54 PM on 2nd June 2011
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/health/article-...laying-sun.html

A nursery owner has invented a wristband that will protect children from skin cancer.

Bali Carty, 29, said she came up with her product after realising parents were worried their youngsters were spending too much time in the sun.

Over-exposure to UV rays can burn the skin, hair and eyes and lead to skin cancer, premature ageing and eye disorders such as cataracts.

At its darkest shade, the Sunband warns that UV levels are at their most harmful

The white Sunbands darken as they are exposed to ultraviolet rays. This warns children wearing them when they need to go and play inside or rub in more suncream.

The mother-of-two from Birmingham now has a patent for the Sunband and hopes to attract leading supermarkets to sell the product ahead of a potential summer heatwave.

'It is the first product of its kind in the world, she said.

'I came up with the idea because working at a nursery made me realise parents are concerned about their children being in the sun for too long, but they don't always know when the sun is starting to cause any damage.

'Also when I was on holiday in Tenerife a few months ago, my husband burnt himself. I thought to myself then it would be a good idea, as I couldn't find anything like it on the market.

'By creating a wristband, the product is something trendy for children to wear while keeping them safe at the same time.'

Inventor: Bali Carty said she couldn't find a wristband on the market that warned children when they were at risk from the sun

The wristbands have a sun sensitive gauge that is made of photosensitive material which changes colour with the intensity of UV radiation.

At its darkest shade, the Sunband warns that UV levels are at their most harmful, above 11.

Mrs Carty said both her two children, aged eight and 10 and her husband, 30, wear the bands.

'My two children wear them and my husband wears his as well. I give them to my nephew and nieces and people that I know.

'It's important to be careful in the sun. I even wear three bands myself.

'When children are playing in the garden, it's a good way to detect the levels. It's an easy thing to forget.'

Mrs Carty, who developed the product just four months ago, says she is still deciding how much to charge for the device.

More than two Britons under 35 are diagnosed with the deadliest form of skin cancer every day.

According to Cancer Research UK, rates of malignant melanoma have tripled among those aged 15-34 since the late 1970s.

Young women are twice as likely to get the killer disease, particularly in their legs and hip, while young men are prone to getting the cancer on their chests.

7 surprising things you're not supposed to know about sunscreen and sunlight exposure

Saturday, June 25, 2011
by Mike Adams
http://www.naturalnews.com/032815_sunscreen_chemicals.html

(NaturalNews) Ask somebody about sunscreen and you're likely to receive an earful of disinformation from a person who has been repeatedly misinformed by health authorities and the mainstream media. Almost nothing you hear about sunscreen from traditional media channels is accurate. So here's a quick guide to the 7 most important things you need to know about sunscreen, sunlight and vitamin D:

#1) The FDA refuses to allow natural sunscreen ingredients to be used in sunblock / sunscreen products
It's true: If you create a truly natural sunscreen product using exotic botanicals with powerful sunscreen properties, you will never be able to market it as a "sunscreen" product. That's because the FDA decides what can be used as sunscreen and what can't, regardless of what really works in the real world. And there are really only two natural ingredients the FDA has allowed to be sold as sunscreen: Zinc oxide and titanium dioxide.

Any other non-chemical sunscreen ingredients, if sold as "sunscreen," would be considered mislabeled by the FDA and result in your products being confiscated... even if they offer fantastic sunscreen protection!

Not surprisingly, this whole monopoly over sunscreen chemicals is designed to protect the profits of the chemical companies while marginalizing the natural product companies which could easily formulate far better solutions. I have personally spoken to the founders of several health product companies who have figured out amazing sunscreen formulations using nothing but natural botanicals, but the FDA won't let them market their products as sunscreen products!

It's just another example of the FDA standing in the way of health innovation.

#2) Nearly all conventional sunscreen products contain cancer-causing chemicals

Read the ingredients list of any sunscreen product sold at Wal-Mart, or Walgreens, or any other mainstream store. I dare ya!

You will not be able to pronounce most of the chemicals found in the ingredients list. That's because most sunscreen products are formulated with cancer-causing fragrance chemicals, parabens, harsh alcohols, toxic chemical solvents and petroleum oils. A typical sunscreen product is actually a chemical assault on your body. That's why research shows that using sunscreen actually causes more cancer than it prevents (http://www.naturalnews.com/023317_s...).

#3) In a nation where over 70% of the population is vitamin D deficiency, sunscreen actually blocks vitamin D production
Vitamin D deficiency is perhaps the most widespread vitamin deficiency in North America. According to the research, 70 percent of whites are deficient in vitamin D, and up to 97 percent of blacks are deficient (http://www.naturalnews.com/030598_v...).

Chronic vitamin D deficiency promotes cancer (http://www.naturalnews.com/031560_v...), winter flu and infections, depression, osteoporosis and hormonal imbalances. Depending on whom you believe, vitamin D alone can prevent anywhere from 50% to nearly 80% of all cancers (http://www.naturalnews.com/021892.html).

By blocking vitamin D production in the skin, sunscreen products actually contribute to cancer-promoting nutritional deficiencies.

This doesn't mean you should never wear a sunscreen product, of course. If your skin is really pale and you're planning a day on the beach in Hawaii, you will obviously benefit from some level of sun protection using a truly natural sunscreen product. But an informed health-conscious person would try to allow their skin to achieve a natural, healthy tan (yes, a tan truly is healthy if it's combined with good nutrition, see below) through sensible exposure levels that activate vitamin D production in the skin.

#4) You can boost your internal sun resistance by changing what you eat
Here's the real secret about sun exposure that no one in conventional medicine is talking about (because, as usual, they are woefully ignorant about nutrition): You can boost your internal sunscreen by eating antioxidant-rich foods and superfoods.

The supplement astaxanthin, for example, is very well known for boosting your skin's natural resistance to sunburn. Its fat-soluble carotenoids are actually transported to skin cells where they protect those cells from UV exposure.

The more natural antioxidants you have in your diet, the more sunlight your skin will be able to handle without burning. Nearly everyone mistakenly believes that a person's sunlight burn response is purely a genetic factor. They're wrong. You can radically improve your resistance to UV exposure through radical dietary changes.

I'm a great example of this, actually, as I used to burn in just 20 - 30 minutes of sunlight when I was on a junk food diet years ago. But now, as someone who eats superfoods and high-end nutritional supplements every day, I can spend hours in the sun and will only turn slightly red (which fades a few hours later and does not result in a burn or skin peeling).

Except for one time on an all-day visit to a water park, I have not worn sunscreen in over 8 years. I spend a large amount of time in the sun, and I have absolutely no concerns whatsoever about skin cancer. My skin, most people tell me, looks significantly younger than my biological age. That's not from sunscreen; it's from nutrition. Sun exposure does not make your skin "age" if you follow a high-nutritional density diet.

#5) UV exposure alone does not cause skin cancer
It is a complete medical myth that "UV exposure causes skin cancer." This false idea is a total fabrication by the ignorant medical community (dermatologists) and the profit-driven sunscreen companies.

The truth is actually more complicated: Skin cancer can only be caused when UV exposure is combined with chronic nutritional deficiencies that create skin vulnerabilities.

To create skin cancer, in other words, you have to eat a junk food diet, avoid protective antioxidants, and then also experience excessive UV exposure. All three of those elements are required. Conventional medicine completely ignores the dietary influences and focuses entirely on just one factor: Sunscreen vs. no sunscreen. This is a one-dimensional approach to the issue that's grossly oversimplified to the point of being misleading.

The medical industry, it seems, does not want people to figure out they can literally eat their way to healthier skin. It's amazing, actually: Your skin is made entirely out of the food you eat, so how could your diet not affect your skin health? Yet no one in conventional medicine -- not the dermatologists, not the doctors and not the health regulators -- has the intellectual honesty to admit that what you eat largely determines how your skin reacts to UV exposure.

#6) Not all "natural" sunscreen products are really natural
Be careful when shopping for so-called "natural" sunscreen products. While there are some good ones out there, many are just examples of greenwashing, where they use terms like "natural" or "organic" but still contain loads of synthetic chemicals anyway.

A good guide for checking on sunscreen products is the Environmental Working Group guide (EWG) at:
http://www.ewg.org/skindeep/

Some of the products that are truly natural include Loving Naturals sunscreen and Badger All Natural Sunscreen. Read the ingredients labels to see for yourself. Don't use any sunscreen product containing ingredients that sound like chemicals:

• Methyl...
• Propyl...
• Butyl...
• Ethyl...
• Trieth...
• Dieth... etc.

Always buy unscented sunscreen unless for some reason you just enjoy coating your skin with artificial perfume chemicals. A typical sunscreen product is made with over a dozen cancer-causing fragrance chemicals, and they're absorbed right through your skin. Most sunscreens, when applied as directed, are really just toxic chemical baths that heavily burden your liver and can give you cancer.

#7) Many "chemical free" sunscreens are loaded with chemicals
Search Amazon.com for "chemical free natural sunscreen" and you'll see a listing for:

Jason Natural Cosmetics - Earth's Best Sun Block Chemical Free, 4 oz cream

Click on the product and you'll find a listing of its ingredients which includes: C12-15 Alkyl Benzoate, Caprylic/Capric Triglyceride, Sorbitan Isostearate, Sorbitan Sesquioleate, Ethylhexyl Palmitate, Ethyl Macadamiate, Calcium Starch Octenylsuccinate, Stearalkonium Hectorite

So how are those not chemicals? Ethylhexyl Palmitate is NOT a chemical? Who are these people kidding? The Amazon.com description (title) of this product is false and misleading. In all fairness, however, this product title looks like it was added into the Amazon.com system by the vendor and not the Jason company itself. But it's an example of how the information you see from online vendors can often be misleading.

Always read the ingredients of any sunscreen product before using it. Don't poison yourself with sunscreen!

Beware the disinfo minefield surrounding sunscreen products
Perhaps more with sunscreen than any other personal care product, the "official" information distributed through the mainstream media is hopelessly misleading (if not downright false). Remarkably, no one in the media or the government is even willing to admit that fragrance chemicals are bad for your health. Similarly, no one is willing to admit that the chemicals you put on your skin get ABSORBED by your skin.

Without those two truths being acknowledged right up front, the rest of whatever they say about sunscreen is worthless babble. Any honest talk about sunscreen must acknowledge the simple truth that the chemicals you put on your skin get absorbed into your skin, and that most sunscreen products are made out of a chemical cocktail of cancer-causing substances.

This is the truth about sunscreen that both the sunscreen industry and the cancer industry doesn't want you to hear. It's the dirty little secret of sunscreen: The more you use, the more you CAUSE cancer in your body! (And the more money the cancer centers make "treating" your cancer with yet more deadly chemicals known as chemotherapy.)

So buyer beware. Sunscreen products are a minefield of lies, fraud and disinformation designed to keep you ignorant of the importance of sun exposure as well as the health risks associated with using cancer-causing chemicals on your skin.

Stick with truly natural sunscreen products (when needed) and try to build up a healthy tan while consuming large quantities of superfoods and antioxidants in your diet. Consider taking astaxanthin or other fat-soluble nutrients on a regular basis. Engage in daily juicing of fresh fruits and vegetables which are loaded with living nutrients. Time your sun exposure to build up a healthy tan so that you don't need sunscreen at all. Contrary to all the misinformation we've all been fed, a healthy tan is actually a good sign that you're achieving adequate vitamin D synthesis in your own skin.

Mandatory 'sun safety' policies for schools are needed

By Michelle Roberts
15 July 2011 Last updated at 01:30
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/health-14104524

All UK schools should be required to have a comprehensive sun safety policy to protect children from skin cancer, a charity campaigner says.

A recent survey of 1,000 parents, commissioned by MPs on the All-Party Parliamentary Group on Skin, found almost 40% of pupils have suffered sunburn while at school.

Richard Clifford of Skin Cancer UK says this is "entirely unacceptable" and wants mandatory sun rules for schools.

Current guidelines are not compulsory.

The call comes as parents of a 10-year-old girl who attends a school near Swansea complained their daughter had suffered severe sunburn at a sports day.

Pennard Primary School said parents could come in at lunch-time to apply cream, but that it would be impossible for teachers to apply suncream to the 200 children attending the school.

Advice from the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) says schools should encourage children to seek shade whenever possible, particularly when out playing in the midday sun.

And it says sunscreen (of at least SPF 15 strength) should be applied liberally half an hour before and after going out in the sun and reapplied every two hours thereafter.
Child safety

Nurseries and pre-schools have higher staff-child ratios to deal with such demands.

But what is not clear is exactly how schools are expected to deliver this.

Mr Clifford said: "Admittedly teachers cannot be expected to apply sunscreen due to simple time pressures.

"There is also the inevitable question regarding their concerns over child abuse and the strong advice they receive from local authority education departments and trade unions.

"However, there is no reason whatsoever why they should not supervise the application, perhaps with the assistance of the school nurse or indeed parents who attend on a pre-arranged rota system."

NICE suggests parents could provide sunscreen for their children who could, in turn, be taught how to apply it for themselves and their school-friends.

The guidelines also recommend schools run awareness campaigns to alert children to the harms of too much sun exposure.

But Mr Clifford says in reality too few do.

"Instead, it is left to the individual teacher to decide as to whether or not to introduce the subject of UV awareness. This is simply not good enough."

Over-exposure

Cancer Research UK has produced information to help schools develop a sun safe policy, but so far only 621 English primary schools have registered to receive this sun protection policy pack.

Dr Claire Knight, health information officer at Cancer Research UK, said: "It's important that children are protected from sunburn while at school.

"Children have delicate skin and getting sunburnt as a child increases the risk of skin cancer later in life."

Prolonged over-exposure to the sun and episodes of sunburn under the age of 15 are major risk factors for skin cancer in later life.

The British Association of Dermatology estimates that four out of five skin cancer deaths are preventable.

Dr Knight said: "Cancer Research UK encourages schools to develop their own sun protection policy, and recommends that children should be allowed to bring sunscreen of at least SPF 15 with four or five stars into school and be supervised whilst applying it.

"Using shade and clothing is also crucial to any policy designed to promote the safe enjoyment of the sun."

Geithner may quit Treasury this year for sake of family

By Sean O'Grady, Economics Editor
Monday, 4 July 2011
http://www.independent.co.uk/news/business...ly-2306364.html

Timothy Geithner, the US Treasury Secretary, may leave office later this year, it was reported yesterday.

Mr Geithner, who has been in post since February 2009, is, according to sources, weighing "family considerations" in his decision.

He has been under fire virtually during his entire time in the job, especially from Congressional critics, during one of the most tumultuous periods in American financial history. He is the last remaining senior member of President Barack Obama's original economic team.

However, Mr Geithner is keen to complete the negotiations with Congress over reducing the US budget defect and reset a ceiling on the country's national debt.

Both have proved extremely contentious, so much so that some Republicans are threatening to force the Treasury to default on its bonds when the debt ceiling is reached, probably on 2 August.

In reality, commentators suggest that there will be no resolution of the problem until after the presidential election in November next year, and possibly not even then.

If Mr Geithner, 49, does depart, he may leave Mr Obama even more exposed as the economy becomes the key political issue determining his chances of a second term.

In interviews at the weekend, Mr Geithner declared he would remain at his Treasury post "for the foreseeable future" and evaded answering direct questions about his immediate intentions, following reports in the US media that he was thinking about his own exit strategy from the Obama administration.

"We have a lot of challenges as a country, and I'm going to be doing it for the foreseeable future," he said.

The Bloomberg news agency cited unnamed sources as saying that family considerations were among the factors Mr Geithner was weighing up. A Treasury official said Mr Geithner had "not yet made a decision" – a less than categorical denial.

NYT: Tim Geithner Convinced NY AG Andrew Cuomo To Back Off Wall Street Prosecutions

Source - New York Times

It is a question asked repeatedly across America: why, in the aftermath of a financial mess that generated hundreds of billions in losses, have no high-profile participants in the disaster been prosecuted?

Answering such a question — the equivalent of determining why a dog did not bark — is anything but simple. But a private meeting in mid-October 2008 between Timothy F. Geithner, then-president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Andrew M. Cuomo, New York's attorney general at the time, illustrates the complexities of pursuing legal cases in a time of panic.

At the Fed, which oversees the nation's largest banks, Mr. Geithner worked with the Treasury Department on a large bailout fund for the banks and led efforts to shore up the American International Group, the giant insurer. His focus: stabilizing world financial markets.

Mr. Cuomo, as a Wall Street enforcer, had been questioning banks and rating agencies aggressively for more than a year about their roles in the growing debacle, and also looking into bonuses at A.I.G.

Friendly since their days in the Clinton administration, the two met in Mr. Cuomo's office in Lower Manhattan, steps from Wall Street and the New York Fed. According to three people briefed at the time about the meeting, Mr. Geithner expressed concern about the fragility of the financial system.

His worry, according to these people, sprang from a desire to calm markets, a goal that could be complicated by a hard-charging attorney general.

Asked whether the unusual meeting had altered his approach, a spokesman for Mr. Cuomo, now New York's governor, said Wednesday evening that "Mr. Geithner never suggested that there be any lack of diligence or any slowdown." Mr. Geithner, now the Treasury secretary, said through a spokesman that he had been focused on A.I.G. "to protect taxpayers."

Whether prosecutors and regulators have been aggressive enough in pursuing wrongdoing is likely to long be a subject of debate. All say they have done the best they could under difficult circumstances.

But several years after the financial crisis, which was caused in large part by reckless lending and excessive risk taking by major financial institutions, no senior executives have been charged or imprisoned, and a collective government effort has not emerged. This stands in stark contrast to the failure of many savings and loan institutions in the late 1980s. In the wake of that debacle, special government task forces referred 1,100 cases to prosecutors, resulting in more than 800 bank officials going to jail. Among the best-known: Charles H. Keating Jr., of Lincoln Savings and Loan in Arizona, and David Paul, of Centrust Bank in Florida.

Former prosecutors, lawyers, bankers and mortgage employees say that investigators and regulators ignored past lessons about how to crack financial fraud.

As the crisis was starting to deepen in the spring of 2008, the Federal Bureau of Investigation scaled back a plan to assign more field agents to investigate mortgage fraud. That summer, the Justice Department also rejected calls to create a task force devoted to mortgage-related investigations, leaving these complex cases understaffed and poorly funded, and only much later established a more general financial crimes task force.

Leading up to the financial crisis, many officials said in interviews, regulators failed in their crucial duty to compile the information that traditionally has helped build criminal cases. In effect, the same dynamic that helped enable the crisis — weak regulation — also made it harder to pursue fraud in its aftermath.

A more aggressive mind-set could have spurred far more prosecutions this time, officials involved in the S.&L. cleanup said.

“This is not some evil conspiracy of two guys sitting in a room saying we should let people create crony capitalism and steal with impunity,” said William K. Black, a professor of law at University of Missouri, Kansas City, and the federal government’s director of litigation during the savings and loan crisis. “But their policies have created an exceptional criminogenic environment. There were no criminal referrals from the regulators. No fraud working groups. No national task force. There has been no effective punishment of the elites here.”

Even civil actions by the government have been limited. The Securities and Exchange Commission adopted a broad guideline in 2009 — distributed within the agency but never made public — to be cautious about pushing for hefty penalties from banks that had received bailout money. The agency was concerned about taxpayer money in effect being used to pay for settlements, according to four people briefed on the policy but who were not authorized to speak publicly about it.

To be sure, Wall Street’s role in the crisis is complex, and cases related to mortgage securities are immensely technical. Criminal intent in particular is difficult to prove, and banks defend their actions with documents they say show they operated properly.

But legal experts point to numerous questionable activities where criminal probes might have borne fruit and possibly still could.

Investigators, they argue, could look more deeply at the failure of executives to fully disclose the scope of the risks on their books during the mortgage mania, or the amounts of questionable loans they bundled into securities sold to investors that soured.

Prosecutors also could pursue evidence that executives knowingly awarded bonuses to themselves and colleagues based on overly optimistic valuations of mortgage assets — in effect, creating illusory profits that were wiped out by subsequent losses on the same assets. And they might also investigate whether executives cashed in shares based on inside information, or misled regulators and their own boards about looming problems.

Merrill Lynch, for example, understated its risky mortgage holdings by hundreds of billions of dollars. And public comments made by Angelo R. Mozilo, the chief executive of Countrywide Financial, praising his mortgage company's practices were at odds with derisive statements he made privately in e-mails as he sold shares; the stock subsequently fell sharply as the company's losses became known.

Executives at Lehman Brothers assured investors in the summer of 2008 that the company's financial position was sound, even though they appeared to have counted as assets certain holdings pledged by Lehman to other companies, according to a person briefed on that case. At Bear Stearns, the first major Wall Street player to collapse, a private litigant says evidence shows that the firm's executives may have pocketed revenues that should have gone to investors to offset losses when complex mortgage securities soured.

But the Justice Department has decided not to pursue some of these matters — including possible criminal cases against Mr. Mozilo of Countrywide and Joseph J. Cassano, head of Financial Products at A.I.G., the business at the epicenter of that company's collapse. Mr. Cassano's lawyers said that documents they had given to prosecutors refuted accusations that he had misled investors or the company's board. Mr. Mozilo's lawyers have said he denies any wrongdoing.

Among the few exceptions so far in civil action against senior bankers is a lawsuit filed last month against top executives of Washington Mutual, the failed bank now owned byJPMorgan Chase. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation sued Kerry K. Killinger, the company's former chief executive, and two other officials, accusing them of piling on risky loans to grow faster and increase their compensation. The S.E.C. also extracted a $550 million settlement from Goldman Sachs for a mortgage security the bank built, though the S.E.C. did not name executives in that case.

Representatives at the Justice Department and the S.E.C. say they are still pursuing financial crisis cases, but legal experts warn that they become more difficult as time passes.

“If you look at the last couple of years and say, ‘This is the big-ticket prosecution that came out of the crisis,’ you realize we haven’t gotten very much,” said David A. Skeel, a law professor at the University of Pennsylvania. “It’s consistent with what many people were worried about during the crisis, that different rules would be applied to different players. It goes to the whole perception that Wall Street was taken care of, and Main Street was not.”

Its very highly possible for an all out attack on the Middle East by the revived Knights Templar as events not noticed by the populace which have and are playing out will soon come into force. If you're in the Middle East prepare for something very big and Iran is most definitely in the Crusaders mind.

Earthquake Shakes Up Suez Canal as Iran Warships Approach

by Tzvi Ben Gedalyahu

http://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/142433

An earthquake measuring 5.9 on the Richter scale shook up residents at the entrance to the Suez Canal early Monday morning, 48 hours before two Iranian ships, a frigate and a supply vessel, are expected to enter the canal.

The National Institute for Astronomical and Geophysical Research reported that tremors from the 3 a.m. quake lasted for 27 minutes, but caused no damage.

The ships had originally been expected to enter the Suez today (Monday), but Egyptian officials announced the delay this morning, without explanation.

Iran inexplicably announced Sunday morning that two of its warships had crossed the Suez, a report that was thoroughly denied by Egyptian authorities. Iranian media did not mention the ships on Monday, and the false report may have been for local consumption.

No Iranian ship has been allowed to pass through the Suez Canal since Iran's 1979 overthrow of the Shah and Egypt's signing of a peace treaty with Israel the same year.

Egyptian-Iranian Rapprochement?
Egypt’s agreeing to allow Iranian ships to pass through the Suez is seen by many analysts as a signal that the new regime in Egypt is leaning towards ties with Iran, but Suez Canal officials have pointed out that an international convention requires it allow passage to all ships.Egypt has reportedly agreed to allow the Iranian boats to pass through the canal en route to Syria. The Obama administration is concerned about “what’s the cargo on board, where is it going, to whom, for what benefit," U.S. State Department spokesman Philip Crowley told reporters. Iran has said that the ships are headed for Syria for training, Crowley commented, as laughter was heard in the audience: “My initial response to that would be that we’re highly skeptical of that claim.”

President Shimon Peres and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu have accused Iran of trying to exploit the crisis in Egypt to increase its influence in the Middle East.

“Iran wants to say to the world, to the United States, Israel and other countries in the Mideast that it has reached not only areas close to it but also farther away, including in the Mediterranean," Ephraim Kam of the Institute for National Security Studies in Israel told the Associated Press.

The Iranian maritime maneuver also signals it is prepared to protect the Hamas and Hizbullah terrorist organizations on Israel’s southern and northern borders.

Iran officials last month announced that its ships would be sailing through the Suez to gather intelligence, but analysts stress that the Islamic Republic’s ultimate goal is to establish Shi’ite dominance in the Muslim world, far beyond Lebanon and Syria.

President Peres meets Spanish PM Zapatero, addresses Spanish Congress

http://www.mfa.gov.il/MFA/Government/Commu...22-Feb-2011.htm

Spanish PM Zapatero to President Peres: Spain would like to strengthen and tighten its strategic relationship with Israel. The relationship between Spain and Israel should be broadened and should not only based on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

President Peres addresses the Spanish Congress (Photo: GPO) (Communicated by the President's Media Adviser)

President Shimon Peres held a working diplomatic meeting (22 February) with the Prime Minister of Spain Jose Luis Zapatero at his official residence in Madrid.

At the beginning of the meeting Prime Minister Zapatero said that Spain is very honored to welcome one of the world's greatest statesmen and smartest individuals, the President of Israel, Shimon Peres, to mark the 25th anniversary since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Prime Minister Zapatero: "The people of Spain and of Israel have a shared history. Unfortunately we experienced a period of detachment for hundreds of years in our relationship and as a result the Spanish public does not know Israel so well. They only know Israel through the lens of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and we must work today to change the current status. During this visit, Spain requests to strengthen, tighten and broaden its strategic relations with Israel."

Prime Minister Zapatero also said: "Israel plays at the top of the NBA league of high-tech and science in the world, while we in Spain are only making our first steps in this league. We are interested in basing our cooperation on these areas as well as in the diplomatic and security spheres." President Peres responded jokingly and said: "This is very well and good but we are not Real Madrid." The Prime Minister responded by saying: "good, in football no one can compete with us."

The two spoke about current events in the Middle East and agreed to promote the establishment of a joint forum of commercial companies to include Israel, Spain, and the Palestinians. The goal of this forum is to advance joint commercial technology projects in the Middle East. It works on the assumption that strengthening democracy will be done, among other things, by the entry of advanced technology and science companies in these countries.

Prime Minister Zapatero instructed the Spanish Minister of Science and Innovation, Cristina Garmendia, to immediately meet with the heads of the Israeli commercial delegation accompanying the President on his visit to Spain in order to hasten these joint ventures.

With regard to regional issues the President repeated Israel's desire to advance the peace negotiations with the Palestinians, and Israel's support for democracy, peace and stability in the Middle East.

The two also extensively discussed the Iranian nuclear threat and the President emphasized that serious measures against Iran must be taken as they are developing nuclear weapons of mass destruction. The President suggested combining economic sanctions as well as moral ones. "World leaders should be embarrassed to be seen with Ahmadinejad and his actions in the United Nations should be denounced," the President said. Later in the conversation Prime Minister Zapatero asked the President to analyze the current trends taking place in the Middle East and the future relations of Israel with its neighbors.

Later in the day President Peres delivered a diplomatic address in front a special session of the Congress.

With regard to the situation between Israel and the Palestinians, the President said: "I turn to our neighbors the Palestinians and say, come immediately and return to the negotiating table. With intense and focused effort we can solve this continued conflict and bequeath to our children what was robbed from us. I know that there is skepticism regarding peace as well as suspicion on both sides. But suspicion is not an iron rule. We have seen in the past that the Palestinians suspected that right of center governments would never agree to a two state solution. But they were wrong. Israel assumed that the Palestinians would demand the return of 5 million refugees, but we were wrong. In spite of the skepticism we overcame differences of opinion, with Egypt and with Jordan. Israel respects the efforts of the leadership of the Palestinian Authority, under the leadership of Mahmud Abbas and his government, to build the infrastructure of the Palestinian state that is already on its way."

The President emphasized to the members of Congress: "Peace will bring an influx in tourism as well as global projects. Modern factories in the fields of energy, water, the environment and free trade will be created. In short everything will improve. We aspire and yearn for peace with all of our neighbors, including Syria and Lebanon. I turn to our neighbors the Syrians and say do not follow Iran. Iran does not seek peace. Come to the negotiating table without preconditions so we can achieve an agreement. And to the people of Lebanon I say: Do not let Hizbullah turn your country into a battlefield. Lebanon was meant to be a field of peace. There is no need for any conflict between us, we have every reason for peace between us."

The President touched on the Iranian issue and said: "The Middle East today is divided between moderate governments interested in peace and freedom and between fanatical governments and dictators who are in a never ending search for enriched uranium and terror. Fanatics have a destructive strength but they have no message of hope for themselves or their inhabitants. Terror is capable of striking anywhere. You experienced this in the horrible terror attack in the subway.

Iran supplies Hizbullah in Lebanon, and Hamas in Gaza with arms and terror. They work to establish terror cells, opened and hidden, in other countries as well. Iran is developing nuclear weapons and threatening the moderate countries. The Iranian nuclear program poses a threat to world peace. I am convinced that the world will not cave in to the hatred of this fanatical and radical leader like Ayatollah Khomeini, the supreme leader of fanaticism, incitement and terror attacks. I believe that the day will come when the leadership of Iran that is threatening its people will find out that they are being threatened by their very own people. And rightfully so. We are very grateful to the very determined stance of Spain on the Iranian issue."

The King of Spain, Juan Carlos I, hosted President Peres at his Palace for a reception that was attended by the Prime Minister, senior Ministers, government officials and other leading personalities. President Peres invited the King to visit Israel as his guest.

On Monday evening (21 February) President Peres was the guest of honor at a special ceremony held at the Central Synagogue in Madrid. Over 1,000 members of the local Jewish community participated in the event. The chief Rabbi of Spain, Moshe Ben Dahan, recited a special prayer for the welfare of the State of Israel, for the welfare of the soldiers of the Israel Defense Forces, and for the speedy return of the captured soldier Gilad Shalit.

President Peres is on an official visit to Spain this week. Before departing for Spain the President was interviewed by Spanish Television TVE in a full-length interview which was broadcast on Monday.

5P HIKE IN PETROL PRICES

Thursday February 24,2011
By Mark Reynolds
http://www.dailyexpress.co.uk/posts/view/230888

PETROL prices will rise 5p a litre within weeks as supplies are choked off by the crisis engulfing the Middle East, analysts warned last night.

With financiers worried that the ongoing unrest may plunge the global economy back into recession, the markets were jittery and oil prices rose again yesterday.

Brent crude climbed as high as $110.26 to take it to a new two-and-a-half year high.

It led to warnings that Britain's hard-pressed motorists can expect more pump price rises soon.

Yesterday the average price of unleaded petrol stood at 128.96p. A 5p per litre increase would raise it to around £6.10 per gallon. The average price of a litre of diesel yesterday was 134.33p.

Brian Madderson, chairman of business group Retail Motor Industry, said: "This is further bad news for motorists and forecourts as this increase looks set to coincide with the introduction of the previous Government's ill-thought out fuel duty escalator adding a further 5p per litre at the pump – in total a 10p per litre jump.

"The RMI once again urges the Government to abandon plans to introduce this fuel duty escalator which will impact directly on inflation, businesses and consumers."

Oil companies such as Repsol, Eni and BASF's Wintershall have all halted operations amid the violent clashes in Libya, which usually pumps 1.6 million barrels per day, or nearly two per cent of global supply.

Although the disruptions mark the first reduction in oil supply stemming from the wave of protests that have swept through the oil-producing Middle East and North Africa, experts fear they will not be the last.

Investors are particularly worried about the potential impact on the flow of oil from top exporter Saudi Arabia if it suffers similar unrest.

One analyst said: "In total, some 300,000 barrels per day are now offline. The numbers could rise as we still do not have a clear idea how much oil is being impacted by striking Libyan workers deep inside the country."

Libya's unrest has also affected natural gas exports, with supplies to Italy suspended.

International Energy Agency executive director Nobuo Tanaka said that oil prices above $100 per barrel for the rest of the year could tip the global economy back into a repeat of the 2008 economic crisis.

Brent crude has risen 12.5 per cent this year. US crude is up nearly five per cent on the year but is more than $50 below its 2008 high of $147.27.

Petrol may rise by 10p a litre over unrest in Middle East

Chancellor under pressure to hold back fuel duty increase to minimise price rise

Dan Milmo
guardian.co.uk, Wednesday 23 February 2011 21.38 GMT
http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/2011/feb/23/p...-fuel-duty-rise

Motorists face an increase in petrol prices of up to 10p per litre, retailers have warned, after the oil price breached $110 (£68) per barrel.

The trade body for petrol retailers and forecourt operators in the UK blamed the soaring price of Brent crude, up nearly $5 a barrel on world markets on the back of unrest across the Middle East and north Africa.

Drivers are already facing a 5p rise in fuel duty on 1 April, and Retail Motor Industry said the latest rise in crude prices could add a further 5p a litre to the cost of fuel. The combined effect would add around £5 to the cost of filling an average tank. Air fares are also expected to rise: British Airways has already increased its fuel surcharge twice in the last two months.

Unleaded petrol costs an average of 128.97p a litre, up by 17p on last year, while diesel costs 134.34p per litre, up 20p.

"RMI Petrol predicts that this rise will filter through to petrol forecourts over the next few weeks, leading to an estimated five pence per litre increase by the 1st April," said Brian Madderson, chairman of RMI.

"This is further bad news for motorists and forecourts as this increase looks set to coincide with the introduction of the previous government's ill-thought-out fuel duty escalator adding a further five pence per litre at the pump."

The impact of the increasing cost of crude will increase the pressure on the chancellor to hold back the full impact of the fuel escalator. Madderson said that revenues from rising North sea oil prices and the 20% VAT rate should provide "adequate room" for the Treasury to postpone the forthcoming fuel duty increase.

Analysts have warned that oil could hit $220 per barrel if unrest spread across the Middle East.

Already facing calls from industry and motorists' groups to drop the planned 1 April hike, the chancellor has pledged to examine the case for a fuel duty stabiliser that would peg petrol taxes to fluctuations in the oil price. However, George Osborne's coalition colleague, Vince Cable, has warned that implementing a stabiliser poses "real technical difficulties".

Nonetheless, Osborne has indicated that a delay in the 1p per litre duty increase – which leaps to 5p once inflation and VAT are factored in, according to RMI – might be possible. The chancellor admitted last month that the Treasury could "override" the rise, sparing motorists an extra contribution of £500m per year to state coffers.

Edmund King, president of the AA, said the 1 April increase had become "unsustainable". He added: "Fuel costs are slowing down the economic recovery. If people spend more on fuel they are spending less on goods and services. We need to make fuel affordable in order to keep the economy going."

According to a Department for Transport study, more than half of all drivers intend to reduce their speed on motorways in order to conserve fuel.

Rising oil prices will put further upward pressure on inflation which hit 4% last month, the highest rate in two years and double the Bank of England's target. The higher cost of petrol was one factor behind the rise in the consumer prices index, along with rising alcohol, furniture and restaurant prices in the wake of the January VAT increase.

Other forms of transport costs are also pushing up the consumer prices index, with rail fares increasing by an average of 6.2% in the new year, including double-digit increases on some routes.

The rising cost of living is putting the bank under growing pressure to increase interest rates from the current 0.5% before inflation becomes bedded in, stoking a damaging upward spiral in prices.

Oil price 'could hit $220 a barrel'

Experts at Japanese bank Nomura raise spectre of doubling in oil price if unrest in Libya continues

The continuing violence in Libya and fears that the unrest will spread to other parts of north Africa and the Middle East could create the biggest oil shock since the first Gulf war, analysts have warned.

Up to half of Libya's oil production is now estimated to have been shut down as a result of the crisis engulfing the country – creating supply concerns that pushed the price of Brent crude above $110 a barrel, now experiencing its biggest three-day gain in a year.

Commodity analysts at Japanese bank Nomura raised the possibility that prices could perhaps hit $220 a barrel. In a note to clients the bank warned: "The closest comparison to the current unrest in the Middle East and north Africa is the 1990-1991 Gulf war. If Libya and Algeria were to halt oil production together, prices could peak above $220 a barrel and Opec spare capacity will be reduced to levels seen during the Gulf war and when prices hit $147 in 2008."

The alarmist view was partly backed up by Marco Dunand, chairman and co-founder of Swiss energy trading group Mercuria Energy. Dunand predicts that oil could rise above $150 a barrel, if the unrest continues to spread.

"I don't want to over-hype things, but there are scenarios under which oil could go above $150 without a doubt and those scenarios are to do with stability in the Middle East if things start spreading," he said. Dunand reckoned $150 was a "20% possibility".

Surging oil hit world stock markets, with the FTSE 100 closing down 73.23 points at 5924 and the Dow Jones trading down around 93 points at 12,119 as London traders went home.

Economists typically reckon that a $10 a barrel increase in the price of oil knocks about half a percentage point from global GDP growth. However, in a more measured note, Julian Jessop of Capital Economics said: "We continue to expect oil prices to drop back sharply later this year. In part this is because we think that Libya will be both the first and the last of the major oil producers to see significant disruption (and indeed that the Gaddafi regime itself will fall soon), allowing the risk premium to fade away."

The situation in north Africa and the Middle East, and the knock-on effect on the price of oil, is causing others to reconsider the issue of energy security.

Andrew Horstead, risk specialist at energy and carbon management company Utilyx, warned of the dangers of being too energy dependent on the Middle East. "The unrest we're seeing in Libya is already having an impact on oil supply but the real issue will come if the trouble spills over into Saudi Arabia," he said. "The rise in oil has also hit European gas markets, with UK gas prices for winter delivery rising 9% in a little over two weeks, while there are reports that Libyan gas supplies to Europe have also been stopped.

"The closure has sent jitters through a market already nervous about the potential disruption to Europe-bound liquefied natural gas (LNG) through the Suez Canal. The developments in north Africa and the Middle East highlight just how interconnected the energy market is and how the UK's energy supply is at the mercy of events happening in other countries. It's essential that more emphasis is placed on producing energy within the UK if we are to secure our energy supply."

Remember folks that both Iraq and Iran never signed up to Knight of Malta, Heinz Kissinger's (DVD) OPEC contract to pay the interest on the U.S. National Debt. Now do you understand the Iraq war? Its possible Iran will be destroyed by war whilst the rest in the Middle East will be destroyed through far easier means such as fake revolutions. Those other Nations can be economically crippled when the U. S. Dollar is destroyed during 2012. Old Iraq and today's Iran wouldn't suffer. Understand now?

It is up to the people of Iran to change the regime in the country without assistance from external sources, Israeli President Shimon Peres said Wednesday.
Addressing a conference of American Jewish leaders in Jerusalem, Peres blasted Iranian lawmakers who demanded the execution of opposition leaders in the country.
"The greatest moral corruption in the world today is in Iran," Peres told the Conference of President of Major American Jewish Organizations. "It was an abominable sight yesterday to see on television the Iranian parliament standing and calling for the killing of opposition forces in the name of 'democracy' of [Iranian President Mahmoud] Ahmadinejad. Those to change the regime in Iran will be the Iranian people themselves, and not foreign intervention."

Oil price 'could hit $220 a barrel'

Experts at Japanese bank Nomura raise spectre of doubling in oil price if unrest in Libya continues

The continuing violence in Libya and fears that the unrest will spread to other parts of north Africa and the Middle East could create the biggest oil shock since the first Gulf war, analysts have warned.

Up to half of Libya's oil production is now estimated to have been shut down as a result of the crisis engulfing the country – creating supply concerns that pushed the price of Brent crude above $110 a barrel, now experiencing its biggest three-day gain in a year.

Commodity analysts at Japanese bank Nomura raised the possibility that prices could perhaps hit $220 a barrel. In a note to clients the bank warned: "The closest comparison to the current unrest in the Middle East and north Africa is the 1990-1991 Gulf war. If Libya and Algeria were to halt oil production together, prices could peak above $220 a barrel and Opec spare capacity will be reduced to levels seen during the Gulf war and when prices hit $147 in 2008."

The alarmist view was partly backed up by Marco Dunand, chairman and co-founder of Swiss energy trading group Mercuria Energy. Dunand predicts that oil could rise above $150 a barrel, if the unrest continues to spread.

"I don't want to over-hype things, but there are scenarios under which oil could go above $150 without a doubt and those scenarios are to do with stability in the Middle East if things start spreading," he said. Dunand reckoned $150 was a "20% possibility".

Surging oil hit world stock markets, with the FTSE 100 closing down 73.23 points at 5924 and the Dow Jones trading down around 93 points at 12,119 as London traders went home.

Economists typically reckon that a $10 a barrel increase in the price of oil knocks about half a percentage point from global GDP growth. However, in a more measured note, Julian Jessop of Capital Economics said: "We continue to expect oil prices to drop back sharply later this year. In part this is because we think that Libya will be both the first and the last of the major oil producers to see significant disruption (and indeed that the Gaddafi regime itself will fall soon), allowing the risk premium to fade away."

The situation in north Africa and the Middle East, and the knock-on effect on the price of oil, is causing others to reconsider the issue of energy security.

Andrew Horstead, risk specialist at energy and carbon management company Utilyx, warned of the dangers of being too energy dependent on the Middle East. "The unrest we're seeing in Libya is already having an impact on oil supply but the real issue will come if the trouble spills over into Saudi Arabia," he said. "The rise in oil has also hit European gas markets, with UK gas prices for winter delivery rising 9% in a little over two weeks, while there are reports that Libyan gas supplies to Europe have also been stopped.

"The closure has sent jitters through a market already nervous about the potential disruption to Europe-bound liquefied natural gas (LNG) through the Suez Canal. The developments in north Africa and the Middle East highlight just how interconnected the energy market is and how the UK's energy supply is at the mercy of events happening in other countries. It's essential that more emphasis is placed on producing energy within the UK if we are to secure our energy supply."

Now both Bloomberg and Fox News speak again of this $220 figure so when it hits $200 you'll go "oh well at least its not as bad as it could have been."

Oil May Surge to $220 If Libya, Algeria Halt, Nomura Says

By Grant Smith - Feb 23, 2011
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-02-23/o...omura-says.html

Oil prices may surge to $220 a barrel if political unrest in North Africa halts exports from Libya and Algeria, Nomura Holdings Inc. said.

Crude futures rose to almost $100 in New York today, the highest in more than two years, as violence in Libya threatened to disrupt exports from Africa's third-biggest supplier. Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi vowed yesterday to fight a growing rebellion until his "last drop of blood." Protests in Algeria led to the ending of a 19-year state of emergency.

"If Libya and Algeria were to halt oil production together, prices could peak above $220 a barrel and OPEC spare capacity will be reduced to 2.1 million barrels a day, similar to levels seen during the Gulf war and when prices hit $147 in 2008," the Tokyo-based bank said in a note today.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has spare production capacity of about 5 million barrels a day, according to the International Energy Agency. Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi said yesterday that the organization will boost output if there is a shortage. Algeria produced 1.25 million barrels a day last month, while Libya pumped 1.59 million a day, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. Both nations are members of OPEC.

Crude for April delivery was at $99.68 a barrel as of 12:38 p.m. on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest since Oct. 2, 2008. Futures are up 24 percent from a year ago. Brent for April settlement climbed 5.4 percent, to $111.49, on the ICE Futures Europe exchange.
Gulf War

"The closest comparison is the 1990-1991 Gulf War," during which OPEC's spare capacity dropped to 1.8 million barrels a day and prices surged 130 percent in seven months, Nomura analysts led by Michael Lo in Hong Kong said.

Nomura said the $220 prediction may be an underestimate, as speculative investors trading crude oil who were not active in the early 1990s may amplify the price.

A surge to $220 would trigger demand destruction and a correction lower, according to Stephen Schork, president of the Schork Group Inc. in Villanova, Pennsylvania.

"These are levels that effectively kill the global recovery," Schork said in an interview. "You can never say never, but $220 is blatantly not sustainable."

Nomura forecasts that a jump to $220 would probably cause a temporary collapse in global oil consumption of 2 million barrels a day. That's more than the 1.5 million barrels of daily growth anticipated this year by the IEA.
Scaling Back

Total SA and OMV AG followed Eni SpA, RWE AG and BASF SE's Wintershall unit in scaling back their Libyan operations this week. The moves have reduced production by as much as 300,000 barrels a day, Vienna-based researcher JBC Energy GmbH said in a report today.

Protests in Algeria, while not as violent as in Libya, led to the announcement yesterday of an end to the state of emergency. The measure was imposed after the cancellation of the country's first multiparty elections that Islamists were set to win in 1992.

"I see a higher chance for Libyan production to stop at the moment, but I will not be surprised if this rolls over into Algeria too," Nomura's Lo said by e-mail. "We are hearing a threat to oil infrastructure in Algeria already."

If an export suspension is confined to Libya, rather than both countries, prices would rise to about half of the $220 a barrel forecast, Lo said.

North African Turmoil Could Rocket Crude to $220

By Matt Egan
Published February 23, 2011
http://www.foxbusiness.com/markets/2011/02.../#ixzz1EqrWauuW

If the turmoil paralyzing parts of the Middle East and North Africa brings oil production in Libya and Algeria to a standstill, it could cause crude oil to explode to $220 a barrel, derailing the global economic recovery.

According to a new report from Tokyo-based Nomura, a simultaneous production halt from embattled Libya and neighboring Algeria would reduce OPEC spare capacity to 2.1 million barrels a day and may cause crude to spike from about $97 a barrel today to $220 a barrel.

"The closest comparison is the 1990-1991 Gulf War," the Nomura analysts, led by Michael Lo, wrote, saying crude prices leaped 70% in seven months when OPEC's spare capacity was cut to just 1.8 million barrels a day during that conflict with oil-rich Iraq.

While the $220 figure may sound high, Nomura said it could be an underestimate as speculative oil traders who were not around during the Gulf War may exaggerate the surge during an oil production halt.

The turmoil in Algeria hasn't gotten nearly as much attention, but that government is also believed to be very vulnerable and recent protests have led the government there to lift its state of emergency.

The report comes as Wall Street has grown increasingly fearful the violence slamming Libya, Africa's third-largest oil producer, will eat into the global economic recovery.

Even though the global economy has strengthened considerably in recent months, it's clear $220 oil prices would seriously hurt growth, putting a huge burden on cash-strapped consumers and businesses, especially transportation companies like shipping giant FedEx (FDX: 89.25, 0.00, 0.00%), airliner JetBlue (JBLU: 5.70, 0.00, 0.00%) and cruise operator Carnival (CCL: 42.06, 0.00, 0.00%).

Crude's expiring March contract spiked 8.5% -- its biggest one-day gain since April 2009 -- to a 2 1/2-year high of $93.57 on Tuesday in response to the turmoil in Libya. The surge in oil prices sent the Dow Jones Industrial Average tumbling 178 points, its steepest decline since November.

With no resolution in sight, crude continued its gains on Wednesday, with the commodity's April contract jumping $2.16 a barrel, or 2.30%, to $97.58. Brent crude continues to vault ahead of crude, surging another $3.92 a barrel, or 3.71%, to $109.70.

According to Bloomberg data, Libya pumped 1.59 million barrels of crude a day last month, while Algeria pumped 1.25 million barrels a day.

The markets have been pricing in the possibility the crisis in Libya will break out into an all-out civil war as longtime Libyan leader Muammar al-Qaddafi has refused to step down. In a televised speech on Tuesday, he said, "I will fight to the last drop of my blood."

Citing a source close to the al-Qaddafi regime, Time Magazine reported late Tuesday the leader has ordered security services to start sabotaging oil facilities. The forces plan to blow up several oil pipelines, cutting off flow to Mediterranean ports, the report said.

According to Italian authorities, the death toll during the political unrest in Libya may have jumped to about 1,000.

President Michel Suleiman met on Thursday with Pope Benedict XVI who is also scheduled to hold talks with Maronite Patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir the next day.

The pope unveiled the statue of Saint Maroun at St. Peter's square on Wednesday in a ceremony attended by Suleiman, Sfeir and scores of officials and personalities.

The five-meter high statue, sculpted by an Italian artist, was placed in the last available site on the outer wall of St. Peter Basilica, and depicts the saint holding a walking-stick.

Following a mass celebrated by Sfeir at the basilica Wednesday, Suleiman urged the Lebanese to unite to preserve the country's model of coexistence as a guarantee for long-term stability.

Pope Benedict XVI and Lebanese President Michel Sleimane on Thursday expressed hope that a new government in Lebanon would bring "longed-for stability to the country, as it faced major internal and international challeges", the Vatican said.

The pontiff and Sleimane during their half-hour meeting also "stressed the importance of involving religious and civil authorities to make people aware of peace and reconciliation," the Vatican said in a statement.

The two also spoke about the situation in the Middle East "with particular reference to the recent events in several Arab countries" and voiced their "mutual conviction that it is urgent to resolve the ongoing conflicts in the region."

"The situation of Christians throughout the region and the contribution they can make to the good of the whole society" were also discussed, it said, noting that the coexistence of diverse Christian and Muslim communities in Lebanon set an example.

The resignation of Hezbollah ministers on January 12 led to the fall of the government of Saad Hariri. The billionaire Najib Mikati, close of Syrian President Bashir al-Assad, has been chosen to succeed Hariri as prime minister.

Peres: All of Europe under nuclear threat

On visit to Spain, president also criticizes Gaddafi for 'spending more on clothes than on people'

Ronen Medzini Published: 02.23.11, 13:46 / Israel News
http://www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-4032908,00.html

President Shimon Peres warned against the Iranian nuclear threat Wednesday, also inveighing against Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi amid bloody protests signifying the possible overturning of his regime.

In a speech Peres gave before senior journalists and diplomats in Spain, Peres said Gaddafi was concerned only for himself. "You can see by his outfits how much he spends on clothing rather than on people," he said.

On the rapidly spreading protests in Arab states Peres said, "Israel supports the strengthening of democracy and peace in the Middle East. The youth of the region demand freedom, equal opportunities, and the right to live decently and we applaud this."

He added that the recent developments in the region provide both Israel and the Palestinians with an opportunity to return to direct negotiations. "The gaps between the sides are not too big," Peres said.

Peres also offered a calmer reaction than other Israeli officials to the passing of Iranian ships through the Suez Canal Tuesday.

"The Iranian ships are a cheap provocation and not a threat," he said. However, he also had a warning for European countries regarding the Islamic Republic. "You are sleeping. One day you will wake up with nuclear warheads pointed at Madrid," he said.

"The real threat stands as a clear warning sign to Europe and the entire world: Iran is developing nuclear weapons for mass destruction, and when nuclear weapons reach the hands of terror organizations, Iran's satellites, all of Europe's capitals will be under existential threat," Peres warned.

"Leaders who have their pictures taken beside Ahmadinejad should be ashamed, and he must not be invited to march on the UN's red carpets."

Peres added that the Iranian threat encompasses all of Europe. "Spain has suffered very serious terror attacks, and this will be the fate of many countries in the world if drastic measures are not taken against Iran," he said.

The president also joked that he was "disappointed" at the warm welcome he received in Spain, explaining that he was accustomed to be received with protests and threats.

February 23, 2011. Egypt has announced they will be reinstating their ambassador to the Vatican, Lamia Mekheimar. She had recently been called back to Egypt in light of comments made by the Pope in January.

In a speech given to the foreign diplomats of the Holy See, Benedict XVI asked the Egyptian government to do more in protecting the Christian minority of their country.

In response, Egypt said these remarks were an 'unacceptable interference in its domestic affairs' and recalled the ambassador.

Egypt's foreign ministry has now decided to send their ambassador back to Rome after receiving 'positive messages' from Vatican officials.

Satellite images reveal 'uranium plant' in Syria

By JPOST.COM STAFF

[dohtml]<img src="http://www.jpost.com/HttpHandlers/ShowImage.ashx?ID=159929" width=311 height=187>[/dohtml]
Uranium facility discovered near Marj as Sultan, close to Damascus, reports 'Sueddeutsche Zeitung'.

Syria is suspected of harboring a uranium conversion reactor near the town of Marj as Sultan, near Damascus, according to a publication released Wednesday by the Washington-based Institute for Science and International Security based on reports by the German newspaper Sueddeutsche Zeitung.

The facility is related to the nuclear reactor project at al Kibar that was bombed by Israel in September 2007, and it was reportedly used for processing uranium, according to the report.

The report said the facility's operational status is still unknown, but Syria is suspected of clearing out the buildings before mid-2008 in efforts to disguise previous activities conducted at the site.

Syria has contined to refuse requests by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to inspect the Marj as Sultan facility, as well as other sites that may be related to the nuclear reactor project, the report said.

Satellite images of the site near Marj as Sultan, obtained by the ISIS, reveal that on July 25, 2008, there was considerable activity involving the pouring of material on the ground as well as trucks and other vehicles that could have been related to the operation.

[dohtml]<img src="http://www.jpost.com/HttpHandlers/ShowImage.ashx?ID=159928" width=443 height=309>[/dohtml]

The ISIS document said this could have been part of a plan to lay down concrete or asphalt, which could be "an attempt to defeat the environmental sampling that IAEA inspectors would likely carry out to see if uranium was present in the event of a visit to these suspect sites."

The ISIS document cites information from Sueddeutsche Zeitung revealing that among the equipment kept inside two buildings near the Marj as Sultan site, there was a scrubber, two cyclone separators, large diameter pipes, a manifold, reaction vessels made from stainless steel, and storage tanks.

This equipment is in line with "what would be expected in a small uranium conversion facility," the ISIS report said.

Shuttle Discovery sets out on last voyage

By Jonathan Amos
24 February 2011 Last updated at 22:06
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/science-environment-12573413

The US shuttle Discovery has launched from the Kennedy Space Center for the last time.

The orbiter roared into a bright blue Florida sky, leaving the pad at 1653 local time (2153 GMT).

Its 11-day mission will see it deliver a new store room and a sophisticated humanoid robot to the International Space Station (ISS).

Only two further flights remain by Endeavour and Atlantis, which Nasa is trying to see concluded this year.

The orbiter fleet is then expected to retire to museums.

As usual, huge crowds had gathered on all the approach roads leading to the Nasa facility and on the beaches along Florida's Space Coast - everyone wanting to witness a piece of history.

They all had to wait a little longer than expected - the final countdown was delayed by three minutes as a problem was fixed with the computer system that tracks the shuttle to orbit.

As soon as the issue was resolved, ground controllers restarted the clock and called out to Discovery's crew: "Enjoy the ride". Shuttle Commander Steve Lindsey replied: "We appreciate all your work; and for those watching, get ready to witness the majesty and the power of Discovery as she lifts off one final time."

Discovery is regarded as the "leader of the fleet", and was entrusted with both return-to-flight missions following the Challenger and Columbia accidents.

First launched in 1984, this is its 39th outing. When it lands back on Earth in nearly two weeks' time it will have covered a cumulative career distance of 230 million km (143 million miles). That's further than the distance from the Earth to the Sun (149 million km).

Once the shuttles are retired, the plan is for US astronauts to fly to the space station on Russian Soyuz rockets until perhaps the middle of the decade.

A number of American companies then hope to be in a position to sell launch services to Nasa on a range of new vehicles.

The intention is that the agency should put its efforts into leading the development of a large rocket - known as the Space Launch System - that can send astronauts beyond the space station to destinations such as asteroids.

Congress has set out the broad capabilities it expects to see in this rocket and has given a deadline of 2016 for its introduction. However, Nasa has said it cannot deliver such a vehicle in the time and with the budget the politicians have specified.

R2 will be the first humanoid robot in space. It is designed to show how dexterous robots cope in a weightless environment
After upgrades and advancements, Nasa hopes R2 can venture outside the space station to help astronauts on spacewalkers
The expectation is that R2-like robots could one day go into orbit to service communications and scientific satellites
Similar robots might be sent on deep space missions, where they would experience more extreme thermal and radiation conditions
Humanoid robots could also help set up Mars camps before astronauts arrive, and maintain the surface experiments after they leave

As well as Steve Lindsey, Discovery's crew includes Eric Boe as the pilot. They are joined by mission specialists Alvin Drew, Michael Barratt, Nicole Stott and Steve Bowen. Bowen was called in late to replace crewman Tim Kopra who was injured in a bicycle accident last month.

A key task will be to deliver the Italian-built logistics module known as Leonardo. The module, which is used as a packing box for supplies in the orbiter's payload bay, would normally return to Earth with every shuttle mission, but for Discovery's flight it will be left on station to provide extra storage space.

Leonardo's retention on the ISS represents yet another remarkable achievement for Thales Alenia Space in Turin, which has produced most of the pressurised volume, or living space, on the US side of the platform. Appropriately, Italian and European Space Agency astronaut Paolo Nespoli will be onboard the station to help fit Leonardo into place on the Unity connecting node.

There has been particular interest in a "passenger" being carried up in Leonardo. This is Robonaut 2, or R2, the first human-like robot in space.

R2 is the product of 15 years' research in Nasa and General Motors.

In its current guise, the robot is just a head, arms, and a torso mounted on a pedestal. But the plan eventually is to give R2 some legs to let it move around the station. And in a couple of years, it will also get a body upgrade that should significantly advance its capabilities.

The expectation is that before the decade is out, this robot will be clambering about on the outside of the space station, assisting astronauts on spacewalks. Inside the station, R2 is likely to take on many mundane tasks such as cleaning.

Discovery should arrive at the ISS on Saturday. The first of two spacewalks to carry out maintenance tasks on the exterior of the platform should occur on day five of the mission.

Shuttle Endeavour is expected to fly to the station in April. Atlantis will go no earlier than June.

UN concern over 'military angle to Iran nuclear plan'

Iran has always denied its nuclear programme is aiming to develop weapons

25 February 2011 Last updated at 18:35
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-12584146

The UN's nuclear watchdog says it has received new information on "possible military dimensions" to Iran's nuclear development programme.

The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) said the report raised "further concerns" about Iran's activities.

It urged Tehran to co-operate fully with its investigations in alleged weapons experiments, saying it had not done since 2008.

Iran insists its nuclear programme is entirely peaceful.

The IAEA report was obtained by the BBC and made available online by the Institute for Science and International Security (Isis).

It says Iran is "not implementing a number of its obligations including clarification of the remaining outstanding issues which give rise to concerns about possible military dimensions to its nuclear programme".

The country was also "not providing the necessary co-operation to enable the Agency to provide credible assurance about the absence of undeclared nuclear material and activities in Iran, and therefore to conclude that all nuclear material in Iran is in peaceful activities".

"Based on the agency's analysis of additional information since August 2008, including new information recently received, there are further concerns which the agency also needs to clarify with Iran," says the report.

Among those concerns were that Iran was not engaging with the IAEA on allegations that it was developing a nuclear payload for its missiles.

Six world powers are negotiating with Iran over its nuclear programme, and the country is subject to United Nations Security Council sanctions over its refusal to halt uranium enrichment.

Enriched uranium can be used for civilian nuclear purposes, but also to build atomic bombs.

The UN has imposed four sets of sanctions on Iran over the years.

While these have made it more difficult for Iran to acquire equipment, technology and finance to support its nuclear activities, they have not stopped trading in oil and gas - the major sources of Iran's income.

JCOS Mullen Visits Horn of Africa Task Force

http://www.globalsecurity.org/military/lib...0224-afps07.htm

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff took time today during his whirlwind trip through the Middle East to visit with troops of Combined Joint Task Force Horn of Africa, whose full-time focus here is on maintaining stability and preventing conflict.

Navy Adm. Mike Mullen's visit here was part of a week-long, six-country trip aimed at reassuring U.S. allies and hearing their views of the unfolding events surrounding unrest in the region.

In Djibouti, Mullen met with Maj. Gen. Ahmed Housein Fathi, chief of the general staff, and other key military leaders. Djibouti experienced only small-scale protests that have quieted down, officials here said, unlike Yemen and Libya, just across the Gulf of Aden.

A highlight of the day, Mullen said, was his visit to Combined Joint Task Force Horn of Africa. Navy Rear Adm. Brian Losey, the task force commander, updated him on operations his 1,700 service members are conducting to provide not just security assistance, but also humanitarian support and development to the Horn of Africa and Yemen.

The task force initially stood up in November 2002 as a seafaring force aimed at blocking terrorists fleeing Afghanistan from setting up a new safe haven here. But within six months, it moved ashore to this former French Foreign Legion base.

Today, the task force focuses on challenges in a region strategic because of its geographic location, resources and struggles with instability, officials told reporters traveling with Mullen.

The goal, said Army Brig. Gen. William L. Glasgow, deputy task force commander, is to help African nations build capability so they can promote regional security and stability and prevent conflict.

“We’re building friendships with Africa and trying to help Africans solve African problems,” said Army Spc. Gary McGoyne, deployed here to provide security for the task force’s stand-by pararescue medics.

The task force is a model of the “whole of government” approach that Mullen, Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates and others advocate for promoting U.S. security interests, Glasgow explained.

Military members here work hand in hand with personnel from the State Department and U.S. Agency for International Development to create a stable climate that promotes a better quality of life for the local population, he said.

In doing so, they apply multiple elements of U.S. national power -- the so-called “three D’s” of defense, diplomacy and development –- to their mission with an array of military-to-military efforts aimed at building capacity and humanitarian and civic-support activities.

Projects go beyond digging wells and building or refurbishing schools, with the task force ensuring that the host nations are able to sustain what’s done and that the work contributes to the big-picture goals here. “Everything contributes to the long-term commitment we have,” Glasgow said.

Glasgow described the service members undertaking these projects –- many operating far from Camp Lemonnier in three- to five-person teams –- as “strategic privates.” Before being dispatched for these missions, they get full briefings about the job they’ll be doing, but more importantly, why it matters and how it fits into the strategic mission here, he said.

Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Dennis Coffey, a motor pool chief who deployed here last month, said he enjoys the opportunity to interact with local Djiboutians and recognizes the importance of the task force mission in promoting regional and even global stability. “It’s very important that we are here to show our support,” he said.

These initiatives fall directly in line with the “soft” elements of national power Gates wants to see beefed up so nonmilitary U.S. government entities can be stronger partners in advancing U.S. interests around the world.

Navy Cmdr. Jeff Peterson, who works closely with embassy officials as officer in charge of the country coordination element, said this cooperation leads to “synergy and better results” in advancing U.S. objectives here. Ultimately, he said, it supports “phase zero” –- a nonkinetic, stable and secure region where good governance and democracy can take hold.

As he walked through Camp Lemonnier, Mullen took time at every opportunity to shake hands and talk with service members, pose for photos and present them his official coin. Seeing operations on the ground, he said, gives him a “better feel for what is going on,” adding that mingling with the service members deployed so far from home “made my day.”

Rick Santorum: The Crusades Get A Bad Rap

http://tpmdc.talkingpointsmemo.com/2011/02...t-a-bad-rap.php

If you were worried there wouldn't be a 2012 candidate touting the pro-Crusades platform, then today is your lucky day!

"The idea that the Crusades and the fight of Christendom against Islam is somehow an aggression on our part is absolutely anti-historical," former Sen. Rick Santorum (R-PA) told a South Carolina audience yesterday. "And that is what the perception is by the American left who hates Christendom."

Santorum's defense of the Crusades came in Spartanburg, S.C. reports Andy Barr of Politico. South Carolina is an early and important GOP presidential primary state, and Santorum is considering a presidential run.

Referring to the "American left," Santorum observed: "They hate Western civilization at the core. That's the problem." Sanoturm also suggested that American involvement in the Middle East is part of our "core American values."

"What I'm talking about is onward American soldiers," Santorum continued. "What we're talking about are core American values. 'All men are created equal' -- that's a Christian value, but it's an American value."

The Crusades were religiously sanctioned military campaigns waged in Europe during the Middle Ages and pre-dated the emergence of the United States by a few centuries. The original goal was to recapture Jerusalem from Muslim rule, though along the way the Roman Catholic forces massacred thousands of Jews, among others.

The President of the EP was received by Pope Benedict XVI on Monday 28 February

On Monday, 28 February 2011, the President of the European Parliament, Jerzy Buzek, was received by Pope Benedict XVI at a private audience at the Vatican, Rome.

"The meeting with the Holy Father was very moving. At a time of such dramatic changes, a man of faith and intellect like Benedict XVI gives guidance and stability to hundreds of million of people across the world", said Buzek. Among the issues discussed, the situation in the Northern Africa: "we expressed our hopes for a swift end of violence and transition towards stability and democracy", explained the president.

Buzek also met Cardinal Bertone (Secretary of State of the Holy See) as well as Grand Master Matthew Festing and Grand Chancellor Jean-Pierre Mazery of the Order of Malta.

In the afternoon he visited the Governor of the Bank of Italy Mario Draghi, who is reported to be candidate to the presidency of the ECB.

US cardinal keeps watchful eye on situation unfolding in Middle East

By Christie L. Chicoine
Catholic News Service
http://www.catholicnews.com/data/stories/cns/1100770.htm

PHILADELPHIA (CNS) -- Cardinal John P. Foley is keeping a watchful eye on the revolution in Egypt and other nations in the Middle East, despite his recent retirement and resignation as grand master of the Knights of the Holy Sepulcher of Jerusalem.

The organization helps to raise funds for the works of the church in that region.

"I can understand the current unrest -- it's an expression of desire for democracy, but I hope it doesn't become a situation in which Christians are further discriminated against in any of these countries," Cardinal Foley said. "The situation is so unstable there, and of course Christians are such a minority there."

In Egypt, about 10 percent of the population is Christian, primarily Coptic Orthodox, he explained.

"We had just been asked by the Holy Father to help especially the Latin-rite Christians in Egypt and Lebanon in addition to Israel, Palestine and Jordan," Cardinal Foley said.

The latter three countries are part of the Latin Patriarchate of Jerusalem, which the Knights of the Holy Sepulcher support.

"Egypt and Lebanon are separate Latin dioceses, but they are in need of assistance also and are considered part of the Holy Land," he added.

The support aids parishes and schools in those lands, and to help Christians maintain their institutions and presence in a heavily non-Christian environment, as well as some humanitarian assistance, the cardinal said.

"We certainly want to maintain the continued presence of Christians in the Holy Land, the successors of the original followers of Christ, in the land where he was born, where he lived, where he died and where he rose from the dead," Cardinal Foley said. "That's very important, I think. And it's been a privilege to have been associated with it."

When Cardinal Foley met with Pope Benedict XVI Feb. 10, he told the pontiff he was grateful for his appointment as grand master "because it was like a nice retreat, preparing for my own retirement."

Traveling to the Holy Land and meeting with those who have generously assisted the Christians of the Holy Land through the years has been an inspiration to him, the cardinal said.

When then-Archbishop Foley began his duties as grand master, the Knights of the Holy Sepulcher of Jerusalem received approximately $7 million euros (US$9.6 million) a year.

"Now, they're getting $10 million euros (US$13.8 million) a year" to send to the Holy Land, he said.

The funds are contributed by a membership of approximately 28,000 Knights and Ladies of the Holy Sepulcher around the globe.

Among the organization's 60 jurisdictions are two new chapters: one in Moscow, added this past January, the other in Cape Town, South Africa, added last December.

In addition, new jurisdictions have been formed in Italy. Additional jurisdictions were planned for the United States, where they currently number nine.

Prince Charles and the Duchess of Cornwall to visit Spain this month

http://www.typicallyspanish.com/news/publi...cle_29499.shtml

Prince Charles and the Duchess of Cornwall are to make an official visit to Spain this month.

Charles and Camilla will travel at the end of the month to Madrid and Sevilla. Although Charles has been in Spain on several occasions, this will be his first official visit with the Duchess.

Charles visited Mallorca in April 1987 with Diana for a break with the Spanish royals at the Marivent Palace. In 1993 Charles attended the funeral for Don Juan, the King's father, and in March 1995 he was in Sevilla for the wedding of the Infanta Elena and Jaime de Marichalar.

The British Royal Family is linked to the Spanish one via Queen Sofía who is great grand-daughter of Queen Victoria and second cousin to Charles through King George 1 of Greece.

The exact dates and itinerary of the new trip are still under wraps, but it is thought the trip will last three days, during which time the couple will meet with King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofía, the Prince and Princess of Asturias, the Prime Minister José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero, and the Mayor of Madrid Alberto Ruiz-Gallardón, among others.

No interference in internal affairs, says King

http://www.saudigazette.com.sa/index.cfm?m...D=2011031595901

Cabinet reaffirms its response to Bahrain's request for supportRIYADH: King Abdullah, Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques, reiterated Monday the Kingdom's "absolute rejection of any interference in its internal affairs".

Chairing the weekly Cabinet meeting Monday, King Abdullah said the Kingdom's foreign relations were based on "the principles of mutual respect and non-interference in domestic affairs", with rules founded on "the Holy Qur'an and the Prophet's Sunnah to safeguard the security, stability and peace of Saudi society from sedition and divisions".

King Abdullah thanked Almighty Allah for “the blessings of security and stability and the strong relations between the Kingdom’s people and their leadership”.

The Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques cited the statement from the 118th session of the GCC Ministerial Council in reaffirming the “total rejection of GCC states of any foreign attempt to interfere in their affairs, and their determination to deal firmly with any incitement to factional sympathies, promotion of divisions between the people of member states, and threats to security”.

“Threats to harm the security of any member state are regarded as harming the security of all GCC states,” he said.

King Abdullah lauded the “wisdom, loyalty and cohesion of the Kingdom with its leadership in good times and bad” since the country’s unification by the late King Abdul Aziz.

“It is, then, only to be expected that there would be no response to the attempts of the traiters because they know the objectives behind those false and wicked calls which have no relation to Islamic teachings,” King Abdullah said.

He further expressed his gratitude to the people of the Kingdom for their “compliance with its constitution, the Book of Allah and the Prophet’s Sunnah, and the true Islamic values and unity of their country”.

In that regard, the Cabinet reaffirmed its response to Bahrain’s request for support. Abdul Aziz Khoja, Minister of Culture and Information, said in a statement to SPA after the meeting that the King went on to brief ministers on his contacts of the past week concerning regional and international developments, including telephone calls from King Juan Carlos of Spain and Mauritanian President Muhammad Wald Abdul Aziz.

Khoja said that ministers expressed the Kingdom’s condolences to the Japanese Emperor Akihito and the Japanese people for their suffering in the recent earthquake.

In domestic business, the Cabinet approved a recommendation by Crown Prince Sultan Bin Abdul Aziz, Deputy Prime Minister, Minister of Defense and Aviation, Inspector General and Chairman of the Ministerial Committee for Administrative Organization, to authorize the Saudi Food and Drug Authority to supervise all operations of water and ice production factories, issue them with technical licenses and draw up their required specifications.

Ministers also reviewed scientific, cultural and socioeconomic activities of the past week, including the conference on municipal work opened by Prince Naif Bin Abdul Aziz, Second Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Interior, and his patronages of the award ceremony for the King Faisal International Prize 2011 and the first Saudi Forum for Processing Industries.

Donald Trump bows out of 2012 US presidential election race

US mogul formally announces he will not seek the Republican nomination, claiming he is 'not ready to leave the private sector'

Ewen MacAskill in Washington
guardian.co.uk, Monday 16 May 2011 19.35 BST
http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2011/may/1...esidential-race

Faced with the choice of hosting The Apprentice or taking on Barack Obama in next year's election, Donald Trump opted to stick with his television programme.

The multimillionaire has formally announced he will not be joining the small band of candidates seeking the Republican nomination for the White House race.

Few US political commentators took his campaign seriously and many suggested he was only in it for the publicity.

In a statement, he said: "After considerable deliberation and reflection, I have decided not to pursue the office of the presidency. This decision does not come easily or without regret, especially when my potential candidacy continues to be validated by ranking at the top of the Republican contenders in polls across the country."

Modesty is not a Trump characteristic and this is reflected in his statement. "I maintain the strong conviction that if I were to run, I would be able to win the primary and, ultimately, the general election."

He added: "I have spent the past several months unofficially campaigning and recognise that running for public office cannot be done half-heartedly. Ultimately, however, business is my greatest passion and I am not ready to leave the private sector."

The decision comes after the businessman was repeatedly trounced by Obama last month over the "birther" issue. Trump took doubts about Obama's birthplace from the fringes of American politics to the mainstream, but the president undercut him by publishing the long form of his birth certificate, proving he had been born in the US. Obama humiliated Trump a few days later with a series of jokes at his expense at the White House correspondents' dinner, with the businessman present.

In spite of Trump's claims about being frontrunner in the polls, one published on Monday by the Politico website and George Washington University showed 71% of those surveyed thought he had no chance of becoming president.

Trump went through the motions of being a Republican contender, making speeches in key early states such as New Hampshire, and for a short time seemed in tune with the public mood. But he offered little in the way of policies and senior Republicans viewed his candidacy, with its emphasis on issues such as Obama's birthplace, as an irritating distraction.

The field of declared Republicans so far is small and has failed to generate much excitement. Mike Huckabee, the former governor of Arkansas, who had a good run in 2008 in spite of a lack of funds, announced on Saturday that he would not be standing next year. Some Republicans see Obama as too tough a candidate and prefer to wait until 2016.

Sarah Palin, who would bring excitement to the race, has not yet said whether she will seek the Republican nomination. After a quiet few weeks, she re-ignited interest on Monday when she sent out a fundraising mail shot in South Carolina, one of the key states in the battle for the Republican nomination.

ConvictedSinner - May 17, 2011 02:47 PM (GMT)

I believe one of the most ridiculous things about the entire birther issue is the fact that it took more than 2 years to produce a long form certificate and people believe that it is real... None of it makes sense. It's been an issue since before his non-presidency and if the document was certifiably real it could have been produced a long time ago since there is nothing on a BC that could jepordize a person's life. Someone would have to deliberately not want to see the truth of the matter in order to believe the whole thing. Society has truly become like the "Night of the Living Dead", full of zombies.

Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz continues to attack me and tells lies trying to tie me up with people I don't know and who don't know me personally. Now he's trying to claim not only do I have something to do with the supposed assassination of Edward Harle but also others and even Kennedy whilst ignoring that Crown Agent, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst operative Hillary Clinton was behind that incident for her own political gain. When is this nonsense going to end and why? All because Leonard Horowitz wanted a Knighthood by the Knights of Malta through being trapped in the ego system wanting little Maltese buttons, medals and other nonsense titles of zero worth in reality. All because someone else is making more worthless chattel currency from Colloidal Silver than Horowitz is. Forget all these silver products and make your own with a nice generator and if you want singlet oxygen then simply get a nice Ozone generator for water and thats it. Don't fall for all these gimmicks and in truth pathetic health teachings which have nothing to do with health in truth.

If you want health stick to Chinese Traditional Medicine, Chiropracting and Western Herbalism and forget these clowns like Horowitz. People should just turn the page on Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz from now on and his lies. He continues to use the race card against me when everyone knows I don't care what race he's from and I'm all for Torah-Judaics biblically and just not Sabbatean Frankist fanatic followers of Catholic controlled Sabbatai Zevi. I wouldn't be surprised if that MI6 Sherri Kane is a Sabbatean Frankist maybe even Leonard Horowitz. As far as I'm concerned I see Horowitz and Kane as Intelligentsia spooks but they're failing and trying to make everything extravagant showing how pathetic U.S. Intelligence or just these clowns really are. Lets all hope they find another chattel currency venture to vampire off and push off eventually instead of being annoying cockroaches.

Yes, please send it, I'd like to see what he has to say. However, do not assume everything (or anything) he says about John DeCamp or Ted Gunderson is true. The CIA is in the background on this smearing campaign and their agent is the MK Ultra mind controlled liar, Barbara Hartwell. It's a long story and I won't attempt to get into it here, but there's much more going on than you are aware of.

John DeCamp was involved with the CIA in Vietnam during their Project Phoenix torture/ assassination operations against mostly non-threatening Vietnamese. He worked with William Colby who later became director of the CIA and was subsequently murdered in a canoeing "accident."

John DeCamp, who became an attorney and Nebraska state senator, got on the wrong side of the CIA when he wrote his book and made a video documentary (Conspiracy of Silence) on the Nebraska Franklin Cover Up which involved children snatched off the streets of America under the CIA's "Finders" program, interviewed victims of CIA mind control/satanic ritual abuse, including children-victims being flown into Washington DC for sex parties with prominent Washington politicians, and sundry other overlapping illicit activities of drug running, money laundering, child porn, snuff films, satanism, white slavery, and the selling of children at auctions. Since John DeCamp at one time was working with the CIA and then later exposed them, he put himself on their 'smear & discredit' hit list.

The CIA has been using Hartwell since the late 1990s to smear both John DeCamp and Ted Gunderson. John DeCamp was looking to sue Hartwell for libel in 2005, but didn't know where to find her in order to serve her. Hartwell began to lose credibility in the earlier half of the 2000 decade because I had exposed her insane fabrications in a series of articles written between 2000 - 2008. After that, I stopped writing about her since she no longer seemed to have an audience. It seems that her reputation for lying had finally caught up with her. Recently, however, she latched onto to Len Horowitz and his girlfriend, Sherri Kane, and has once again found a forum for doing what she does best: lie through her teeth about Ted Gunderson and John DeCamp.

Tim White, a two timing back stabber if there ever was one, has also injected himself into the Hartwell/Gunderson/DeCamp embroilment from the very beginning. For a time he had ingratiated himself with me until he showed me his true colors in 2006, after which I broke off with him completely. He has since tried to bad mouth me with the same intensity as his fellow CIA agitation troll, Barbara Hartwell

I agree that Alex Jones is too heavy handed and too much on the doom and gloom side.

Most of what he reports about the NWO takeover game is true, but he's too invested in sensationalism; not unlike Jeff Rense who also reports many truthful things, but Jeff too grooves on sensationalism (the current Fukushima radiation psyops over reactor "meltdowns' which never took place) and dire story telling, not to mention his flat out endorsement of pharmaceutical shill, Dr. Henry Niman, whose rabid pro-pharma diatribes about "explosive" lab-created "disease" outbreaks all over the world (which is mostly fabricated or grossly exaggerated) is also telling. Niman's performance on Jeff's web site and radio show during all of 2009's Swine/Bird Flu "pandemic" season, made it perfectly clear that he's a pharmaceutical propagandist. In fact, he owns his own pharmaceutical company and lab.

Open Letter to George Noory of Coast Radio on the Slanderous Accusations by Len Horowitz Against Ted Gunderson (June 5, 2011)

Subject: From Ken Adachi in defence of Ted Gunderson
From: Ken Adachi
Date: Mon, June 6, 2011
To: Geroge Noory <george@coasttocoastam.com>

Hello George,

I just heard a recording of your June 2 show with Len Horowitz. Len Horowitz's slanderous statements about Ted Gunderson are more than defamatory, they are outrageous and disgusting.

Hour 1: http://educate-yourself.org/cn/LenHorowitz...partAedited.mp3

Hour 2: http://educate-yourself.org/cn/LenHorowitz...partBedited.mp3

Len's "outstanding investigative reporter", Sharri Kane, an ex-FOX News reporter, is as loose an uninformed canon as you can possibly get since she bases her entire "investigative research" on the utter fabrications and fantasies of one Barbara Hartwell, well known CIA mind controlled slanderer and character assassin of both Ted Gunderson and John DeCamp, (among others).

I exposed Hartwell's lies about Gunderson in a series of rebuttal articles I wrote between 2000 and 2008 to counter the unbelievable torrent of lying swill that flows from the poison pen hand of CIA- sponsored Character Assassin, Barbara Hartwell.

http://educate-yourself.org/tg/index.shtml#barbarahartwell

Almost everything that Horowitz and Kane are accusing Ted Gunderson of being "dirty" about such as satanism, involvement with Michael Aquino, kidnapping of children for pornography, white slavery, snuff films, satanic sacrifice, with CIA/FBI involvement and protection of these abusers, have in most instances, been a description of the individuals and scandals that Ted Gunderson EXPOSED....ALONE in the 1980s and 1990s before you ever heard of Sharri Kane, or Len Horowitz, or Barbara Hartwell.

This putrid slander against Ted Gunderson will not stand and Horowitz, his girlfriend, Sharri Kane, and Hartwell are priming themselves for a libel lawsuit.

Horowitz's slanders against Dr A True Ott are equally mind boggling and outrageous. I cannot believe what I'm hearing from Horowitz. Horowitz has simply lost him mind.

Ted Gunderson is 81 years old and currently suffering from 4th stage liver and bladder cancer. He's being treated at a clinic in Costa Mesa, California. He doesn't have two nickels to rub together and can't even pay for the treatment. To be saddled with this outrageous assault by Horowitz and Kane--now-- is beyond the pale.

Horowitz's reckless disregard for investigating the accuracy and truthfulness of Hartwell's galling lies and his willingness to jump in with both feet to so maliciously slander Ted Gunderson, or True Ott, will come to bear in a court of law, I think, where wild accusations will not hold water against cold, hard facts. Lies and liars will be exposed to the judgment of a jury and a price will be paid for those who possess such a reckless contempt for truthfulness.

Anyone who is aware of the reputation and accomplishments of Ted Gunderson or John DeCamp or Dr. True Ott knows full well that Horowitz is virtually destroying his career and any remaining integrity that the public has invested in his character.

Sincerely, Ken Adachi, Editor

Notice the shows these cretins are going on and blabbing their sensational illusionary smears out? All CIA controlled outlets in the incredibly controlled not so alternative news system. British Intelligence will be ever so proud of these clowns.

Go Daddy
Universal Terms of Service Agreement

Last Revised: April 1, 2011

PLEASE READ THIS UNIVERSAL TERMS OF SERVICE AGREEMENT CAREFULLY, AS IT CONTAINS IMPORTANT INFORMATION REGARDING YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.

1. OVERVIEW

This Universal Terms of Service Agreement (this “Agreement”) is entered into by and between GoDaddy.com, Inc., a/an Arizona corporation (“Go Daddy”) and you, and is made effective as of the date of electronic acceptance. This Agreement sets forth the general terms and conditions of your use of Go Daddy products and services (individually and collectively, the “Services”) purchased or accessed through Go Daddy or the Go Daddy website (this “Site”), and is in addition to (not in lieu of) any specific terms and conditions that apply to the particular Services you purchase or access through Go Daddy or this Site.

Your electronic acceptance of this Agreement signifies that you have read, understand, acknowledge and agree to be bound by this Agreement, along with the following policies and agreements, which are incorporated herein by reference:

Privacy Policy
Anti-Spam Policy
Civil Subpoena Policy
Criminal Subpoena Policy
Dispute On Transfer Away Form

Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Policy
ICANN Registrar Transfer Dispute Resolution Policy
Trademark and/or Copyright Infringement Policy
Brand Guidelines
Permissions Policy
Direct Affiliate Program Service Agreement

The terms “we”, “us” or “our” shall refer to Go Daddy. The terms “you”, “your”, “User” or “customer” shall refer to any individual or entity who accepts this Agreement. Nothing in this Agreement shall be deemed to confer any third-party rights or benefits.

Go Daddy, in its sole and absolute discretion, may change or modify this Agreement, and any policies or agreements which are incorporated herein, at any time, and such changes or modifications shall be effective immediately upon posting to this Site. You acknowledge and agree that (i) Go Daddy may notify you of such changes or modifications by posting them to this Site and (ii) your use of this Site or the Services found at this Site after such changes or modifications have been made (as indicated by the “Last Revised” date at the top of this page) shall constitute your acceptance of this Agreement as last revised. If you do not agree to be bound by this Agreement as last revised, do not use (or continue to use) this Site or the Services found at this Site. In addition, Go Daddy may occasionally notify you of changes or modifications to this Agreement by email. It is therefore very important that you keep your account (“Account”) information, including your email address, current. Go Daddy assumes no liability or responsibility for your failure to receive an email notification if such failure results from an inaccurate or out-of-date email address.

2. ELIGIBILITY; AUTHORITY

This Site and the Services found at this Site are available only to Users who can form legally binding contracts under applicable law. By using this Site or the Services found at this Site, you represent and warrant that you are (i) at least eighteen (18) years of age and/or (ii) otherwise recognized as being able to form legally binding contracts under applicable law.

If you are entering into this Agreement on behalf of a corporate entity, you represent and warrant that you have the legal authority to bind such corporate entity to the terms and conditions contained in this Agreement, in which case the terms "you", "your", "User" or "customer" shall refer to such corporate entity. If, after your electronic acceptance of this Agreement, Go Daddy finds that you do not have the legal authority to bind such corporate entity, you will be personally responsible for the obligations contained in this Agreement, including, but not limited to, the payment obligations. Go Daddy shall not be liable for any loss or damage resulting from Go Daddy’s reliance on any instruction, notice, document or communication reasonably believed by Go Daddy to be genuine and originating from an authorized representative of your corporate entity. If there is reasonable doubt about the authenticity of any such instruction, notice, document or communication, Go Daddy reserves the right (but undertakes no duty) to require additional authentication from you.

3. ACCOUNTS; TRANSFER OF DATA ABROAD

Accounts. In order to access some of the features of this Site or use some of the Services found at this Site, you will have to create an Account. You represent and warrant to Go Daddy that all information you submit when you create your Account is accurate, current and complete, and that you will keep your Account information accurate, current and complete. If Go Daddy has reason to believe that your Account information is untrue, inaccurate, out-of-date or incomplete, Go Daddy reserves the right, in its sole and absolute discretion, to suspend or terminate your Account. You are solely responsible for the activity that occurs on your Account, whether authorized by you or not, and you must keep your Account information secure, including without limitation your customer number/login, password, Payment Method(s) (as defined below), and shopper PIN. For security purposes, Go Daddy recommends that you change your password and shopper PIN at least once every six (6) months for each Account you have with Go Daddy. You must notify Go Daddy immediately of any breach of security or unauthorized use of your Account. Go Daddy will not be liable for any loss you incur due to any unauthorized use of your Account. You, however, may be liable for any loss Go Daddy or others incur caused by your Account, whether caused by you, or by an authorized person, or by an unauthorized person.

Transfer of Data Abroad. If you are visiting this Site from a country other than the country in which our servers are located, your communications with us may result in the transfer of information (including your Account information) across international boundaries. By visiting this Site and communicating electronically with us, you consent to such transfers.

4. GENERAL RULES OF CONDUCT

You acknowledge and agree that:
Your use of this Site and the Services found at this Site, including any content you submit, will comply with this Agreement and all applicable local, state, national and international laws, rules and regulations.
You will not impersonate another User or any other person or entity, or submit content on behalf of another User or any other person or entity, without their express prior written consent.
You will not collect or harvest (or permit anyone else to collect or harvest) any User Content (as defined below) or any non-public or personally identifiable information about another User or any other person or entity without their express prior written consent.
You will not use this Site or the Services found at this Site in a manner (as determined by Go Daddy in its sole and absolute discretion) that:
Is illegal, or promotes or encourages illegal activity;
Promotes, encourages or engages in defamatory, harassing, abusive or otherwise objectionable behavior;
Promotes, encourages or engages in child pornography or the exploitation of children;
Promotes, encourages or engages in hate speech, hate crime, terrorism, violence against people, animals, or property, or intolerance of or against any protected class;
Promotes, encourages or engages in any spam or other unsolicited bulk email, or computer or network hacking or cracking;

Violates the Ryan Haight Online Pharmacy Consumer Protection Act of 2008 or similar legislation, or promotes, encourages or engages in the sale or distribution of prescription medication without a valid prescription;
Infringes on the intellectual property rights of another User or any other person or entity;
Violates the privacy or publicity rights of another User or any other person or entity, or breaches any duty of confidentiality that you owe to another User or any other person or entity;
Interferes with the operation of this Site or the Services found at this Site;
Contains or installs any viruses, worms, bugs, Trojan horses or other code, files or programs designed to, or capable of, disrupting, damaging or limiting the functionality of any software or hardware; or Contains false or deceptive language, or unsubstantiated or comparative claims, regarding Go Daddy or Go Daddy's Services.
You will not copy or distribute in any medium any part of this Site or the Services found at this Site, except where expressly authorized by Go Daddy.
You will not modify or alter any part of this Site or the Services found at this Site or any of its related technologies.
You will not access Go Daddy Content (as defined below) or User Content through any technology or means other than through this Site itself, or as Go Daddy may designate.
You agree to back-up all of your User Content so that you can access and use it when needed. Go Daddy does not warrant that it backs-up any Account or User Content, and you agree to accept as a risk the loss of any and all of your User Content.
You will not use this Site or the Services found at this Site, including any of Go Daddy's related technologies, for any commercial use without Go Daddy's express prior written consent.

Go Daddy reserves the right to modify, change, or discontinue any aspect of this Site or the Services found at this Site, including without limitation prices and fees for the same, at any time.

5. YOUR USE OF Go Daddy CONTENT AND USER CONTENT

In addition to the general rules above, the provisions in this Section 5 apply specifically to your use of Go Daddy Content and User Content posted to Go Daddy's corporate websites (i.e., those sites which Go Daddy directly controls or maintains). The applicable provisions are not intended to and do not have the effect of transferring any ownership or licensed rights (including intellectual property rights) you may have in content posted to your hosted websites.

Go Daddy Content. Except for User Content, the content on this Site and the Services found at this Site, including without limitation the text, software, scripts, source code, API, graphics, photos, sounds, music, videos and interactive features and the trademarks, service marks and logos contained therein ("Go Daddy Content"), are owned by or licensed to Go Daddy in perpetuity, and are subject to copyright, trademark, and/or patent protection in the United States and foreign countries, and other intellectual property rights under United States and foreign laws. Go Daddy Content is provided to you “as is”, “as available” and “with all faults” for your information and personal, non-commercial use only and may not be downloaded, copied, reproduced, distributed, transmitted, broadcast, displayed, sold, licensed, or otherwise exploited for any purposes whatsoever without the express prior written consent of Go Daddy. No right or license under any copyright, trademark, patent, or other proprietary right or license is granted by this Agreement. Go Daddy reserves all rights not expressly granted in and to the Go Daddy Content, this Site and the Services found at this Site, and this Agreement do not transfer ownership of any of these rights.

User Content. Some of the features of this Site or the Services found at this Site may allow Users to view, post, publish, share, store, or manage (a) ideas, opinions, recommendations, or advice (“User Submissions”), or (B) literary, artistic, musical, or other content, including but not limited to photos and videos (together with User Submissions, “User Content”). By posting or publishing User Content to this Site or to the Services found at this Site, you represent and warrant to Go Daddy that (i) you have all necessary rights to distribute User Content via this Site or via the Services found at this Site, either because you are the author of the User Content and have the right to distribute the same, or because you have the appropriate distribution rights, licenses, consents, and/or permissions to use, in writing, from the copyright or other owner of the User Content, and (ii) you do not violate the rights of any third party.

Security. You agree not to circumvent, disable or otherwise interfere with the security-related features of this Site or the Services found at this Site (including without limitation those features that prevent or restrict use or copying of any Go Daddy Content or User Content) or enforce limitations on the use of this Site or the Services found at this Site, the Go Daddy Content or the User Content therein.

6. Go Daddy'S USE OF USER CONTENT

The provisions in this Section 6 apply specifically to Go Daddy’s use of User Content posted to Go Daddy’s corporate websites (i.e., those sites which Go Daddy directly controls or maintains). The applicable provisions are not intended to and do not have the effect of transferring any ownership or licensed rights (including intellectual property rights) you may have in content posted to your hosted websites.

Generally. You shall be solely responsible for any and all of your User Content or User Content that is submitted through your Account, and the consequences of, and requirements for, distributing it.

With Respect to User Submissions. You acknowledge and agree that:
Your User Submissions are entirely voluntary.
Your User Submissions do not establish a confidential relationship or obligate Go Daddy to treat your User Submissions as confidential or secret.
Go Daddy has no obligation, either express or implied, to develop or use your User Submissions, and no compensation is due to you or to anyone else for any intentional or unintentional use of your User Submissions.

Go Daddy may be working on the same or similar content, it may already know of such content from other sources, it may simply wish to develop this (or similar) content on its own, or it may have taken / will take some other action.

Go Daddy shall own exclusive rights (including all intellectual property and other proprietary rights) to any User Submissions posted to this Site, and shall be entitled to the unrestricted use and dissemination of any User Submissions posted to this Site for any purpose, commercial or otherwise, without acknowledgment or compensation to you or to anyone else.

With Respect to User Content (Other Than User Submissions).

If you have a website hosted by Go Daddy or another service provider, you shall retain all of your ownership or licensed rights in User Content posted to your website.

However, if you post or publish your User Content to this Site, you authorize Go Daddy to use the intellectual property and other proprietary rights in and to your User Content to enable inclusion and use of the User Content in the manner contemplated by this Site and this Agreement. Accordingly, you hereby grant Go Daddy a worldwide, non-exclusive, royalty-free, sublicensable (through multiple tiers), and transferable license to use, reproduce, distribute, prepare derivative works of, combine with other works, display, and perform your User Content in connection with this Site and Go Daddy's (and Go Daddy's affiliates') business(es), including without limitation for promoting and redistributing all or part of this Site in any media formats and through any media channels without restrictions of any kind and without payment or other consideration of any kind, or permission or notification, to you or any third party. You also hereby grant each User of this Site a non-exclusive license to access your User Content (with the exception of User Content that you designate "private" or "password protected") through this Site, and to use, reproduce, distribute, prepare derivative works of, combine with other works, display, and perform your User Content as permitted through the functionality of this Site and under this Agreement. The above licenses granted by you in your User Content terminate within a commercially reasonable time after you remove or delete your User Content from this Site. You understand and agree, however, that Go Daddy may retain (but not distribute, display, or perform) server copies of your User Content that have been removed or deleted. The above licenses granted by you in your User Content are perpetual and irrevocable. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, Go Daddy shall not use any User Content that has been designated "private" or "password protected" by you for the purpose of promoting this Site or Go Daddy's (or Go Daddy's affiliates') business(es).

7. MONITORING OF CONTENT; ACCOUNT TERMINATION POLICY

Go Daddy generally does not pre-screen User Content (whether posted to a website hosted by Go Daddy or posted to this Site). However, Go Daddy reserves the right (but undertakes no duty) to do so and decide whether any item of User Content is appropriate and/or complies with this Agreement. Go Daddy may remove any item of User Content (whether posted to a website hosted by Go Daddy or posted to this Site) and/or terminate a User's access to this Site or the Services found at this Site for posting or publishing any material in violation of this Agreement, or for otherwise violating this Agreement (as determined by Go Daddy in its sole and absolute discretion), at any time and without prior notice. Go Daddy may also terminate a User's access to this Site or the Services found at this Site if Go Daddy has reason to believe the User is a repeat offender. If Go Daddy terminates your access to this Site or the Services found at this Site, Go Daddy may, in its sole and absolute discretion, remove and destroy any data and files stored by you on its servers.

8. ADDITIONAL RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

Go Daddy expressly reserves the right to deny, cancel, terminate, suspend, lock, or modify access to (or control of) any Account or Services (including the right to cancel or transfer any domain name registration) for any reason (as determined by Go Daddy in its sole and absolute discretion), including but not limited to the following: (i) to correct mistakes made by Go Daddy in offering or delivering any Services (including any domain name registration), (ii) to protect the integrity and stability of, and correct mistakes made by, any domain name registry, (iii) to assist with our fraud and abuse detection and prevention efforts, (iv) to comply with applicable local, state, national and international laws, rules and regulations, (v) to comply with requests of law enforcement, including subpoena requests, (vi) to comply with any dispute resolution process, (vii) to defend any legal action or threatened legal action without consideration for whether such legal action or threatened legal action is eventually determined to be with or without merit, or (viii) to avoid any civil or criminal liability on the part of Go Daddy, its officers, directors, employees and agents, as well as Go Daddy's affiliates.

Go Daddy expressly reserves the right to review every Account for excessive space and bandwidth utilization, and to terminate or apply additional fees to those Accounts that exceed allowed levels.

9. NO SPAM; LIQUIDATED DAMAGES

You acknowledge you have read, understand and agree to be bound by Go Daddy's Anti-Spam Policy referenced above and available here. You agree Go Daddy may immediately terminate any Account which it believes, in its sole and absolute discretion, is transmitting or is otherwise connected with any spam or other unsolicited bulk email. In addition, if actual damages cannot be reasonably calculated then you agree to pay Go Daddy liquidated damages in the amount of $1.00 for each piece of spam or unsolicited bulk email transmitted from or otherwise connected with your Account.

10. TRADEMARK AND/OR COPYRIGHT CLAIMS

Go Daddy supports the protection of intellectual property. If you would like to submit (i) a trademark claim for violation of a mark on which you hold a valid, registered trademark or service mark, or (ii) a copyright claim for material on which you hold a bona fide copyright, please refer to Go Daddy's Trademark and/or Copyright Infringement Policy referenced above and available here.

11. LINKS TO THIRD-PARTY WEBSITES

This Site and the Services found at this Site may contain links to third-party websites that are not owned or controlled by Go Daddy. Go Daddy assumes no responsibility for the content, terms and conditions, privacy policies, or practices of any third-party websites. In addition, Go Daddy does not censor or edit the content of any third-party websites. By using this Site or the Services found at this Site, you expressly release Go Daddy from any and all liability arising from your use of any third-party website. Accordingly, Go Daddy encourages you to be aware when you leave this Site or the Services found at this Site and to review the terms and conditions, privacy policies, and other governing documents of each other website that you may visit.

12. DISCLAIMER OF REPRESENTATIONS AND WARRANTIES

YOU SPECIFICALLY ACKNOWLEDGE AND AGREE THAT YOUR USE OF THIS SITE AND THE SERVICES FOUND AT THIS SITE SHALL BE AT YOUR OWN RISK AND THAT THIS SITE AND THE SERVICES FOUND AT THIS SITE ARE PROVIDED “AS IS”, “AS AVAILABLE” AND “WITH ALL FAULTS”. Go Daddy, ITS OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, EMPLOYEES, AND AGENTS DISCLAIM ALL WARRANTIES, STATUTORY, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, ANY IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF TITLE, MERCHANTABILITY, FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE AND NON-INFRINGEMENT. Go Daddy, ITS OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, EMPLOYEES, AND AGENTS MAKE NO REPRESENTATIONS OR WARRANTIES ABOUT (I) THE ACCURACY, COMPLETENESS, OR CONTENT OF THIS SITE, (II) THE ACCURACY, COMPLETENESS, OR CONTENT OF ANY SITES LINKED (THROUGH HYPERLINKS, BANNER ADVERTISING OR OTHERWISE) TO THIS SITE, AND/OR (III) THE SERVICES FOUND AT THIS SITE OR ANY SITES LINKED (THROUGH HYPERLINKS, BANNER ADVERTISING OR OTHERWISE) TO THIS SITE, AND Go Daddy ASSUMES NO LIABILITY OR RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE SAME.

IN ADDITION, YOU SPECIFICALLY ACKNOWLEDGE AND AGREE THAT NO ORAL OR WRITTEN INFORMATION OR ADVICE PROVIDED BY Go Daddy, ITS OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, EMPLOYEES, OR AGENTS (INCLUDING WITHOUT LIMITATION ITS CALL CENTER OR CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVES) WILL (I) CONSTITUTE LEGAL OR FINANCIAL ADVICE OR (II) CREATE A WARRANTY OF ANY KIND WITH RESPECT TO THIS SITE OR THE SERVICES FOUND AT THIS SITE, AND USERS SHOULD NOT RELY ON ANY SUCH INFORMATION OR ADVICE.

THE FOREGOING DISCLAIMER OF REPRESENTATIONS AND WARRANTIES SHALL APPLY TO THE FULLEST EXTENT PERMITTED BY LAW, AND shall survive any termination or expiration of this Agreement or your use of this Site or the Services found at this Site.

13. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

IN NO EVENT SHALL Go Daddy, ITS OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, EMPLOYEES, OR AGENTS BE LIABLE TO YOU OR ANY OTHER PERSON OR ENTITY FOR ANY DIRECT,

INDIRECT, INCIDENTAL, SPECIAL, PUNITIVE, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES WHATSOEVER, INCLUDING ANY THAT MAY RESULT FROM (I) THE ACCURACY, COMPLETENESS, OR CONTENT OF THIS SITE, (II) THE ACCURACY, COMPLETENESS, OR CONTENT OF ANY SITES LINKED (THROUGH HYPERLINKS, BANNER ADVERTISING OR OTHERWISE) TO THIS SITE, (III) THE SERVICES FOUND AT THIS SITE OR ANY SITES LINKED (THROUGH HYPERLINKS, BANNER ADVERTISING OR OTHERWISE) TO THIS SITE, (IV) PERSONAL INJURY OR PROPERTY DAMAGE OF ANY NATURE WHATSOEVER, (V) THIRD-PARTY CONDUCT OF ANY NATURE WHATSOEVER, (VI) ANY UNAUTHORIZED ACCESS TO OR USE OF OUR SERVERS AND/OR ANY AND ALL CONTENT, PERSONAL INFORMATION, FINANCIAL INFORMATION OR OTHER INFORMATION AND DATA STORED THEREIN, (VII) ANY INTERRUPTION OR CESSATION OF SERVICES TO OR FROM THIS SITE OR ANY SITES LINKED (THROUGH HYPERLINKS, BANNER ADVERTISING OR OTHERWISE) TO THIS SITE, (VIII) ANY VIRUSES, WORMS, BUGS, TROJAN HORSES, OR THE LIKE, WHICH MAY BE TRANSMITTED TO OR FROM THIS SITE OR ANY SITES LINKED (THROUGH HYPERLINKS, BANNER ADVERTISING OR OTHERWISE) TO THIS SITE, (IX) ANY USER CONTENT OR CONTENT THAT IS DEFAMATORY, HARASSING, ABUSIVE, HARMFUL TO MINORS OR ANY PROTECTED CLASS, PORNOGRAPHIC, “X-RATED”, OBSCENE OR OTHERWISE OBJECTIONABLE, AND/OR (X) ANY LOSS OR DAMAGE OF ANY KIND INCURRED AS A RESULT OF YOUR USE OF THIS SITE OR THE SERVICES FOUND AT THIS SITE, WHETHER BASED ON WARRANTY, CONTRACT, TORT, OR ANY OTHER LEGAL OR EQUITABLE THEORY, AND WHETHER OR NOT Go Daddy IS ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

IN ADDITION, You SPECIFICALLY ACKNOWLEDGE AND agree that any cause of action arising out of or related to this Site or the Services found at this Site must be commenced within one (1) year after the cause of action accrues, otherwise such cause of action shall be permanently barred.

IN ADDITION, You SPECIFICALLY ACKNOWLEDGE AND agree that in no event shall Go Daddy’s total aggregate liability exceed the total amount paid by you for the particular ServiceS that ARE the subject of the cause of action.

THE FOREGOING LIMITATION OF LIABILITY SHALL APPLY TO THE FULLEST EXTENT PERMITTED BY LAW, AND shall survive any termination or expiration of this Agreement or your use of this Site or the Services found at this Site.

14. INDEMNITY

You agree to protect, defend, indemnify and hold harmless Go Daddy and its officers, directors, employees, and agents, from and against any and all claims, demands, costs, expenses, losses, liabilities and damages of every kind and nature (including, without limitation, reasonable attorneys’ fees) imposed upon or incurred by Go Daddy directly or indirectly arising from (i) your use of and access to this Site or the Services found at this Site; (ii) your violation of any provision of this Agreement or the policies or agreements which are incorporated herein; and/or (iii) your violation of any third-party right, including without limitation any intellectual property or other proprietary right. The indemnification obligations under this section shall survive any termination or expiration of this Agreement or your use of this Site or the Services found at this Site.

15. FEES AND PAYMENTS

(A) GENERAL TERMS, INCLUDING AUTOMATIC RENEWAL TERMS

You agree to pay any and all prices and fees due for Services purchased at this Site at the time you order the Services. All prices and fees are non-refundable unless otherwise expressly noted, even if your Services are suspended, terminated, or transferred prior to the end of the Services term. Go Daddy expressly reserves the right to change or modify its prices and fees at any time, and such changes or modifications shall be posted online at this Site and effective immediately without need for further notice to you. If you have purchased Services for a period of months or years, changes or modifications in prices and fees shall be effective when the Services in question come up for renewal as further described below.

Where refunds are issued, Go Daddy's issuance of a refund receipt is confirmation that Go Daddy has submitted your refund to the Payment Method charged at the time of the original sale. You acknowledge and agree that the associated payment provider and/or individual issuing bank establish and regulate the time frames for posting your refund. Refund posting time frames may range from five (5) business days to a full billing cycle.

Except as prohibited in any product-specific agreement, you may pay for Services by providing a valid credit card, an electronic check (from your personal or business checking account, as appropriate), PayPal (as defined below), Alipay (as defined below), or by using Go Daddy’s “Good As Gold Prepaid Services” to establish a cash reserve for charge by Go Daddy (each, a “Payment Method”). For Services that offer “Express Checkout”, clicking the Express Checkout button will automatically place an order for that Service and charge the primary Payment Method on file for your Account. Confirmation of that order will be sent to the email address on file for your Account. Your Payment Method on file must be kept valid if you have any active Services in your Account.

If you are being billed on a monthly basis, your monthly billing date will be based on the date of the month you purchased the Services unless that date falls after the 28th of the month, in which case your billing date will be the 28th of each month.

In order to ensure that you do not experience an interruption or loss of Services, most Services offer an automatic renewal option. The automatic renewal option automatically renews the applicable Service for a renewal period equal in time to the original service period. For example, if your original service period is for one year, your renewal period will be for one year. While the details of the automatic renewal option vary from Service to Service, the Services that offer an automatic renewal option treat it as the default setting. Therefore, unless you disable the automatic renewal option, Go Daddy will automatically renew the applicable Service when it comes up for renewal and will take payment from the Payment Method you have on file with Go Daddy at Go Daddy’s then current rates, which you acknowledge and agree may be higher or lower than the rates for the original service period. In order to see the renewal settings applicable to you and your Services, simply log into your Account manager ("Account Manager") from this Site and follow the steps found here. You may enable or disable the automatic renewal option at any time. However, should you elect to disable the automatic renewal option and fail to manually renew your Services before they expire, you may experience an interruption or loss of Services, and Go Daddy shall not be liable to you or any third party regarding the same.

In addition, Go Daddy may participate in "recurring billing programs" or "account updater services" supported by your credit card provider (and ultimately dependent on your bank's participation). If you are enrolled in an automatic renewal option and we are unable to successfully charge your existing Payment Method, your credit card provider (or your bank) may notify us of updates to your credit card number and/or expiration date, or they may automatically charge your new credit card on our behalf without notification to us. In accordance with recurring billing program requirements, in the event that we are notified of an update to your credit card number and/or expiration date, Go Daddy will automatically update your payment profile on your behalf. Go Daddy makes no guarantees that we will request or receive updated credit card information. You acknowledge and agree that it is your sole responsibility to modify and maintain your Account settings, including but not limited to (i) setting your renewal options and (ii) ensuring your associated Payment Method (s) are current and valid. Further, you acknowledge and agree that your failure to do so, may result in the interruption or loss of Services, and Go Daddy shall not be liable to you or any third party regarding the same.

If for any reason Go Daddy is unable to charge your Payment Method for the full amount owed for the Services provided, or if Go Daddy is charged a penalty for any fee it previously charged to your Payment Method, you agree that Go Daddy may pursue all available lawful remedies in order to obtain payment. If you pay by credit card and if for any reason Go Daddy is unable to charge your credit card with the full amount owed for the Services provided, or if Go Daddy is charged back for any fee it previously charged to the credit card you provided, you agree that Go Daddy may pursue all available lawful remedies in order to obtain payment. You agree that the remedies Go Daddy may pursue in order to effect payment shall include, but not be limited to, immediate cancellation without notice to you of any domain names or Services registered or renewed on your behalf. Go Daddy reserves the right to charge you reasonable "administrative fees" or "processing fees" for (i) tasks Go Daddy may perform outside the normal scope of its Services, (ii) additional time and/or costs Go Daddy may incur in providing its Services, and/or (iii) your noncompliance with this Agreement (as determined by Go Daddy in its sole and absolute discretion). Typical scenarios include, but are not limited to, customer service issues that require additional personal time or attention, fees incurred by third-party payment providers such as PayPal, Alipay, and Certegy (as defined below), fees incurred as the result of chargebacks or other payment disputes brought by you, your bank, or a Payment Method processor, and disputes that require accounting or legal services. These administrative fees or processing fees will be billed to the Payment Method you have on file with Go Daddy.

Go Daddy may offer product-level pricing in various currencies; however, transaction processing is supported only in U.S. dollars and a select number of the currency options displayed on this Site ("Supported Currency" or “Supported Currencies”). If the currency selected is a Supported Currency, then the transaction will be processed in the Supported Currency and the pricing displayed during the checkout process will be the actual amount processed and submitted to your bank for payment. If the currency selected is not a Supported Currency, then the transaction will be processed in U.S. dollars and the pricing displayed during the checkout process will be an estimated conversion price at the time of purchase. In either case (whether the currency selected is a Supported Currency or not), if the transaction is processed in a currency that differs from the currency of your bank account, you may be charged exchange rate conversion fees by your bank. In addition, due to time differences between (i) the time you complete the checkout process, (ii) the time the transaction is processed, and (iii) the time the transaction posts to your bank statement, the conversion rates may fluctuate, and Go Daddy makes no representations or warranties that (a) the amount submitted to your bank for payment will be the same as the amount posted to your bank statement (in the case of a Supported Currency) or (B) the estimated conversion price will be the same as either the amount processed or the amount posted to your bank statement (in the case of a non-Supported Currency), and you agree to waive any and all claims based upon such discrepancies (including any and all claims for a refund based on the foregoing). In addition, regardless of the selected currency, you acknowledge and agree that you may be charged Value Added Tax ("VAT"), Goods and Services Tax ("GST"), or other localized fees and/or taxes, based on your bank and/or the country indicated in your billing address section.

(B) GOOD AS GOLD PREPAID SERVICES

Service Details

By using Good As Gold Prepaid Services, you may transfer funds to Go Daddy in order to fund your Good As Gold Prepaid Services account (“Good As Gold Account”). You may then use your Good As Gold Account to purchase any of Go Daddy’s Services. You may fund your Good As Gold Account by providing (i) a paper check (from your personal or business checking account, as appropriate), (ii) a money order, or (iii) a wire transfer. All payments must be for the full amount required at purchase. All paper checks and money orders may be delayed up to ten (10) business days until the money is credited, which may delay your use of the Services, and any paper check or money order that does not clear will result in a $25.00 processing fee by Go Daddy, which may be debited from your Good As Gold Account. The $25.00 processing fee is in addition to any fee(s) your bank may charge you.

You can verify the remaining funds in your Good As Gold Account at any time by logging into “Manage Your Account” or through the shopping cart on the Go Daddy website. Should you decide to terminate your Good As Gold Account and seek a refund, your refund will be made by check net of any discounts, including, but not limited to, reduced or waived wire transfer fees and/or the Cash Discount (as defined below).

You acknowledge that funds transferred to your Good As Gold Account will be held by Go Daddy and will not accrue or pay interest for your benefit. To the extent any interest may accrue, you understand and agree that Go Daddy shall be entitled to receive and keep any such amounts to cover costs associated with Good As Gold Prepaid Services.

You acknowledge that all transactions using Good As Gold Prepaid Services will be conducted in U.S. dollars and that it is your responsibility to arrange for foreign currency translations prior to funding your Good As Gold Account. Wire transfers received by Go Daddy in foreign currencies will be returned and you will be responsible for the cost of returning such funds. Your Good As Gold Account must be funded on an initial basis with no less than $100.00 paid in U.S. funds. You agree that you will be responsible for all wire transfer fees, both incoming and outgoing, associated with your Good As Gold Account. Any non-U.S. wire transfers may be subject to fees by your bank, intermediary banks, or Go Daddy's bank, which may reduce the amount of the money received by Go Daddy's bank and subsequently funded into your Good As Gold Account. Customers funding a Good As Gold Account with a wire of $1,000.00 or more shall not be subject to a $20.00 wire transfer processing fee from Go Daddy. You hereby expressly give Go Daddy permission to reduce your Good As Gold Account by the amount of wire transfer fees Go Daddy incurs in order to receive your funds. All fees are subject to change at any time, and such changes shall be posted online at this Site and effective immediately without need for further notice to you.

Good As Gold Accounts will receive a two percent (2%) discount on purchases (the "Cash Discount"). The Cash Discount will be reflected in your Good As Gold Account balance. Thus, purchases will reduce your Good As Gold Account balance by ninety-eight percent (98%) of the total purchase price of each transaction. For example, if your Good As Gold Account is funded with an initial amount of $100.00 and you make a $10.00 purchase, your Good As Gold Account will be reduced by only $9.80. Go Daddy reserves the right to discontinue or change the Cash Discount at any time, without notice.

Your Use of Good As Gold Prepaid Services

Use of funds in your Good As Gold Account can only be made through the Go Daddy purchase process at Go Daddy's website. Purchases may not be made unless there are sufficient, available funds in your Good As Gold Account at the time of purchase to cover the entire purchase amount, including any related fees as set forth herein or in other relevant agreements.

Additional funds may be added to your Good As Gold Account at any time. The minimum increment for funds transfers is $100.00.

You will be able to access your Good As Gold Account activity and records from the "Manage Your Account" link on Go Daddy's website. Your Good As Gold Account will show purchases and the amount of funds remaining in your Good As Gold Account. Go Daddy reserves the right at all times to disclose any information about your Good As Gold Account as Go Daddy deems necessary to satisfy any applicable law, regulation, legal process or governmental request, or to edit, refuse to post or to remove any information or materials, in whole or in part from your Good As Gold Account, in the sole and absolute discretion of Go Daddy.

© PAY BY CHECK (ELECTRONIC CHECK)

By using Go Daddy's pay by check option ("Pay By Check"), you can purchase Go Daddy Services using an electronic check (from your personal or business checking account, as appropriate). In connection therewith, you agree to allow Certegy Check Services, Inc. ("Certegy") to debit the full amount of your purchase from your checking account ("Checking Account"), which is non-refundable. Certegy will create an electronic funds transfer ("EFT") or bank draft which will be presented to your bank or financial institution for payment from your Checking Account. The Checking Account must be at a financial institution in the United States, and the check must be payable in U.S. dollars.

It is your responsibility to keep your Checking Account current and funded. You acknowledge and agree that (i) Certegy reserves the right to decline a transaction for any reason (including, but not limited to, payments that fail to go through as a result of your Checking Account no longer existing or not holding available/sufficient funds) and (ii) in such event, neither Certegy nor Go Daddy shall be liable to you or any third party regarding the same. If for any reason Certegy is unable to withdraw the full amount owed for the Services provided, you agree that Certegy and Go Daddy may pursue all available lawful remedies in order to obtain payment (plus applicable fees). Go Daddy is not responsible for the actions of Certegy. You agree that if the EFT or bank draft is returned unpaid, you will pay a service charge in accordance with the fees provided below, or as otherwise permitted by law. These fees may be debited from your Checking Account using an EFT or bank draft. All fees are in U.S. Dollars.

By clicking the box labeled “I agree” to the terms of the Pay By Check payment option, you authorize the information provided to be used for the creation of an EFT or bank draft and you authorize a debit of the full amount of your purchase from your Checking Account.

(D) PAY BY PAYPAL

By using Go Daddy’s pay by PayPal payment option (“PayPal”), you can purchase Go Daddy Services using PayPal. In connection therewith, you agree to allow PayPal to debit the full amount of your purchase from your PayPal account (“PayPal Account”) or from the credit card(s), bank account(s), or other allowed Payment Method(s) linked to your PayPal Account (“PayPal Funding Source”).

It is your responsibility to keep your PayPal Account and PayPal Funding Source current and funded, and your PayPal Account backed by a valid credit card. You acknowledge and agree that (i) PayPal reserves the right to decline a transaction for any reason (including, but not limited to, payments that fail to go through as a result of your PayPal Account or PayPal Funding Source no longer existing or not holding available/sufficient funds) and (ii) in such event, neither PayPal nor Go Daddy shall be liable to you or any third party regarding the same. If for any reason PayPal is unable to withdraw the full amount owed for your purchase, you agree that PayPal and Go Daddy may pursue all available lawful remedies in order to obtain payment. You agree that if the transaction is returned unpaid, you will pay a service charge of $25.00 or the maximum amount allowed by law, which may be debited from your PayPal Account or PayPal Funding Source.

By clicking the box labeled “I agree” to the terms of the PayPal payment option, you authorize a debit of the full amount of your purchase from your PayPal Account or PayPal Funding Source.

(E) PAY BY ALIPAY

By using Go Daddy’s pay by Alipay payment option (“Alipay”), you can purchase Go Daddy Services using Alipay. In connection therewith, you agree to allow Alipay to debit the full amount of your purchase from your Alipay account (“Alipay Account”) or from the credit card (s), bank account(s), or other allowed Payment Method(s) linked to your Alipay Account (“Alipay Funding Source”). In addition, you agree to allow Alipay to debit an “Exchange Rate Conversion Fee”, as well as any other fees or charges applicable to your agreement with Alipay (the Exchange Rate Conversion Fee, together with the other fees or charges, collectively known as the “Alipay Fees”), from your Alipay Account or Alipay Funding Source. The Alipay Fees are subject to change at any time by Alipay without notice to you by Go Daddy.

It is your responsibility to keep your Alipay Account and Alipay Funding Source current and funded. You acknowledge and agree that (i) Alipay reserves the right to decline a transaction for any reason (including, but not limited to, payments that fail to go through as a result of your Alipay Account or Alipay Funding Source no longer existing or not holding available/ sufficient funds) and (ii) in such event, neither Alipay nor Go Daddy shall be liable to you or any third party regarding the same. You agree that Alipay and Go Daddy will not be responsible for payments that fail to go through as a result of your Alipay Account or Alipay Funding Source no longer existing or holding insufficient funds. You acknowledge that Go Daddy will not attempt to fulfill the Services purchased by you until Go Daddy receives confirmation of payment from Alipay. You acknowledge there may be a gap of several hours between the time you place your order and the time Alipay confirms payment, including, but not limited to, if you use a bank account (via an “Online Bank Transfer”) as your Alipay Funding Source. If Go Daddy does not receive confirmation of payment from Alipay within twelve (12) hours, your order may be cancelled, at which time you will have to begin the purchase process again.

In addition, in the event (i) the Services (including domain names) in your shopping cart are no longer available for purchase by the time Go Daddy receives confirmation of payment from Alipay, or (ii) you change the Services (including domain names) in your shopping cart after Go Daddy redirects you to Alipay for payment (and, as a result, your purchase is either over-funded or under-funded), Go Daddy will automatically issue a partial refund (in the case of over-funding) or a full refund (in the case of under-funding) to your Alipay Account. If you receive a full refund (in the case of under-funding), you will have to begin the purchase process again. You acknowledge and agree that Alipay reserves the right not to refund the Alipay Fees associated with an over-funded or under-funded transaction. Accordingly, any refunds issued by Go Daddy may be net of the Alipay Fees unless otherwise specified.

By clicking the box labeled “I agree” to the terms of the Alipay payment option, you authorize a debit of the full amount of your purchase (as well as the Alipay Fees) from your Alipay Account or Alipay Funding Source.

16. UNCLAIMED PROPERTY; DORMANCY CHARGES

Please be advised that if a customer has an outstanding account balance (a credit positive balance) for three (3) years or more for any reason, and (i) Go Daddy is unable to issue payment to such customer or (ii) Go Daddy issued payment to such customer in the form of a paper check, but the check was never cashed, then Go Daddy shall turn over such account balance to the State of Arizona in accordance with state law. You acknowledge and agree that in either case (i) or (ii) above, Go Daddy may withhold a dormancy charge in an amount equal to the lesser of $15.00 or the total outstanding account balance associated with such customer.

17. SUCCESSORS AND ASSIGNS

This Agreement shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of the parties hereto and their respective heirs, successors and assigns.

18. NO THIRD-PARTY BENEFICIARIES

Nothing in this Agreement shall be deemed to confer any third-party rights or benefits.

19. U.S. EXPORT LAWS

This Site and the Services found at this Site are subject to the export laws, restrictions, regulations and administrative acts of the United States Department of Commerce, Department of Treasury Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”), State Department, and other United States authorities (collectively, “U.S. Export Laws”). Users shall not export or re-export, or allow the export or re-export of, the Services found at this Site in violation of any U. S. Export Laws. None of the Services found at this Site may be downloaded or otherwise exported or re-exported (i) into (or to a national or resident of) any country with which the United States has embargoed trade; or (ii) to anyone on the U.S. Treasury Department's list of Specially Designated Nationals or the U.S. Commerce Department's Denied Persons List, or any other denied parties lists under U.S. Export Laws. By using this Site and the Services found at this Site, you agree to the foregoing and represent and warrant that you are not a national or resident of, located in, or under the control of, any restricted country; and you are not on any denied parties list; and you agree to comply with all U.S. Export Laws (including “anti-boycott”, “deemed export” and “deemed re-export” regulations). If you access this Site or the Services found at this Site from other countries or jurisdictions, you do so on your own initiative and you are responsible for compliance with the local laws of that jurisdiction, if and to the extent those local laws are applicable and do not conflict with U.S. Export Laws. If such laws conflict with U.S. Export Laws, you shall not access this Site or the Services found at this Site. The obligations under this section shall survive any termination or expiration of this Agreement or your use of this Site or the Services found at this Site.

20. COMPLIANCE WITH LOCAL LAWS

Go Daddy makes no representation or warranty that the content available on this Site or the Services found at this Site are appropriate in every country or jurisdiction, and access to this Site or the Services found at this Site from countries or jurisdictions where its content is illegal is prohibited. Users who choose to access this Site or the Services found at this Site are responsible for compliance with all local laws, rules and regulations.

21. GOVERNING LAW; JURISDICTION; VENUE; WAIVER OF TRIAL BY JURY

Except for disputes governed by the Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Policy referenced above and available here, this Agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the federal law of the United States and the state law of Arizona, whichever is applicable, without regard to conflict of laws principles. You agree that any action relating to or arising out of this Agreement shall be brought in the state or federal courts of Maricopa County, Arizona, and you hereby consent to (and waive all defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction and forum non conveniens with respect to) jurisdiction and venue in the state and federal courts of Maricopa County, Arizona. You agree to waive the right to trial by jury in any action or proceeding that takes place relating to or arising out of this Agreement.

22. TITLES AND HEADINGS; INDEPENDENT COVENANTS; SEVERABILITY

The titles and headings of this Agreement are for convenience and ease of reference only and shall not be utilized in any way to construe or interpret the agreement of the parties as otherwise set forth herein. Each covenant and agreement in this Agreement shall be construed for all purposes to be a separate and independent covenant or agreement. If a court of competent jurisdiction holds any provision (or portion of a provision) of this Agreement to be illegal, invalid, or otherwise unenforceable, the remaining provisions (or portions of provisions) of this Agreement shall not be affected thereby and shall be found to be valid and enforceable to the fullest extent permitted by law.

KNIGHT OF MALTA, LEONARD HOROWITZ AND HIS JESUITICAL ARGUMENT SPEECH

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=t7uLc3_FY7A

[dohtml]<iframe width="480" height="390" src="http://www.youtube.com/embed/t7uLc3_FY7A" frameborder="0" allowfullscreen></iframe>[/dohtml]

Speech taken from the ConCon event.

Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz shows his true alliance is with the Vatican, the very real enemy of mankind. The biggest enemy of America destroying our lands whilst we speak under many veils and guises including their open policy whilst having a secret policy which the open policy shields nicely such as Horowitz's comments on the Vatican's vaccine open policy. Remember folks who created vaccines, it was Jesuit solder, Francis Xavier SJ and who was the first big pusher of vaccines? It was Jesuit soldier, Edward Jenner SJ. Are you shocked?

Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz is a very devious being who knows exactly what he's doing. Who controls the medical industry? Its The Worshipful Company of Apothecaries closely knit with The Worshipful Company of Barbers, both controlled by the Crown which has been controlled since the 14th Century by the KNIGHTS OF MALTA. Note how Leonard Horowitz is anti-Christian whilst he also trys to divert attention onto a Jew World Order rather than explaining how these people he's referring to are really Sabbatean Frankists who're Hofjuden to the Pope of Rome such as Jesuit trained Shimon Peres who handed the Vatican the city of Jerusalem in 1993 through the Oslo Accord which was secretly created by then Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger who used Shimon Peres and Edgar Bronfman to help bring this plan forth. For this victory of bringing the Latin Kingdom home the Vatican made Cardinal Ratzinger the Pope of Rome in 2005 under the title Pope Benedict XVI.

Michael Tsarion does a great job in highlighting whats going on with this Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz. Please remember who's your real enemy and that is Rome. True Christianity is the biggest enemy of Rome and always has been this is why the Roman Empire had to try to usurp it and try give the illusion that it was Christianity when it is proven its anti-Bible and anti-Christos.

Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz also is tied in with a Central Intelligence Agency handler by the name of Barbara Politis Hartwell who is pulling the strings of Sherri Kane and Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz. I'm sure if you look deep enough you'll also find the connection to Mossad along with the Anti-Defamation League and finally the Southern Poverty Law Center. This is why Knight of Malta Leonard Horowitz is attacking many people right now and making up illusionary lies. Its also a plan by his new handlers to destroy his work but he's lacking the intelligence to see this either through his own ego or via some kind of mind-re-framing upon himself by this crowd.

Please remember that J.P Morgan Chase & Co, Citibank and Goldman Sachs are all controlled by the Universal Postal Union in Berne, Switzerland one corner away from their master, the Papal Nuncio. This is all tied in with The Worshipful Company of International Bankers all controlled by the Crown which has been controlled since the 14th Century by the KNIGHTS OF MALTA.

By the way Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz attacks the greatest exposer of the Jesuits & Vatican called Eric Jon Phelps. One of his lame duck arguments is that Eric is part of some cult which uses the term 'brother' when addressing someone. First of all the brother is simply because Eric Jon Phelps is a true-Christian and nothing more. May I suggest Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz is trying to put Christianity down as a cult as Luciferians regularly do. May I also point out how Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz uses the term 'brother' more than once at this conference.

Whilst we expose this Knight of Malta tied in with Central Intelligence Agency handlers such as Barbara Hartwell along with other hardcore facts. Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz continues to spew hateful deceitful libel vomit. To understand the mindset of deceit this character has you should note how he's buying up domain names of those he's out to attack and libel with illusionary lies. So when someone looks for that being on the Internet they come across all these underhanded venomous lies from Knight of Malta, Leonard Horowitz. Please note how he has over 400 domain names registered mostly with Godaddy.

How anyone can still believe a word this man has said is beyond me, even if you've always followed him. Do you think he's pathetic of low intelligence or a smart being? Do you really think he's be this pathetic unless he was up to something and having an agenda? He knows exactly what he's doing unless as I said he's mind re-framed by his handlers. Do your homework people on the real conspiracy going on that most will not tell you or try to attack and cover up. May I remind you that without true-Christianity there would never have been a Leonard Horowitz in the beginning and most likely you'd never have owned a hifi, TV, VCR or computer to listen to his work. Its all thanks to the Protestant Reformation you have all these inventions and freedoms which covertly Rome is now openly taking away from you by the day. So think again people when you're taught by people like these to hate Christianity and the King James AV1611 Bible.

TheUnhivedMind - June 11, 2011 05:11 PM (GMT)

Lenny boy certainly has upped the stakes with this one. He went on GoDaddy and got himself the domain trueott.com and has created a site of nothing but complete falsehoods, aimed at discrediting research of Dr A. True Ott PhD and slandering him professionally. I can only imagine that Dr Ott's legal team is busy getting court orders to have the site removed and retaliatory actions being prepared in the form of lawsuits for damages. The accusations that Dr Ott has made death threats to anyone is just humorous. Lenny boy, you really should consider stopping smoking crystal meth. Just look at what it's done for Charlie Sheen.

-Zero to Hero

TheUnhivedMind - June 11, 2011 05:34 PM (GMT)

I've been made aware that the attack on myself and others by KNIGHT OF MALTA, Leonard Horowitz has nothing to do with British SiS directly. The attack is coming from the Anti-Defamation League along with the Southern Poverty Law Center with Mossad controlled by the Central Intelligence Agency. Please remember the CIA are the proxy army of the KNIGHTS OF MALTA headed in Rome and St John's Wood, England controlling the Crown.

who were BOTH SENT THIS EXACT post of MINE put together with MY TIME...this I so far have posted in more than 30 Yahoogroups .....

but then BOTH "so convieniently" DO NOT put MY NAME AS THE SOURCE on BOTH OF THEIR SITES - and this is SO TYPICAL of them to CHOP MY WORK UP into various parts so that MY NAME NEVER COMES UP as THE SOURCE - and I'M THE ONE TO TAKE MY TIME TO DO THE WHOIS on WWW.TRUEOTT.COM and I AM THE ONE to CALL DOC MARQUIS BEFORE the CON CON about the SHIT STORM that WOULD happen and AFTER the CON CON so that HE WROTE the REVIEW of WHOREwitz and his SLUT at CON CON 2011 that I WAS THE FIRST TO GET IT OFF HIS SITE AS IT WAS POSTED JUST MINUTES BEFORE I COPIED IT.....and this IDIOT Studer can't even BE ORIGINAL ENOUGH to REwrite MY OWN WORDS - DISHONESTY and PLAGIARISM don't seem to MATTER HERE to STUDER - EH ?....this is what I call A SNAKE and NOT one I would turn my back on.....and ALSO True...I find it VERY disconcerting - to say VERY least that you sure have a REAL HARD TIME to mention my name too EXCEPT when it's convienient for YOU to do so....remember that it's ME who is the one to FINALLY get WHOREwitz and Kane to go berserk last year...thus EXPOSING THEMSELVES for ALL to SEE.....

Perfect example of two Temporal Coadjutors who do the dirty work of the now dead Jesuit soldier, Pierre Teilhard De Chardin SJ. Both of these characters are highly anti-Christian with Russell Pine aka Jordan Maxwell being a Freemason using this alias based on the Knights Templar as exposed by Alan Watt.

Don Nicoloff and others. “Bonnie and Clyde” indeed. Who do you think you’re fooling??

FYI I was very close friends with Don Harkin – I was there with Ingri at his burial to offer my love and support — funny – I don’t remember seeing you nor “Clyde” anywhere around! How DARE YOU accuse Nicoloff of complicity in his death??? How dare you attempt to smear me for what OTHERS have written?

Thanks also for finally admitting the truth about Lenny “the Shill” Horowitz and his Knights of Malta affiliation. Truth is truth.

Notice how Len Horror-dipz and Scary Long Chops pain who by way can't breath through her wicked snoozle, attack Tim White with all the lies from two characters working for the National Security Agency's, Otis L. Johnson who's a ret USAF Lieutenant General. What they purposely lie about is the fact that Tim White was the one who blew the whistle on the heroin trade from Vietnam by the method of packing U.S. soldier bodies with heroin for trafficking. So can you see what a major twist these intelligentsia puppets are up to? When have you ever heard Eric Jon Phelps say he's been in any intelligence agency? Never! Why? Simply because he has not and this is a dirty smear campaign handled by sheep-dipped CIA agent, Barbara Politis Hartwell. Interesting how they attack White about cross-dressing yet Horror-dipz and Scary Long Chops Pain love to play sodomy with BDSM sex. Heres a tip to Horror-dipz, next time tape her nostrils up and she'll suffocate to death. A big snoozle but still can't breath through it, maybe she needs an elephant trunk? Looks like Horror-dipz health (joke) skills can be flushed down the toilet too. I guess Tim White called you because you death threated him live on air on a radio show, no doubt about that devious Scary Long Chops Pain.

Notice how they try to play down how many people there are who're against them right now and who they're attacking. This is to try to install doubts in the peoples minds when someone teaches information based on our knowledge or similar. May I remind you how Michael Tsarion exposed wonderfully Knight of Malta, Len Horowitz by highlighting his Jesuitical argument tatics at the ConCon conference. Now notice how he trumps up Scary Long Chops Pain claiming she's a great investigator. Well folks that tells you now that any material and books you have from Horror-dipz need to be burnt or stuffed in the garbage bin. Scary Long Chops Pain is one of the worst researchers I've ever witnessed in my life, I've seen young teens on YouTube do far greater work and far more useful work. So now we see them trying to riddle their way out of the fact they've been recorded in BDSM sex in an hotel room whilst still attached to the radio show phone system. Can't even admit their actions like decent people, why? Simply because they're devious vermin handled by the Central Intelligence Agency which they claim everyone else is. Hows about their handler, Barbara Politis Hartwell a sheep-dipped CIA agent smear artist.

No now we're all supposed to think women are inferior to men. Well thats an utter lie but typical of females like Scary Long Chops Pain who're your typical feminist types stuck up the arse of Rockefeller mind manipulation. Feminines who desire illusionary freedoms which destroy the family unit and society. As evident in our society today and now we see Rockefeller mind influence over in the Middle East with feminines thinking they should go this route and moving away from their religious beliefs which have kept their society strong and with successful families and good birth rates. Remember these elite families wish you, your culture, civilisation and society dead, just look at U.N Agenda 21 and the melting pot mess in the Western World. Only those with a strong religious belief still have strong birth rates for culture/race survival. So see where these two clowns are leading everyone? Remember that Knight of Malta, Len Horowitz promotes the New Age claptrap which Jesuit soldier, Pierre Teilhard De Chardin SJ desired out there for control and destruction of religion and the biggest enemy, the King James AV1611 Bible. Masculines have their role in society and feminines have theres and we don't want this mind re-framing claptrap which is destroying our families, birth rates, happiness and society. So brainwashed blinkered morons clap when Scary Long Chops Pain rants on trying to make out that females are superior over men based on a Praying Mantis and Black Widow Spider for God Sake, hows about talking about the Silver back Gorilla?

Isn't it interesting to see how unprofessional these people really are? This is why folks I've highlighted agents of deception like these for years now. Too many people believe they're Gods and truthsayers when in fact they work to the tune of the intelligentsia taking you to one level and then feeding you nothing further. This sloppy work being put out now by Horror-dipz well it really doesn't deserve our time its that bad. Come on CIA if you want to hit us then use someone better than this please. Its good actually because we no longer need to highlight this opposame, he's done it all himself and now people are turning away from him big time and thinking he's an utter idiot.

So once again we see how this Horror-dipz is completely a liar as he tries once again to smear Eric Jon Phelps with utter nonsense that Eric claims Jews run the Vatican. What utter claptrap nonsense and how does he think he can get away with such blatant lies like this? Eric is attacked by most people who attack the Jews as ruling the New World Order. These Anti-Jew hating Romanist Doctrine followers claim Eric is in favour of jews and in league with Jews for God sake. Great research Horror-dipz and Scary Long Chops Pain real great research not. Eric is one of the biggest promoters of the Torah-Judaics as spoke of in the King James AV1611 Bible and texts its based upon as God's chosen people. The same Bible which bought freedoms around the World never seen before including the amazing America which is hated by the bloodlines for its freedoms to this day. I get this folks, you have one lot call you a Jew then another lot call you something else, but you cannot be both at the same time can you? Its PATHETIC! Just real sloppy unproductive claptrap and I hope horror-dipz goes down the pan and takes his long chops can't breath properly ant eater with him. So Scary Pain you think you can rumble do you? Rumble with me you lying piece of garbage and am I right that you're probably a Sabbatean Frankist Talmudist false Jew? You're certainly controlling and protecting a Romanist piece of garbage who's a product of Rome.

Notice how Horror-dipz has to throw in "where is the love, where is we the people", again my I remind you that America is a Republic by the people for the people thanks to the King James AV1611 and Protestant Reformation. So he wants the love so he can promote his hippy Pierre Teilhard De Chardin SJ claptrap 528hz on you. Notice Scary Long Chops Pain pushes the oneness whilst trumping up her feminism claptrap once again. These people don't want others to research areas such as Sabbatean Frankists or the Vatican they want you just all agreeing its a Brotherhood of Darkness and sitting back going around like a gerbil singing hippy tunes and playing 528hz all day long. They mock a single entity running this World conspiracy when it has been this way for centuries. Horror-dipz detests Christianity and tries to fool the dumbed down that believing and following the King James AV1611 Bible is the work of the Church of Satan. Do people fall for this? Surely not? If the answer is yes then my God the World has become a very sick and twisted place.

Folks what this shows is that our work has had a great impact on the real truth scene. Our knowledge was never known out there for people to finally start to see the clearer picture. The intelligentsia is threatened as they DO NOT have any control over us and therefore we are loose cannons against them. We have no financial support from any agency unlike the typical alternative media out there who are all threating. People are now coming to our information first and sticking with it as it is the truth, they can research it and see clearly whats going on, they also have the King James AV1611 Bible. People also know that the New World Order wants rid of Christianity and therefore you should know the King James AV1611 Bible is the enemy of enemies and it is to the New World Order. True-Christians following the King James AV1611 Bible are the only chance of defeating the enemy as they've done before. We have the answers, we know the enemy and we're battlers not suck up puppets like the rest of them. When you have no funding or ties then you have no one controlling you. So now the Southern Poverty Law Center, Anti Defamation League, Mossad and CIA try to smear us all hoping to grab new comers before they get to our information so they can twist their minds like they've always done. I'm just so happy its occurring because it shows we've won and are winning and it also aids myself in knowing I'm on the right track with my knowledge and teachings.

All I have to say to finish off is that the true Jesus Christ (not the Catholic pagan fraud) will win the battle. All you real Satanists out there all you'll do is empower the likes of myself and Eric further to making sure we win this battle. Puritan truth will come forth and bring real peace and moral hetrosexual, large family Nation state societies Worldwide. The World Scary Long Chops Pain and Horror-dipz with his Amalfi medals of ego desire is in fact hell holes like what we're in and heading too regardless of their Chardin fronts.

So here we have a clear indication that Sherri is more than willing to play fast & loose with the facts. You think maybe this is the only time that Sherri Kane has made something up?

Here is Sir Leonard of the Swamp in a nutshell. According to Don N. his grandmother and grandfather "Solomon" Horowitz emigrated to America in 1906. The family came to Ellis Island from ROMANIA. I have traced the genealogy of these parasites, as has researchers such as Dr. Harrell Rhome. They are descendants of the Turkish HUNS, not of the Hebrews of Palestine. The family is simply PURE-BLOOD, IN-BRED, KHAZARIAN WORLD-CONTROL FREAKS!! Bloodline of David? Absolutely false declaration in every possible way. The Big Lie that the Rothschild Leaches have cultivated, nurtured, and promulgated for centuries is that they are the "Chosen People of God" -- The BLUE-BLOOD Elite who alone have the brains to rule the world!!

Sir Leonard of the Hospital's MySpace profile reads: I was born in Philadelphia, 6:02PM, June 20, 1952 and given the Hebrew name Arya ben Shlomo ha Levi. In the tradition of my lineage, my father was also a “ben Shlomo,” meaning "Son of Solomon," as were his forefathers--ancestors of King Solomon. This makes me, and my children, of the royal Davidian bloodline. We are descendants of King David and blood cousins to Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ, our Messiah. This identity bears substantially on my conduct, which I pray is in Divine service to humanity. The "ha Levi" portion of my name designates Levitical priesthood. My family’s genealogy reveals the first Horowitz was Isaiah ben Moshe ha Levi. This denotes blood lineage beginning with Moses the Levi Priest, to whom our Creator provided His Ten Commandments to help administer Divine Law. ..

WHAT???? Born on the BLACK SABBATH of the Summer Solstice - at exactly 6:02 pm on 6/20? Symbolic? Yes indeed to those who practice Satanism. "Levitical priesthood" is a covert claim of the high priesthood of Melchizedek - which is all about ritual black magic and the Kaballa magic Cube of geometry. The great horned owl is their "familiar" spirit - the intercessor to their deity Lucifer/Baal. That is why Horowitz proudly posed in his black tux with the owl.

Furthermore, Horowitz is classic NPD --- Narcissistic Personality Disorder - which is very common malady with MK Ultra victims of Khazarian ethnicity. Yes, and this makes him quite DANGEROUS, folks. Check it out:
What is narcissistic personality disorder?
Narcissism is a term used to describe a focus on the self and self-admiration that is taken to an extreme. The word “narcissism” comes from a Greek myth in which a handsome young man named Narcissus sees his reflection in a pool of water and falls in love with it.
Narcissistic personality disorder is one of a group of conditions called dramatic personality disorders. People with these disorders have intense, unstable emotions, and a distorted self-image. Narcissistic personality disorder is further characterized by an abnormal love of self, an exaggerated sense of superiority and importance, and a preoccupation with success and power. However, these attitudes and behaviors do not reflect true self-confidence. Instead, the attitudes conceal a deep sense of insecurity and a fragile self-esteem. People with this personality disorder also tend to set unrealistic goals.
What are the symptoms of narcissistic personality disorder?
In many cases, people with narcissistic personality disorder:
Are self-centered and boastful
Seek constant attention and admiration
Consider themselves better than others
Exaggerate their talents and achievements
Believe that they are entitled to special treatment
Are easily hurt but might not show it Might take advantage of others to achieve their goals
Other common traits of narcissistic personality disorder include the following:
Preoccupation with fantasies that focus on unlimited success, power, intelligence, beauty, or love
Belief that he or she is “special” and unique, and can only be understood by other special people
Expectation that others will automatically go along with what he or she want Inability to recognize or identify with the feelings, needs, and viewpoints of others
Envy of others or a belief that others are envious of him or her
Hypersensitivity to insults (real or imagined), criticism, or defeat, possibly reacting with rage, shame, and humiliation
Arrogant behavior and/or attitude
What causes narcissistic personality disorder?
The exact cause of narcissistic personality disorder is not known. However, many mental health professionals believe it results from extremes in child rearing. For example, the disorder might develop as the result of excessive pampering, or when a child’s parents have a need for their children to be talented or special in order to maintain their own self-esteem. On the other end of the spectrum, narcissistic personality disorder might develop as the result of neglect or abuse and trauma inflicted by parents or other authority figures during childhood. The disorder usually is evident by early adulthood.

SIR (Chevalier) Leonard G. Horowitz — NOT!!!!
The Truth EXPOSED!!! He's Really an NPD.

June 22nd 2011
http://atrueott.wordpress.com/2011/06/22/s...-really-an-npd/

[dohtml] This expose is in response to declarations found on Horowitz' own website postings (one of 300 URL's he controls) found at:
http://web.mac.com/len15/Newsletter_%26_Blog/Knighting.html
When the heat is on, look for this website of the Grand Narcissist Poo-Bah to disappear, just as Sherri Kane's fraudulent personal profile disappeared after investigations exposed that much of it was bogus mythology as well.
Can you handle the TRUTH folks? For what it's worth, here it is.
LEONARD G. HOROWITZ IS NOT, I REPEAT, NOT a "Knight of Malta". That's right, he's not! He's not even a Knight Hospitaler. IT'S ALL A FRAUD. A SCAM. A perversion instigated by a truly sick-minded narcissist of the highest international order. How's that for a stunning revelation? It's all true, folks.
It took a full day of phone calls, and calling in favors from TRUE PATRIOTS I know and admire greatly in Washington, D.C. — but I have done the research. I have done my "due diligence". The light of TRUTH will now shine on these crooked shysters. It is truly eye-popping.

In a simple nutshell, the individual who "knighted" Leonard G. is a man named Charles McWilliams. He claims to be a M.D. but is actually a huge fraud. He received his "credentials" solely from a diploma mill in Sri Lanka called the "OPEN" International University for Complementary Medicine" – the OIUCM (we-see-um). Indeed – from the largess of Mr. McWilliams, and a whopping donation of $400 – ANYONE can don the black robe with White Cross, travel to NYC, and receive a TOTALLY MEANINGLESS "KNIGHT OF MERIT" award (or DAME of merit if a female) compliments of the bogus Open International University for Complementary Medicine!

From the Chiropractic watchdog website: http://www.dynamicchiropractic.com/mpacms/...40596

"The Sri Lanka Medical Council stated that 'the 'OIU Medical School Columbo, S.L.' listed in Dr. Holder's resume did _not_ exist (Emphasis his.)

"A colleague determined that there was an 'OUI' in Sri Lanka, but it is called Open International University for complementary medicine, and it is not an accredited medical school.' For an additional fee of $400-US, outstanding students are awarded an M.D. (which is their abbreviation for Masters Degree) or other degrees such as B.Science, or extra credentials. (Parenthetical comment his.)

"We were told that 'OIU' has additional prizes for sale such as 'the Albert Schweitzer Award' and 'Knighthood' (for an additional fee of $400-US)." (Parenthetical comment his.)

Now doesn't that make you feel all warm and fuzzy??? I submit it all makes sense. If Horowitz truly was a Knight of Malta – he wouldn't announce it on the internet with pictures of the ceremony itself the way he did. The Sovereign Order of Malta, which is SECRET MILITARY SOCIETY, would never allow such a thing of a brand-new knight – who takes very severe blood oaths of Jesuit secrecy with the penalty of death for overt disclosure. However, an individual afflicted with NPD (Narcissist Personality Disorder) would not hesitate to trumpet the bogus proceeding from the rooftops. More self-aggrandizement. Nothing less. Is it harmless chicanery? You decide for yourself.

Wikipedia's excellent historical entry on the Knights Hospitaler reveals the bogus operations. Quote: "The large passage fees collected by the American Association of "SMOM" in the early 1950s may well have tempted a man named Charles Pichel to create his own "Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, Knights Hospitaller" in 1956. ^{[4]} Pichel avoided the problems of being an imitation of "SMOM" by giving his organization a mythical history, claiming that the American organization he led had been founded within the Russian tradition of the Knights Hospitaller in 1908; a spurious claim, but which nevertheless misled many including some academics. In truth, the foundation of his organisation had no connection to the Russian tradition of the Knights Hospitaller. Once created, the attraction of Russian Nobles into membership of Pichel's 'Order' lent some plausibility to his claims.

These organizations have led to scores of other self-styled Orders. Two offshoots of the Pichel Order were successful in allegedly gaining the patronage of the late King Peter II of Yugoslavia, and King Michael of Romania. ^{[4]}
Did you get that fellow seekers of Truth?? Didn't the KHAZARIAN BOLSHEVIKS in reality exterminate ALL OF THE ROMANOFF FAMILY in a very bloody coup? Of course they did – but that hasn't stopped scam artists from preying on the gullible. What is it with America's infatuation with ROYALTY, HMM??
Here is the late "Prince Michael Romanoff of Romania" and HIS true identity exposed:

Restauranteur, Famous Imposter. He claimed to have been notable people including Rasputin's Assassin, the son of British Prime Minister William Gladstone and even a cousin of Czar Nicholas II. In 1927 after careers in farming to peddling papers, he moved to Hollywood where he opened a restaurant and began a career as a somewhat actor. It was found later that "Michael Romanoff" was indeed a fake and that his real name was Harry F. Gerguson, the son of Russian Jewish immigrants.
You see, there are many people claiming to be Michael Romanoff. They are all Khazarian impostors after the order of Bernie Madoff.
It figures Leonard Horrowitz would be involved in something like this.
Here is what the NPD Horowitz himself posted concerning this sham knighting ceremony – with my comments in brackets.
KNIGHTING ORDER
Sovereign Orthodox Order of the Knights Hospitaller of St. John of Jerusalem KNIGHTING DATE
November 12, 2006
KNIGHTING PLACE
Cathedral of the Holy Protection, [Actually the correct name is Cathedral of the Holy VIRGIN Protection -- Ott]
New York City, New York
A day we won't forget
Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz was honored with the official title "Knight of Merit" by the former

Grand Priory in St. Petersburg, high Imperial Protector his highness Prince Michael of Russia. The formal ceremony of investiture, in which nearly 40 new knights were similarly recognized, occurred under the Order established in New York by Russian nobility headed by Count Nicholas Bobrinskoy (recently deceased). The Order has remained under the protection of Prince Andrew, a double Romanoff, the oldest son of the Grand Duke Alexander Mikailovich. Now his eldest grandson, Prince Michael Romanoff, serves as the organization's Sovereign Protector. [All bogus MYTH HISTORY --- Ott]
For this ceremony, as a tribute to Nicholas Bobrinskoy, HH Prince Michael of Russia flew in from Australia to stand in for the deceased Count, and will continue to do so until a new Grand Prior is elected by all the Knights and Dames in good standing.

It's all a huge scam, folks. Wow!!!
Now let's take a deeper look into the We-See-Um (OIU CM) This little club appears to be a rogues gallery of purveyors of sleight-of-hand and magic – including witchcraft. Just look at their official logo and history, and you can get an idea of their true agenda. Their logo is of all things, a Pentagram on a midnight black background – the sacred geometry of the International Satanist. (The HEXAGRAM was already taken, you see!)

OICUM Seal and Logo

From the OICUM Website:
"This International Organization formed in 1962 congruent to the policy objectives of the WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION. In 1962 The WHO and UNICEF sponsored an International Conference in USSR at Alma Ata, at the University of Kazakhstan. At this conference the ALMA ATA DECLARATION defined a global strategy for public health and preventive medicine which epitomized as "HEALTH FOR ALL BY 2000 A.D."
It was decided in 1987 to constitute The Open International University for Complementary Medicines with special emphasis to conduct an intensive clinical training program on various Complimentary and alternative therapies world wide, working with conjunction with other affiliated originations. The Sri Lanka Government was requested to enact legislation to enable The Open International University for Complementary Medicines to be constituted as a privately funded postgraduate institute. In March, 1988 onwards, degrees are being conferred and training courses are being conducted under the U.N. theme “Health for all by 2000 A.D.”

Oh yes, indeed – doesn’t this sound like a most fantastic “humanitarian” agenda? Imagine, top U.N. Khazarians composing the W. H.O. meeting in Soviet Russia during the height of the “Cold War” – and there issuing something called the “Alma Ata” Declaration. Alma = fostering mother. This then is the heart and soul of the New International Order. To place everybody in the world under a universal system of “HEALTH CARE” as directed by the Club of Rome and the World Health (Hell) Organization!! Isn’t it funny how COMMUNISTS and SOCIALISTS from Adolf Hitler to Barack Obama seem inordinately pre-occupied with providing universal “Health Care”??
Here is just one small snippet from this “Alma-Ata Decree”: “The International Conference on Primary Health Care calls for urgent and effective national and international action to develop and implement primary health care throughout the world and particularly in developing countries in a spirit of technical cooperation and in keeping with a New International Economic Order.
A WORLD-WIDE HEALTH CARE PLAN will ring the cash registers of Big Pharma like never before. Don’t forget who Horrowitz NPD worked for as their “TOP ADVISER” before moving to Sandpoint, Idaho — the world’s largest health-care provider - HENRY SCHEIN INC.
DO YOU GET IT YET, PEOPLE???? Leonard G. Horowitz is without a doubt one of the Club of Rome’s premier agent provocateurs. They awarded him their bogus BS “KNIGHT OF MERIT”!!! He has the credentials legitimately of course – a master’s degree in PUBLIC HEALTH from HARVARD, no less. His job, I submit, is to identify, monitor, then attack and destroy LEGITIMATE NATURAL HEALTH PRACTITIONERS AND NUTRITIONISTS — for they are the big monkey wrench in the gears.
In 2006, just a few months before they inducted Horowitz into their hall of dishonor, these arch-criminal wolves-in-sheep’s-clothing held their international conference in NYC. Because it was held on American soil, there was a press release on the event – but this “International Congress” meets somewhere on the planet each and every year just as the Bilderbergers do as well. It’s funny how not even the alternative media is exposing this little shindig (that is until now.) From their 2006 Press Release we read:
“Prof. Dr. Dame [yep, she too has been "knighted" and paid her $400 black-robe rental fee --- Ott] Linda Lancaster, Chancellor of OIUCM USA, says, “Teaching peace must begin with health practitioners. As a community, we each need to stay focused on our inner environment and bring peace awareness to our patients.” She adds, “We are continually challenged by the destruction of the essence of man. Through OIUCM’s World Congress of Integrated Medicine we aim to support peace through integration of all medicines worldwide.”
“Many prominent international dignitaries, doctors and humanitarians will also participate in the World Congress, including Peace Ambassador and Economist Alfredo Sfeir-Younis of the World Bank; Rima Laibow, M.D., Medical Director of the Natural Solutions Foundation, who will discuss the threat to global food and nutrition quality posed by worldwide CODEX Alimentarius. celebrity actor Anthony Edwards an Emmy Award-winning American actor and director, who will talk about latest research on autism and Prof. Dr. Sir Charles McWilliams who will share the very fascinating history of the Order of the Knights of Malta Knights of Malta and Knights of Rhodes.

Excuse me. What is an executive of the Rothschild WORLD BANK doing rubbing shoulders with the likes of Rima Laibow???

<hr align="center" size="2" width="100%" />

There it is folks. How much more evidence do you need to put a stop to the clearly criminally fraudulent antics of Leonard Horrowitz NPD??

Pippa Middleton: naked photos leaked on Internet

May 11, 2011 4:18 AM HKT
http://hken.ibtimes.com/articles/143582/20...nce-william.htm

Scandal seems to be following the Middleton Family.

Last week topless photos of Pippa Middleton surfaced online and then there were naked photos of her brother James Middleton.

OK! Magazine is reporting that naked photos of Kate Middleton's sister have surfaced and are being "shopped around." The Telegraph newspaper is reporting that the Middleton "family is furious at what they see as a betrayal," according to a friend of the family.

Pippa's popularity boomed after Kate Middleton and Prince William's wedding on April 29. Immediately following the wedding there was buzz about Pippa's fit figure and even some Facebook groups praising her good looks.

Several days after the wedding photos of Pippa partying in a purple bra while dancing with a topless man surfaced.

"Those images were withdrawn from the entire market," said John Carmillo of Zuma Press to the Telegraph. "They were only on the market for a few days. They got too popular that's why they were withdrawn."

According to OK! Magazine, the Middleton family is doing whatever they can from having the photos circulate.

"James and Pippa are embarrassed. How were they supposed to know when these pictures were taken that they would be put under such scrutiny," the Telegraph reports.

In addition, photos of Pippa topless while vacationing with her sister and Prince William in Ibiza, Spain in 2006 have been obtained by The Daily.

SO LONG PIPPA, PRINCE HARRY HAS A NEW GIRL

Prince Harry is rumoured to be dating Florence Brudenell-Bruce

PIPPA Middleton can kiss her hopes of bagging Prince Harry goodbye after it was revealed the young Prince was in a new relationship with Jenson Button's old flame.

Prince Harry has said goodbye to ex-girlfriend Chelsy Davy and moved onto pastures new with Florence Brudenell-Bruce, former partner of Formula One racing driver Jenson Button.

The Prince and the model have been friends for years but only became an item after his on-off romance with Zimbabwean student Chelsy Davy, 25, ran its course.

The couple have been meeting up at the £2.5 million home of Florence – who is a descendant of the seventh Earl of Cardigan - in Notting Hill, West London.

While St James's Palace refuses to comment on Harry's personal life, Florence would only say: "There's not much to say."

Prince Harry is rumoured to be dating Florence Brundenell-Bruce Prince Harry, 26 – whose older brother Prince William married Duchess Kate in April – had recently claimed he had no time for love as he is too busy with his work as an Apache helicopter pilot.

Asked about rumours he had been dating Catherine's sister Pippa Middleton, he replied: "Pippa? Ha! No, I am not seeing anyone at the moment. I'm 100 per cent single.

"I'm working a lot at the moment, so dating and watching TV are the last things I have time for."

Microsoft and Crown Agents join forces to boost international trade

http://www.crownagentsusa.com/Modules/News...contentID=19456

At this week's World Customs Organisation's annual IT Conference and Exhibition in Seattle, Crown Agents and Microsoft signed an agreement to develop an innovative foreign trade single window solution.

The Foreign Trade Single Window, initially being launched in a central Asian country, combines Crown Agents trips™ software with Microsoft's Dynamics CRM and SharePoint Server to provide faster, more secure trade and facilitate economic growth.

Attending the event (11th May - 13th May 2011) was Frank McCosker, Microsoft's director of Global Strategic Accounts, along with Crown Agents' trips™' business director Nick Small, who delivered a presentation on Cloud Computing: What it is. What it isn't.

Small said that Crown Agents is delighted to be working with Microsoft on the design and delivery of innovative solutions for revenue agencies across the emerging markets.

"Combining our considerable experience in designing solutions that maximise business value with the agile and innovative platforms provided by Microsoft enables us to rapidly improve the capabilities of forward-looking revenue agencies. We look forward to bringing these combined strengths to bear on mission-critical programs across the globe," he said.

Is the internet bringing out your dark side?

Do you send emails and texts without thinking? Or impulsively splurge online? A new book says technology is changing our personalities - for the worse

By Marianne Power
Last updated at 11:27 AM on 27th June 2011
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/femail/article-...ies--worse.html

Back in the good old days, celebrities used to get drunk at awards ceremonies, hurl insults and occasionally punches at each other. But these days the internet is the virtual bar where they brawl.

Just recently, columnist Julie Burchill accused Lily Allen of being an ‘over-privileged cry-baby’. The pop star retaliated on Twitter by accusing Julie of being ‘an ignorant and bitter old troll’.

Piers Morgan and Rio Ferdinand traded blows for four hours on Twitter while Wayne Rooney responded to a Liverpool fan’s insults by tweeting: ‘I’ll put you to sleep in ten seconds.’

But it’s not just celebrities who are using social networking sites for public slanging matches. Cuckolded plumber Ian Puddick was cleared of harassment after he used the internet to circulate graphic details of his wife’s affair.

This might be an extreme example, but it seems online spite is a growing trend.

My friend Sarah was horrified at being described in a chatroom as ‘facially hideous’, ‘ugly’ and ‘chunky’ after her photo was used in an online article.

A colleague, Beth, received a message from someone she did not know telling her ‘the world had enough of her inane Facebook updates'. In response, Beth says: 'I felt physically sick when I saw it. It was so hateful and unexpected. Maybe my updates weren't that interesting, but is that a good enough reason to be so horrible?

'The fact someone went to the effort of creating an anonymous email account to send the message made it more sinister. I cried for the weekend.'

'The web fuels our delusions of grandeur, making us cruel, narcissistic and even childlike'

So why is the internet bringing out the worst in us? Elias Aboujaoude, a doctor at Stanford University's school of medicine in the U.S., believes it is transforming our personalities. He warns many of us are developing 'e-personalities' that are like the worst, drunken versions of ourselves.

'Our e-personalities are an uninhibited version of who we are, a collection of personality traits that make us more child-like, impulsive, darker and narcissistic,' he says.

'It comes alive in our emails, tweets, texts and choice of Facebook friends. We binge-shop on Amazon and eBay because it's so easy, routinely lie about ourselves on Facebook and get into nasty fights in chatrooms.

'We are anonymous, so it's so easy to think that what we say has no consequences. Online stalking of ex-partners is also becoming common. It feels rewarding, until you realise you're probably being stalked, too.

'This distorted version of who we are doesn't just stay online; it seeps into our real lives, too.'

CYBER BULLYING

One of the more disturbing results of this mindset is online bullying.

'We are quicker to bully each other in chatrooms or on Twitter, as there is this notion that what happens online is all a bit of a game — that it's not real,' says Dr Aboujaoude.

'Cartoon graphics and childish language add to this illusion. We are often anonymous and always invisible, so we state things we would not say to people's face. We lash out with no thought for the hurt we might cause. The speed of the internet means we act before taking time to engage our brains and consider the consequences. It's too easy to fire off a rash email. When we are online, we bypass the part of the brain that would normally make us count to ten before reacting.'

But these incidents of lashing out aren't just something that last moments or are confined to the internet.

‘Society is becoming more uncivil — people are ruder,’ adds Dr Aboujaoude. ‘We should ask ourselves if one reason for this is because of what we do online and how we act on our blogs and in chatrooms. How can manners be conveyed in a tweet?

‘Is this affecting the way we communicate with people in the real world?’

ACT NOW, THINK LATER

Another trait encouraged by the internet is impulsivity. This is why we fire off rude emails without thinking and spend hundreds of pounds on clothes we don’t need. ‘These are impulsive gestures and we live to regret them,’ says Dr Aboujaoude.

‘Online shopping, gambling and infidelity are the most common examples of impulsivity online.

‘These impulses have always been there, they’re just much easier to access now.

‘Virtual money makes it easier to be financially reckless, while dating sites make it easy for anyone — especially people in urban areas — to have casual relationships.’

ONLINE EGOMANIA

The idea that everything is at our fingertips is fuelling delusions of grandeur. ‘Anything we want, from a recipe to a partner, can be found at the press of a button,’ says Dr Aboujaoude.

The notion we can accomplish anything spills into our opinion of ourselves, which is why we get frustrated when things don’t happen instantly or go our way.

‘I’ve seen people who throw away real relationships because they are living under the illusion that love is easier to find — you just log on to a dating site and have thousands of options.

‘Why work on what you have now when you can get something new?’

IT’S ALL ABOUT ME

The narcissism brought on by the internet — the feeling that the world revolves around you — can make us less inclined to make real relationships work.

‘The feeling that the world is our audience is intoxicating. We have 300 friends on Facebook and 2,000 people following our tweets, which makes us feel the world can’t wait to hear what we say,’ says Dr Aboujaoude.

‘And then there’s the i-centric nature of the internet. From iTunes to the iPhone, the digital world is geared for you. More than ever, technology aims to satisfy our every need.

‘Not only can you choose an online news source, you can specify which type of story you want on the front page and which ones you want filtered out. As we get accustomed to having even our most minor needs accommodated to this degree, we are growing more needy and feel more entitled.’

BACK TO THE PLAYGROUND

While part of being mature should mean restraining our worst instincts, Dr Aboujaoude believes the internet is stopping us from doing that because it makes us more childish.

VIRTUAL REALITY

In 2010, 60 per cent of UK adults (30.1 million people) accessed the internet every day or almost every day

‘We use e-language, which is a childlike version of adult language. Look at your emails and compare their grammar and vocabulary with the language you were taught to use at school.

‘Look at emoticons — the smiley or sad faces people use at the ends of texts or tweets — they show we’ve become more childlike. This regression is trickling into everyday life.

‘It’s why it’s acceptable for adults to play computer games for hours instead of following more mature pursuits.’

THINK BEFORE YOU CLICK

If you think that this affects only people who are on their phone and laptop day and night, think again.

‘You don’t have to be a twenty-something online all the time,’ says Dr Aboujaoude. ‘We are all behaving differently — both offline and online — because of the internet.

‘We spend about seven to eight hours a day on a computer on average and during that time we talk in a certain kind of way and follow certain principles.

‘But while we may think we are different when we’re offline, we are not as good as compartmentalising as we believe.

‘Right now, all around us is the clamour of the latest Apple or Google breakthrough, demanding more of our time, wallet and consciousness. All I am doing is raising a red flag that we need to think about this rush of changes and look at the bigger picture.

‘There is no turning back, but we have to recognise that this social experiment has consequences.

‘We have to acknowledge that we actually act differently online and see that this is affecting our real lives, too.’

So the next time you’re about to buy something you don’t need online, post a less-than-charitable comment on Facebook or fire off an email with poor grammar and no polite greeting, take a moment to consider this: what you do and the self you create online could be changing the person you really are for ever.

Think before you click.

Experts want new look at ‘unsafe’ David Kelly death ruling

Kiran Randhawa

13.08.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...-david-kelly.do

Some of the country's leading medical experts are today demanding a full inquest into the death of government weapons inspector David Kelly.

Nine top doctors say the official cause of death, that he killed himself by slitting his wrist, is “extremely unlikely”.

In an open letter to ministers, they urge the Government to reopen the investigation. The doctors are experts in the fields of forensic science, intensive care and law, and include Sir Barry Jackson, past president of the British Academy of Forensic Science.

Other signatories include former coroner Michael Powers, a former deputy coroner, Margaret Bloom, and Julian Bion, a professor of intensive care medicine.

Dr Kelly, 59, was found dead in woods near his Oxfordshire home in 2003 after he was exposed as the source for a BBC story disclosing anger within the intelligence service over use of Iraq arms data. The then Lord Chancellor, Lord Falconer, suspended an inquest before a non-statutory public inquiry by Lord Hutton began, and it was never resumed.

Lord Hutton concluded “the principal cause of death was bleeding from incised wounds to his left wrist which Dr Kelly had inflicted on himself with the knife found beside his body”. The law lord added that death had been hastened because Dr Kelly had swallowed an excess of painkillers and had coronary heart disease.

But the signatories of the letter sent to the Times argued that a severed ulnar artery, the wound found to Dr Kelly's wrist, was unlikely to be life-threatening unless an individual had a blood-clotting deficiency.

“Insufficient blood would have been lost to threaten life,” they wrote. “The conclusion that death occurred as a consequence of haemorrhage is unsafe.” The letter is backed by a second one to Justice Secretary Kenneth Clarke, signed by Dr Powers, which branded the inquiry “inadequate”, its conclusion “implausible” and said the “widespread belief” in the medical profession was that Dr Kelly's death was not due to haemorrhage.

In January it emerged that Lord Hutton secretly classified all medical and scientific records relating to Dr Kelly for 70 years. The likeliest way that a coroner's inquest could go ahead is if Mr Clarke overturned the gagging order and let the material be seen by another group of doctors, who have campaigned for access to it as part of an ongoing legal action to force an inquest.

A Ministry of Justice spokesman said: “The request for the release of papers is under consideration.”

Dr David Kelly was on a hitlist, says UN weapons expert as calls grow for full inquest

By Miles Goslett and Arthur Martin
Last updated at 2:31 AM on 14th August 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...ow-inquest.html

A leading UN weapons inspector last night added his voice to the growing clamour for a full inquest into the death of Dr David Kelly.

Dr Richard Spertzel claimed Dr Kelly was on a 'hitlist' in the final years of his life.

The former head of the UN Biological Section, who worked closely with Dr Kelly in Iraq in the 1990s, has written to Attorney General Dominic Grieve about the 'mysterious circumstances' surrounding the death.

The weapons inspector's body was found after he was unmasked as the source of a damaging BBC news report questioning the grounds for the Iraq war.

Officially, he took his own life.

Yesterday Dr Spertzel told the Mail that the British authorities were 'intentionally ignoring' the issue.

He believes that there is something 'fishy' and insisted that a coroner should examine the death as soon as possible.

His demands come 24 hours after nine of Britain's leading medical experts wrote an open letter to minsters demanding a full inquest.

Dr Spertzel said: 'I know that David, as well as myself and a couple of others, were on an Iraqi hitlist. In late 1997, we were told by the Russian embassy in Baghdad. I had no idea what it meant but apparently David and I were high on the priority list.'

THE UNANSWERED QUESTIONS

■ How could Dr Kelly have died from severing the ulnar artery? Blood would normally be expected to clot long before enough was lost to bring about death.

■ Why was Dr Kelly's blood not fully tested for a clotting disorder? The existence or otherwise of such a disorder would have been a crucial question in a normal inquest.

■ Why was so little blood found in the area around his body? If Dr Kelly died from blood loss much more would have been reasonably expected.

■ Why did Lord Hutton ask for the records to be kept secret for 70 years? The unprecedented request was not explained by the judge at the time or by Labour ministers.

He said he and Dr Kelly were told that they were 'numbers three and four' on the list during an inspection trip in Iraq.

'When it first happened I felt right away that David just being associated with the work he'd been doing for the UK government would have made him a high target,' Dr Spertzel said.

'The Iraqi intelligence service did not take kindly to such action so my first reaction [to Dr Kelly's death] was "we'd better watch our backs".'

No inquest has ever been held into Dr Kelly's death. Instead, a public inquiry chaired by Lord Hutton was set up to investigate the circumstances surrounding it.

The inquiry ruled that the 59-year-old committed suicide in woodland near his Oxfordshire home in July 2003 by cutting the ulnar artery in his wrist with a blunt pruning knife.

Dr Spertzel, who is based in Washington where he continues to write and lecture on biological weapons, said: 'My concern about David Kelly's death is exactly what the doctors are saying now - that is, it's virtually impossible to commit suicide by slashing your wrist in that way.

'It just doesn't make sense. It seems to me that they [the British authorities] are intentionally ignoring all this. Something's fishy.'

Yesterday some of the doctors who wrote to ministers demanded an end to the shroud of secrecy over the death.

They want the official post-mortem results to be made public and for witnesses to give evidence under oath.

Concern over the cause of death has been mounting after it emerged in January that all medical and scientific records, including the post-mortem report and photographs of the body, were secretly classified for 70 years in 2004.

Sir Barry Jackson, past president of the British Academy of Forensic Science and one of the doctors who wrote to ministers, said yesterday: 'In my experience from 30 years as a practising surgeon I find it difficult to agree with the cause of death as listed on his death certificate.'

Another, Dr Elizabeth Driver, a solicitor and Fellow of the Royal College of Pathologists, added: 'As a pathologist I cannot understand how Dr Kelly could have died from blood loss of a severed ulnar artery. It makes no medical sense. Little is known about the medical facts because the post-mortem has been kept secret.

'There are obvious questions which were not addressed in the inquiry.'

Doubts over the official version of his death have previously been raised by Mai Pederson, a U.S. Air Force linguist who served in Iraq with Dr Kelly's weapons inspection team.

She said he had a painful elbow injury which meant his hand was too weak to cut a steak.

He would have to have been a 'contortionist' to have killed himself in the way the Hutton Inquiry claimed, she said.

She also said he had a disorder that made it difficult to swallow pills, undermining Lord Hutton's claims that he took some himself.

Michael Howard leads MPs' call for full inquest into the death of weapons inspector Dr David Kelly

By Simon Walters and Glen Owen
Last updated at 10:12 PM on 14th August 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...ly-inquest.html

Former Tory leader Michael Howard tonight put himself at the head of a powerful all-party campaign to force a full inquest into the death of Ministry of Defence weapons expert Dr David Kelly.

Mr Howard, Conservative leader when the Hutton Report found Dr Kelly took his own life, said: ‘In view of the growing number of relevant questions that have arisen and cast doubt on the conclusions reached by Lord Hutton, I believe it would now be entirely appropriate for a full inquest to be held.

‘Recent evidence by the first police officer on the scene, together with new statements by doctors, raise serious questions which should be considered. This has been on my mind for quite a while and recent events have crystallised my view.’

Mr Howard, now a leading Tory peer, was backed by Labour leadership challenger Diane Abbott, two former Labour Defence Ministers who served in Tony Blair’s Government and a number of senior Tory, Lib Dem and Labour MPs.

They spoke out amid signs that the Government is prepared to act in response to the growing demands to resolve questions over the circumstances of Dr Kelly’s death.

It emerged yesterday that Attorney General Dominic Grieve is ready to meet the group of senior doctors who last week claimed Dr Kelly could not have committed suicide in the way described in Lord Hutton’s report.

Mr Grieve has already indicated he is ready to ask the High Court to order a full inquest if he believes there is sufficient evidence to cast doubt on Lord Hutton’s verdict.

And Justice Minister Ken Clarke was yesterday urged by a Cabinet colleague to scrap Labour’s unprecedented 70-year embargo on releasing Dr Kelly’s medical records, including the results of the post-mortem examination.

‘If we are going to find out how Kelly died, the first requirement is to allow his medical details to be scrutinised,’ said the Cabinet Minister, who asked not to be named.

In tomorrow's Mail on Sunday, Dr Michael J. Powers QC, a doctor and barrister behind the latest demand by medical experts for a full inquiry, delivers a fresh challenge to Lord Hutton’s account of the way Dr Kelly is said to have slashed his wrists.

‘A fatal haemorrhage from a severed ulnar artery is so improbable that more evidence was essential before such a conclusion could be reached,’ says Dr Powers.

Dr Kelly’s body was discovered in woods near his Oxfordshire home in July 2003, shortly after he was exposed as the source of a BBC news report questioning Tony Blair’s grounds for war in Iraq.

Unusually, no coroner’s inquest was held into his death. The only official verdict has come from the Hutton Inquiry, commissioned by Mr Blair, which concluded that Dr Kelly, 59, died from loss of blood after cutting his left wrist with a blunt gardening knife and taking an overdose of co-proxamol, a painkiller commonly used for arthritis.

Critics regarded the report as a ‘whitewash’, crippled by an assumption from the outset that suicide was the only possible conclusion – and a desire by the report’s author, Lord Hutton, to spare Dr Kelly’s family additional distress.

The Mail on Sunday has led the way in reporting experts’ doubts over the Hutton verdict. We revealed that a close female confidante of Dr Kelly believed it was impossible for him to have killed himself by slashing his wrist because his right cutting hand was too weak to slice into steak. The woman, Mai Pederson, has confirmed this to Mr Grieve.

We also disclosed last year that 13 doctors had mounted a legal challenge to the finding of suicide on the grounds that a cut to the ulnar artery, which is small and difficult to access, could not have caused death. Their 12-page dossier is also now in Mr Grieve’s hands.

And last week, the first interview with the policeman who found Dr Kelly’s body cast further doubt on the verdict that he died of blood loss. Detective Constable Graham Coe revealed he had not seen ‘much blood’ around the body. DC Coe, 63, also said police searched Dr Kelly’s home the day after his death for papers

'of a sensitive nature' about Iraq.

Significantly, the demands for a full inquest now command support from all sides in Parliament, not just those who opposed the war.

Mr Howard gave full support to the conflict, though later accused Mr Blair of lying over the reasons for it.

Labour leadership contender Miss Abbott said: 'When so many doctors have expressed genuine concerns, I think it would be a good idea to have a full inquest so we can set this matter to rest once and for all.'

Lord Gilbert, a Defence Minister in the Blair Government, said: 'If serious medical people are agitated about the cause of Dr Kelly's death, I see no reason why there should not be an inquest to resolve these doubts.'

Fellow former Labour Defence Minister Peter Kilfoyle said: 'Politicians who know nothing about medicine have no right to gainsay senior physicians who say the cause of death in the Hutton Report does not stack up. An inquest must be approved.'

Senior Labour MP Ann Clwyd, an ardent Labour advocate of the Iraq War, said: 'If serious people with no political motive are not satisfied with the official account, it is fair enough to have an inquest. But we must take account of the family's views.'

Lib Dem MP Mike Hancock, a member of the Commons Defence Committee, said: 'Dr Kelly was treated appallingly by the last Government. His death was written off as suicide too hastily and the circumstances of his death were never fully investigated. If any criminal element was involved we need to know.'

Tory MP Adam Holloway, an Army captain in the Gulf War, said: 'We need to establish the true cause of Dr Kelly's death.'

However, there is likely to be opposition from Labour figures involved in the war and its aftermath. They include former Lord Chancellor Lord Falconer, a close Blair ally. It was he who chose Lord Hutton to investigate Dr Kelly's death and who put the 70-year embargo on releasing his medical records.

A source close to Lord Falconer said: 'The idea that a coroner's inquest could be better than an inquiry led by someone as experienced and as distinguished as Lord Hutton is not plausible.'

A Ministry of Justice spokesman said: 'The request for the release of Dr Kelly's medical papers is currently under consideration.'

A distinguished historian and neighbour of Dr David Kelly has added to the growing clamour for an inquest by declaring he does not believe Dr Kelly committed suicide.

Count Nikolai Tolstoy said last night that the scientist's 'considerate' character meant he would never have chosen to die in a place where passers-by were likely to be shocked – particularly when he could easily have deployed more discreet and effective means of killing himself.

Tolstoy, who is an expert on Celtic mythology and the Second World War, lives in the Oxfordshire village of Southmoor where the scientist shared an old farmhouse with his wife, Janice Kelly. Dr Kelly died on nearby Harrowdown Hill, on a walking route that is widely used by locals.

'I remember the night of his death very well,' Tolstoy said last night. 'There were helicopters flying overhead for hours after the body was found.

'The general view in the village is that suicide is extremely unlikely. He used to drink in our local pub and he was a very friendly and considerate man.

'I frequently walk past the spot where he died, and he would not have done something like that in a place where an old lady could have found him.

‘It just seems wholly implausible that he should have chosen to saw away at his wrist with a blunt knife when there were other means available to him at home, where his wife kept various drugs for her medical conditions.’

Tolstoy, who stood as a UKIP candidate against David Cameron at the last Election, believes that Dr Kelly died because he had annoyed Tony Blair’s Government.

The historian, who is a distant cousin of War And Peace author Leo Tolstoy, had his own battle with the Establishment in the Eighties when he was ordered to pay £1.5•million damages to Lord Aldington, after making claims in a pamphlet accusing the peer of complicity in war crimes.

Tolstoy’s defence against the libel action was seriously hampered when the Ministry of Defence removed vital papers from the Public Record Office which Tolstoy needed to fight his case – while Aldington found his access to war records unimpeded.

‘I was in a similar position when I was attacked by the Establishment and it didn’t make me feel that way [suicidal],’ Tolstoy added.

‘As Sherlock Holmes said, when you have eliminated the impossible, you are left with what happened.

‘Presumably the British Government was behind it all. I don’t believe the theory that Iraqi agents murdered him – how would they have the means and the opportunity to come into the country?

‘I wouldn’t put anything past the Government, as I know from personal experience. When the Establishment is threatened, it closes ranks.’

Dr Kelly was a brilliant man who did his best for his country. We owe it to him and ourselves to discover the true cause of his death

In this powerfully argued article, doctor and barrister Dr Michael Powers QC explains why justice demands an inquest is held Since his untimely death in July 2003, questions have continued to be raised about the circumstances of Dr David Kelly’s death. Many wonder whether he really killed himself and speculate that he was murdered. His sudden death shocked the nation – how could it have happened?

As a specialist practitioner in law and medicine, I feel a responsibility to the two professions to air my doubts about a case that bridges both worlds.

Any question of suicide or murder has to follow the determination of the cause of death. To do otherwise risks putting the cart before the horse. It would, for example, be scientifically and logically unsound to assume suicide and then to set about finding evidence to prove it.

Before asking whether a deceased himself or a third party put the bullet in the head, it is necessary to determine first that there was a hole in the head and secondly that the deceased died because of it.

For 1,000 years, coroners have been investigating sudden, violent and unnatural deaths. They have got good at it. Suicide used to be a crime and a finding of self-murder is an unhappy reflection on the victim and his family and friends.

That is why suicide has to be proved to the same high standard as murder. It has to be proved beyond reasonable doubt that the deceased did the act which killed him with that intention in mind.

The normal inquest process in the case of David Kelly was interrupted by the order of the Government. Lord Falconer, the Lord Chancellor at the time, exercised a rarely used power to require the Oxfordshire coroner to adjourn his investigation and to give that responsibility to Lord Hutton.

The coroner had the power to compel witnesses to attend and to give evidence on oath. The Government which took our country to war with Iraq chose not to give these considerable powers to Lord Hutton.

Although there were 24 days of evidence taken over two-and-a-half months, the whole of the medical evidence took no more than a half day. The evidence of the pathologist, toxicologist and forensic biologist can be read in 30 minutes. No one could say this was a detailed investigation into the death.

I was trained as a doctor and during my years in medical practice I often had to pass fine catheters into the radial artery in the wrist. This is where medics usually feel the pulse. It can even be seen pulsating in many people. Dr Kelly's wrists were not slit. Neither radial artery was cut. This alone is a strange finding in someone who intends suicide by this method.

Deeper in the wrist on the side of the little finger lies the ulnar artery. It is not used for catheterisation because it is too small. Yet Lord Hutton, on the unchallenged evidence of a single pathologist, concluded that Dr Kelly bled to death from the severance of this single small artery in the left hand.

No courtroom drama would be complete without critical witnesses being challenged through the cross-examination process. Like all barristers, I received a rigorous training in advocacy and, because of its enormous importance, I take time from my practice to train barristers in this art. A skilful cross-examination is often the key to ascertaining the truth.

None of this happened in Lord Hutton's inquiry and witnesses were simply led through prepared evidence. Reading the transcripts, far from providing any sense of satisfaction, leaves me with feelings of frustration. Opportunity after opportunity was lost to pursue answers until every avenue had been thoroughly explored and every 'escape route' closed.

At the very end of his evidence, Dr Nicholas Hunt, the pathologist who had conducted the post-mortem, was asked: 'Is there anything else you would like to say concerning the circumstances leading to Dr Kelly's death?'

Such a question gives the witness who is favourably disposed to the questioner an open opportunity to go further than his witness statement. It is NOT a question ever asked in cross-examination as it provides a free pass to an escape route.

Dr Hunt answered: 'Nothing I could say as a pathologist, no.' He is an experienced expert witness. What on earth did that answer mean? He was there to give evidence as a pathologist. He knew that. Everyone knew that. So why did he give that answer? It begged the question whether there was anything else he knew. Was he concerned about any other forensic or factual evidence? These questions were never asked.

Hutton focused on the so-called dodgy dossier and the conflict between the Government and the BBC which, at that time, was more in the public eye. Because it was taken for granted that Dr Kelly had killed himself, the medical evidence was insufficiently explored.

In the absence of any bleeding tendency from a clotting deficiency (and there was no evidence of this) fatal haemorrhage from a severed ulnar artery is so improbable that more evidence was essential before such a conclusion could be reached.

If you want to know how much beer has gone from a full pint glass, it is easy. You can either measure how much has been poured out or measure how much remains. To be confident, you would measure both. The same approach should have been adopted in this case.

As it was not, there is no evidence as to whether there was sufficient haemorrhage from the ulnar artery to cause death. The inquiry fell into the trap of the circular argument: Dr Kelly died, therefore he must have lost sufficient blood.

In my work as a barrister I meet many medics, but I have never met a single doctor who has disagreed with the proposition that it is extremely improbable that haemorrhage from a single, severed ulnar artery would ever be a primary cause of death.

Yet this extreme unlikelihood was never explored with Dr Hunt. Whatever the reason, this was a serious failure of the Hutton Inquiry. It has understandably led to a suspicion of cover-up. This could not have been the cause of death, the argument goes. If it were not the cause, then what did cause his death? Was it something Dr Kelly did to himself, intending to cause his own death, which has not yet been discovered? Was it part of some elaborate plan by others to end his life?

The only way to stop the many theories which abound is for there now to be a thorough and open investigation by way of a fresh inquest. Surely the Government realises that the way to foster conspiracy theories is to be secretive and to resist calls to disclose all the medical evidence. We should pay tribute to Dr Kelly. He was a brilliant man who did his best in the service of this country. He deserves our gratitude and respect. We owe it to him and ourselves to ensure the true cause of his death is ascertained.

Attorney General set to order new probe into death of weapons inspector David Kelly

By Daily Mail Reporter
Last updated at 12:49 PM on 19th August 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...elly-death.html

The Government's most senior law officer signalled today he was prepared to intervene over the controversy surrounding the death of David Kelly in order to 'give the public reassurance'.

Dominic Grieve said those concerned that Lord Hutton's inquiry into the death of the government weapons inspector left unanswered questions 'may have a valid point'.

But Mr Grieve said he would need to see new evidence before considering applying for a full inquest into Dr Kelly's death.

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods near his Oxfordshire home in July 2003 after he was identified as the source of a BBC story claiming the Government 'sexed up' its now notorious dossier on Iraq's supposed weapons of mass destruction.

In the outcry that followed, Tony Blair appointed Lord Hutton to head a public inquiry into his death. Unusually, the then lord chancellor, Lord Falconer, ruled it should also act as an inquest.

Lord Hutton concluded Dr Kelly took his own life and that the principal cause of death was 'bleeding from incised wounds to his left wrist which Dr Kelly had inflicted on himself with the knife found beside his body'.

He also found the scientist took an overdose of co-proxamol tablets - a painkiller commonly used for arthritis - and that he was suffering from an undiagnosed heart condition.

But there have been a number of calls for another examination of the case, most recently from a group of eight experts claiming Lord Hutton's conclusions were unsafe and former Tory leader Lord Howard.

'People who have expressed concerns about why Lord Hutton did not tie up every loose end may have a valid point.'

But he said he could not apply to the High Court for an inquest on a "hunch" and would have to take account of the feelings of the scientist's close family, who have not asked for a new investigation into his death.

'I have been given no evidence to suggest an alternative cause of death.

'If new evidence is put to me I can consider if an application should be made to the High Court that a fresh inquest goes ahead,' he said.

The Attorney General said he was unable to take any action until Justice Secretary Ken Clarke decided whether to release a number of key documents from an archive used by Lord Hutton for his report.

No evidence of a David Kelly cover-up, claims law chief

19.08.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...-kelly-death.do

There is “not a shred of evidence” of a cover-up over the death of weapons expert David Kelly, the Attorney General said today.

Dominic Grieve said “hunches” or theories about foul play were not enough to justify a fresh inquest into the 2003 tragedy.

“I have no reason to think, and not a shred of evidence to suggest, that there has been a cover-up,” he told ITV News outside his home today.

“I know that some people have put some theories forward but if you're going to put a theory forward like that you need some evidence. And at the moment I haven't seen any evidence.”

Mr Grieve stressed that he was not ruling out a fresh inquest into the apparent suicide and said he would look at any new evidence received by his office.

Dr Kelly, a Ministry of Defence scientist, was found dead in woods near his Oxfordshire home in July 2003 soon after being identified as the source of a BBC report alleging that Tony Blair's aides “sexed up” a dossier on Iraqi weapons.

The Hutton Inquiry concluded he took his own life by severing an artery in his wrist after taking painkillers.

However, a group of doctors have cast doubt on the evidence and are calling for a proper inquest.

No final decision has been taken but a key moment will be when Justice Secretary Kenneth Clarke decides soon whether to release a number of documents from an archive that Lord Hutton used but locked away from the public gaze for 70 years.

The Attorney General added: “The issue is, can the public be provided with reassurance about the findings of the Hutton Inquiry and what is the best way of doing that, and is it necessary to do anything further? That depends on the evidence."

The minister said that as a newly elected government, the Coalition had nothing to hide and no motive to cover anything up.

"But equally it's right to say that hunches, theories are not enough —there has to be evidence."

Former Conservative Party leader Lord Howard, senior Liberal Democrat Norman Baker and former Labour defence minister Peter Kilfoyle have all called for a new inquest.

Critics of the Hutton report claim that Dr Kelly's wounds were not enough to make him bleed to death and say there should have been more blood and fingerprints at the scene.

Dr Kelly's family has not joined the calls for an inquest, however, and ministers say that their wishes should be taken into account.

It was never suicide, says Dr Kelly's cousin as family finally breaks silence

By Miles Goslett
Last updated at 12:54 AM on 17th August 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...it-suicide.html

A close relative of Dr David Kelly broke the family's silence yesterday to voice fears that he was murdered.

Wendy Wearmouth said she found it 'incredibly unlikely' that he committed suicide and suggested he was assassinated.

She said that committing suicide would have been 'totally against his whole way of being'.

The 62-year-old spoke out as Dr Kelly's death was further shrouded in mystery - when one doctor claimed to have read the post-mortem report despite it having been kept classified after the weapons inspector's death.

Miss Wearmouth is Dr Kelly's first cousin and the only member of his family to speak publicly since renewed speculation about the circumstances his death.

She said: 'From the day I heard he'd died I had an instinct that there was something very unusual about it and I don't believe the official explanation.

'Looking back, was someone frightened that he was going to say more, that he had so much information?

'A man in his position would have been privy to a lot of things, and seen a lot of things, and I believe he was killed.'

Her intervention heaps more pressure on the Government to re-open the investigation into the death of the scientist, whose body was found in an Oxfordshire copse in 2003.

She said: 'A full coroner's inquest at which people give evidence under oath is the only way anyone can have a hope of knowing what really happened.'

A growing list of eminent doctors and lawyers are questioning the Hutton Inquiry findings that Dr Kelly took his own life and the official verdict has been overwhelmingly rejected by the public.

With Justice Secretary Kenneth Clarke and Attorney General Dominic Grieve increasingly aware of the growing clamour for an inquest, Miss Wearmouth's words carry great weight.

Dr Kelly, 59, is alleged to have committed suicide after being unmasked as the source of a BBC report questioning the grounds for Tony Blair taking Britain to war in Iraq.

Unusually, no coroner's inquest has ever been held into his death.

Instead, the public inquiry chaired by retired judge Lord Hutton found that Dr Kelly killed himself by slashing his wrist with a blunt pruning knife and allegedly swallowing 29 Co-proxamol painkillers.

Miss Wearmouth, who lives in western Turkey where she teaches English as a foreign language, said she had experience of those who were a suicide risk after working as a nurse in Scotland.

She said: 'Whether David was my cousin or not I would never imagine that a man with his background, his knowledge, would slash his wrists, take painkillers.

'This is what teenage girls do. This is not what eminent scientists do. If you knew the man it's totally against his whole way of being.

'He doesn't fall into a category of someone who would commit suicide and his religious beliefs alone would not allow him to kill himself.'

Miss Wearmouth - related to Dr Kelly through their mothers, who were half sisters - said she was concerned that other members of her family had not spoken out and insisted she had no political motivation.

But a growing number of experts insist the conclusion was unsafe and last week eight experts argued that a severed ulnar artery, the wound found to Dr Kelly's wrist, was unlikely to be life-threatening unless an individual had a blood clotting deficiency.

Dr Michael Powers QC, a former assistant deputy coroner who described the official explanation for Dr Kelly's death as 'extremely unlikely,' repeated his call for a full inquest after former Tory leader Michael Howard backed the calls.

The death was plunged into further mystery last night after a doctor told the BBC he had read Dr Kelly's post mortem report - despite it having been classified for 70 years.

Vascular surgeon Michael Gaunt told the BBC he was asked to review the evidence and said he was 'satisfied' that he committed suicide.

But he did not say who hired him or how he got the report and his claim triggers vital questions about the security of key evidence relating to Dr Kelly's death.

After going into previously unheard detail of the report, Dr Gaunt said it was more likely that Dr Kelly had eventually succumbed to the combination of tablets, the cut, the stress he was under and possibly an undiagnosed heart condition.

Attorney General refuses to open David Kelly files: Papers hold key to fresh inquest

By James Slack
Last updated at 7:37 AM on 20th August 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...elly-files.html

Attorney General Dominic Grieve is refusing to open secret files which hold the key to David Kelly's death, it has emerged.

The decision on whether to order an inquest hinges on a bundle of documents which are locked in a Whitehall safe for up to 70 years.

They include the post-mortem examination report and other sensitive medical notes.

A group of doctors insists that the weapons inspector could not have committed suicide and bled to death in the way described by the official Hutton Inquiry.

They have called for Mr Grieve to open the files, in the hope that they will provide the evidence he needs to petition the High Court for an inquest.

But Mr Grieve is refusing to look at them, despite having the legal power to gain immediate access.

Instead, he is insisting that justice secretary Ken Clarke makes a decision on whether to release them.

This is despite the fact that Mr Grieve wrote to campaigners while in opposition saying he 'would review' all the associated medical and scientific records.

He was shadow justice secretary at the time. Now he is arguing that it would be 'extremely unusual' for him to ask for the papers.

He said Mr Clarke should decide whether to release the papers to the doctors, who would then pass them on to him, even though he could walk across Whitehall and collect them today.

Last night, a spokesman for Mr Grieve said: 'The Attorney General has no investigative function. Whilst he could ask for the papers it would be extremely unusual for him to take a proactive step of that kind.'

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods near his Oxfordshire home in July 2003 after he was identified as the source of a BBC story claiming the Labour government 'sexed up' its dossier on Iraq's supposed weapons of mass destruction.

Instead of a normal inquest, the Government set up the Hutton Inquiry to investigate the death. It concluded that Dr Kelly took his own life.

Lord Hutton then ordered the documents relating to the case be classified for 70 years.

An aerial view of Harrowdown Hill, Oxfordshire, where Dr Kelly's body was discovered in July 2003

Mr Grieve's comments came as he said that he had not yet seen any new evidence to justify holding an inquest.

He also said there was 'not a shred of evidence' that there had been a cover-up.

Nine doctors have written an open letter casting grave doubt on the verdict that Dr Kelly died from loss of blood after cutting a small artery in his wrist. Mr Grieve has also been sent a medical report by a group of eminent doctors suggesting it would have been 'impossible' for Dr Kelly to lose sufficient blood through the artery to kill him.

The Attorney General said: 'It's right to say that hunches, theories are not enough – there has to be evidence. And if the evidence is available and people feel that they have the evidence, then if they send it to me it will be considered'.

He added: ‘I have no reason to think... and not a shred of evidence to suggest that there has been a cover up.

‘I know that some people have put some theories forward but if you’re going to put a theory forward like that you need some evidence and as matters stand at the moment I haven’t seen any evidence. But if there is any evidence my office is the place to send it to.’

Mr Grieve stressed that he had to take account of the feelings of Dr Kelly’s close family, who have not called for a fresh investigation.

Yesterday it was publicly stated for the first time that Dr Kelly’s relatives do not want an inquiry.

By placing responsibility for the sensitive decision at Mr Clarke’s door, Mr Grieve risks causing irritation within the Government.

The principal cause of death accepted by Lord Hutton was bleeding from a severed ulnar artery.

But Detective Constable Graham Coe, who found the body, said earlier this month that there had not been much blood at the scene.

Those calling for an inquest also include ex-Home Secretary Lord Howard, former Labour defence minister Peter Kilfoyle and the Liberal Democrat MP Norman Baker.

Dr Andrew Davison, a Home Office pathologist, responded to the calls by saying that the circumstances of Dr Kelly’s death were ‘not a game of Cluedo’ and should be left to the experts.
Weapons expert was allowed to see secrets far outside his brief

By MILES GOSLETT

David Kelly had access to highly sensitive international intelligence material far beyond that relating to weapons of mass destruction, it was revealed last night.

A Ministry of Defence security clearance form shows he had permission to access all relevant intelligence documents of British or American origin marked ‘Top Secret’.

The form, labelled ‘Restricted’, shows that Dr Kelly was privy to the material on what is known officially as the "need to know” principle”.

It included ‘atomic information’ and Nato-led ‘international defence organisation information’, some of which would have been accessible only via codewords to limit how many people could see it.

All information was available ‘subject to indoctrination’, meaning briefings he would have been given.

According to Colonel Richard Kemp, former chairman of the government’s Cobra Intelligence Group, Dr Kelly would have undergone a thorough background check that could have lasted ‘months’ before being given such clearance.

Colonel Kemp, who was also head of international terrorism for the Joint Intelligence Committee between 2002 and 2006, said: ‘I don’t think there’s a much higher level of clearance than this form offers.’

Dr Kelly’s security clearance form was signed on February 24, 2000 and was valid for seven years.

The form was submitted as evidence to the Hutton Inquiry in 2003 but is not available for public view on Inquiry’s website.

Today is the first time it has been published by a newspaper.

In his role as a weapons inspector, Dr Kelly worked closely with the intelligence services of all major industrialised countries.

He spent long periods in the former Soviet Union in the early 1990s, where he uncovered evidence of biological weapons laboratories including work on developing smallpox in Atlanta and Moscow.

The Daily Mail has also established that Dr Amy Smithson, an American academic who specialises in indepth research on issues related to chemical and biological weapons proliferation, has written a book which includes one of the last interviews Dr Kelly ever gave. Called Germ Gambits: The Bioweapons Dilemma, Iraq and Beyond, it will be published in 2011.

Dr Smithson, who obtained special permission from Dr Kelly's widow, Janice, said: 'Among his fellow inspectors Dr Kelly was considered the consummate inspector.

'They admired him tremendously for his very effective interviewing technique; his encyclopedic knowledge; and his determination to out the truth about the former Soviet and Iraqi biological weapons programmes.

'Put another way, David's colleagues were somewhat in awe of his skills as an inspector'.

Pathologist says David Kelly's death 'textbook suicide'

Dr Kelly was the source of a BBC report casting doubt on government claims about Iraq's weapons

22 August 2010 Last updated at 12:23
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-11050587

The death of Iraq weapons expert David Kelly was a "textbook case" of suicide, according to the pathologist who performed the post-mortem examination.

A group of doctors has questioned the suicide verdict by the Hutton Inquiry in 2004 and called for a full inquest.

But Nicholas Hunt said the scientist's death, after he was exposed as the source for a BBC story, was a "classic case of self-inflicted injury".

He told the Sunday Times he would, however, welcome a full inquest.

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods close to his Oxfordshire home in 2003, shortly after it was revealed that he provided the information for a story casting doubt on the government's claim that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction capable of being fired within 45 minutes.

Instead of a coroner's inquest, then Prime Minister Tony Blair asked Lord Hutton to conduct an investigation, which found Dr Kelly died from blood loss after slashing his wrist with a knife.
'Nothing to hide'

The details of the post-mortem examination are subject to a 70-year gagging order, and it is understood this is the first time Mr Hunt, who gave evidence at the Hutton Inquiry, has spoken out in defence of his findings.

Mr Hunt told the Sunday Times that during the eight-hour examination he found no signs of murder.

"I felt very, very sorry for David Kelly and the way he had been treated by the government... I had every reason to look for something untoward and would dearly love to have found something," the Home Office pathologist said.

"It was an absolute classic case of self-inflicted injury. You could illustrate a textbook with it.

"If it were anyone else and you were to suggest there's something foul about it, you would be referred for additional training. I would welcome an inquest, I've nothing to hide."

There have been a number of calls for the case to be reopened, most recently from a group of eight doctors who claimed Lord Hutton's conclusions were unproven.

Earlier this month, they argued the wound to Dr Kelly's wrist was unlikely to have been fatal unless he was suffering from a blood-clotting deficiency.

Their view appears to be supported by the detective who found his body when he said he did not see "much blood" in the vicinity.

But Mr Hunt said: "In actual fact there were big, thick clots of blood inside the sleeve, which came down over the wrist, and a lot of blood soaked into the ground.

"They might not have seen it, but it was there and I noted it in my report."

Mr Hunt told the paper that two of Dr Kelly's main coronary arteries were 70-80% narrower than normal, and his heart disease was so severe that he could have "dropped dead" at any minute.

"With David Kelly, there were three factors that contributed to his death. If you have narrower arteries, your ability to withstand blood loss falls dramatically," he said.

"Your heart also becomes more vulnerable to anything that could cause it to become unstable, such as stress - which I have no doubt he was under massively - and the overdose."

In his report, Mr Hunt found Dr Kelly had taken an overdose of the painkiller co-proxamol but the toxicology reports have also come under scrutiny from those who do not believe the scientist committed suicide.

The doctors have called for material from the post-mortem examination to be released, and Lord Hutton has said he does not have any objection to them seeing it.

The peer said in January that the purpose of the secrecy order, made at the conclusion of his inquiry, had been to avoid causing distress to Dr Kelly's family.

International Development Secretary Andrew Mitchell said: "There's a lot of concern being expressed and it's really for the attorney general, who is the government's law officer engaged with this, now to decide what should happen next."

Dr David Kelly post-mortem files sent to Attorney General

02.09.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...rney-general.do

Attorney General Dominic Grieve has requested files relating to the death of weapons inspector David Kelly, it was reported today.

Mr Grieve, the Government's senior law officer, was said to have asked to see reports of the post-mortem examination carried out on Dr Kelly.

This month Mr Grieve said he would need to see new evidence before considering applying for a full inquest into Dr Kelly's death in July 2003.

The Daily Mail reported that Mr Grieve had previously insisted he had no “investigative function” and that he could view the documents only if they were released to the public by Justice Secretary Ken Clarke.

But a spokeswoman for the Attorney General confirmed papers relating to Dr Kelly's death had arrived in his office. “I really don't know exactly what they are, I just know that some papers came in, that's all,” she said.

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods near his Oxfordshire home after he was identified as the source of a BBC story claiming the Government “sexed up” its now notorious dossier on Iraq's supposed weapons of mass destruction.

In the outcry that followed, Tony Blair appointed Lord Hutton to head a public inquiry into his death. Unusually, the then lord chancellor, Lord Falconer, ruled it should also act as an inquest.

Lord Hutton concluded Dr Kelly took his own life and that the principal cause of death was “bleeding from incised wounds to his left wrist which Dr Kelly had inflicted on himself with the knife found beside his body”.

He also found the scientist took an overdose of co-proxamol tablets - a painkiller commonly used for arthritis - and that he was suffering from an undiagnosed heart condition.

But there have been a number of calls for another examination of the case and earlier this month Mr Grieve told the Daily Telegraph: “We would like to resolve this in a way that can give the public reassurance.”

He added: “People who have expressed concerns about why Lord Hutton did not tie up every loose end may have a valid point.”

But he said he could not apply to the High Court for an inquest on a “hunch” and would have to take account of the feelings of the scientist's close family, who have not asked for a new investigation into his death.

“I have been given no evidence to suggest an alternative cause of death,” Mr Grieve said.

Fresh legal bid over Kelly's death

04.09.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...kellys-death.do

A fresh legal bid to force an inquest into the death of Government scientist David Kelly is to be launched within the next few days, it has been disclosed.

Formal legal papers are expected to be submitted to Attorney General Dominic Grieve by the end of the coming week, requesting his authorisation for a group of doctors to go to the High Court to seek an inquest. If he refuses to grant the authorisation - known in legal language as a fiat - his decision could be subject to appeal at the High Court.

The five eminent doctors have conducted a long-running campaign to overturn the highly unusual decision not to hold an inquest into Dr Kelly's death in 2003, shortly after he was named as the source of reports challenging the Government's dossier of evidence on Iraq's supposed weapons of mass destruction.

Former Lord Chancellor Lord Falconer ruled that Lord Hutton's inquiry into the death - which found that Dr Kelly committed suicide - would take the place of a standard coroner's inquest.

The new legal move was prompted by an interview given last month by pathologist Nicholas Hunt, who carried out an autopsy on Dr Kelly's body.

Speaking to The Sunday Times, Dr Hunt stated that he found "big clots" of blood in the sleeve of Kelly's jacket and soaked into the ground and regarded the case as a "textbook" suicide - details which were not presented in evidence to the Hutton Inquiry.

Barrister Michael Powers QC, who is acting for the group of doctors, said that Dr Hunt's comments gave weight to their argument that Hutton's inquiry did not represent a sufficient examination of the cause of Dr Kelly's death.

Mr Powers said: "The media has now presented evidence which we have never had before. The fact that he felt it necessary to go to the press and say these things proves to us that the inquiry was insufficient."

The details which Dr Hunt mentioned must have come from the medical report into Dr Kelly's death, which Lord Hutton controversially ruled should remain secret for 70 years, said Mr Powers.

The group of doctors are awaiting a decision from Justice Secretary Kenneth Clarke over whether this ruling should be overturned to allow them to see the report.

CIA making secret payments to members of Karzai administration

By Greg Miller and Joshua Partlow
Friday, August 27, 2010; 12:14 AM
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/conte...0082606776.html

The CIA is making secret payments to multiple members of President Hamid Karzai's administration, in part to maintain sources of information in a government in which the Afghan leader is often seen as having a limited grasp of developments, according to current and former U.S. officials.

The payments are long-standing in many cases and designed to help the agency maintain a deep roster of allies within the presidential palace. Some aides function as CIA informants, but others collect stipends under more informal arrangements meant to ensure their accessibility, a U.S. official said.

The CIA has continued the payments despite concerns that it is backing corrupt officials and undermining efforts to wean Afghans' dependence on secret sources of income and graft.

The U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a significant number of officials in Karzai's administration are on the payroll. Paul Gimigliano, a CIA spokesman, disputed that characterization, saying, "This anonymous source appears driven by ignorance, malice or both."

A former agency official said the payments were necessary because "the head of state is not going to tell you everything" and because Karzai often seems unaware of moves that members of his own government make.

The disclosure comes as a corruption investigation into one of Karzai's senior national security advisers - and an alleged agency informant - puts new strain on the already fraying relationship between Washington and Kabul.

Top American officials including Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and Sen. John F. Kerry (D-Mass.) have expressed concern about Karzai's efforts to rein in anti-corruption teams, as well as intervention in the case against the security adviser. The aide, Mohammad Zia Salehi, is accused of accepting a $10,000 car as a bribe in exchange for his assistance in quashing a wide-ranging corruption probe.

The issue carries enormous stakes for the Obama administration. Concerns that the Afghan government is hopelessly corrupt have prompted a congressional panel to withhold billions of dollars in aid, and threaten to erode American support for the war.

But Karzai supporters accuse their U.S. counterparts of exploiting the issue, and the Salehi arrest in particular, to humiliate the Afghan leader while ignoring more pressing priorities.

In the latest sign of his vexation, Karzai said Thursday that President Obama's timeline for withdrawing U.S. troops "has given courage to the enemies of Afghanistan," and complained that the United States wasn't doing enough to force Pakistan to stop supporting the Taliban.

"We haven't progressed in the war against terrorism," Karzai said in a statement.

The CIA has maintained relationships with Afghan government officials for years. But the disclosure that multiple members of Karzai's government are on the CIA's payroll underscores the complex nature of the American role in Afghanistan. Even as agency dollars flow in, U.S.-backed investigative units are targeting prominent Afghans in the government and trying to stem an exodus of more than $1 billion in cash annually from the country.

Gimigliano, the CIA spokesman, declined to comment on the agency's financial ties to Afghan officials. "This agency plays an essential role in promoting American goals in Afghanistan, including security and stability," he said. "Speculation about who may help us achieve that is both dangerous and counterproductive."

The agency's approach has drawn criticism from others in the U.S. government, who accuse the CIA of contributing to an atmosphere in which Afghans are conditioned to extend their hands for secret payments in almost every transaction.

"They'll pay whoever they think can help them," the U.S. official said. "That has been the CIA attitude since 2001."

A second U.S. official defended the agency's activities and alluded to a simmering conflict within the U.S. government over the scope of American objectives in Afghanistan, and the means required to achieve those goals.

"No one is going to create Plato's Republic over there in one year, two years, or 10," the official said. "If the United States decides to deal only with the saints in Afghanistan, it's in for both loneliness and failure. That's the risk, and not everyone in our government sees it."

U.S. and Afghan officials said the CIA is not the only foreign entity using secret payments to Afghan officials to influence events in the country.

A prominent Afghan with knowledge of the inner workings of the palace said it operates a fund that rewards political allies with money that flows in from the Iranian government and foreign intelligence services as well as prominent Afghan companies eager to curry favor with Karzai. The source said the fund distributes $10 million to $50 million a year.

A U.S. official said Turkey and Saudi Arabia are among the other countries funneling money into Afghanistan.

Salehi, the target of the corruption probe, is accused of taking a bribe in return for his help in blocking an investigation of New Ansari, a money transfer business that has helped elite Afghans ship large sums of cash to overseas accounts. U.S. officials worry that the stream includes diverted foreign aid.

But authorities said the Salehi investigation is also focused on his involvement in administering the palace fund - doling out cash and vehicles to Karzai supporters - as well as his role in negotiations with the Taliban.

Salehi's job put him at the center of some of the most sensitive assignments for the Afghan government. Another national security official, Ibrahim Spinzada, has orchestrated the government's talks with the Taliban and traveled with Salehi to Dubai, Saudi Arabia and Russia.

The payments from the palace are "part of the politics here," said a second senior Afghan official. Some people receive "a special salary. It is part of intelligence activities."

Rangin Dadfar Spanta, Afghanistan's national security adviser and Salehi's boss, said in an interview that he had spoken with Salehi on Thursday and that Salehi denied working with the CIA. "I don't think that Salehi is a spy," Spanta said, adding that Salehi was "shocked and he absolutely rejected it."

U.S. officials did not dispute that Salehi was on the CIA payroll, which was first reported by The New York Times. But officials sought to draw a distinction between agency payments and corruption probes.

"The United States government had nothing to do with the activities for which this individual is being investigated," the second U.S. official said. "It's not news that we sometimes pay people overseas who help the United States do what it needs to get done. . . . Nor should it be surprising, in a place like Afghanistan, that some influential figures can be both helpful and - on their own, separate and apart - corrupt to some degree."

The flow of CIA money into the region dates to the agency's support for mujaheddin fighters who ousted Soviet forces three decades ago.

The spigot was tightened during the 1990s but reopened after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Much of the money went to support warlords whose militias helped to overthrow the Taliban regime, which had provided sanctuary for Osama bin Laden and al-Qaeda training camps. Salehi had served as an interpreter for one of the most prominent of those warlords, Abdurrashid Dostum, an ethnic Uzbek whose forces played a critical role in the campaign against the Taliban.

The CIA bankrolled Afghanistan's intelligence service, and its financial ties to government officials has proliferated in recent years.

"There are probably not too many officials we haven't met and contacted and paid," a former CIA official said.

The CIA has a long-standing relationship - though not a financial one - with Karzai himself. The agency's station chief in Kabul traveled with Karzai during the war against the Taliban, at one point shielding him from the blast of a misdirected bomb. The station chief has since served two tours in the Afghan capital at Karzai's behest.

British troops investigated for heroin smuggling

Afghanistan is the source of 90% of the world's opium

12 September 2010 Last updated at 16:20
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-11277466

Military police are investigating claims that British soldiers may have trafficked heroin from Afghanistan.

The Ministry of Defence said they were aware of "unsubstantiated" claims that troops were using military aircraft to ship the drug out of the country.

The inquiry is focusing on British and Canadian service personnel at airports in Camp Bastion and Kandahar.

Security has been tightened, with additional sniffer dogs being used as part of the crackdown at the bases.

An MoD Spokeswoman said: "We are aware of these allegations. Although they are unsubstantiated, we take any such reports very seriously and we have already tightened our existing procedures both in Afghanistan and in the UK, including through increasing the use of trained sniffer dogs.

"We regret any inconvenience this causes to our service personnel. Any of our people found to be engaged in trafficking of illegal narcotics will feel the full weight of the law."

Afghanistan is the source of 90% of the world's opium.

Dr David Kelly's body 'had obviously been moved':
Paramedic at death scene reveals concerns over Hutton Inquiry

By Matt Sandy
Last updated at 1:41 AM on 12th September 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...on-Inquiry.html

The paramedic who confirmed the death of Government scientist Dr David Kelly has claimed his body had ‘obviously been moved’ in the minutes after it was found.

David Bartlett was one of two medics called after the corpse of the weapons expert was discovered in woods near his Oxfordshire home seven years ago. They were among the first on the scene.

The testimony by the experienced paramedics once again brings into doubt the thoroughness of the Hutton Inquiry – in particular raising questions about why police officers were not asked whether they had touched or moved the body.

The former weapons inspector was found dead a week after he was outed as the source of BBC claims that the Government had ‘sexed up’ a document claiming Saddam Hussein’s Iraq could deploy weapons of mass destruction in 45 minutes.

In his interview, 59-year-old Mr Bartlett discloses a further series of irregularities about that day’s events, putting yet more pressure on the Government to agree to a full inquest into the scientist’s death.

Earlier this month, Attorney General Dominic Grieve requested to see the report of Dr Kelly’s post-mortem.

He said he would need to see ‘new evidence’ before applying for a full inquest.

Like many of the witnesses expressing doubts about the Kelly case, Oxfordshire-born Mr Bartlett is far from a conspiracy theorist. A father of three, he has been a dedicated paramedic for 24 years.

His testimony – the first time he has talked in such detail – is crucial, as the civilian volunteer searchers who first found the body said it was leaning against a tree. He said: ‘If earlier witnesses said that, then the body had obviously been moved’ by the time he got there.

Mr Bartlett backs up claims made by DC Graham Coe – the first policeman on the scene – about how little blood there was around the body. The paramedic said: ‘I’ve seen more blood at a nosebleed than I saw there.’

However, the Hutton Inquiry said that Dr Kelly had bled to death after cutting a small artery in his wrist.

A bizarre meeting with Kelly 'friend'

Mr Bartlett also said that after the body was found the police threw a ‘blackout’ around the scene – even banning him from speaking to his control room by radio. He says this is the only time it has happened in his long career.

The paramedic also reveals that, a year after the death, he was approached by a stranger in Oxford, who said he was a close friend of Dr Kelly. The man said he recognised Mr Bartlett from media coverage.

Mr Bartlett said: ‘He said to me he’d known David Kelly since he was a boy. There was nothing to doubt about him. He told me how Dr Kelly had been a member of the Baha’i faith, and that suicide was against their religion.

‘He said, “I’m telling you now, there’s no way in the world that guy committed suicide.”•’

Mr Bartlett refuses to elaborate any further or reveal the man’s identity but says he has no doubt he was genuine.

The paramedic gave evidence to the Hutton Inquiry, but said: ‘I thought they’d already decided the outcome and wanted someone to confirm it for them. They’d decided it was going to be suicide and that was all cut and dried.

‘I wasn’t impressed with how it was conducted. It should have been under oath, the photographs of the scene should have been released and they shouldn’t have sealed the documents for 70 years.’

Dr Kelly, 59, who was one of the world’s leading experts on biological and chemical weapons, left his home in the village of Southmoor, Oxfordshire, on the afternoon of July 17, 2003, saying he was going for a walk. The next morning his body was found by volunteer Louise Holmes and a search dog, in nearby Harrowdown Hill woods.

Mr Bartlett and his professional partner, Vanessa Hunt, also a paramedic for many years, had just started their shift at Abingdon ambulance station when they got the emergency call at 9.40am on July 18.

As they arrived they found the area swarming with police – some in blue combats and others in plain clothes. ‘You could tell immediately it was something high profile,’ he said.

They were met at the scene by Sergeant Alan Dadd and several other officers.

He led them up a bridle path towards the woods, as they carried heavy oxygen cylinders and the equipment needed to treat cardiac arrest.

Eventually, the police led them off the path and into the woods, constructing a ‘common approach path’ with posts and blue police tape as they accompanied the paramedics.

'I asked the police if he'd fallen out of a tree'

Mr Bartlett said: ‘As we approached the scene, it was obvious he was dead. He was lying flat out in the clearing with his bottle of water, knife and watch in line right next to his left arm.

‘His left sleeve was rolled up and you could see a wound with some dried blood around it.’

The paramedics checked for a pulse and shone a light into his eyes to check for any pupil reaction. Then – as the police took photos – they unbuttoned his shirt and placed four electrodes on his chest to check his heart.

Having pronounced him dead at 10.07am, they made their way back to their ambulance. But in just a few minutes at the scene Mr Bartlett noted many things that have troubled him ever since.

He said: ‘He was lying flat out some distance from the tree. He definitely wasn’t leaning against it. I remember saying to the copper, “Are you sure he hasn’t fallen out of the tree?”

‘When I was there the body was far enough away from the tree for someone to get behind it. I know that because I stood there when we were using the electrodes to check his heart. Later I learned that the dog team said they had found him propped up against the tree. He wasn’t when we got there. If the earlier witnesses are saying that, then the body has obviously been moved.’

Ms Holmes told the Hutton Inquiry: ‘He was at the base of the tree with almost his head on his shoulders, just slumped back against the tree.’

Paul Chapman, who was searching with Ms Holmes, also said: ‘He was sitting with his back up against a tree.’

The next man on the scene – DC Coe – told the inquiry: ‘The body was laying on its back by a large tree, the head towards the trunk of the tree.’

In an interview with The Mail on Sunday last month, DC Coe added that he thought the head and part of the shoulders were leaning against the tree.

However, the next two police officers, PC Andrew Franklin and PC Martyn Sawyer, both said that when they arrived – just before the paramedics and after DC Coe had guarded the body alone for 25 minutes – Dr Kelly was on his back.

This was also the view given by Dr Nicholas Hunt, the pathologist who examined the body at the scene.

How did Kelly's upright bottle of water remain upright?

Despite the discrepancies, none of the three police officers were asked at the inquiry whether they touched or moved the body, although DC Coe has since denied doing so.

Lord Hutton made no mention of the contradictory evidence in his report’s conclusions.

PC Franklin and PC Sawyer would not comment when approached by The Mail on Sunday.

Mr Bartlett has another concern. The Evian water bottle was standing upright no more than six inches from Dr Kelly’s left upper arm, and he is amazed that he would have not knocked it over while dying.

He said: ‘I said to the copper at the time, “Who stood the bottle of water up or has it been moved?” They said it hadn't been moved. 'For someone lying like that on leaf mould with a bottle of water there, he would have knocked it over while dying, I would have thought. It seemed very odd to me.'

Another point – and one that the two paramedics tried to raise at the Hutton Inquiry – was the lack of blood. Some experts have said for someone to die in the way Dr Kelly is said to have done, they would have to lose several pints of blood, which would most probably spray in all directions.

Mr Bartlett said: 'I've been to loads of slashed wrists and you always get loads of blood. I would have thought he would have got more blood over him. If he's going to bleed to death, you'll get a fair old bit.

'To me, people rarely commit suicide by slitting their wrists. They'll usually do it and end up in hospital.' But that was not the scene they found. He said: 'There was some [blood] on his left wrist, a few specks on his shirt and a spot the size of a 10p on his trousers. There was a bit on the nettles and grass but not a lot at all.

'We said at the time we doubted very much he would have died from that wound we saw. When it came out that the autopsy was from blood loss, we were really surprised. I've seen more blood at a nosebleed than I saw there.

'I'm not saying he didn't commit suicide. But there was very little blood for someone who allegedly bled to death.'

Dr Nicholas Hunt, the pathologist who carried out the post-mortem, broke his silence last month to claim there were clots of blood inside the sleeves of his jacket and that much blood soaked into the ground.

Mr Bartlett says he is not in a position to question those claims but said in the case of a slit wrist – even when the victim does not die – there tends to be blood 'everywhere'.

After leaving the woods, the paramedics found the police had implemented a 'news blackout' – meaning they were not even allowed to radio their control room for fear it would be intercepted.

In addition, they were told that as they had been near the body, they would have to wait for a machine to arrive that was able to take their boot prints so they could be ruled out of any future inquiry.

He was later surprised to hear at the inquiry that no footprints at all had been found at the scene.

Mr Bartlett said: 'It was only when we were walking back to the ambulance that we were told who the body was. One of the coppers told us it was going to be front-page news once it got out.

'We were there for an hour under a news blackout. We weren't able to radio our control or anything. That was the only time that happened to me in my 24-year career as a paramedic.'

Mr Bartlett has no doubts there should be a full inquest. He said: 'There are more than enough doubts surrounding the case. It would be interesting to see the photographs from the scene. If they had been shown at the inquiry it would have answered a lot of questions.

'It would have shown there was no blood on the top of him. It would have shown the position of him. It would have shown the distance of the tree from him.'

Kelly: vital report 'is lost'

EXCLUSIVE
By CHRIS HASTINGS

The controversy over the death of Government scientist Dr David Kelly has deepened after ambulance chiefs admitted that a vital medical record relating to the case has vanished.

The South Central Ambulance NHS Trust has lost the Patient Report Form (PRF) completed by paramedic Vanessa Hunt, who attended the scene of the former weapons inspector's death in 2003.

The disclosure will inevitably fuel demands for a full inquest into his death.

A leading coroner yesterday said that the form is one of the key documents at an inquest as it provides a record of any incident, as recorded at the time. Ambulance crews called upon to give evidence would normally rely only on the information contained in the document.

Dr Michael Powers QC, who is leading the group of doctors campaigning for an inquest into Dr Kelly's death, described the loss of the paperwork as 'quite frankly astonishing'.

He said: 'The fact that such an important document has gone missing simply strengthens the case for an inquest.

'It was clear to everyone at the time that Dr Kelly's death was a very significant event and the value of all contemporaneous documents should have been recognised. All documents should have been carefully copied.'

However, the trust says it can't find either the original document or a copy scanned into its computer system, even though it has a policy of storing such documents for ten years.

And Liberal Democrat MP Norman Baker, who has long maintained that Dr Kelly was murdered, last night described the loss of the file as 'unfortunate to say the least'.

At the Hutton Inquiry into Dr Kelly's death, Ms Hunt and her colleague David Bartlett confirmed that they examined Dr Kelly's body. They said they lifted his eyelids, felt his neck for a pulse and applied a heart monitor to his chest.

All ambulance crews have to fill out the form for every call-out, irrespective of whether a patient is alive or dead. They record a wide range of medical information including pulse rates, blood pressure and any skin condition.

At the time, the paramedics worked for the Oxfordshire Ambulance Trust, which has since merged with three others to form the South Central Ambulance NHS Trust. A spokeswoman for the trust yesterday confirmed that a form was completed for Dr Kelly, but subsequently lost.

The admission follows a year-long wrangle over a Freedom of Information request for documents concerning Dr Kelly's death.

They included communications between the trust and the paramedics, minutes of any relevant meetings, and all correspondence with the coroner.

After waiting more than the statutory 20 working days deadline for replies, the trust eventually claimed it held no relevant information. A complaint was then lodged with the Information Commissioner. During the course of these follow-up inquiries the trust admitted it had mislaid the PRF.

In his ruling, which will be made public this week, the commissioner states: '[The trust] explained that it would have expected to have had a PRF. It explained that this form would only include clinical assessment information about Dr Kelly and would not contain any other information. It explained that this form had been mislaid.

It explained that the information was usually digitised and held electronically by date in its PRF archives.

'However, having checked its system for all the entries on the date of the incident, and the dates one day either side to ensure it was not misfiled, it could not find the relevant form. It was supposed to keep this form for ten years in line with its policy. The Commissioner has checked what this form would contain and is satisfied that it would only contain clinical assessment information.'

The loss of the documents will increase pressure for an inquest into Dr Kelly's death. This week, campaigners will make a formal application to the Attorney General to go to the High Court and demand such an inquest.

The PRF was not listed in the register of evidence supplied to the Hutton Inquiry into Dr Kelly's death. The 2004 report, which concluded that Dr Kelly killed himself by slitting his wrists, was immediately branded a whitewash.

Unanswered concerns include the lack of blood at the scene, even though the inquiry concluded that Dr Kelly bled to death after slashing his wrists. It also recently emerged that Lord Hutton asked the Ministry of Justice to ensure documents relating to the case – including a post-mortem report – stay secret for 70 years.

A spokeswoman for the South Central Ambulance Trust said a PRF for Dr Kelly had been completed but she was under the impression it had been handed to Thames Valley Police. If that was the case the trust should still have kept a copy.

A spokesman for Thames Valley Police was unable to comment last night.

The ambulance spokeswoman said about 500,000 PRFs were completed each year, but it was impossible to say how many went missing.

Bombshell from London

By Eric S. Margolis
http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/article26362.htm

September 14, 2010 "Toronto Sun" -- THE London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS), is the world's leading think tank for military affairs. It represents the top echelon of defence experts, retired officers and senior military men, spanning the globe from the United States and Britain to China, Russia and India.

I've been an IISS member for over 20 years. IISS's reports are always authoritative but usually cautious and diplomatic, sometimes dull. However, two weeks ago the IISS issued an explosive report on Afghanistan that is shaking Washington and its Nato allies.

The report, presided over by the former deputy director of Britain's foreign intelligence agency, MI-6, says the threat from al-Qaeda and Taliban has been "exaggerated" by the western powers. The US-led mission in Afghanistan has "ballooned" out of all proportion from its original aim of disrupting and defeating al-Qaeda. The US-led war in Afghanistan, says IISS, using uncharacteristically blunt language, is "a long-drawn-out disaster".

Just recently, CIA chief Leon Panetta admitted there were no more than 50 members of Al Qaeda in Afghanistan. Yet US President Barack Obama has tripled the number of US soldiers there to 120,000 to fight Al Qaeda.

The IISS report goes on to acknowledge the presence of western troops in Afghanistan is actually fuelling national resistance. I saw the same phenomena during the 1980's Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Interestingly, the portion of the report overseen by the former MI-6 Secret Intelligence Service deputy chief, Nigel Inskster, finds little Al Qaeda threat elsewhere, notably in Somalia and Yemen. Yet Washington is beefing up its attacks on both turbulent nations.

Abandoning its usual discretion, IISS said it was issuing these warnings because the deepening war in Afghanistan was threatening the west's security interests by distracting its leaders from the world financial crisis and Iran, and burning through scarce funds needed elsewhere.

The IISS's findings are a direct challenge to Obama, Britain's new prime minister, David Cameron, and other US allies with troops in Afghanistan. This report undermines their rational used to sustain the increasingly unpopular conflict. It will certainly convince sceptics that the real reason for occupation of Afghanistan has to do with oil, excluding China from the region, and keeping watch on nuclear-armed Pakistan.

The report also goes on to propose an exit strategy from the Afghan War. Western occupation troops, IISS proposes, should be sharply reduced and confined to Kabul and northern Afghanistan, which is mostly ethnic Tajik and Uzbek.

Southern Afghanistan – Taliban country – should be vacated by Western forces and left alone. Taliban would be allowed to govern its own half of the nation until some sort of loose, decentralised federal system can be implemented. This was, in fact, pretty much the way Afghanistan operated before the 1979 Soviet invasion.

Meanwhile, the war in Afghanistan is turning against the increasingly wobbly western occupation forces. The US-installed Afghan leader, Hamid Karzai, openly prepares for direct peace talks with Taliban and its allies – in spite of intense opposition from the US, Britain and Canada.

Pro-government Afghan forces are increasingly demoralised. Only the Tajik and Uzbek militias, and Afghan Communist Party, both supported by India, Russia and Iran, want to keep fighting the Pashtun Taliban.

Taliban leader Mullah Omar last week proclaimed the western occupiers were rapidly losing the war. He may well be correct. Nothing is going right for the US-backed Kabul regime or its western defenders. Even the much-ballyhooed US offensive at Marjah, designed to smash Taliban resistance, was an embarrassing fiasco. Civilian casualties from US bombing continue to mount.

Europeans are fed up with the Afghan war. Polls report 60% of Americans think the war not worth fighting.

The IISS bombshell comes on the heels of the most dramatic part of the British Chilcot Inquiry into the origins of the invasion of Iraq. Baroness Manningham-Buller the former head of Britain's domestic security service, MI-5, testified that the Iraq War was generated by a farrago of lies and faked evidence from the Blair government. What we call "terrorism" is largely caused by the western invasions of Afghanistan and Iraq, she testified.

The truth about Iraq and Afghanistan is finally emerging.

Afghanistan may again prove to be "the graveyard of empires".

CIA hired Karzai brother before 9/11, Woodward says

By Jeff Stein | September 30, 2010; 7:13 PM ET
http://blog.washingtonpost.com/spy-talk/20...ther_befor.html

Ahmed Wali Karzai, the half-brother of Afghanistan's president and boss of the strategically important Kandahar province, has been on the CIA payroll for over a decade, Bob Woodward writes in his new book, "Obama's Wars."

By the fall of 2008, Woodward says, "Ahmed Wali Karzai had been on the CIA payroll for years, beginning before 9/11. He had belonged to the CIA's small network of paid agents and informants inside Afghanistan. In addition, the CIA paid him money through his half-brother, the president."

Hamid Karzai was plucked from obscurity and installed as president after U.S.-backed Afghan forces chased the Taliban from power following the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

There have been many accounts of his brother's relationship with the CIA over the years, leaving the impression that he is a CIA "agent," i.e., a controlled asset of the spy agency.

But Woodward's account of the CIA's relationship with Karzai, who has also been accused repeatedly -- but not charged with -- protecting the illicit opium trade, is more nuanced.

"He was not in any sense a controlled agent who always responded to U.S. and CIA requests and pressure," Woodward writes. "He was his own man, playing all sides against the others -- the United States, the drug dealers, the Taliban and even his brother if necessary."

Still, the spymasters in Langley went with him.

"It was necessary to employ some thugs if the United States was going to have a role in a land of thugs," they concluded. "Cutting him off might break Wali Karzai's control of the city, and Kandahar might be lost entirely.

"Lose Kandahar," they thought, "and we possibly lose the war."

Last week NATO and Afghan troops launched a major military offensive around Kandahar city, with uncertain results.

Woodward's portrait of Ahmed Wali Karzai dovetails in part with an account provided to SpyTalk last year by Rep. Mike Rogers of Michigan, a former FBI agent and ranking Republican on a House panel overseeing terrorism and human intelligence issues.

Rogers, who has regularly visited Afghanistan, where his brother, an Army general, also served, depicted Ahmed Wali Karzai as someone who "cooperates" with U.S. intelligence, but is not a controlled agent.

"There's a difference between being an intelligence asset and somebody who cooperates," said Rogers. "Asset is an overstatement ... He is a public official who cooperates ... He cooperates when he's talked to -- that's different than an asset."

An American lawyer for Ahmed Wali Karzai rejected the depiction of his client as a paid CIA asset of any kind.

"It is absolutely false that Ahmad Wali Karzai is, or has been, on the CIA payroll," said Gerald Posner by e-mail.

"Since 9/11, it should be noted that Ahmad Wali has worked with virtually all aspects of U.S. and coalition forces, from regular Army, to special forces, to intelligence personnel, and diplomats as well. ..."

Posner added, "Ahmad Wali would be very surprised if the world's most sophisticated intelligence gathering agency, the CIA, had not made contacts with him over time, but they have never identified themselves as such."

Poser also rejected depictions of Karzai as "the landlord in Kandahar for CIA or military facilities rented by the United States," as Woodward wrote.

"He is not the owner of those properties, and does not collect rent from those groups. He has no role in the Kandahar Strike Force. He receives no American taxpayer monies of any type," Posner said.

CIA spokesman George Little reiterated today that, "We don't, as a rule, comment on these kinds of allegations, which have circulated for a long time."

But a U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, praised Karzai's contribution to the war effort, saying he "has made decisive contributions to counter-terror efforts in Afghanistan, and he's helped save Afghan and American lives."

"No one's saying he's perfect, but nobody's found anything yet that would land him in court," the official added. "And Americans have looked. Afghanistan is a tough place. It's clear that he's focused on improving security in his country. He deserves praise for that."

'Royal Navy are pirates': Argentina's president accuses British government of behaving like imperial power after military tests in Atlantic

The president of Argentina president has accused the Royal Navy of behaving like pirates after the Ministry of Defence carried out military tests on the Falkland Islands.

Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner used the social networking website Twitter to attack the British government over the recent missile tests in the disputed territory.

The president accused Britain of violating international law and branded the Navy an 'occupying colonial force'.

'Serious, very serious,' Mrs Kirchner posted on her Twitter feed at the weekend.

'Royal Navy, occupying colonial force in Falkland Islands, reports military exercise with missiles on the coast of East Falkland.

'Typical nineteenth century colonialism. Anachronistic use of force in violation of international law. They do not care. A clear example of double standards.'

She then signed off with the message: 'Conclusion... pirates for ever?'

Mrs Kirchner also announced she plant so summon Shan Morgan, the British ambassador in Argentina, to voice her concerns.

Her Twitter attack came just days after an Argentine warship confronted a Falklands trawler and accused it of fishing illegally.

The two boats became locked in a stand-off on Thursday - the first confrontation of its kind for four years.

The Argentinians demanded to know details of the Port Stanley vessel - the FV Venturerer - and radioed its crew.

The Venturerer - 3.5 miles inside Falklands waters - eventually moved away to avoid a larger clash.

Mrs Kirchner - who succeeded husband Ernesto as Argentine head of state - took to Twitter after British diplomats informed her of the missile tests on the Falklands.

A local British Embassy spokesman, quoted in Argentine daily La Nacion, later admitted: 'We are a little taken aback because these exercises are routine and are carried out every six months.

'They've been happening for 28 years. That's why we're so surprised.'

Mrs Kirchner has pledged an 'eternal fight' for the Falkland Islands, called Las Malvinas in the south American country.

But she has ruled out the use of weapons to win back the islands Argentina took briefly by force during its 1982 invasion which preceded a 74-day war with Britain.

Tension between the two countries have mounted in recent months after oil exploration started in the islands.

Tests have shown there could be 700 million barrels of crude worth around £3 billion in the region.

Kelly wounds 'self-inflicted', says pathology report

Dr Kelly was the source of a BBC report casting doubt on government claims about Iraq's weapons

22 October 2010 Last updated at 15:20
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-11603539

Previously secret evidence about the death of Iraq weapons expert Dr David Kelly suggests that he died as a result of a "self-inflicted injury".

The post-mortem report into his 2003 death blamed blood loss after cuts to his left wrist, aided by a painkiller overdose and "silent" heart disease.

The report backs up Lord Hutton's verdict that he committed suicide.

Two doctors who cast doubt on the case have come to opposing conclusions about whether their questions are answered.

Professor Julian Bion told BBC Radio 5 Live the newly published report "certainly satisfied" him that the cause of death given was the correct one. But former coroner Dr Michael Powers said many issues had still not been addressed.

The report was published on Friday, as ministers sought to end speculation over his death.
Public interest

A group of doctors have been calling for the case to be reopened, arguing that the suicide verdict was unsafe.

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods close to his Oxfordshire home in 2003, after it was revealed he had provided the information for a BBC News story casting doubt on the government's claim that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction capable of being fired within 45 minutes.

Instead of a coroner's inquest, then Prime Minister Tony Blair asked Lord Hutton to conduct an investigation, which found Dr Kelly had died from blood loss after slashing his wrist with a knife.

Lord Hutton requested that the details of the post-mortem examination and toxicology tests be classified for 70 years - to protect the privacy of the Kelly family.

But the Ministry of Justice said it was now releasing the details "in the interests of maintaining public confidence" in Lord Hutton's conclusions.

"While I firmly believe that the publication of these documents is in the public interest, I am mindful that the contents may be distressing," Justice Secretary Ken Clarke said, urging people to respect the Kelly family's privacy.
'Loss of blood'

In the post-mortem, Home Office pathologist Dr Nicholas Hunt noted that wounds to Dr Kelly's left wrist resulted in "the loss of a significant volume of blood".

They were "entirely consistent with having been inflicted with a bladed weapon" while "their orientation and arrangement...are typical of self-inflicted injury", he concluded.

Among the factors he believes indicated suicide, Dr Hunt said the removal of Dr Kelly's watch and spectacles are "features pointing towards this being an act of self-harm," as is the "relatively passive distribution of blood and....the lack of obvious signs of trampling of the undergrowth or damage to clothing".

Furthermore, there was also a "total lack of classical defence wounds against a sharp weapon attack".

The toxicology report by forensic scientist Alexander Allan showed a high concentration of paracetamol and dextropropoxyphene in Dr Kelly's blood. The two make up co-proxamol - a prescription-only drug for pain treatment.
'Considerable' overdose

Campaigners have questioned whether the painkillers in Dr Kelly's system were enough to cause death - and Dr Hunt says in his report that "the levels of paracetamol and dextropropoxyphene in the blood are not particularly high and may not ordinarily have caused death in their own right".

But he adds that dextropropoxyphene can cause fatal heart rhythm abnormalities in people with low blood pressure as a result of bleeding.

The toxicology report concluded Dr Kelly took a "considerable" overdose of the drug but he had died before all the paracetamol had been absorbed into his system.

Thee was "nothing new" in the post-mortem report, Dr Powers said, and issues such as the amount of blood at the scene and uncertainty over the number of pills Dr Kelly had taken had not been resolved.

"If he were only to have taken six to eight tablets, what does that say about his intent to take his own life?" he said. "I don't believe any of the evidence we have seen or heard to date can answer those questions."

However Prof Bion said he found the report "convincing."

In a statement, Lord Hutton said there had never been any secrecy about the post-mortem report as lawyers had had access to it during his inquiry.

A spokesman for the Kelly family said he hoped that the documents' release would end speculation about the scientist's death.

Falkland Islands tensions could be eased with death of Nestor Kirchner, analysts predict Argentinian tensions with Britain over the Falkland Islands could be eased following the death of Nestor Kirchner, the former president, according to political analysts.

By Robin Yapp in Sao Paulo
Published: 6:02PM BST 28 Oct 2010
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...ts-predict.html

Mr Kirchner died in hospital on Wednesday morning after suffering a heart attack. His wife Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner, the current Argentine president, was by his side.

Experts on Latin American politics said that the death of Mr Kirchner, who remained a key adviser to his wife and was widely expected to run in the 2011 presidential election instead of her, created a political vacuum.

Mr Kirchner was known for his combative stance both domestically and on issues such as the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands.

His wife has ruled in much the same vein and recently claimed Britain was guilty of "typical nineteenth century colonialism" due to plans to carry out military tests in the Falklands.

But Mrs Kirchner could now come under pressure to stand aside for a more moderate candidate within the Peronist party in the months ahead.

She would also risk losing to the opposition UCR party if she does run without her husband, according to Professor Mark Jones, of the department of political science at Rice University in Texas.

"This may very well signify the end of the Kirchners´ monopoly on power," said Professor Jones.

"An alternative Peronist or UCR presidency would see a less confrontational approach and more attempts to engage in dialogue over the status of the Falklands and issues such as oil exploration and fisheries."

Even in the event that President Kirchner remains in power, he predicts that there would probably be "less aggressive and confrontational grandstanding" on the Falkland Islands.

"The reaction at first will be of grief and condolence but then the vultures will move in," added Federico Thomsen, a political consultant in the Argentine capital Buenos Aires.

Daniel Scioli, the governor of Buenos Aires Province, is considered a potential successor to President Kirchner from within the Peronist party.

Mr Kirchner was president from 2003 to 2007 when his wife successfully ran for presidency, in what was widely viewed as an attempt to circumvent Argentina´s two-term presidential limit.

Thousands visited the government palace in Buenos Aires on Thursday, where Mr Kirchner´s body was lying in state, to pay their respects.

His body was flown back to the capital early on Thursday morning from the town of Calafate in Patagonia, where he died.

'Perverse' defence cuts leave oil-rich Falkland Islands open to attack, ex-admirals warn

By Daily Mail Reporter
Last updated at 4:17 PM on 10th November 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...irals-warn.html

A group of former Royal Navy chiefs have urged the Government to reverse its decision to scrap the aircraft carrier Ark Royal and the fleet of Harrier jets.

The commanders said the recently-announced defence cuts would leave the oil-rich Falkland Islands open to a fresh Argentinian attack 'from which British prestige...might never recover'.

In a strongly worded letter to the Times signatories including former Navy boss Lord West, insisted the David Cameron was badly advised before agreeing to the measures.

'I am not convinced he had a full and proper briefing about the implications,' Lord West told the newspaper.

A Harrier jet of 1(F) Joint Force Squadron hovers as it comes in to land on the flight deck of HMS Ark Royal during an exercise in july Describing the Harrier decision as 'strategically and financially perverse', the group claimed keeping Tornado jets would cost seven times as much in maintenance during the next decade.

'Was the recent exercise not supposed to save money?', they said.

The other signatories are former Admiral of the Fleet Sir Julian Oswald, Vice-Admiral Sir Jeremy Blackham, Vice-Admiral John McAnally and Major-General Julian Thompson.

Lord West served as a counter-terrorism minister in the previous Labour government.

They said: 'In respect of the newly valuable Falklands and their oilfields, because of these and other cuts, for the next 10 years at least, Argentina is practically invited to attempt to inflict on us a national humiliation on the scale of the loss of Singapore.

'One from which British prestige, let alone the administration in power at the time, might never recover.'

The coalition Government announced a series of defence cuts as part of last month's Strategic Defence and Security Review.

Other measures included cutting the number of Army troops by around 7,000, taking it to 95,000 by 2015, and scrapping the planned Nimrod MRA4 maritime reconnaissance aircraft, despite spending £3 billion on its development.

The admirals invoked the threat from Hitler to warn about the cuts, saying: 'The government has, in effect, declared a new '10-year rule' that assumes Britain will have warning time to rebuild to face a threat.

'The last Treasury-driven '10-year rule' in the 1930s nearly cost us our freedom, faced with Hitler.'

They concluded: 'We believe that these decisions should be rescinded in the over-riding national interest, before it is too late.'

Lord West told BBC Radio 4's Today programme: 'What we mustn't forget is that the Argentines still see sovereignty as a major issue.

Steel helmets abandoned by Argentine armed forces who surrendered at Goose Green to British Falklands Task Force troops

'If the islands were captured we have absolutely no way whatsoever of recovering them unless we have carrier air.'

He said the Falklands were an example to illustrate the lack of capability: 'It applies all around the world. The only way to get fixed-wing air covering our troops is to have them on aircraft carriers. The Tornado can't get to any of these places.'

Defence minister Nick Harvey told the programme: 'The actual battle we are involved in here and now is the battle in Afghanistan.

'This was a very difficult decision. It was looked at in immense detail. In the end a decision had to be made and we took the decision on the basis of the balance of military advice coming from the current military leadership.'

But Defence Secretary Liam Fox defended the changes. He said: 'It is simply not the case that decommissioning the Harrier would impact upon our ability to defend territories in the South Atlantic.

'We maintain a wide range of assets, not least a well-defended airfield to ensure the defence of the Falkland Islands.

'The Harrier force has made an impressive contribution to our nation's security over the decades but difficult decisions had to be made... and I'm clear that rationalising our fast jet fleet makes both operational and economic common sense.'

Britain maintains a permanent military force in and around the Falkland Islands which includes 500 soldiers, four Eurofighter Typhoon aircraft and two nuclear submarines.

Drug expert claims David Kelly was murdered as he could not have taken overdose

By Miles Goslett and Sue Reid
Last updated at 5:23 PM on 13th November 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...rug-expert.html

Police have been urged to start a murder inquiry into Dr David Kelly's death following further allegations that he did not commit suicide.

Officers have been told the government scientist could not have taken an overdose of painkillers.

This overdose was found by the original pathologist to be one of the causes of his death.

Dr Andrew Watt, an experienced clinical pharmacologist, says he has told Thames Valley Police it is not possible Dr Kelly could have swallowed more than a 'safe' dose of two coproxamol tablets because there was so little in his system after death.

He said: 'I reported to the Thames force that I believe that the death of Dr Kelly may have been murder. I have received an acknowledgement and they have given me an incident number.

'I have been told that the inquiry is being conducted by a very senior officer.'
A second development also casts doubt on the suicide verdict of the Hutton inquiry – which took the place of a formal inquest.

The Mail has established that Dr Kelly left an upbeat answerphone message to his friend Nigel Cox just days before his body was found on July 18, 2003. Dr Kelly said he was looking forward to joining him for a game of cards on July 23.

Mr Cox, who played in the same pub cribbage team as Dr Kelly, was on holiday at the time and only received the message after the scientist's death.

The message said 'Hi Nige, I will see you at crib next Wednesday', said Mr Cox, adding that the tone convinced him his friend was not suicidal.

He contacted Thames Valley Police and suggested they listen to it because he believed it was an important indication of Dr Kelly's state of mind and showed he had plans for the future. According to Mr Cox, police expressed interest in the message but it was never collected by investigating officers.

Dr Michael Powers QC, representing a group of doctors who have begun legal action to secure a full inquest on Dr Kelly, said: 'Establishing evidence of intent to commit suicide is essential.

'It is very surprising Thames Valley Police failed to follow up this important lead. Were there to be a coroner's inquest this evidence would have to be investigated.'

Last night Thames Valley Police declined to comment on why they did not collect the answerphone message. A spokesman said: 'There has been a thorough investigation into the death of Dr David Kelly and that investigation has been the subject of a major inquiry by Lord Hutton.'

Police confirmed they had received Dr Watt's allegation that the scientist was murdered.

'This will be considered by senior officers at the next meeting we have on David Kelly. We have not yet decided what to do about Dr Watt's information,' said a spokesman.

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods near his Oxfordshire home shortly after he was unmasked as the source of a BBC report claiming the government 'sexed up' a dossier on Iraq's weapons.

Attorney General Dominic Grieve is facing mounting demands for an inquest and has promised to make a decision on this shortly.

'No Falkland talks' over carriers

16.11.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...ver-carriers.do

No discussions have been held between Britain and France on whether aircraft carriers could be sent to defend the Falkland Islands, Armed Forces Minister Nick Harvey said.

The Government "have not seen this as necessary", Mr Harvey said, despite the two countries recently agreeing to share carriers as part of a defence cooperation treaty.

The deal raised concerns that the UK could be left without carrier strike capability if only a French ship was available and Paris decided it did not want to take part in military action that was not in its national interest.

Defence Secretary Liam Fox conceded there was "no means" of coercing France into action, saying of the deal: "Would that mean that we would be able to force the French to do something against their will during that period or vice-versa? Of course it wouldn't."

Last week a group of retired senior commanders warned that defence cuts - including the decision to scrap the Harrier force and the aircraft carrier Ark Royal - "practically invited" Argentina to attempt to take the "newly valuable" Falklands.

In a written parliamentary question, the DUP's David Simpson (Upper Bann) asked whether Dr Fox "has had discussions with the French government on the possible deployment of aircraft carriers to the Falkland Islands".

Mr Harvey replied: "There have been no discussions with the French government on the possible deployment of aircraft carriers to the Falkland Islands because we have not seen this as necessary."

Part of the wide-ranging Anglo-French defence deal will see the creation of an integrated carrier force with the two countries co-ordinating the refit programmes of their single remaining carriers to ensure that from the 2020s onwards at least one ship will always be available for joint operations.

French President Nicolas Sarkozy has sought to play down suggestions that France would not be prepared to deploy its carrier in support of British interests if the UK vessel was in dock.

"This is a decision which is unprecedented and shows a level of trust and confidence between our two nations which is unequalled in history," he said when the treaties were signed.

Dr. Kelly was murdered: British experts

November 16, 2010
http://www.presstv.ir/detail/151209.html

Drugs experts leading an inquiry into the death of Britain's former weapons inspector in Iraq, David Kelly, say his death was "murder" and not suicide.

Experts also called on the police to launch a murder inquiry into Dr Kelly's death, casting serious doubt on the official claim the scientist overdosed on painkillers.

According to Dr Andrew Watt who is a top clinical pharmacologist, Kelly could have only take a "safe" dose of coproxamol painkiller tablets as there was so little of the substance in his blood after he died.

"I reported to the Thames [Valley Police] force that I believe that the death of Dr Kelly may have been murder. I have received an acknowledgement and they have given me an incident number," Watt said.

He added he has been "told that the inquiry is being conducted by a very senior officer".
A d v e r t i s e m e n t

This comes as other reports strengthen doubts about the validity of the verdict by the Hutton inquiry which took priority over an inquest normally required for cases of suspicious death.

According to Daily Mail Kelly left an answer-phone message for his Friend Nigel Cox a few days before his death on July 18, 2003, saying he is looking forward to joining him for a game of cards on July 23.

Cox who was on holiday when Kelly left him the message, heard it only after his friend's death.

"Hi Nige, I will see you at crib next Wednesday" said the message according to Cox who concluded Kelly's tone was positive and not suicidal.

Cox said he told the Thames Valley Police about the message as its tone could help them ensure Kelly was not thinking of suicide but the force never came around to collect the message.

This is while according to Dr Michael Powers QC who is the representative of a group of doctors pushing for a full inquest in to Kelly's death "Establishing evidence of intent to commit suicide is essential".

"It is very surprising Thames Valley Police failed to follow up this important lead. Were there to be a coroner's inquest this evidence would have to be investigated," Powers said.

Thames Valley Police has refused to comment on why they failed to collect the answer-phone message.

Kelly was found dead after he left his home in Oxfordshire for a daily walk with a cut left wrist artery.

A few days before his death he had disclosed to the BBC that the government had “sexed up” a dossier on Iraq’s alleged weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) to justify the invasions of the Middle Eastern country.

FALKLANDS ‘AT RISK OF INVASION’

Soldiers carry a wounded comrade in the Falkland Island conflict.

Sunday November 28,2010
By Daily Express Reporter
http://express.co.uk/posts/view/214174/Fal...sk-of-invasion-

THE Falklands could be retaken by a “handful” of Argentines, senior military sources have warned.

Although garrisoned by 500 British soldiers and a few Typhoon aircraft, it would just take the capturing of the only airfield in the capital Port Stanley to place the islands under Argentine control.

The warning comes after the week the last Harrier jump jets took off from the aircraft carrier Ark Royal. Both will be scrapped as part of the Strategic Defence Review.

Without an aircraft carrier, the nearest base from which to launch jets is 4,000 miles away, in Ascension.

Last night Admiral Chris Parry said: “If we had the carrier, Argentina would not even consider trying. It’s still not too late for the Government to reverse its mistake.”

Falklands oil found by Desire Petroleum

A number of exploration companies are seeking oil in the Falklands

2 December 2010 Last updated at 22:49
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-latin-america-11906367

A British exploration company says it has discovered oil off the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic - the second such find this year.

Desire Petroleum said it would carry out further tests to assess the significance of the discovery.

It said it believed further oil fields would be found in the area.

Oil exploration around the Falklands has angered Argentina, which challenges British sovereignty over the islands it calls the Malvinas.

Desire Petroleum's shares went up by 24% on the news.

Long-running dispute

Chairman of Desire Stephen Phipps called the find in the North Falkland Basin "highly encouraging."

Another British company, Rockhopper, found oil in the same area in May.

It is not clear if either find will prove commercially viable.

The resumptrion of oil exploration around the Falklands earlier this year revived the long-running dispute between Britain and Argentina over the islands.

In February Argentina announced new controls on shipping to the Falklands.

It has also raised the issue at the United Nations and rallied support for its sovereignty claim among Latin American countries.

Britain says it has no doubt about its sovereignty over the islands, where most of the population is of British descent.

The Argentine military invaded the Falklands in 1982 but was defeated by Britain in the war which followed.

WikiLeaks: US concerned over Falklands military action

The US became concerned about the prospect of Argentina taking military action in retaliation for British companies exploring the Falkland Islands for oil in 2009, according to cables obtained by WikiLeaks.

By Robin Yapp, Sao Paulo 12:11AM GMT 03 Dec 2010
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...ary-action.html

British companies began exploratory drilling in the Falklands early this year but had been preparing to do so for years in advance, leading to rising tensions with Argentina.

Documents leaked to the website show how the US became concerned in June 2009 by a change of language used by President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner´s government about the islands.

President Kirchner once pledged an "eternal fight" for the islands known to Argentines as Las Malvinas and the US believed she might use the issue to deflect from domestic problems.

A cable from January 2010 shows that American officials wanted to know whether there was a possibility of unilateral military action by Argentina or of a joint offensive with the help of allies such as Venezuela in response to Britain´s oil quest.

The US State Department asked to be kept informed by diplomats about any discussions on the topic inside the Argentinian govenment and "among military officers".

"Given current economic conditions in Argentina, it is possible that the country can use the oil exploration in the region to assert their claims over the islands and surrounding waters," it added.

The cables, details of which were published by the Spanish newspaper El Pais, report on a meeting between by Anthony Wayne, then the US ambassador to Argentina, and Jorge Taiana, then the Argentine Foreign Minister.

They refer to a 2004 accord between Argentina, the US government and "other key governments" but report that Argentina had now "abandoned the specific language agreed".

The change followed a presentation to the UN made by Argentina detailing new claims over Antarctica in April 2009 but Mr Wayne said Mr Taiana told him that Argentina's first issue was not the Antarctic but protecting their claims over the Falkland Islands.

The US State Department refers to the islands as the Falklands while cables from the US embassy in Buenos Aires remain neutral by using both the Argentine and British names - Malvinas/Falklands.

According to the US Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina sought to exert pressure through formal protest in the UK, warning letters to each company related to the oil operations and letters to the governments associated with these companies.

A despatch in February this year entitled ´Argentina: Saber Rattling over Oil Exploration´ added that the "budget-strapped Argentine military" is ill-prepared to respond with military force but that the country may continue to press its claims by other means.

Desire Petroleum Plc said on Thursday that it had discovered oil in a Falkland Islands well, making it the second British firm to do so following Rockhopper Exploration in May.

The discovery threatens to heighten tensions as Argentina continues to ban vessels involved in the exploration to load cargo at its ports.

The Falklands were briefly seized by the military junta that ruled Argentina in 1982 but a British naval force and thousands of troops reclaimed the islands.

Riddle of missing fingerprints on Dr David Kelly's 'overdose' pill packs

By Miles Goslett
Last updated at 11:22 PM on 5th December 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...erdosed-on.html

Fresh doubts have been raised over how Dr David Kelly died after police admitted no fingerprints were found on the packs of pills he supposedly overdosed on.

The public inquiry into Dr Kelly's death found the weapons expert killed himself by slashing his wrist with a pruning knife and taking 'an excess amount of co-proxamol tablets'.

Three blister packs of the painkiller, each able to hold ten pills, were retrieved from Dr Kelly's coat pocket when his body was found in woods near his home.

Fresh controversy: Dr Kelly is said to have killed himself after being named as the prime source of a BBC report accusing Tony Blair's government of lying to take Britain into war. But the lack on fingerprints on the pill packets cast fresh doubt

Only one tablet remained, leading his post mortem examination report to state he may have taken up to 29 pills.

Co-proxamol ingestion is listed as a cause of death on his death certificate.

But Thames Valley Police has now revealed that when it tested two of the blister packs for fingerprints there were 'none recovered'.

The development is doubly significant because police have already said the knife which Dr Kelly is said to have used to cut his wrist did not have fingerprints on – nor did an open bottle of water found beside his body.

The lack of fingerprints on these items is particularly difficult to explain given that Dr Kelly was not wearing gloves when his body was recovered on July 18, 2003. No gloves were found at the scene.

Dr Kelly is said to have killed himself after being named as the prime source of a BBC report accusing Tony Blair's government of lying to take Britain into war.

Uniquely, for an unexpected death such as his, no coroner's inquest has ever been held.

The idea that Dr Kelly took pills of any description has long been contested by those who knew him.

Mai Pederson, a U.S. military official who worked with Dr Kelly in Iraq in the 1990s, has told the Mail he suffered from 'unexplained dysphagia' – a syndrome that can make it almost impossible to swallow pills. Friends have confirmed this.

Police have also revealed the half litre bottle of water found next to Dr Kelly's body had 111ml of water left in it, triggering questions about the likelihood that he could have swallowed 29 pills with the aid of 389ml of water – about half a pint.

Documents released under the Freedom of Information Act show that the third co-proxamol blister pack was not subjected to a fingerprint search but was 'reserved for DNA' with a 'full profile of Dr Kelly obtained'.

But this unspecified DNA evidence – which could for example be blood or sweat – does not explain the lack of prints on the first two packs.

Fingerprint expert Peter Swann, said: 'Fingerprint testing is a complex area. It is surprising no prints were found on any of these items.

'It is possible there were no prints but it would be advisable to have the exhibits re-examined by an independent expert.'

It is not known if any of the exhibits have been destroyed. None of the exhibits was presented as evidence to the Hutton Inquiry.

Attorney General Dominic Grieve is currently considering whether there is sufficient new evidence to apply to the High Court for an inquest into Dr Kelly's death.

Dr Michael Powers QC, who represents a group of doctors campaigning for an inquest, said: 'The fact no fingerprints were recovered is odd to say the least.'

EXCLUSIVE: Published for the first time, the papers which could finally force full inquest into the death of Dr David Kelly

By Miles Goslett
Last updated at 10:46 AM on 13th December 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...ce-inquest.html

Today, the Daily Mail publishes for the first time the legal document which could trigger a full coroner's inquest into the death of Dr David Kelly.

The document, formally known as a memorial was written by group of campaigning doctors who have been trying to secure an inquest since 2004.

It lists the sequence of events which led up to Dr Kelly's death and the legal reasons they believe an inquest ought to be held.

It was sent to Attorney General Dominic Grieve QC by the doctors' lawyers, Leigh Day & Co., in September. Mr Grieve, who has read the document, is now considering whether to allow an application to the High Court for an inquest. The Mail has learnt that he has recently appointed a medical expert to assist him. His decision is expected shortly.

Dr Kelly, a world-renowned weapons inspector, is said to have killed himself after being named as the prime source of a BBC report accusing Tony Blair's government of lying to take Britain into war.

His body was found in woods close to his home in Oxfordshire on July 18 2003. Uniquely, for an unexpected death such as his, no coroner's inquest has ever been held.

The Hutton inquiry into his death found that he killed himself after slashing his wrist with a blunt knife and overdosing on painkillers.

On Monday the Mail revealed that no fingerprints were found on the blister packs of pills which Dr Kelly supposedly took. No fingerprints were recovered either from the knife or a bottle of water found by his side.

He was not wearing gloves when his body was found, nor were there gloves anywhere near the body.

The memorial argues that Dr Kelly's death was not sufficiently investigated and claims that there are a large number of irregularities surrounding it.

It names Lord Falconer, once Tony Blair's flatmate and in June 2003 appointed Lord Chancellor, as the architect of the public inquiry into Dr Kelly's death chaired by Lord Hutton.

It was Falconer who proposed the controversial decision to abandon a coroner's inquest, where witnesses would be cross-examined under oath, and replace it with a non-statutory examination of the circumstances leading to Dr Kelly's death. As a result no witness, including Tony Blair and his press secretary Alastair Campbell, swore an oath or was cross-examined.

Dr Nicholas Hunt, the Home Office forensic pathologist who carried out the autopsy on Dr Kelly, is also criticised in the memorial for having breached professional guidelines by giving a newspaper interview earlier this year in which he called Dr Kelly's death a 'textbook suicide'. His failure to properly carry out his duties at the scene where Dr Kelly's body was found is outlined.

The memorial addresses - and answers - each of the six legal points necessary for a coroner's inquest to be re-opened. Under section 13 of the Coroners Act 1988 only one of these points has to be satisfied for an inquest to take place.

The 10,000-word document was co-authored by doctors Stephen Frost, Martin Birnstingl, Christopher Burns-Cox, David Halpin and Andrew Rouse.

It also requests that if an inquest is held a new coroner should be appointed to oversee it, replacing Oxfordshire coroner Nicholas Gardiner.

Dr Michael Powers QC, who has been instructed to represent the doctors in their legal action, said: 'The circumstances of this case are highly unusual. Evidential issues have been debated in public for want of an inquest.

'The Attorney General's department has had three months to consider the matter. The time has come for the doctors' Memorial also to be put into the public domain.

'It is vital that as many people as possible are aware of the process and the legal reason why there should be an inquest.'

Case for inquest into David Kelly death 'unanswerable'

Dr Kelly was the source of a BBC report casting doubt on government claims about Iraq's weapons

29 December 2010 Last updated at 00:02
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-politics-12085257

Campaigners for a full inquest into the death of government weapons inspector David Kelly say they have presented an "unanswerable" case.

A lawyer for the group behind the demand said they hoped Attorney General Dominic Grieve would resist political pressure to deny one.

Mr Grieve is expected to announce soon whether he will comply with a request to ask the High Court for an inquest.

The Hutton inquiry found in 2004 that Dr Kelly had committed suicide.

And the post-mortem report into his 2003 death, which the government released in October, suggested he had died as a result of a "self-inflicted injury".

It blamed blood loss after cuts to his left wrist, aided by a painkiller overdose and "silent" heart disease.

Dr Kelly's body was found in woods close to his Oxfordshire home, after it was revealed he had provided the information for a BBC News story casting doubt on the government's claim that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction capable of being fired within 45 minutes.

Instead of holding a coroner's inquest, the then Prime Minister, Tony Blair, asked Lord Hutton to conduct an investigation, which found Dr Kelly had died from blood loss after slashing his wrist with a knife.
'Irregularities'

But a group of five doctors is calling for the case to be reopened, arguing that the suicide verdict was unsafe.

Mr Grieve has been considering the doctors' arguments - set out in a 33-page petition known in legal language as a "memorial" - since September and is expected to announce early in 2011 whether he will comply with their request for him to ask the High Court to order an inquest.

One of the doctors, Michael Powers, said the Hutton inquiry had not been an adequate substitute for the "full, frank and fearless" investigation required by coroners' guidelines.

Dr Powers said: "For several months now the attorney general has been considering the 'memorial' of the doctors. This legal document sets out details of the insufficiency and irregularities of Lord Hutton's informal inquiry which, in our opinion, make the argument for a proper inquest unanswerable.

"Although the senior government law officer, it is hoped and expected that Dominic Grieve QC MP will put aside political considerations in reaching his decision on the law.

"The circumstances of Dr Kelly's death merit a detailed examination of all the evidence in a coroner's court. Many questions have been asked which demand proper answers. It is in the public interest that confidence is maintained in the due process of law."

The doctors insist the publication of the post-mortem report has not ended key questions, such as:
how Dr Kelly obtained a packet of coproxamol painkillers why his blood and stomach contained only a non-toxic dose of the drug why he was not spotted by a police helicopter with thermal imaging cameras which flew over the wood where his body was later found why no fingerprints were found on the knife apparently used to slit his wrist whether he in fact intended to kill himself

The doctors also highlight the dual role of Labour's Lord Falconer, who ordered the inquiry as Constitutional Affairs Secretary and then declared himself satisfied with its findings in his other government job as Lord Chancellor.

The Hutton inquiry was "manifestly relatively powerless and lacking investigative bite when compared to its statutory equivalent or coronial proceedings," argues the memorial document.

But, following the publication of the post-mortem report, Lord Hutton said there had never been any secrecy about it, as lawyers had had access to it during his inquiry.

A spokesman for the Kelly family said he hoped that the release of the information would end speculation about the scientist's death.

Desire Petroleum in Falklands oil setback

29 December 2010 Last updated at 22:10
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12090825

Shares in Desire Petroleum have again fallen sharply after another disappointment over the firm's oil exploration off the Falkland Islands.

Desire has announced that despite drilling to a depth of 1,300m at its Jacinta well in the North Falkland basin, there were no hydrocarbons.

The company's shares fell 29% on the news, despite Desire saying that it would now drill to 1,670m.

On 6 December, Desire's shares tumbled 50% after another well was capped.

Desire's shares, which reached 170p in October, closed down 29.4% at 42.5p.

When exploration off the Falklands began earlier this year, the share prices of several companies rose in expectation of an oil and gas boom.

But analysts say drilling results have so far proved disappointing.

And in November there were reports that ExxonMobil, the world's largest oil company not owned by a government, had decided that the islands contained insufficient hydrocarbons to make exploration profitable.

FALKLANDS SHIP BAN BY BRAZIL

The HMS Clyde was blocked from Rio de Janeiro (pictured).

Wednesday January 12,2011
By Daily Express reporter
http://express.co.uk/posts/view/222613/Fal...p-ban-by-Brazil

BRAZIL has banned a Royal Navy ship from visiting Rio de Janeiro in a row over the Falklands.

The country’s new Left-wing government blocked the routine visit by HMS Clyde last week.

The 1,800 ton Falkland Islands protection vessel was due to visit as part of Britain’s defence diplomacy. Instead it had to reroute to Chile.

President Dilma Rousseff, who took office on New Year’s Day, acted to show solidarity with Argentina’s claim to the South Atlantic islands. It is the first time Brazil has supported Argentina in such a public way.

The snub is part of a concerted campaign by South American countries to support Argentina’s claim by blocking ships that serve the Falklands.

In September Uruguay refused to allow HMS Gloucester to carry out a routine visit to Montevideo.

A UK Foreign Office spokesman said last night: “We respect Brazil’s right to make such a decision. We have a close relationship with Brazil.”

David Kelly death riddle grows as it emerges personal items found on his body did not have fingerprints on them

By Miles Goslett
Last updated at 1:31 AM on 27th January 2011
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...ngerprints.html

Further questions have been raised over the death of Dr David Kelly after police admitted that two personal items found with his body – his mobile phone and a watch – did not have any fingerprints on them.

The news brings the number of objects without fingerprints at the site where the weapons inspector’s body was discovered to five – the other three being the knife he allegedly used to slash his wrist, the packs of pills he is said to have overdosed on, and a water bottle.

It had been suggested that the lack of fingerprints on the knife might be due to the presence of gaffer tape on it. But Thames Valley Police have now confirmed that the knife had no tape on its handle.

Dr Kelly is said to have killed himself in 2003 after being named as the prime source of a BBC report accusing Tony Blair’s government of lying to take Britain into war in Iraq. No coroner’s inquest has been held. Instead, a public inquiry found he killed himself in woods near his Oxfordshire home.

In another disclosure, following questions submitted under the Freedom of Information Act, police admitted they still do not know who owned the watch found beside his body. Police did not bother to check with Dr Kelly’s relatives if it belonged to him.

Fingerprint expert Peter Swann last night called for the five items to be independently re-examined. Police have also refused to say if their investigation into Dr Kelly’s death is open or closed, admitting only that their inquiries are ‘substantially complete’.

FINGERPRINT RIDDLE PROMPTS NEW CALLS OVER DAVID KELLY DEATH

Wednesday March 2 2011 by Lianne Kolirin http://express.co.uk/posts/view/232065/Fin...vid-Kelly-death

A FULL inquest into the death of weapons inspector David Kelly was called for last night after it emerged his fingerprints were not on items found by his body.

An inquest was opened days after Dr Kelly’s body was found in woods near his Oxfordshire home in July 2003. But, unusually, it was never completed.

Although the Hutton Inquiry investigated events leading up to the Government scientist’s death, campaigners argue it was “insufficient” as a replacement for an inquest.

The fresh information, which has been presented to the Attorney General Dominic Grieve, shows that no fingerprints were recovered from the knife which Dr Kelly allegedly used to slit his wrist and a pack of pills which he apparently took. Nor were they found on a mobile phone, watch and water bottle near his body.

It appears to strengthen the case for a full inquest into the death of the former weapons inspector. The claim comes in a new dossier of evidence handed to Mr Grieve on Monday by a group of doctors who are petitioning him to reopen inquiries into Dr Kelly's death.

Mr Grieve is expected to announce in weeks if he will request the High Court to order a coroner's inquest.

The new dossier, submitted after the Attorney General requested further information about Dr Kelly's case, highlights documents released by police in January.

The lack of fingerprint evidence was not considered by the Hutton Inquiry, which concluded that Dr Kelly committed suicide amid the row over his role in critical reports about the Government's case for the war in Iraq.

The doctors wrote: "It is submitted that to properly investigate the circumstances of Dr Kelly's death, any coroner would be obliged to make enquiries as to why there were no fingerprints found, including seeking evidence on whether any tests were carried out to establish if anything had been used to attempt to erase fingerprint evidence."

The new dossier supplements the doctors' formal legal petition in September, and raises questions about apparent discrepancies between witness accounts of the state of Dr Kelly's body.

There are also issues surrounding his clothing and position of his body with reports he was found wearing only a cotton shirt and jeans, rather than the green Barbour jacket mentioned at the inquiry.

The doctors suggest it could have an impact on when he died. The two people who found him said that he was sitting against a tree, while pathologist Nicholas Hunt described him as lying several feet in front. Other witnesses did not corroborate Dr Hunt's report that there was a "pool of blood" extending two to three feet from Dr Kelly's left arm.

The new document also questions why Lord Hutton – who devoted only half a day of his 24-day inquiry to medical information – took no evidence from vascular surgeons or other clinicians on whether death was caused by loss of blood.

The doctors wrote: "Were there to be an inquest into Dr Kelly's death, there is a possibility that the verdict would not be suicide."

Falkland oil well boosts Rockhopper shares

Rockhopper says it has discovered a substantial oil column in Falklands water

21 March 2011 Last updated at 12:12
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/business-12804076

Shares in Rockhopper Exploration jumped 38% after the British oil company said its oil well in the Falkland Islands is likely to prove commercially viable.

In a trading update the firm said an appraisal of its Sea Lion well had found a high quality reservoir package.

"Following this positive result we believe Sea Lion is highly likely to prove commercially viable," said chief executive Samuel Moody.

It raises hopes that the territory could become a new oil province.

The announcement came as oil prices climbed $2 a barrel following a series of air strikes against Libya, the world's twelfth-largest oil producer.

Brent crude rose as much as $2.26 to $116.19 a barrel, while US light, sweet crude rose as much as $2.13 to $103.20.

Rockhopper began drilling for oil off the coast of the British-governed islands last year and struck oil in May.

It was the first discovery of oil in Falkland Islands waters.

Following further tests the company has said it had discovered a substantial oil column and oil-water contact for the first time.

The quality of the oil is of medium grade, according to the company.

"We can now continue to appraise the Sea Lion discovery and to explore additional prospectivity within our acreage with added confidence," Mr Moody said.

Another explorer in the North Falkland Basin, UK-based Desire Petroleum, saw its shares in the opening minutes of trading leap 33% on the news.

The current exploration of the waters around the Falklands has proved controversial.

Argentina still claims sovereignty over the islands, which lie 300 miles from its shore.

When the exploration plans were first announced, the former UK Defence Minister Bill Rammell said the government had a "legitimate right" to build an oil industry in its waters.

THE MALTESE COMPASSION

by Barry Chamish

Here's the story of one fearless man, Trying to break the deception of a powerful clan.

It all began when King Juan Carlos, called by the Vatican, "The Defender Of The Holy Places Of Jerusalem" decided to take a journey to Malta. It was going to be a dastardly visit.
But how?

Mediterranean Union set up liaison office in Malta for EU/Arab League

http://www.di-ve.com/Default.aspx?ID=72&Ac...newscategory=36

Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Affairs Minister Tonio Borg said that a liaison office for the Union for the Mediterranean will be set up in Malta and will be inaugurated in November at the former MCESD offices in Floriana, adjacent to the Police depot.

During an interview by PBS journalist Fiorella Pace on Radio 101 digital, Tonio Borg said that the aim of the liaison office is to join the works of the European Commission and the Arab League. Tonio Borg also said that the King of Spain Juan Carlos as well as the Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk will be visiting Malta in the coming months. He also mentioned that Italy's President Giorgio Napolitano could visit Malta next year.

King Juan Carlos going to Malta in November

http://www.timesofmalta.com/articles...ta-in-november

The announcements were made by Foreign Affairs Minister Tonio Borg yesterday morning as he announced that the EU-Arab League liaison centre was expected to open in Malta in October. Speaking during a recorded radio interview, Dr Borg said the liaison centre, manned by representatives from Malta, the EU and the Arab League, would be housed in the former Malta Council for Economic and Social Development office, close to the police headquarters. He expressed hope that the office would become a "permanent secretariat" for discussions between the EU and the Arab world.

'5+5 Forum' discusses relaunch of Med Union

CORDOBA - Senior officials from 10 western Mediterranean countries met here Tuesday to discuss the relaunch of the Mediterranean Union, which has been stalled over the recent war in Gaza. The one-day meeting in the southern city of Cordoba brought together foreign ministers or representatives from Spain, France, Italy, Malta, Portugal, Algeria, Libya, Morocco, Mauritania and Tunisia.

Launched at a Paris summit in July, the Mediterranean Union groups EU member states with countries in North Africa, the Balkans, the Arab world as well as Israel in a bid to foster cooperation in one of the world's most volatile regions. EU foreign affairs chief Javier Solana has also called an informal meeting for Thursday in Brussels to try and revive the project, a European source in Cairo said Monday. "We are looking, in the name of the Arab Maghreb Union, for the support of France and Spain to contribute to a narrowing of positions... to reach a solution on the issue," Moroccan Foreign Minister Taieb Fassi-Fihri, who is co-chairing Tuesday's meeting with Spain, told Arab media.

Their world opened up. The Catholic states of Spain, France, Italy, Malta and Portugal were about to ally with the Arab League. The Arabs would only play ball if Israel was dealt with. That's where Solana and Israel's President Peres came into the picture:

President Peres meets EU High Comissioner Solana

(Communicated by the President's Spokesperson)31 Aug 2009

Israel President Shimon Peres held a working meeting this morning with Javier Solana, Secretary-General of the Council of the EU and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy. They discussed the advancement of the Israel-Palestinian peace process and of the Arab peace initiative, as well as the strengthening of relations between Israel and the European Union. Solana arrived in Israel after meeting with the President of Syria, and after his visit to Israel will meet with the President of Egypt and visit Lebanon.

The game was so obvious. Yet no Jew chooses to understand how Israel is to be the corpse of the Vatican-Arab plan.

Part one-end

Part two, personal:

COMPASSION

And that's what I do. I reveal the deep plans when somehow, no one else will stare into the obvious abyss. And for this I have suffered many abuses, too many from Jews, and until this week, less commonly from Christians.
This week a Christian calling himself a pastor defrauded me, and I want those of you who can, to deal with him.
But first, may we look at how Israel lost its compassion.

I arrived in Israel just after the Yom Kippur War. Back then, television was restricted to one new and dreadful government station... Unless you got an aerial and picked up Jordan's English channel to hear propaganda like, "Israel today celebrated the 30th anniversary of what it calls, independence."
And way back then, it took years to get a phone line installed. So if you wanted to visit friends for any reason, you had to call on them unexpectedly. A common scenario:

At door we hear, "Put that knife down. No, not on my neck. Don't be crazy. Okay, I was wrong."
You knock. Agitated wife opens. "Come in. How are you?"

By the way. That actually happened to me. There was no such thing as an unexpected visit. Without a phone and one bad tv channel, popping in was the only way to have a social life. So with everyone in the same boat, no matter what the dire circumstances, society cared for its members personally. No matter where you were; on a bus, in a store, people cared about your life. There was no phoney, "Have a nice day," baloney. If a stranger wished you a nice day, he knew why and meant it. And if you did something wrong, you would pay with your reputation for life.

Then, in the '90s, telephone service became modern, cable tv gave everyone dozens of channels and the internet revolution arrived. Israel changed, fraud became commonplace and most of the society stopped caring. Much of the religious sector disdained tv and are slow to accept the internet. They still run their societies on giving to others, no matter what their circumstances, so they remain easy to defraud. Just look how they let Gush Katif be destroyed. But most of Israel has lost its personal compassion and personal gain or "achievement," has replaced working for the happiness of the nation.

Into the changed Israel I emerged by successfully challenging the murder of PM Yitzhak Rabin in 1995. My success in convincing the country that Rabin was not murdered by a religious radical but in a coup led by Peres led to a concerted effort to shut me up and down.

The best efforts were the official secret ones. But two Jews tried to be secret and failed. One named Plaut only used phoney names to muck up my reputation, but his "style" became clearcut to enough people to keep me informed and grateful. He was doing more than anyone to keep my message alive when time would have naturally buried it. And he kept me working. Last year, using the moniker Norm Rothstein, renowned CEO from China, he tried to get me to travel to Atlanta to pick up $8000 he supposedly transferred for me to his company account. So, I arranged two Atlanta lectures, both filmed and later becoming commercial DVDs, called the bank to discover the fraud and the old career was revived.
One Chaim Bolton "secretly" sabotaged a Miami lecture. People were so furious at him, that two lectures were organized instead and on Sept. 23 this month, I will be in Cooper City, FL lecturing, thanks to people resenting Bolton's shenanigans. If you live in South Florida, write me at chamish@netvision.net.il Let's meet.

The Christians who have turned Israel into Disneyland rebel by simply not considering me as a speaker. But there are those who know I'm telling the truth. I will be speaking to their groups in Omak, WA beginning Oct. 5 and Mission, BC near Vancouver, beginning Oct. 12. If you're nearby, write to meet me.

But one pastor in London is running a sophisticated scam, and I lost money falling for it. He offered me $5000 each for three speeches, sent me a convincing invitation and contract to speak before the Barclay Hall Christian Centre, for which I paid the British Consulate hundreds of dollars for a working visa, until I realized he was a bunco artist. I had expected this from Jews, but never from Christians. By falling for the scam, I had arranged a trip to Israel to clear the legal issues that keep me away and to help rescue my family there. It was a terrible waste of my spiritual energy and of those brave souls clearing my way.

So why did I fall for it? One, because it was a sophisticated crime and two, because I would collapse tomorrow without people supporting me. Donations of well over a thousand dollars from New Zealand, Toronto, Kansas etc. keep me going. No one in the mainstream will help, I have to consider each offer. My unique truth exists because a few people have decided I'm worth supporting.

Still, the criminal absence of compassion was not directed at me. A new website shows how he tried to defraud Canadians too. Do you know how to have him arrested and charged? One London journalist I know well is investigating him but we need help:

Warning: Speak Scam on the loose!

July 13th, 2009

Wanted to pass out a warning to all speakers, sales trainers and coaches. Seems as if this scam is being proposed to women only right now but who knows guys…you maybe next. Trouble with this one is it really does seem legit. The websites are pretty good and the organization and Pastor will take your calls. To be fair, I don;t really think he is a Pastor, just pretending to be one. The email, you will receive is as follows:

Dear Colleen Francis,

My Name is Pastor William Smith from the London Youth Community Here in London UK. We want you to be our guest speaker at this Year LONDON YOUTH CONFERENCE which will take place here in UK.We are writing to invite and confirm your booking to be our Speaker at these year LONDON YOUTH CONFERENCE.

Just delete it. If you do call they will ask for your credit card number to secure a UK visa (which if you are Canadian you don't need for this type of work) and travel arrangements. They will send you a contract if you ask for one. It is signed, but its not on any letter head. At least 10 speakers I know in Canada have all received this and we have done a bunch of research and work sussing it out…so you don't have to. Best to trust me, delete it an move on.

Time to put my energy to good use now….(but sad I don't get to go to the UK)

Iran Claims Nuclear Gain as Protesters Clash

By ALAN COWELL and MICHAEL SLACKMAN
Published: February 11, 2010
http://www.nytimes.com/2010/02/12/world/mi...ast/12iran.html

As security forces clashed with his opponents, President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad of Iran was quoted on Thursday as saying his country had produced a first batch of uranium enriched to a level of 20 percent, taunting the West by declaring that if Tehran wanted to build a nuclear bomb, it would say so.

Iran, he said, repeating an earlier assertion, was now "a nuclear state." Mr. Ahmadinejad's claims could not be independently verified.

Mr. Ahmadinejad chose a major political event — the 31st anniversary of the Islamic Revolution — to announce what he depicted as significant progress in his country's nuclear program. The setting reflected the central role played by Iran's nuclear program in domestic politics as Tehran confronts its worst political crisis since the fall of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi in 1979.

As he spoke, opposition Web sites carried reports of a crackdown on antigovernment protesters as the anniversary celebrations unfolded, with accounts of gunfire, tear gas and attacks on opposition leaders. Videos posted online showed protesters calling for the release of political prisoners and carrying green banners — the color of the opposition — through the streets.

The reports and authenticity of the videos could not be confirmed independently because the Iranian authorities imposed severe restrictions on news coverage after last June's flawed presidential elections. News reports said pro-government Iranians gathered to hear Mr. Ahmadinejad outnumbered his opponents who faced a crackdown by security forces that broke up many attempts to protest.

Mr. Ahmadinejad again denied that Tehran was seeking nuclear weapons. "When we say we do not manufacture the bomb, we mean it, and we do not believe in manufacturing a bomb," Mr. Ahmadinejad told the crowd, according to news reports.

He continued: "The Iranian nation is brave enough that if one day we wanted to build nuclear bombs we would announce it publicly without being afraid of you."

It was unclear whether Mr. Ahmadinejad's comments represented gamesmanship or a step toward acknowledging the suspicions that it is pursuing a weapons program.

Brushing aside Western threats of more stringent sanctions, Mr. Ahmadinejad was addressing a huge rally of supporters in Tehran's Azadi Square, claiming that Tehran could now enrich to much higher levels and would soon triple its output of 20-percent-enriched uranium.

Western experts have already said that once Iran was able to enrich uranium to 20 percent it could theoretically move relatively quickly toward the manufacture of weapons-grade fuel, usually reckoned at 90 percent.

The anniversary of the 1979 revolution has become a test of strength between Mr. Ahmadinejad and an opposition movement that took root after the elections, creating the biggest political challenge since the fall of the shah.

Apart from the crackdown on the streets, the authorities on Wednesday drastically slowed Internet service in Iran and shut down text messaging services. One official said that Gmail, the Google e-mail service, would be blocked.

But news reports and opposition Web sites indicated that protesters still turned out in Tehran and the Iranian cities of Shiraz, Ahwaz and Isfahan.

An Iranian opposition Web site said security forces fired shots and tear gas at supporters of an opposition leader, Mir Hussein Moussavi, as they mounted a counter-rally in central Tehran.

"Security forces opened fired at protesters and fired tear gas in central Tehran," Reuters quoted the Green Voice Web site as saying, citing witnesses. Another opposition Web site, Jaras, said that security forces attacked the car of another opposition leader, Mehdi Karroubi, as he was heading to a rally marking the anniversary.

Jaras also said security forces attacked former President Mohammad Khatami and briefly arrested his brother and his brother's wife, who is a granddaughter of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the founder of the Islamic Revolution.

The authorities had warned that they intended to confront protesters harshly. Witnesses quoted by The A.P. said the police deployed hundreds of officers in central Tehran to block protests.

The confluence of the protests and Mr. Ahmadinejad's nuclear claims offered a graphic illustration of how much Iran's foreign policy is being driven by domestic concerns, analysts said.

"Right now at Natanz we have the capability to enrich uranium to much higher levels," Mr. Ahmadinejad said, referring to Iran's nuclear facility south of Tehran, according to news reports.

"I want to announce with a loud voice here that the first package of 20 percent fuel was produced and provided to the scientists," he said. "In the near future we will treble its production," Mr. Ahmadinejad said.

He continued: "We have the capability to enrich uranium more than 20 percent or 80 percent," he said, according to news reports, but added that Iran did not need to do that. His speech was broadcast live on state television.

Mr. Ahmadinejad's remarks followed Iran's announcement on Monday that it would begin enrichment to 20 percent, ostensibly to provide fuel for a medical reactor in Tehran.

The response in the West was an increased clamor for the imposition of sanctions that would target the Revolutionary Guards Corps in particular. The United States Treasury Department imposed unilateral sanctions on Wednesday against a corps commander and four companies linked to the organization.

Iran's newest enrichment effort took place partly in the presence of inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency, the United Nations nuclear oversight body. But I.A.E.A. officials said Thursday they could not confirm the Iranian claim that the enrichment process had been successful.

Western experts noted that even if Iran possessed 20-percent-enriched fuel, that did not mean it could be used in a reactor without being converted into fuel rods.

In a note distributed to the agency's member states late Wednesday, the director general, Yukiya Amano, said that when the inspectors arrived at Natanz on Wednesday, they were informed that Iran had already begun to feed low-enriched uranium into a cascade of centrifuges for enrichment.

The inspectors were told that "within a few days" Iran would produce uranium enriched at 20 percent, the note said, according to diplomats who saw it. Iran had told the agency that the amount of low-enriched uranium to be processed was small, around 22 pounds. Iran currently possesses only one cascade capable of enriching to a level of 20 percent, the note said.

Iran began its enrichment effort after a deal last October to swap low-enriched uranium for fuel rods from abroad apparently broke down. The agreement foundered partly on disputes over the timing of the exchange, with Iran insisting that the swap take place simultaneously on Iranian soil while international powers wanted Iran to export its stockpile for reprocessing into fuel rods to be returned to Iran later. That would have temporarily deprived Iran of the raw material for enrichment.

Iran has insisted in recent days that the deal is still on the table, but Western diplomats familiar with the dispute said the Iranian position was part of the diplomatic maneuvering to prevent China in particular from supporting the Western demand for tighter United Nations sanctions.

Alan Cowell reported from Paris, and Michael Slackman from Cairo. Reporting was contributed by Nazila Fathi from Toronto, Neil MacFarquhar from New York, and Ashlee Vance from San Francisco.

Netanyahu to visit Russia: Kremlin

11 Feb 2010
http://www.google.com/hostednews/afp/artic...l33uDxoiJBBi05w

MOSCOW — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu will visit Moscow next week, the Kremlin said Thursday, after Russia toughened its stance on Iran's nuclear programme.

Netanyahu will hold talks with President Dmitry Medvedev on Monday, the Kremlin said in a statement, providing no further detail on the Israeli leader's programme for the Monday-Wednesday visit.

Announcement of the visit came after Russia officially questioned the "sincerity" of Iran's pledges not to develop nuclear weapons and, in a policy shift, said fresh UN sanctions on Tehran were a "realistic" option.

It also followed an official visit to Moscow by Khaled Meshaal, leader of the radical Palestinian independence group Hamas that is classified by Israel, the European Union and the United States as a terrorist organisation.

Welcome fit for a king as Abdullah arrives in Madrid

Jan 28 2010
http://www.hellomagazine.com/celebrities-n.../53076/general/

There was a warm welcome for King Abdullah of Jordan as he touched down in Madrid this week.

The 47-year-old was greeted with a friendly embrace from Spain's King Juan Carlos as he stepped off his plane.

After meeting, the royal pair went on to Madrid's Zarzuela Palace, where the Spanish monarch and his wife, Queen Sofia, hosted a private luncheon for their guest.

Later, Abdullah met with Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero, who led discussions about Spain's support for the new EU-Jordan Action Plan, “which will include arrangements regarding the Jordanian negotiation proposal for an advanced statute.”

Spain's king to meet Obama at White House next month

(AFP) – Jan 16, 2010
http://www.google.com/hostednews/afp/artic...WdxRh0SRvvRn1qQ

WASHINGTON — Spain's King Juan Carlos will meet President Barack Obama at the White House February 17 in the first official US visit by the monarch in more than five years, an official said Saturday.

"The visit reflects the long standing warm relationship the king has enjoyed with the United States and represents the breadth and depth of the historical ties between the American and Spanish people," said spokesman Michael Hammer.

"President Obama is committed to continuing to strengthen the bilateral ties between our countries," said Hammer, spokesman for Obama's National Security Council.

It will be Juan Carlos' first official visit to the United States since November 2004, when he met with George W. Bush at the then-president's ranch in Texas.

Mullen to visit Jerusalem, TA

BY YAAKOV KATZ

http://www.jpost.com/Israel/Article.aspx?id=168561

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to meet Ashkenazi, Barak, IDF officials

In another sign of growing cooperation between Israel and the US ahead of a new round of sanctions on Iran, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Adm. Michael Mullen will arrive in Israel on Sunday as the guest of IDF Chief of General Staff Lt.-Gen. Gabi Ashkenazi.

Mullen, who has visited Israel in the past, recently met with Ashkenazi at a NATO conference in Brussels.

He will meet with Ashkenazi as well as other senior IDF generals, including Deputy Chief of Staff Maj.-Gen. Benny Gantz, Military Intelligence chief Maj.-Gen. Amos Yadlin and the IDF's military attaché in Washington DC Maj.-Gen. Gadi Shamni. He will also meet separately with Defense Minister Ehud Barak.

Mullen will be received Sunday at the Kirya Military Headquarters in Tel Aviv with a formal IDF honor guard and will also visit the Yad Vashem Holocaust Museum in Jerusalem.

According to a recent New York Times article, Mullen has urged Israel to hold off on attacking Iran and to give the new round of sanctions, expected to be imposed in the coming weeks, a fair chance.

US raises stakes on Iran by sending in ships and missiles

Pentagon says Patriot shield will deter strike on American allies in the Gulf

Chris McGreal in Washington

http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2010/jan/3...s-missiles-gulf

Tension between the US and Iran heightened dramatically today with the disclosure that Barack Obama is deploying a missile shield to protect American allies in the Gulf from attack by Tehran.

The US is dispatching Patriot defensive missiles to four countries – Qatar, United Arab Emirates, Bahrain and Kuwait – and keeping two ships in the Gulf capable of shooting down Iranian missiles. Washington is also helping Saudi Arabia develop a force to protect its oil installations.

American officials said the move is aimed at deterring an attack by Iran and reassuring Gulf states fearful that Tehran might react to sanctions by striking at US allies in the region. Washington is also seeking to discourage Israel from a strike against Iran by demonstrating that the US is prepared to contain any threat.

Chris McGreal: 'The US is prepared to move decisively against any threat from Iran' Link to this audio

The deployment comes after Obama's attempts to emphasise diplomacy over confrontation in dealing with Iran – a contrast to the Bush administration's approach – have failed to persuade Tehran to open its nuclear installations to international controls. The White House is now trying to engineer agreement for sanctions focused on Iran's Revolutionary Guard, believed to be in charge of the atomic programme.

Washington has not formally announced the deployment of the Patriots and other anti-missile systems, but by leaking it to American newspapers the administration is evidently seeking to alert Tehran to a hardening of its position.

The administration is deploying two Patriot batteries, capable of shooting down incoming missiles, in each of the four Gulf countries. Kuwait already has an older version of the missile, deployed after Iraq's invasion. Saudi Arabia has long had the missiles, as has Israel.

An unnamed senior administration official told the New York Times: "Our first goal is to deter the Iranians. A second is to reassure the Arab states, so they don't feel they have to go nuclear themselves. But there is certainly an element of calming the Israelis as well."

The chief of the US central command, General David Petraeus, said in a speech 10 days ago that countries in the region are concerned about Tehran's military ambitions and the prospect of it becoming a dominant power in the Gulf: "Iran is clearly seen as a very serious threat by those on the other side of the Gulf front."

Petraeus said the US is keeping cruisers equipped with advanced anti-missile systems in the Gulf at all times to act as a buffer between Iran and the Gulf states.

Washington is also concerned at the threat of action by Israel, which is predicting that Iran will be able to build a nuclear missile within a year, a much faster timetable than assessed by the US, and is warning that it will not let Tehran come close to completion if diplomacy fails.

The director of the CIA, Leon Panetta, met the Israeli prime minister, Binyamin Netanyahu, and other senior officials in Jerusalem last week to discuss Iran.

Pro-Israel lobby groups in the US have joined Republican party leaders in trying to build public pressure on the administration to take a tougher line with Iran. One group, the Israel Project, has been running a TV campaign warning that Iran might supply nuclear weapons to terrorists.

"Imagine Washington DC under missile attack from nearby Baltimore," it says. "A nuclear Iran is a threat to peace, emboldens extremists, and could give nuclear materials to terrorists with the ability to strike anywhere."

Washington is also concerned that if Iran is able to build nuclear weapons, other states in the region will feel the need to follow. Israel is the only country in the Middle East to already have atomic bombs, although it does not officially acknowledge it.

The US secretary of state, Hillary Clinton, said in London last week that the US will press for additional sanctions against Iran if it fails to curb its nuclear programme.

Europe's foreign affairs minister, Catherine Ashton, today said the UN security council should now take up the issue. "We are worried about what's happening in Iran. I'm disappointed at the failure of Iran to accept the dialogue and we now need to look again at what needs to happen there," she told Sky News.

"The next step for us is to take our discussions into the security council. When I was meeting with Hillary Clinton last week we talked about Iran and we were very clear this is a problem we will have to deal with."

However, China and Russia are still pressing for a diplomatic solution.

Tony Blair, Middle East envoy on behalf of the US, Russia, the UN and the EU, continually referred to what he described as the Iranian threat during his evidence at the Chilcot inquiry last Friday. Textual analysis now shows that he mentioned Iran 58 times.

Besides the new missile deployment, Washington is also helping Saudi Arabia to create a 30,000-strong force to protect oil installations and other infrastructure, as well as expanded joint exercises between the US and military forces in the region.

The move is a continuation of the military build-up begun under former president George W Bush. In the past two years, Abu Dhabi has bought $17bn (£11bn) worth of weapons from the US, including the Patriot anti-missile batteries and an advanced anti-missile system. UAE recently bought 80 US-made fighter jets. It is also buying fighters from France.

Petraeus said in a speech in Bahrain last year the UAE air force "could take out the entire Iranian air force, I believe".
Missile defence

Patriot missiles are designed to intercept enemy missiles before they reach their target. Since production began in 1980, 9,000 missiles have been delivered to countries including Germany, Greece, Taiwan and Japan.

During the first Gulf war Patriot success was 70% in Saudi Arabia and 40% in Israel. Since then the US has spent more than $10bn (£6.3bn) improving, among other aspects, the system's radar and computer compatibility for joint forces action. Once in position, the system requires a crew of only three people to operate. Each missile weighs 700kg and has a range of about 100 miles.

The US navy is in the process of upgrading all its Ticonderoga class cruisers and a number of destroyers to carry the Aegis ballistic missile defence system. It uses a surface-to-air missile that is capable of intercepting ballistic missiles above the atmosphere. It has also been tested on failing satellites as they fall to earth. Each missile is over 6m long and costs more than $9m. James Sturcke

CRAIG OXLEY'S LATEST VIDEO ON JUAN CARLOS's visit to Lebanon FORCES WIKIPEDIA TO CHANGE JUAN CARLOS ENTRY

This is BIG news gentleman!

It Prooves that the CIA is watching Craig.

Juan Carlos's entry has had a complete make over!

They have also removed all his titles.

WOW!!!

Great Work Craig, You are a Genius.

Craig, you will need to announce Wikipedia's defeat and your victory.

As you know, It is very odd for them to change an entry like that. It means they fear something! The Juan Carlos wiki entry was getting thousands of hits(possibly millions). I am a hundred 100% sure Carlos has seen your site. We are hitting them where it hurts. Licio Gello will be a very happy man. This is a good revenge for the destruction of the P2 lodge. Carlos has to do three things for me to leave him alone now:

1. Expel the Jesuits & Denounce his claim to being the King of Jerusalem

2. Recognize the True successor of Umberto II of the Savoy family as Victor Emmanuel IV, (NOT the duke of Aosta!)

3. Recognize the Austrian Order of the Golden Fleece

He can keep the titles, prostitutes, and drug business. If Carlos fails to comply here is his future as we are orchestrating it:

He will see burnt effigies across South American and in Spain, Barcelona, and Southern Italy. Spanish people need to take action, because he has bankrupted his own country on design.

He doesn't care, because he doesn't live in Spain, he lives in Rome most of the time. He was born in Rome. Don't forget that.

Most of all, we already know his plan: He will dissolve his own government, like the bourbons did before him, during Franco's time. Remember that Farnese and bourbons can always pop up back into the Political scene, when the fear has left and old enemies have died. They tried to surpress the truth about the Jesuits and now it will hit them hard!

The only thing that could possible save Juan now it a faked Alien invasion. I am positive the Jesuits are angered by this exposure and you might (I am NOT sure) hear of a break up in the near future.

Thanks and god Bless You!!!

Adolfo Nicolas SJ was placed in the position of Superior General as an illusion to the public. Peter Hans Kolvenbach the true power of the Society of Jesus went back in the shadows taking the heat off himself in the process. Kolvenbach had gained too much notice from our work over the last few years. His age was given as an excuse for his false resignation of power within the Order of Orders. The high level Jesuit soldiers of Rome are well aware of this and created the term 'The Era of the Two Generals' be it one covertly. Now you have a master of the Middle East combined with a master of the Far East.

Which areas in the World right now are of most importance? The Middle East for the rebuilding of the revived Babylon commanded by the Papacy from their Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem protected by the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem. The Far East will be the new powerhouse replacing the United States just prior to all being destroyed as powers come only from Babylon in the end. All as Jerusalem becomes the spiritual power of the World whilst Dubai becomes the financial power and Iraq becomes the political power. This is the movement of the Roman Elite to the East.

Henry Breakspeare one of the most powerful men in entire existance on this planet moved a long time ago from Rome to Macau, China. Incidentally this area is now the true gambling capital of the World. All as Las Vegas gets destroyed by the depression created by Holy Sepulchre and Knights of Malta. Also Las Vegas will be destroyed by the Knight of Malta aerosol weather attacks to destroy water for strict controls to be implemented. You'll note many of the true sacred Roman bloodlines moving to the likes of India. This conspiracy is nothing like most understand and know. When I speak, I speak of the true powers. Families like the Pallavicini who funded Elizabeth I millions in currency back in the 17th Century. Those kinds of figures today would be astronomical is size with the current inflation. These Hofjuden, Rothschilds are pions in comparison to these real bloodlines. No wonder David Rothschild was desperate for some of their stature by marrying into the great, Aldobrandini family. -Craig Oxley

Report: Iran disrupting satellite transmissions

12/02/2010 10:34
http://www.jpost.com/Headlines/Article.aspx?id=168544

Several international networks have said that Iran is disrupting their Farsi-language satellite transmissions, Israel Radio reported Friday.

BBC Radio, The Voice of America and the German network Deutsche Welle defined the interference as electronic disturbances from Iran.

The report said that the regime began to disrupt the transmissions on Thursday with the beginning of celebrations on the anniversary of the 1979 Islamic revolution.

The Islamic nation has also been blocking GMail since Thursday.

British military insider: World War III is being staged; to initiate between Israel and Iran

February 19 2010
http://www.examiner.com/x-25059-Nonpartisa...Israel-and-Iran

US “leadership” and their corporate media minions are pushing juvenile-level propaganda for war with Iran; lies that anyone can verify with a few moments’ attention. If you haven’t already confirmed the Orwellian-level disinformation, stop and read the above two links now.

Many people hypothesize the confirmed lies for wars with Iraq and Afghanistan, and a final war with Iran, is to control oil. Connected is the theory that US political and economic “masters” are so confident in their propaganda, and so correct in their conclusion that the critical mass of humanity is too feeble to stop them, that they brazenly move forward for global hegemony.

This article provides a different explanation of the facts; with heightened urgency to prevent war with Iran, as it is a planned step to begin a Third World War.

Project Camelot is a world-renowned safe-haven for whistle-blowers on the inside of the military and economic “Big Lies” that millions of Americans are discovering. Below is Bill Ryan’s video explanation of his interview with a vetted British military insider discussing the planning of manipulated global war (transcript here).

The highlights from Bill Ryan in five bullet-points and nine paragraphs:

• There is a planned Third World War, which will be nuclear and biological. Our source believes that this is on track to be initiated within the next 18-24 months.

• It is planned to begin with a strike by Israel on Iran. Either Iran or China will be provoked into a nuclear response. After a brief nuclear exchange, there will be a ceasefire. The world will be thrown into fear and chaos - all carefully engineered.

• The extreme state of tension will be used to justify heavy social and military controls in all western first world nations. Plans are already in place for that.

• During the nuclear ceasefire, there is planned to be a covert release of biological weapons. These will initially be targeted against the Chinese. As our source chillingly told us, "China will catch a cold". Biological warfare will spread further, to the west. Infrastructure will be critically weakened.

• This is intended to be just the beginning. After this, a full nuclear exchange would be triggered: the "real" war, with widespread destruction and loss of life. Our source tells us that the planned population reduction through these combined means is 50%. He heard this figure stated in the meeting.

This horrific scenario has been planned for generations. The first two world wars were part of the set-up for this final apocalypse - as is the centralization of financial resources that was precipitated with the equally well-planned financial collapse of October 2008.

As if all this were not enough, our source speculates this is all set against the backdrop of a coming "geophysical event" - the same kind of event as was experienced by our ancestors approximately 11,500 years ago. If this event occurs - not necessarily expected in 2012, but sometime in the next decade - it would destroy civilization as we know it, dwarfing even the effects of a nuclear war.

I asked the question to our source: If there's an expected catastrophe, then why initiate a Third World War? His answer, for the first time to me, made terrible sense.

The real goal, he explained, is to set up the post-catastrophic world. To ensure that this "New World" [note the term] is the one the controllers want, totalitarian control structures need to be in place when the catastrophe occurs - with an excuse that the populace will accept and demand them. Martial law in the right, carefully chosen countries before the catastrophe occurs will enable the "right" people to survive and prosper in the post-catastrophic world, and the beginning of the next 11,500 year cycle. What may have been carefully planned on a covert global scale, for the last several generations, is nothing less than who will inherit the Earth.

Who are the "right" people? The white Caucasians. This may be why the name of this project is The Anglo-Saxon Mission. Hence the justification for the planned genocide of the Chinese people - so that the New World is inherited by "us", not "them".

Our source was not informed about the planned fate of the second and third world countries such as those in South America, Africa and Asia. But he presumes that these would be allowed to fend for themselves and probably not survive well - or maybe not at all. The totalitarian military governments of the western, white, people are set to be the inheritors.

This is a plan so evil, so racist, so diabolical, so huge, that it almost defies belief. But it all aligns with what many commentators, researchers and whistleblowing insiders have been identifying for some years now. For me personally, it's the clearest picture yet of why the world is the way it is, and why the secrets are protected so fiercely: it may be all about racial supremacy. The Fourth Reich is alive and well.

Astonishingly, our source was not pessimistic. He stressed, as do we and many other researchers and commentators, that consciousness is awakening rapidly all over the planet and that THESE PLANNED EVENTS ARE NOT INEVITABLE. If ever there was a reason to work closely together to raise awareness of the real threat to us all, this is it.

Watch this video, listen carefully to the strong message of hope and encouragement, and spread it far and wide. We plan to create subtitles in many languages - including Chinese. We stand for the potential magnificence of a united humanity that knows no racial boundaries or distinctions. Whether or not the catastrophe occurs - and many, including ourselves, maintain that it will not - we must co-create our own future, claim our power, and do whatever we can to alert people to the dangers around us... so that we can be stronger together, for the sake of our descendants and for the heritage of all living beings on Planet Earth."

I appreciate your attention to these facts and encourage your further study and action consistent with your own self-expression. My recommendations:

Policy response: Gandhi and Martin Luther King advocated public understanding of the facts and non-cooperation with evil. I'm among hundreds who advocate:

Understand the laws of war. These were legislated after WW2 and are crystal-clear that only self-defense, in a narrow legal meaning, can justify war. The current US wars are not even close to being lawful. Those involved with US military, government, and law enforcement have an oath to protect and defend the US Constitution, not the fascist "always place the mission first." To fulfill their oath they must immediately refuse and end all orders associated with unlawful wars and military-related constant violation of treaties.
End the transfer of trillions of American taxpayer money to banksters and admitted as "lost" by our military. End poverty through global cooperation to achieve the UN Millennium Goals by developed countries investing 0.7% of their income. Support global security through cooperation, dignity, justice, and freedom. Create a US Department of Peace to help.
Communicate. Trust your unique, beautiful, and powerful self-expression to share as you feel appropriate. Understand that while many people are ready to embrace difficult facts, many are not. Anticipate that you will be attacked and prepare your virtuous response in the spirit of competition, just as you do in other fields.
Prosecute the war leaders for obvious violation of the letter and spirit of US war laws. Because the crimes are so broad and deep, I recommend Truth and Reconciliation (T&R) to exchange full truth and return of stolen US assets for non-prosecution. This is the most expeditious way to understand and end all unlawful and harmful acts. Those who reject T&R are subject to prosecution.

Local perspective: Part of my professional duties as a teacher of economics and government is to produce competent adult citizenry. This includes realization that our nation's policies and money are managed at a broad community level, and these issues have tremendous local impact. Of course, we all want human beings to be individually successful and enjoy their unique, beautiful and powerful self-expressions. Concurrently, we recognize our commitment to local success is strongly dependent upon the success of the community, and that government policy and economics are drivers.

Our status in early 21st Century human history is that we suffer from a long history in government and money of human interrelationship well-described as vicious antagonism. Governments frequently use war as a foreign policy, despite its illegality and dependent upon public ignorance, with horrific consequences. Economic policy is still created within a “Robber Baron” paradigm to concentrate money to an elite few families. Two examples:

1. National taxes effect you dearly, especially the tax to pay interest on the national debt. This costs the American public over $400 billion every year. This is $4,000 per year for every $50,000 of income. Do the math to understand your household’s tax burden for a monetary policy invented by banks for banks to create our money supply as debt. Your competence in this area contributes to our collective voice to simply shift monetary policy to easily pay the national debt, enjoy full employment, collectively save us over a trillion dollars every year, and finally realize what our brightest American minds have been advocating for centuries beginning with Benjamin Franklin. This would have unprecedented local benefits, and requires collective power to accomplish.
2. Ending poverty everywhere on our planet would cost just 0.7% of our income and save a million children’s lives every month. This human accomplishment will cause unimaginable joy at our local level.

To consider:

"If we are to have peace on earth, our loyalties must become ecumenical rather than sectional. Our loyalties must transcend our race, our tribe, our class, and our nation; and this means we must develop a world perspective. No individual can live alone, no nation can live alone and as long as we try, the more we are going to have war in the world. Now the judgment of God is upon us and we must either learn to live together as brothers or we are all going to perish together as fools."
--Inscription on Dr. Martin Luther King’s statue, Moorehouse College, Atlanta

"The day that hunger is eradicated from the earth, there will be the greatest spiritual explosion the world has ever known. Humanity cannot imagine the joy that will burst into the world on the day of that great revolution." -- poet Federico García Lorca

Comments policy: I welcome questions and comments that are civil and pertain to the article topic. Impolite and impertinent comments will be deleted.

Please consider that I’m among hundreds of writers who have documented our own government’s disclosure of propaganda programs to support their wars. I suspect my articles are under such propagandistic attack from comments that use typical rhetorical fallacies to distract readers from the facts. I invite readers to sharpen their ability to discern such propaganda. They are characterized by a combination of: never addressing the facts, diverting attention through unsubstantiated belief in an alleged expert, irrelevant data, straw-man attack that distorts the facts, ad hominem attack of insults to the messenger, vile comments to repulse readers, and lies of omission and commission.

I will use such comments to point-out the propaganda or delete them at my discretion. Again, all relevant and polite questions, and factually accurate comments are welcome. As a professional educator I’m in agreement with my experience and research: we learn best from multiple perspectives in mutual commitment to understand the facts, see those facts from diverse points-of-view, and consider various policy proposals of what we should do.

For those involved in support of US government-sponsored disinformation, I invite you to consider the quality of human relationships you wish to work toward. National security and a brighter future is not a function of fear, manipulation, and control. Our best security follows cooperation, justice under the law, dignity, and freedom. Working for your best imagined self-expression of virtue may include a unique contribution from the inside of your agency. Public attraction to the stories of Star Wars and the Harry Potter books/movies recognize that our society’s jump to civilized relations for all of us might require support from people within the “dark side” acting as covert agents for building a brighter future. Another option is becoming a whistle-blower; Project Camelot is a popular venue for people in sensitive positions. Ultimately, I recommend a Truth and Reconciliation process to exchange full truth for no prosecution, explained in detail at the link. Please consider the wisdom of your own “Scrooge conversion” to act for the benefit of all humanity rather than your self-proclaimed controlling, manipulating, and loveless “masters.”

“Scrooge was better than his word. He did it all, and infinitely more; and to Tiny Tim, who did not die, he was a second father. He became as good a friend, as good a master, and as good a man, as the good old city knew, or any other good old city, town, or borough, in the good old world. Some people laughed to see the alteration in him, but he let them laugh, and little heeded them; for he was wise enough to know that nothing ever happened on this globe, for good, at which some people did not have their fill of laughter in the outset; and knowing that such as these would be blind anyway, he thought it quite as well that they should wrinkle up their eyes in grins, as have the malady in less attractive forms. His own heart laughed: and that was quite enough for him."

Are Ezekiel prophecies on the horizon?

Chad Groening - OneNewsNow - 2/19/2010 6:00:00 AM http://www.onenewsnow.com/Culture/Default.aspx?id=902776

The leader of a Messianic Jewish ministry believes a couple of biblical prophecies dealing with wars in the Middle East could come to fruition within the next five years.

As previously reported on OneNewsNow, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu recently proclaimed the fulfillment of the Ezekiel 37 prophecy of the dry bones coming to life, which alludes to the rebirth of the nation of Israel in 1948.

While many biblical scholars speculate about the next two chapters of Ezekiel, as well as the war of Gog and Magog, Jan Markell, founder and director of Olive Tree Ministries, believes some other prophecies are likely to precede that cataclysmic end-times event.

"Frankly I believe 2010 is going to see some of the predicted wars that have not yet happened," she comments. "I do think that the Psalm 83 war could take place in 2010."

That passage references the destruction of Israel's enemies who desire to cut Israel off from being a nation, and a passage in Isaiah talks about the destruction of Damascus.

"Isaiah 17 says there is coming a time when Damascus will be leveled, and that probably could be sooner rather than later, in that Syria is stirring up so much trouble -- and we really think that 2010, certainly by 2011, there's going to be a major spark flying," Markell predicts.

The ministry founder notes that it is impossible to predict the exact dates for these events, but she believes the clock is ticking toward some volatile times in the Middle East.

Talking about that scum of Kolvenbach is very telling that him was in 1974 Superior of the Jesuits of the Viceprovince of the Middle East (Egipt, Siria, Lebanon and Turkey) with the head on Lebanon... And a year later, in 1975, the Lebanon civil war began. And that the country was invaded by Israel just in the time (1982-1983) when his was "promoted" as General Superior of the Order. That country was some much rich, but today the UN forces walk in his streets...

But, very much intriguing is the fact that this men, Kolvenbach, informed in february of 2009 to the Pope and the Curia Generalizia of the Jesuits, that he would resign in 2008 to Generalship of the Order. AND IN THE SAME YEAR THE SECOND WAR OF THE LEBANON BEGAN!!. He wasn't in Lebanon wen the attacks happened.
These facts are not coincidences.

Look at this plane of Lebanon and his 8 diferent governatures. Just are 3 governatures with Shía majority: the south (SUR) governature, the Naabatye, and the Ballbek-Hermel Governature. And was the South which was mostly attacked by Israel in 2006.

Hariri meets with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican

February 20, 2010
http://www.nowlebanon.com/NewsArticleDetails.aspx?ID=147868

Prime Minister Saad Hariri met with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican on Saturday. Following the meeting, the Pope met with Hariri's family and his delegation.

Future News television reported that Hariri referred to Pope John Paul II's 1997 statement that "Lebanon is more than a country, it is a message" when he spoke with Pope Benedict. Hariri said Lebanon is an example of Christian-

Muslim coexistence and inter-religious dialogue.

The pope and Hariri also exchanged gifts: Pope Benedict gave Hariri a pen that resembles one of the four pillars of Saint Peter's Cathedral; while the PM offered the Catholic church leader a historic manuscript, a 609-page book by the Melkite Greek Catholic Patriarch of Antioch that was translated from Greek to Arabic in 1633.

Hariri later met with Vatican officials, including Archbishop Dominique Mamberti - who acts as the Holy See of Rome's minister of foreign affairs - and discussed Lebanese developments, the relationship between the Vatican and Lebanon and efforts to revive the Middle East peace process.

Obama hosts Spanish king at lunch

Published: 3:56 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 17, 2010

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama hosted lunch for Spanish King Juan Carlos I on Wednesday, but the White House did not say if they discussed Obama's decision to skip a Madrid summit with European Union leaders.

Obama raised European hackles with the announcement Feb. 1 that he would forgo the annual summit meeting. It was seen in Spain as a diplomatic slap. Obama's decision became public only two days before Spanish Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero arrived for a two-day Washington visit. Zapatero holds the EU rotating presidency and was to host the Madrid summit.

A brief White House statement said Obama "highlighted his interest in strengthening our partnership with Spain."

Editors of Arab Dailies Assess: A War between Iran and the West Is Imminent

February 22, 2010
http://www.memri.org/report/en/0/0/0/0/0/0/3987.htm

In recent articles, editors of Arab dailies assessed that a war between Iran and the West is imminent, and did not rule out the possibility that the Arabs would take part in it. The editor of the Al-Quds Al-Arabi daily, 'Abd Al-Bari 'Atwan, wrote that the war would change the face of the region, and the fate of Israel's occupation would be like that of the Nazi regime after World War II; the editor of the Egyptian daily Al-Gumhouriyya, Muhammad 'Ali Ibrahim, stated that Iran has already made the first move towards war; and Al-Sharq Al-Awsat editor Tariq Alhomayed stated that whatever happens – whether Iran acquires nuclear weapons or a war breaks out to prevent it from acquiring them – the Arabs will become victims of the Iranian regime.

Following are excerpts from the editorials:

Al-Quds Al-Arabi Editor: If Israel Attacks Iran, Syria Is Likely to Fire Tens of Thousands of Missiles at Israel, Some with Chemical and Biological Warheads

'Abd Al-Bari 'Atwan, editor of the London daily Al-Quds Al-Arabi, wrote in a February 13 editorial that if Israel attacks Iran, Syria is likely to respond with a brutal attack against it: "[Iranian President Mahmoud] Ahmadinejad's declaration that his country is a 'nuclear nation'... and that it can enrich uranium to above 80%, exposes the real aim of Iran's nuclear program – that is, to produce nuclear warheads. In a phone conversation with Syrian President Bashar Al-Assad, he demanded that Syria wage war against Israel and eliminate this country if it launches an attack in the region (on Iran). In my view, this is the most important development, particularly in light of the fact that [Ahmadinejad's] demand comes at a time of stepped-up preparations for war [by Israel]...

"I don't know how President Assad responded to the requests of his Iranian colleague and ally, but according to Syrian Foreign Minister Walid Al-Mu'allem, it appears that he felt that the explosion was imminent...

"There are two views regarding how Syria will respond if Israel attacks Iran, either by itself or together with the U.S. One [view is that] the Syrian government, in all its cleverness, will not lift a finger, preferring to take its time... The second is that Syria will join in the war and fire tens of thousands of missiles – including some with chemical and biological warheads – at Israeli cities and targets, under [its] current binding agreement [with Iran]...

"The second possibility is the more likely of the two. Perhaps the next war, if it breaks out... will change the face of the region from top to bottom, just as World War II did: Regimes will be wiped off the map, and others will take their place. Perhaps Israel will be impacted most of all, and it is not inconceivable that its fate [as an occupier] will be similar to that of the German Nazi regime...

"The current American administration is already preparing for the new war with a strangling blockade on Iran...

"[Most of] the pressure is now on China, so that it will not thwart a U.N. Security Council international resolution on a blockade [against Iran]. These pressures take the form of carrot and stick: The stick is the arming of Taiwan and economic threats; the carrot is demonstrated by U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's visit to Qatar and Saudi Arabia, aimed at persuading them to sell gas and oil to China at low prices in order to compensate it for losses it is likely to incur as a result of sanctions on Iran...

"Some talk of a six-month timetable [for the war], which according to estimates, is the time that Iran needs to produce nuclear weapons."[1]

The U.S. Is Working to Line Up the Gulf States to Back Sanctions and a Military Move against Iran

In a February 15 editorial, Atwan wrote: "...Hillary Clinton visited the Arabian Gulf to focus efforts there prior to [asking] the U.N. Security Council for strangling economic sanctions on Iran... This means that American diplomacy is being implemented along with military preparations [against Iran]...

"Clinton's requests of her Gulf hosts can be boiled down to three points:"

"1) Making tempting offers to China of low[-cost] gas and oil ...

"2) Involving [the Gulf countries] in the blockade or economic sanctions on Iran...

"3) Opening bases, ports, and airports [of the Gulf states] to American, and perhaps [also] Israeli, planes, ships, and forces, in case of a military move against Iran...

"It is too early to estimate to what extent the Gulf States will comply with the American requests, [but I believe] they are likely to acquiesce, perhaps [even] without any argument at all..."[2]

Al-Gumhouriyya Editor: Iran Has Already Made the First Move towards War

Egyptian MP Muhammad 'Ali Ibrahim, editor of the Egyptian government daily Al-Gumhouriyya, wrote in his editorial that Iran has already made the first move towards war, but that only U.S. President Obama and Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu know when it will actually break out and what it will entail. "One can envision the region as a chessboard with white and black pieces moving across it... The opening move was made by Iran when it announced that it was beginning to enrich uranium to 20%... As everyone knows, chess is a game played by two opponents, but in the Middle East, Iran is playing against a very formidable rival [consisting of] the U.S. and Israel, and with each passing day it acquires new opponents and loses more of its allies. Syria seems to be hesitating, [although] Ahmadinejad has urged it to join the war should Israel attack the resistance, [i.e.,] Hizbullah and Hamas...

"Iran is interested in this war, because it sees it as an opportunity to suppress its [domestic] opposition and accuse it of cooperating with the West. [It also hopes that] the shared sense of danger will prompt the Iranians to unite around their leadership. The U.S. is also interested in the war, because it will enable it to sell advanced weapons to the countries of the region, to impose its air defense umbrella on the Gulf states, and to determine oil prices independently of OPEC...

"Tehran is forgetting that there will be no ground war against it... Cruise missiles and one-ton bombs will drop [from the sky] and carve [craters] seven stories deep... But will this paralyze Iran? Will not [Iran] attack the Gulf states and kill every American soldier in the region? And when will this scenario materialize? Nobody knows for sure... except Obama and Netanyahu..."[3]

Al-Sharq Al-Awsat Editor: The Arabs Are Victims of Iran

Al-Sharq Al-Awsat editor Tariq Alhomayed wrote that, to judge by the exchange of threats between the sides, a war between Iran and the West is indeed brewing, and that the Arabs are likely to become victims of the Iranian regime's moves. He wrote: "Every war starts with words, and what we are currently witnessing is a real war of words between Iran and the West. After threatening to close off the Strait of Hormuz, Iran found itself [trapped in] an ongoing and dangerous [spiral of] escalation vis-à-vis the U.S.... The day before yesterday, the White House said that no option could be ruled out in dealing with Iran's nuclear aspirations, including the military option...

"The most salient element in Iran's responses is Ahmadinejad's assessment that a war will break out in the spring or summer, and his threats that if Israel attacks, the resistance and the countries of the region will crush it. He has also threatened that if new sanctions are [imposed] on his country in response to its nuclear program, he will cause the superpowers to regret it. On the very same day... Hassan Nasrallah threatened to bomb [Israel's] airport [if this country attacked Lebanon's] airport... As I have often noted in the past, every time Israel threatens Iran, [Iran] threatens the Gulf countries, and every time Iran raises its voice [in a threat], Hassan Nasrallah repeats [it statements] like an echo. The notable thing is that Ahmadinejad threatens Israel and the West... not with his own country's weapons but in the name of 'the resistance and the countries in the region'...

"If a war breaks out, it will be an Iranian war, and Iran will be its target... Why [then] does [Iran threaten to] attack our region and our countries? This is not our war, nor are we working [to promote it] – this war belongs only to Iran and its proxies. As for us, we will be Iran's victims whether it acquires nuclear [weapons] and whether a war breaks out [against it]..."[4]

Anglo-Israeli "Doomsday" War Scheme Advances

http://www.larouchepac.com/node/13618

February 21, 2010 (LPAC)—Sources close to the Israeli government have warned Executive Intelligence Review that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's inner cabinet is close to making a decision to launch a preventive strike against Iran's nuclear facilities. Such a decision, that would be a further step closer to a devastating regional confrontation, could come as early as Sunday, when the Israeli cabinet convenes. According to the source, a fierce debate is raging within the Israeli military, over whether Israel has the capacity to successfully strike Iran's nuclear facilities at Natanz or elsewhere. Recently former Israeli Defense Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Dan Halutz told Israeli media that the IDF does not have the ability to seriously damage the Iranian program. But, according to an Israeli source close to the inner cabinet, several options are being reviewed for just such an attack. According to the source, in recent visits to Russia, both Netanyahu and Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman pressed Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin for permission to stage attacks against Iranian targets from sites inside Russia. Putin reportedly strongly shut the door on that option; however, similar approaches have been made to the government of Kazakhstan, according to the Israeli source. The source added that the preferred option, being promoted by factions in the IDF, is to launch attacks from Israeli submarines, equipped with Cruise missiles. The source noted that the accuracy of the Cruise missiles, launched from Israeli submarines is unreliable, and most of the Iranian sites on the Israeli target list are in urban areas.

The sources confirmed that the Obama Administration's national security team has delivered a series of strongly worded messages, warning Israel against any unilateral attacks on Iran. U.S. military leaders, as well as Defense Secretary Robert Gates, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, JCS Chairman Adm. Michael Mullen, National Security Advisor Gen. Jim Jones, and Vice President Joe Biden, all recognize that a military strike against Iran is the worst-case, last option, and that we are not even close to the point of having to make that decision. It is widely believed, including among Israeli planners, that Iran has a retaliatory asymmetric capability that would involve crippling the entire Persian Gulf oil flow, blowing out the entire world economy, if attacked.

Lyndon LaRouche warned that circles in London, including former Prime Minister Tony Blair, are the real potential architects of this "doomsday" scheme. It is those in London, who are desperate over the collapse of the entire British System, who may be contemplating an Israeli breakaway ally attack on Iran, that would bring on a planetary dark age. Just recall Blair's testimony before the Chilcot Commission, in which he taunted the commissioners with the need to take military action against Iran today, just as he lied the U.S. and Britain into the 2003 invasion of Iraq. These people would have to be totally desperate, to be contemplating such a doomsday act, and I am afraid that they are, LaRouche warned.

Netanyahu's agony

February 22, 2010
Ron Lipsman
http://www.americanthinker.com/blog/2010/0...ahus_agony.html

In the 1920s, an Austrian madman announced that he would take control of Germany and use that position to murder millions of Jews. Scarcely anyone believed him. But he made good on his promise. He could have been stopped. However, the nations in a position to do so failed at the task. Either they couldn't imagine that he was serious or they weren't particularly concerned about the implications of his intentions.

Today we observe an Iranian madman announce that he intends to repeat the process. He starts ahead of his illustrious Austrian predecessor because he, in cahoots with a mysterious group of clerical fanatics, already controls the government. It remains for him only to finish his preparations of the atomic tools with which he expects to carry out his mad plan.

Once again, there are those in a position to prevent it. But as in the past, events have demonstrated that the powers capable of checking the mad Iranian are unlikely to do so. Most dismiss his threats as political bluster. Most of the rest believe he is not serious because, they calculate, a genocidal thrust by Iran toward Israel would surely be suicidal. And then of course there are the not inconsiderable numbers who, if not gleeful at the prospect of Jewish annihilation, at least don't see it as such a terrible outcome. I wonder into which of these three groups our benighted President falls?

There is however one major difference between the situations then and now - namely, the existence of a powerful Jewish State capable of defending the Jewish people and/or avenging them. And thereby arises the agonizing decision faced by Israel's leaders.

I have no doubt that the people of Israel do not dismiss the madman's threat as bluster or bluff. They understand that the centuries long enmity of Islam toward Judaism, the hysterical obsession of the Muslim world to rid the Middle East of the "Zionist entity" and the Muslim embrace of suicide bombers make it eminently possible that Ahmadinejad is deadly serious. While they retain the ability to annihilate Teheran, much of Iran and perhaps significant parts of the Muslim world - even if only in a retaliatory strike to avenge an Iranian nuclear attack on their tiny country-Israelis surely reason that a better course of action is to obliterate the enemy's nuclear facilities first-using conventional weapons of course.

Thus the agony:

• Israel cannot be absolutely certain, short of an actual Iranian nuclear attack, that Ahmadinejad is truly serious, so a preemptive Israeli strike could conceivably be unnecessary.

• Such a preemptive strike might not succeed.

• It almost certainly will cause inadvertent civilian casualties.

• Even if it succeeds, the Iranian government is capable of causing Israel great pain via their long range missiles, and their proxies in Lebanon and Gaza.

• The Iranians are also capable of delivering immense pain to the rest of the world (e.g., by closing the Strait of Hormuz).

• And finally, successful or not, an Israeli preemptive strike will bring the wrath of the entire world down on them.

What will Israel decide to do? The agony that Netanyahu is experiencing-as the window in which he must decide shrinks-must be monumental. We shall know his decision relatively soon.

Hariri meets with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican

February 20, 2010
http://www.nowlebanon.com/NewsArticleDetails.aspx?ID=147868

Prime Minister Saad Hariri met with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican on Saturday. Following the meeting, the Pope met with Hariri's family and his delegation.

Future News television reported that Hariri referred to Pope John Paul II's 1997 statement that "Lebanon is more than a country, it is a message" when he spoke with Pope Benedict. Hariri said Lebanon is an example of Christian-Muslim coexistence and inter-religious dialogue.

The pope and Hariri also exchanged gifts: Pope Benedict gave Hariri a pen that resembles one of the four pillars of Saint Peter's Cathedral; while the PM offered the Catholic church leader a historic manuscript, a 609-page book by the Melkite Greek Catholic Patriarch of Antioch that was translated from Greek to Arabic in 1633.

Hariri later met with Vatican officials, including Archbishop Dominique Mamberti - who acts as the Holy See of Rome's minister of foreign affairs - and discussed Lebanese developments, the relationship between the Vatican and Lebanon and efforts to revive the Middle East peace process.

Pope, Lebanese premier discuss Middle East tensions

February 22, 2010
http://www.catholicculture.org/news/headli...fm?storyid=5519

Pope Benedict XVI met with Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri at the Vatican on February 20. In a brief statement released after the meeting, the Vatican noted the "exemplary coexistence of the various religious communities" in Lebanon in past years, and said that continued inter-faith harmony should be a model for the Middle East.

The Vatican indicated that the Pope's talks with Hariri had touched upon plans for the October Synod of Bishops for the Middle East, and the prospects for an end to the conflicts in the region.

Speaking to Italian reporters after his meeting with the Pontiff, the Lebanese leader offered a stronger message, saying that he had told Pope Benedict that aggressive Israeli policies are undermining the security of his nation. Hariri told the Italian daiy Corriere della Sera that "Israel is looking for excuses for war."

Dear Craig,

Excellent, it is only too short!!!

For viewer clarification, you might wish to list all 12 Crusades of Rome; the 9 crusades that ended with the loss of the Kingdom of Jerusalem in 1291; the 10th crusade---Napoleon's invasion of Egypt and later Acre in 1799; the 11th crusade---Britain's taking of Jerusalem from the Ottoman Turks in 1917 via General Allenby and the breaking up of the Ottoman Empire in 1919 at Versailles; and the 12th Crusade---Bush's invasion of Afghanistan commencing on October 7, 2001, the same day the Jesuit Papacy and Knights of Malta defeated the Turks in the key Battle of Lepanto on October 7, 1571---the most important naval battle since Octavian won the Battle of Actium in 31 BC after which he became the first Roman Emperor.

As to the title, I would change it. Now please bear with me. It would better be called "Romanism versus Islam." The reason I say this is three-fold.

First, your presentation does, in fact, reflect that title. You rightly make the point that Israel is merely the Pope's Revived Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem---which it is. Israel's Labor Zionists are merely tools of Rome, that evil Mother of Harlot delighting in the killing of both racial Jews and racial Arabs---by any means necessary.

Secondly, The Jesuit Papacy has been plotting a huge Crusade using the US military against Islam for decades. The most important fact that I learned from a speaker at my first Con Con back in 2002 was that he cited James Angleton (SMOM and Counterintelligence Chief for the CIA manning both the Vatican and Israeli desks at CIA) calling for a "Crusade" against Islam back in the late 60s, or in the early 70s just before that cretin was forced to resigned by William Colby who was later brutally murdered.

Thirdly, the Arab world regards "Zionism" as something strictly Jewish having nothing to do with the Jesuit Papacy. If the Arabs can be turned to see that Rome, via her Russian Bolshevik-backing, Fabian Socialists and their British Labour Party was the creator of the Labor Zionists in England commissioned to rule Israel for the Pope, all would become clear. The reason the British occupation after WWII was so hard on the Jews and so pro-Arab was to deceive the Arabs into believing that the Labor Zionists were enemies of London, when in fact Lawrence of Arabia was secretly pro-Labor Zionist while outwardly pro-Arab---as I explain in VAIII. The Vatican pulled the same clever trick. Papal open policy was always pro-Arab, and anti-Jew/Israel (until December, 1993, when the Vatican recognized Israel as a nation after having been given title to the Temple mount that previous September) in order to deceive the Arabs and justify their hatred against the Labor Zionist Jewish State. Thus, "the Zionists" became the universal enemy of the Muslim Arab world---in preparation for "an unintended" World War against all Jews in general within the few remaining nations in which they dwell---especially the US and Canada. The average Arab makes no connection between the Jesuit Papacy and its creation, Masonic Jewish Labor Zionism. Your video goes far in eliminating this illusion and would go farther if you renamed it "Romanism versus Islam," or "Surrogates of Romanism versus Islam," or the like. To keep the title "Zionism versus Islam" perpetuates the illusion in the Arab mind that the Jesuit Papacy is a separate entity from Labor Zionism (something that Leo Zagami does) and keeps the Arab from taking aim at his oppressor for the last 1500 years---the Pope of Rome!

Please consider dear Craig,

Brother Eric

COLLAR PRO MERITO MELITENSI TO JOSE' MANUEL BARROSO: 'TOGETHER AGAINST POVERTY IN EUROPE' http://www.orderofmalta.org/news/en/541/co...verty-in-europe

Rome, 22 May 2010
Meeting between the President of the European Commission and the Grand Master at the Magistral Villa

Combating unemployment in Europe, with the target of “reducing by 25% the number of those at risk of poverty and social exclusion”, is an “integral part of the economic strategy the European Commission is preparing for the next ten years” and a shared commitment with the Order of Malta which, with its 900 years of existence, is “the oldest humanitarian organization in history”. With these words, the President of the European Commission José Manuel Barroso thanked yesterday the Grand Master of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta, Fra’ Matthew Festing, for Collar "pro Merito Melitensi" bestowed on him “in recognition of the personal commitment in the service or your high functions at the Head of the European Commission since 2004 and for the interest he has taken in the Order of Malta, supporting its work with a profound humanitarian spirit”.

Stressed during the talks was the desire to strengthen health and humanitarian cooperation between the European Commission and the Order of Malta, with joint humanitarian projects already in place in the Congo, Thailand, Cambodia and Myanmar, and to help protect the Holy Places and inter-religious dialogue.

The ceremony took place in the Magistral Villa in Rome and was followed by a gala dinner attended by some hundred ambassadors and Italian and Vatican institutional personalities, including the Italian Minister for European Politics Andrea Ronchi and Cardinal Jean Louis Tauran, President of the Pontifical Council for Inter-religious Dialogue.

The Grand Master thanked President Barroso for the “excellent relations” between the two institutions, further stimulated by the signature in Brussels last year of the Cooperation Agreement between the European Commission and Order of Malta, in particular in the healthcare and emergency relief sectors.
Among the projects underway, he recalled, was that of freedom of access and protection of religious sites worldwide: “we believe that a clear comprehension of the nature of the Holy Places, of their universal dimension and of their specific characteristics,” he said, “is a precondition for safeguarding their religious significance and preventing them being exploited for reasons that have little to do with religion or cultural patrimony protection. He confirmed that the Order wants to extend its actions in the Middle East and particularly in the Lebanon, where “the preservation of its cultural diversity and the presence of Christians are at stake”, to support stability in the Mediterranean and help prevent conflicts.

As president Barroso said, faced with an “unprecedented economic and financial crisis” and during the European Year for Combating Poverty and Social Exclusion, the European Union’s priority is to create jobs and “qualified employment” for European citizens. “We cannot close our eyes,” he said, “to the fate of 80 million of our poor fellow citizens, of which 19 million are minors”.The Order of Malta and the European Union must “oppose with determination and above all with our values” the negative values created by the economic crises that “offer a breeding ground for populism, individualism and egoism”. “More than ever,” he said, “we have to take action against instability and injustice with the ideals of justice and solidarity that inspire your Order”.

This was the first visit of a European Commission president to the Order and the second meeting between José Manuel Barroso and the current Grand Master.

Israeli Army to simulate invasion of south Lebanon

Friday, July 23, 2010
http://www.dailystar.com.lb/article.asp?ed...4#axzz0ueJ0CpaZ

BEIRUT: Israel will simulate moving machinery and personnel into south Lebanon amid fears that Hizbullah will target main transport arteries in any future conflict, Israeli media reported Thursday.

The Jerusalem Post said that the test would be conducted in computerized simulations.

“The [Israeli Army] is working under the assumption that most of the ground battle will be fought in an urban setting, inside the 160 or so villages throughout southern Lebanon where Hizbullah is believed to have hidden most of its military infrastructure,” the paper wrote.

It added that “Hizbullah has heavily mined roads leading to southern Lebanese villages, aware that the ground offenses will include tanks and armored personnel carriers.”

Two weeks ago, the Israeli Army released military-intelligence images of southern Lebanese villages, including purported missile silos belonging to Hizbullah in Al-Khiam. The paper quoted an anonymous senior Israeli Army officer as saying that it expected Hizbullah to target transport lines in the event of another war.

“Hizbullah will likely allow the [Israeli] military force to reach its target point and then begin striking at the supply lines which the forces in the field will need to secure,” the officer said.

Talk of renewed aggression between Israel and Hizbullah – who last clashed in the devastating 2006 summer war which killed over 1,200 Lebanese, mostly civilian, and 160 Israelis, mostly soldiers – has reignited recently following Israeli claims that the party had received long-range Scud missiles from Syria. Damascus has denied the allegations and Hizbullah continues to abstain from commenting on the size and makeup of its arsenal, which Israel estimates to comprise 40,000 rockets.

Earlier this week, Israeli Army Chief of Staff Gabi Ashkenazi vowed to attack Lebanese urban centers in order to root out Hizbullah headquarters, which Israel believed to be extant in dozens of southern villages. – The Daily Star

Blast hits near Egypt embassy in Beirut

Wed, 28 Jul 2010 08:53:28 GMT

http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13650...ionid=351020203

A percussion bomb has exploded near the Egyptian embassy in Beirut, injuring one person, says a Press TV correspondent in the Lebanese capital.

The explosion took place on Wednesday about five kilometers (three miles) from the Egyptian embassy in Beirut. The explosive device had been placed under a car at the complex housing the country's engineering trade association in Wata al-Moutssabieh, Beirut.

A Syrian worker who was in the area at the time of the explosion sustained minor injures when the explosion took place in an underground parking lot in the capital city, according to police sources. Four cars were also damaged in the incident.

The incident comes amid the ongoing political instability in Lebanon, specifically over the tribunal investigating the assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri back in 2005.

Soldiers rushed to the scene following the explosion, which caused panic in the area.

Beirut is currently on high alert for the imminent publication of the result of a United Nations tribunal for Lebanon's inquiry into the 2005 murder.

Israel violates Lebanese airspace again

Thu, 29 Jul 2010 15:02:56 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13668...ionid=351020203

The Lebanese Army says two Israeli surveillance aircraft have violated the country's airspace, with one of them staying around for about 11 hours.

One reconnaissance plane entered the airspace at 6:30 a.m. (local time) on Wednesday, Press TV's correspondent in the Lebanese capital, Beirut, Ali Rizk reported on Thursday, citing an Army statement. It flew over south Lebanon and the western Bekaa region before leaving at 5:20 p.m.

Another surveillance aircraft violated the Lebanese airspace on 6:25 p.m. and roamed over southern and eastern areas.

Israel carries out such violations on an almost daily basis, claiming it has to maintain surveillance.

The incursions breach the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1701, which obliges Israel to keep out of Lebanon following its 2006 war on the country which left some 1,200 Lebanese dead.

Lebanon busts 2nd Mossad telecom spy

Wed, 28 Jul 2010 21:53:32 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13659...ionid=351020203

A second employee of Lebanon's mobile phone firm has been charged with spying for Israel and has been referred to a military court.

On Wednesday, a Lebanese prosecutor said that Tareq Raba'a, a telecom engineer at Alfa, was arrested on July 12 on suspicion of spying for the notorious Israeli intelligence agency, the Mossad. If convicted, he could face the death penalty, judicial sources said.

Raba'a was arrested two weeks after the security forces arrested a senior employee at Alfa, Charbel Qazzi, on suspicion of spying for the Mossad. He has also been charged with espionage and referred to a military court will also face the death penalty if convicted, Reuters reported.

Since April 2009, Lebanon has arrested nearly 100 people, including members of the country's security forces and telecommunications personnel, on suspicion of spying for the Mossad, which has dealt a serious blow to Israel's intelligence gathering system in Lebanon.

Some have already confessed to the crime and are awaiting sentencing. Several said they helped identify targets in Lebanon that Israel bombed during its 2006 war with the resistance group Hezbollah.

Security sources say they believe Raba'a started working for Mossad in 2001 and added that he used to leave Lebanon twice a month, returning each time with at least $10,000 in cash.

The Lebanese cabinet has agreed that death sentences handed down to spies for Israel should be carried out.

Syrian and Saudi leaders call for calm on Beirut visit

30 July 2010 Last updated at 16:56
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-10813301

The Syrian and Saudi leaders have called on Lebanon's rival factions to avoid turning to violence amid mounting political tensions in the country.

The call came after unprecedented talks in Beirut between Saudi King Abdullah, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and Lebanese President Michel Suleiman.

They called on Lebanese to resolve issues through "legal institutions".

The trip marks progress in relations between Saudi Arabia and Syria - two of the region's most influential powers.

The two countries only exchanged embassies for the first time last year, and entente between them is seen as crucial to stability in Lebanon.

"The leaders stressed the importance of stability... the commitment (of the Lebanese) not to resort to violence and the need to place the country's interests above all sectarian interests," said a statement issued by the Lebanese presidency after talks between the three leaders.
Conflict looming?

The visit is Mr Assad's first to Lebanon since Syria was forced to withdraw its troops after the 2005 killing of former PM Rafik Hariri.

Both he and the Saudi leader are worried conflict could break out if, as rumoured, a UN tribunal indicts members of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah movement over the Hariri killing.

On Thursday, Mr Assad and King Abdullah pledged to work together to help stabilise Lebanon.

Hezbollah is Syria's main ally in Lebanon, while the Saudis are deeply involved with the country's Sunni community and current Prime Minister Saad Hariri, son of the murdered ex-PM.

Mr Assad and King Abdullah are thought to have been instrumental in ending the five months of deadlock which preceded the formation of Lebanon's unity government - which includes Hezbollah - last November.
'Major stability'

Lebanon's relations with Syria have been complicated since the Hariri assassination, the huge anti-Syrian demonstrations that followed, and the end of the 29-year Syrian military presence - all in 2005.

But things have improved since then, analysts say. Saad Hariri has visited Damascus twice as prime minister for talks with President Assad, setting aside his accusations that Syria was behind his father's death.

Mr Assad's visit carries that normalisation a step further.

Tensions have risen in the past week, however, with Hezbollah leader Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah reacting angrily to persistent reports that the Hariri tribunal may indict several members of the Shia Islamist group.

He made clear that he would not accept such a scenario, accusing the tribunal of being politicised and part of an "Israeli project".

Should it indeed happen there are fears of sectarian violence between Shias and Hariri's Sunni community, as happened in 2008, says the BBC's Jim Muir in Beirut.

Iran vows 'crushing response' to Israel

Sat, 31 Jul 2010 14:05:46 GMT
http://www.presstv.com/detail.aspx?id=1369...ionid=351020101

Iran's UN envoy Mohammad Khazaei warns Israel of a "crushing response," should the regime initiate any act of aggression against the Islamic Republic.

"If the Zionist regime (Israel) attempts to initiate the slightest act of aggression against Iran, it will receive a crushing response," IRNA quoted Khazaei as saying on Friday.

He said Iran does not welcome tension but in confronting its enemies, it adopts "strong stances" due to the "solidarity of its nation, divine guidance and the Leader [of the Islamic Revolution Ayatollah Seyyed Ali Khamenei]."

"Enemies want to bring the Iranian nation down to its knees by resorting to any means possible [ranging] from military threats to soft war. Even certain neighboring states, who are afraid of the weakening of the pillars of their corrupt power, have no objection to being equipped by their masters, the US and Britain, against our country," Iran's ambassador to the UN said.

Khazaei added that Iran had been exposed to the "strongest of pressures" but has never yielded once and would continue to remain proud and dignified.

He reiterated Iran's right to peaceful nuclear energy and said the dispute over Tehran's nuclear case was an "excuse to exert pressure on the country."

Khazaei criticized nuclear discrimination against Iran while "Israel has 230 nuclear warheads" and "Pakistan and Saudi Arabia are deemed atomic and military powers."

The remarks came as Israel has repeatedly threatened to attack Iran's nuclear facilities.

This is while the International Atomic Energy Agency has in numerous reports asserted that its inspectors and surveillance equipment at Iran's nuclear facilities have found no evidence of diversion in the country's declared nuclear material.

Zionist regime not to exist in the region, if attacks on Iran: MP

http://www.isna.ir/ISNA/NewsView.aspx?ID=News-1584059&Lang=E

TEHRAN (ISNA)-An Iranian lawmaker Hossein Ebrahimi said Saturday that Zionist regime would not exist in the region, in case of any military strike against Iran.

"Any military action against Iran by Zionist regime is an ultimatum for the regime's destruction," Deputy Chairman of Iran's Parliament National Security and Foreign Policy Commission told ISNA.

"The newly-approved act of the US will go nowhere," Ebrahimi said referring to the US Resolution 1553, adding that the resolution would suffer the same fate of the US previous foiled plans for the Middle East.

The House Resolution 1553 supports Zionist regime to use all means necessary to confront and eliminate the alleged nuclear threats by the Islamic Republic of Iran.

Ebrahimi warned, "in case of Zionist regime's military action, the region will not see something named Zionist regime."

The Iranian lawmaker went on to say that considering Zionist regime's experience, it would not launch attack on Iran, since it failed to do so regarding its neighbor Lebanon in 2006.

Syria warns of another war in Mideast

Sun, 01 Aug 2010 15:34:58 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13705...ionid=351020206

Syria's President Bashar al-Assad has once again warned that the Middle East is increasingly moving toward regional hostilities.

Assad said on Sunday that the "real peace spectrum in the region is moving away and the prospects of war and confrontation are increasing," DPA reported.

Speaking on 65th anniversary of the Syrian military's establishment, Assad said Damascus would stand by its claim to the Golan Heights, which has been under Israeli occupation since Tel Aviv's full-scale offensives against the Arab territories in 1967. "Syria reiterates its willingness [for a] just peace," he said, adding that the "first factor of peace is preserving dignity, sovereignty and not abandoning any bit of soil or drop of water."

The Syrian president had warned earlier last month about the growing likelihood of armed regional standoffs, citing the current tension between Israel and Turkey.

"[If] relations between Israel and Turkey are not renewed, it will be very difficult for Turkey to continue its role in the [peace] negotiations," he had said.

In 2008, Turkey mediated four rounds of indirect talks between Damascus and Tel Aviv. The talks stalled following Israel's December 2008-January 2009 war on the Gaza Strip, which left over 1,400 Palestinians dead and inflicted more than USD 1.6 billion in damage on the Gazan economy.

Ankara's relations with Tel Aviv hit an all-time low after the attack on the Turkey-backed Freedom Flotilla aid convoy in international waters in the Mediterranean Sea on May 31.

The commando assault on the mission, which intended to break Israel's over three-year-long siege of Gaza left nine Turkish activists dead onboard the lead Turkish vessel, Mavi Marmara.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman have insisted that the regime will not apologize for the bloodshed, as Turkey demands.

Iran warns Israel against waging war

Mon, 02 Aug 2010 09:41:35 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13714...ionid=351020101

Iran's foreign minister has warned the Zionist regime of Israel and its allies against waging a war in the Middle East, saying any possible war in the region will not be 'limited.'

Manouchehr Mottaki told the Iranian Arabic language satellite channel Al-Alam late Sunday that certain moves and threats by the Zionist regime against Lebanon and Syria indicate Tel Aviv intends to launch a war in the region, reported Fars News Agency.

"If Israel and its supporters wage such a war, they will have made a big mistake," the top Iranian diplomat added.

He further said Iran stands by Syria and other regional nations, and is ready to defend itself against any 'warmongering' in the region.

Mottaki reiterated that certain players from outside the region, in cahoots with the Zionist regime, seek to provoke divisions, crises and tension in the Middle East.

Elsewhere in his remarks, Mottaki touched upon Iran's nuclear issue.

He said Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Yukiya Amano seems to be making the arrangements for a meeting between Iran and the Vienna Group on nuclear fuel swap to provide fuel for the Tehran nuclear research reactor.

Mottaki highlighted Iran welcomes the presence of Turkey and Brazil in the talks if they are interested to take part.

Lebanon arrests fourth telecommunications official in alleged Israel spy ring

More than 50 Lebanese citizens have been arrested since April last year in a broad espionage investigation.

Lebanese security forces last week arrested another senior official from the state's telecommunications network suspected of spying on behalf of Israel, the Lebanese daily Al-Akhbar reported on Sunday, Milad Eid, 66, is the fourth telecommunications official arrested this year in an alleged ring linked to Israel's intelligence service. Eid is a senior technician at Ogero, the state-owned company that runs the country's land-line telephone. He retired last year and was then brought back to serve in the administrative position.

The other three were employees of the Alfa mobile telecommunications network. One of those suspects, Ras al-Jud, reportedly managed to flee from Lebanon to Israel last month by crossing the border near Bint Jbeil

More than 50 Lebanese citizens have been arrested since April last year in a broad espionage investigation.

Lebanon has described the arrests as a major blow to Israel's intelligence gathering in the country and said many suspects helped identify targets in Lebanon that Israel bombed during its 2006 war with the militant group Hezbollah.

President Michel Suleiman, who under Lebanese law must sign a death sentence before it is carried out, has called for severe punishment for spies. The cabinet also agreed that death sentences handed down to spies for Israel should be carried out.

Israel Denies Hand in Hariri Killing: Entire Lebanon will Pay Dearly if Hizbullah Attacks Israel

Beirut, 02 Aug 10, 07:42
http://www.naharnet.com/domino/tn/NewsDesk...2257773001A0A25

Spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu Ofir Gendelman denied any Israeli involvement the 2005 assassination of ex-PM Rafik Hariri.

"Talking about an Israeli hand in the assassination of Hariri is nonsense and based on the principle of a conspiracy," Gendelman said in an interview to be published Tuesday by the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Rai.

Excerpts of the interview were published on Monday.

"Everyone knows who was behind Hariri's assassination, and Israel was never involved in this and it does not and will not interfere in Lebanese internal affairs," Netanyahu's spokesman stressed.

"Of course, circles who are spreading this word want to see Israel in the spotlight, or that the side which is behind the assassination wants to evade responsibility.

On the assassination of Hizbullah commander Imad Mughniyeh, Gendelman confirmed that Israel "will take into account the possibility of Hizbullah assassinating a senior Israeli official, or an ambassador or an Israeli citizen abroad or kidnap an Israeli businessman or officer or a senior government employee abroad."

"This would be considered as a declaration of war, and we will take this threat very seriously."

Gendelman pointed to Israeli concerns over Hizbullah's military buildup, stressing that Israel is "not interested in waging war on Lebanon."

Regarding Hizbullah threats to bombard Israeli towns and the Jewish state's infrastructure, the spokesman warned that "all of Lebanon will pay dearly if Hizbullah attacks Israel."

Is the Mideast on the Brink of a Big New War?

By Tony Karon Tuesday, Aug. 03, 2010
http://www.time.com/time/world/article/0,8...=rss-topstories

Viewed in isolation, the rockets fired from Gaza on Israel and the Israeli air strikes on the besieged territory over the past week are business as usual. By the same token, the unprecedented joint visit to Beirut by the leaders of Saudi Arabia and Syria could be seen simply as a move to stop the conflict between their Lebanese proxies turning nasty. And British Prime Minister David Cameron's pleas to Turkey to keep open its channels of communication with Israel's leaders are quotidian diplomatic common sense. Viewed in a wider context, each of those events is a signal of why many in the Middle East believe that despite the outward calm, the region may be on the brink of another catastrophic war.

A new report based on extensive conversations with regional decisionmakers released Monday by the International Crisis Group, the respected mediation organization of former diplomats, warns of the possibility of war. "The situation in the Levant is ... exceptionally quiet and uniquely dangerous, both for the same reason," the Crisis Group warns. "The buildup in military forces and threats of an all-out war that would spare neither civilians nor civilian infrastructure, together with the worrisome prospect of its regionalization, are effectively deterring all sides." But while Hizballah and its regional backers, Syria and Iran, believe that the buildup in the Shi'ite militia's arsenal and capabilities is deterring Israel from launching attacks on any of them, Israel views the acquisition by Hizballah of a missile arsenal capable of raining destruction on Israeli cities as an intolerable threat. "As Hizballah's firepower grows," the Crisis Group notes, "so too does Israel's desire to tackle the problem before it is too late ... What is holding the current architecture in place is also what could rapidly bring it down."

Should a new war break out, Israel is determined to strike a more devastating blow more quickly than it did during the last conflict, in which it failed in its objective of destroying Hizballah. It has publicly warned that it would destroy Lebanese civilian infrastructure, and that Syria, as Hizballah's armorer, would not be off-limits. But Hizballah believes its capacity to fire missiles into Tel Aviv is key to restraining Israel from returning to finish off the Shi'ite militia. And, of course, amid regional tensions over Iran's nuclear program, the self-styled "axis of resistance" — Iran, Syria, Hamas and Hizballah — have deepened their alliance, raising the possibility of any one of those groups joining the fray should any of the others come under attack from Israel or the U. S.

Although all of the main players have good reason to avoid initiating another war right now, the Crisis Group warns that "tensions are mounting with no obvious safety valve." At some point, Hizballah's growing deterrent could cross Israel's red line. And the Western diplomatic boycott of the resistance camp is cause for alarm because there are no effective channels through which the various antagonists can be made to understand how their actions could produce unintended consequences — in the tragic tradition of Middle Eastern wars that erupted in part because the adversaries' failed to understand one another's intentions. Indeed, after proclaiming his movement's "divine victory" in standing up to Israel's 2006 offensive, a feat that made him a hero on the streets of the Arab world, Hizballah leader Sheik Hassan Nasrallah did admit that had he known Israel would respond with a full-blown invasion, he would have avoided the provocation of snatching the Israeli troops that started the showdown.

The danger posed by the lack of communication channels between the resistance camp and the Israelis explains why British Prime Minister David Cameron, a recent guest at the White House, last week went to Ankara to urge Turkey to maintain its ties with Israel and use its ties to the likes of Syria to facilitate communication that could mitigate an outbreak. Turkey has been pilloried in some quarters in the West — and certainly in Israel — for its diplomatic rapprochement with the likes of Syria, Iran and Hamas, but Cameron's appeal was a tacit admission that the continuing Bush-era policy of refusing to engage with the region's designated "radicals" has sharply diminished the ability of the U.S. and the European Union to influence events in the Middle East. Peace talks between Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas and the Israelis are all very well, but Abbas is not at war with Israel, nor would he be even if a new round of fighting broke out in Gaza.

Even in the besieged Palestinian territory, however, neither side is looking to restart full-blown hostilities of the type that left the territory devastated 18 months ago. The projectiles fired from the Palestinian side last week caused no casualties, and the Israeli military believes they were fired not by Hamas, but by some of the smaller rival groups that occasionally challenge the cease-fire Hamas has imposed since February 2009. Some Israeli analysts suspect that Hamas may have momentarily eased up its enforcement of the cease-fire to remind the U.S. and Israel of the perils of leaving it out of the peace process. Still, although Israel targeted Hamas commanders in weekend air strikes, Israel's handling of Gaza has brought it increasing diplomatic isolation, which a new round of fighting would likely accelerate.

But the Hamas cease-fire that has largely held for the past 18 months is a unilateral one, with no clear channels of communication or agreed-upon rules of engagement, meaning that the danger of escalation is ever present. The same is true on the Israel-Lebanon border, where both sides have been preparing for the next war ever since the last one ended, neither desiring that option but both accepting it as inevitable. In the absence of any peace process by which Syria can recover the Golan Heights occupied by Israel since the 1967 war, Syria continues to support Hizballah as its prime form of leverage against the Jewish state. The diplomatic dynamic over the past decade has also deepened Damascus' alliance with Tehran, which in turn makes Israel even more leery of engaging with the Syrians. And conventional wisdom has long held that should Iran's nuclear facilities come under attack, Hizballah's rockets would figure prominently in Tehran's retaliation plans.

So, the potential triggers on different fronts for a new round of hostilities have multiplied, as has the danger of them going off in sequence as a result of the ties between some of the key players. And right now, the Crisis Group warns, "There is no mechanism in place to either address or ease" those mounting tensions. Absent a political process that can credibly resolve or regulate conflicts ranging from Gaza and the Golan Heights to Iran, "the world should cross its fingers that fear of a catastrophic conflict will continue to be reason enough for the parties not to provoke one."

Israel more likely to strike Iran than U.S., analysts say

By: Sara A. Carter
National Security Correspondent
August 3, 2010
http://www.washingtonexaminer.com/world/Is...0-99790639.html

While the U.S. military has developed a first-strike plan to take out Iranian nuclear facilities, the political and security consequences of taking that step make it an unlikely option, analysts said.

But the wild card in the deck remains Israel, and there is a growing sense among experts that the Jewish state make act first, and explain later, if the threat of a nuclear strike from Tehran continues to grow.

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Adm. Mike Mullen disclosed Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the Defense Department has plans to attack Iran if required.

He did not elaborate on the plan but said he would "be "extremely concerned" about any scenario that led to a military attack on the Tehran government.

Alireza Nader, an international policy analyst with an expertise in Iranian affairs at RAND, a think tank in D.C., told The Examiner that Iran would retaliate through proxies in the region if the United States struck first.

However, he said Iran would retaliate after a first strike by "potentially fueling the insurgency in Afghanistan."

To Nader, taking the step would be "destabilizing and just as potentially harmful for U.S. interests in the Middle East for Iran to have any sort of nuclear capability."

Despite the difficulties, Nader said Iran's ties to various groups, including the Taliban, in Afghanistan could have "severe consequences" for American gains in the region if the U.S. strikes first.

"Iran is already offering measured support to the Taliban and also has influence among other groups," he said. "A strike could lead to full support and destabilization."

He added Iran would not stop with Afghanistan but disrupt efforts by the U.S. and its allies in "Iraq, Lebanon and throughout the Persian Gulf."

CIA Director Leon Panetta said in July on ABC's "This Week" that current intelligence suggested Iran was closer than ever to obtaining a nuclear weapon.

"We think they have enough low-enriched uranium right now for two weapons," Panetta said. "They do have to enrich it, fully, in order to get there. And we would estimate that if they made that decision, it would probably take a year to get there, probably another year to develop the kind of weapon delivery system in order to make that viable."

Panetta said sanctions would be unlikely to prevent a emboldened Iran, saying it may "weaken the regime," but "Will it deter them from their ambitions with regards to nuclear capability? Probably not."

James Carafano, senior defense analyst for the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank in D.C., said, "In an ideal world, the U.S. should be very sensitive to the security threats that its ally faces, but I don't think the Obama administration would give Israel the green light, and will try to restrain them."

Carafano said if the administration fails to follow through with a first-strike scenario on Iran, "Israel, more than likely, will not consult with the U.S."

"It's better to ask later for forgiveness than ask early for permission."

A senior Israeli official told The Examiner, "We've signed on to President Obama's policy and strategy vis-a-vis Iran."

The official said, however, that "sanctions alone are not enough."

The sanctions, which the Obama administration hopes will rein in Iran's ability to develop nuclear weapons, have been criticized by some analysts as being too weak. The sanctions have targeted gasoline imports to Iran, and Western companies have cut off exports as well.

"We're waiting to see how the Iranians respond," the Israeli official added. "Both the president and other officials have said that all the options are on the table."

The official would not expand on whether Israel would strike first if the U.S. refused to follow through with a first-strike option.

This puts "Israel in a serious predicament," said a former senior Bush administration official with direct knowledge of the region.

"In reality, the only real plan for the U.S. in confronting a nuclear Iran will be left up to Israel, which may be forced to make the first move in order to protect itself, and the situation is not looking good."

Deadly Israel-Lebanon border clash

Lebanon says Israeli troops crossed the border, but Israel denies this

3 August 2010 Last updated at 15:42
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-10851692

At least three Lebanese soldiers and a journalist are reported killed in an exchange of fire with Israeli troops along their shared border.

Two Israeli soldiers were injured in the incident near the Israeli town of Kiryat Shemona, the army said.

The Lebanese say they opened fire after Israeli troops entered Lebanon. The Israelis deny crossing the border.

It is the first serious clash there since the 2006 conflict between Israel and Lebanese Hezbollah militants.

Israel's foreign ministry warned Lebanon of "consequences" if violence continued.

"Israel views the Lebanese government as responsible for this serious incident," a ministry statement said.

In a statement, Lebanon's Prime Minister Saad Hariri condemned Israeli "aggression" and said Lebanese sovereignty had been violated.

The Lebanese army says Israeli soldiers crossed the border to uproot a tree in the Lebanese village of Adaysseh which was blocking their view.

A Lebanese army spokesman said it had fired warning shots and Israel had responded with fire from artillery positions and helicopters.

The army confirmed to the BBC that three of its soldiers had been killed and four wounded. The al-Akhbar newspaper confirmed that one of its journalists had also been killed.
Restraint urged

Hezbollah's al-Manar television said an Israeli high-ranking military officer had also been caught up in the shooting, but this was not confirmed.

The Israeli Defence Force (IDF) said its forces had been working on its side of the border near the town of Kiryat Shemona, when they received warnings to leave the area.

"The soldiers were on routine activity in Israeli territory, in an area that lies between the 'blue line' (the internationally recognised border between Israel and Lebanon) and the security fence, thus within Israeli territory," the IDF said in a statement.

People in Lebanese army uniform then opened fire on the troops, injuring two Israeli soldiers, it said.

The UN peacekeeping force stationed in southern Lebanon has urged both sides to show "maximum restraint" following the clash.

The BBC's Wyre Davies in Jerusalem says the clash is an indication of the tensions along the Israel-Lebanon border.

Israel's Haaretz newspaper said the incident could have been caused by one of the sides misidentifying the correct location of the border.

The exchange comes a day after rockets were fired at the Israeli resort of Eilat, with a stray rocket killing one person in the nearby port of Aqaba in Jordan.

Hizbullah chief calls Lebanese army 'heroic'

By JPOST.COM STAFF

In a televised speech on Tuesday night, Hizbullah chief Hassan Nasrallah described the Lebanese army as 'heroic' following an exchange of fire that left one Israeli soldier and four Lebanese dead.

According to DPA, Nasrallah warned that Hizbullah is standing by to help the Lebanese army.

"This time we stood and watched ... but next we will not," he warned.

"Israel's aggression on Lebanon has never stopped. We will not stand idle ... we will cut any hand that attack our army."

Syria will fight for Lebanon, Wahhab says

August 4, 2010
http://www.nowlebanon.com/NewsArticleDetails.aspx?ID=191583

Syrian troops will enter Lebanon if it face domestic strife and Syria will go to war if anyone tried to destroy the Resistance, Tawhid Movement leader Wiam Wahhab told Al-Manar TV on Tuesday.

Hezbollah has the right to operate against Israel on a daily basis, he said, adding that he has low expectations for UNIFIL forces because they are infiltrated by Israeli intelligence.

Wahhab added that the Lebanese army proved it is capable of ensuring domestic security and defending the country's borders, a reference to the Lebanese Armed Forces (LAF) clashes against the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) on Tuesday.

The LAF and IDF exchanged fire along the northernmost section of their common border on Tuesday, with each side accusing the other of having started the fighting. Two Lebanese soldiers, a journalist and a senior Israeli officer were killed in the clashes, according to sources from both sides.

Wahhab said that the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (STL) investigating the 2005 murder of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri is illegitimate and an Israeli plot to cause sectarian strife.

He also voiced his confidence that Hezbollah General Secretary Sayyed Hassan Nasrallah has valuable information implicating Israel in the Rafik Hariri assassination, referring to Nasrallah's vow on Tuesday to reveal irrefutable evidence behind the Jewish State's guilt on August 9.

Lebanon, Israel -- A return to war?

English.news.cn 2010-08-04 18:52:00
by David Harris
http://news.xinhuanet.com/english2010/inde.../c_13430105.htm

JERUSALEM, Aug. 4 (Xinhua) -- The 64-million-dollar question in the Middle East right now is whether war is about to erupt between Israel and its northern neighbor, Lebanon.

In Israel there is no clear answer, with analysts admitting they are confused by Tuesday's incident in which cross-border fire left around five people dead.

As opposed to previous similar episodes, this time the shooting from the Lebanese side of the border was carried out by soldiers within the Lebanese army. Previously the attacks came from the Iranian- and Syrian-backed Shiite Hezbollah militia.

Speaking on Hezbollah's TV channel just hours after the shooting, the south Lebanese-based organization's Secretary- General Hassan Nasrallah said the movement was not involved this time but should Israel attack the Lebanese army once again Hezbollah will retaliate.

For its part, Israel said all it was doing on Tuesday was clearing obstacles on its side of the border fence, in coordination with the United Nations UNIFIL peacekeeping force.

At that point, at least one Lebanese sniper opened fire on Israeli positions in what Israel claims was a premeditated attack. In trying to prove its side of the story, Israel points to the fact that several journalists had been brought to the Lebanese side of the frontier ahead of time in order to film the incident.

Both countries have lodged formal complaints with the UN, which in turn, fearing an escalation in violence, has called on the parties involved to show "maximum restraint."

CONFUSED PICTURE

Before considering whether Tuesday's occurrence will lead to an outbreak of fighting, analysts are trying to understand the reasoning behind the incident itself and diplomatic events of the last few months.

Ely Karmon, a senior research scholar at the International Institute for Counter-Terrorism at Israel's Interdisciplinary Center, looks back to something he predicted in February of this year.

At that time he told Xinhua that Iran would likely try to persuade its allies -- Syria, Hezbollah and Hamas -- to provoke Israel once serious international pressure was placed on Tehran because of its nuclear program.

One could argue that the latest sanctions coupled with the heightened Israeli and American threats of military strikes might be sufficient for Iran to instruct its allies to move, said Karmon.

However, he accepts that Tuesday's gunfire was carried out by those in official army uniform. As a result, he points to reports in Israel on Wednesday that suggest a new commander was recently appointed within the Lebanese army with responsibility for the zone in which the incident took place. The reports maintain the officer is a staunch Shiite with an affinity with Hezbollah at the very least.

Numerous Israeli experts say Hezollah is now so ingrained in the Lebanese political and military hierarchy that it can demand specific actions from the army. There is also widespread agreement in Israel that Hezbollah's own military is better trained and equipped than the Lebanese army.

LEBANESE THINKING

Ever since Israel and Hezbollah fought a bloody summer campaign in 2006, the war drums have been beating, usually in the background but occasionally, as on Tuesday, to the fore.

Some, such as Ziad Abdelnour, the president of the anti- Hezbollah United States Committee for a Free Lebanon, believe it is only a matter of time before fighting breaks out once again. Now though, he fears that while Hezbollah will be the first to participate in any fighting, the rest of Lebanon is likely to follow suit.

"The Lebanese army will get involved sooner than later for the simple reason that the Lebanese president and prime minister are just puppets and cronies in Syria and Hezbollah's hands," said Abdelnour.

Critics of Lebanon argue that despite quitting the country after a three-decade occupation, Syria is once again becoming highly influential. This week, both before and after the incident, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad warned that war is not far off and that Damascus will do whatever necessary to defend Lebanon from "Israeli aggression."

Abdelnour believes Assad means what he says but is in no position to make such remarks.

"Of course he means it though it is all a mirage. Syria will be dismantled if it gets involved. There's a lot of saber rattling going on on Syria's part though they are not capable of anything," he said.

In various interviews over the last 24 hours, Israeli analysts said they do not believe that Hezbollah really wants a new war in the short term, nor that it is in the organization's best interests at the moment.

ISRAELI THINKING

In looking at Israel's own considerations, most Israeli analysts say the Jewish state does not want to get involved in another bloody, expensive operation. However, they add that any decision to attack will be based on what happens in Lebanon rather than on Israel Defense Forces headquarters in Tel Aviv.

Former hawkish Israeli politician and military leader Effie Eitam refused to comment on whether he thinks there will be further violence in the wake of Tuesday's incident, but he said he is extremely concerned by the fact that Hezbollah members are increasingly active within the official Lebanese army.

"The integration of a terrorist organization into the Lebanese army is a step backwards in terms of the country's future," Eitam told Israel Radio on Wednesday.

Karmon points to Nasrallah's TV speech to show in which direction the winds are headed. While not saying a war is imminent, Karmon says Hezbollah's political and military integration in and takeover of Lebanon are pointing down a certain track.

"The attempt to present Hezbollah more and more as a Lebanese legitimate force, so when the moment will be ripe for a full attack on Israel as a step in Iran's strategy to hinder the sanctions or prevent a military attack on its facilities, the Hezbollah provocation would be considered a legitimate national move," said Karmon.

The Israeli-Hezbollah War is Inevitable

Elias Youssef Bejjani
04 Aug 2010
http://www.analyst-network.com/article.php?art_id=3543

Most Middle East analysts and political observers are more than sure that the war between Israel and the West on one side, and Hezbollah, Syria, Hamas and Iran on the other front is inevitable. Its occurrence has become just a matter of time. The Middle East is in the eye of the storm and, apparently, no one can avert the confrontation that has become necessary for the agendas of all parties involved.

According to observers, the predisposing factors that build for a war are precipitating in the Middle East. Ali Hmade, the renowned Lebanese political analyst, shed light on some of these factors in his last Tuesday's column published in An Nahar Beirut Daily. Meanwhile, other American, European, Arab and Israeli analysts have written extensively on these tensions and added other pivotal factors to the Israeli-Hezbollah war formula. Below are some of these factors:

The recent fiercest border clashes since 2006 on the Lebanese - Israeli border in which three Lebanese soldiers, a Lebanese journalist ,and an Israeli officer were killed accompanied by the loud threats made by Hezbollah's General Secretary Hassan Nasrallah a few hours after the end of the clashes.

The serious internal conflict amongst Lebanese sparked by Hezbollah's bold attacks against the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (STL). Hezbollah is threatening to retaliate against Lebanon and its people with a possible coup in case the unlawful and terrorist dictates of Hassan Nasrallah are not fulfilled by Lebanese PM Saad Hariri, Saudi Arabia, and the United Nations (UN). Nasrallah is demanding that the tribunal be totally abolished. He alleges it is a tool of the Israeli-American conspiracy set to target his organization through indicting a score of its members and leaders in the 2005 assassination of Lebanese PM Rafiq Hariri.

The statement made by Syrian President Bashar al-Assad on his country's Army Day in which he said: "The specter of real peace in the region is disappearing and the possibility of war is increasing."

Assad and the Saudi King made a joint visit to Beirut on July 30th 2010. Both officials held extensive meetings with the country's leadership in a bid to calm down the war rhetoric of Hezbollah in face of the STL. Meanwhile, Assad seems to be playing on many ropes and appears even more scared of the STL than Hezbollah. Reliable American sources unveiled this week that Syria is behind the so-called "STL leaks" and not Israel or other Arab countries.

Hamas' resumption of firing rockets from Gaza into Israel, and the retaliation of Israeli warplanes by bombing Palestinian refugee camps in Gaza and the targeted killings of Hamas militants. In response, Hamas is threatening to reignite the cycle of violence.

Hamas' opposition to the direct negotiations between Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas and the Israelis brokered by the United States, the Arab League, and the majority of the Arab countries. Hamas seems well -prepared to ignite a war against both Israel and President Mahmoud Abbas in a bid to abort the negotiations.

The firing of rockets from Egypt's Sinai Peninsula, where Islamic militants have operated in the past, hitting the Israeli and Jordanian Red Sea port resorts of Eilat and Aqaba. These attacks killed one Jordanian civilian and injured three others. Israel claimed the rockets used were made in Iran.

The mysterious terrorist explosion aboard a Japanese oil tanker in the Strait of Hormuz.

The renewal of skirmishes in Yemen between government forces and the pro-Iranian Houthis after a series of cease-fire violations and exchanges of accusations.

The increasingly loud calls on the US administration to be more decisive in its Middle East policies and the numerous recommendations for a pre-emptive war against Iran and Hezbollah. "The US should work to avoid another Hezbollah-Israel conflict, but could benefit from pre-emptive military action in Lebanon..." according to Israel’s former Ambassador to Washington. A report authored by Daniel Kurtzer, written for the US Council on Foreign Relations, warns that Hezbollah's proliferating weapons stockpile could bring Israeli aggression to far outweigh the bombardment of Beirut and southern areas during the 2006 summer war. “Hizbullah has steadily rearmed in contravention of UN Security Council Resolution 1701,” Kurtzer wrote. “Israel could decide the security threat posed by Hezbollah has reached intolerable levels and take pre-emptive military action."

President Obama's approval of recommendations for a European missile shield made by US military leaders to shift focus to defending Europe against Iran's short and medium-range missiles. "This new approach will provide capabilities sooner, build on proven systems, and offer greater defenses against the threat of missile attack." Under the new plan the U.S. would initially deploy ships with missile interceptors and in a second phase, would field land-based defense systems. The confirmation made by Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Admiral Mike Mullen to the NBC network: "The United States has a viable military plan to attack Iran and its nuclear facilities, though, such a strike was probably a bad idea." Mullen has often warned that a strike against Iran would have serious and unpredictable ripple effects around the Middle East. At the same time, he has said that Iran developing a nuclear weapon is unacceptable.

The International Crisis Group (ICG) warnings of a devastating Middle East war. A new Israel-Lebanon conflict is likely to be far more violent, inflict greater damage to civilian and government infrastructure, and lead to the direct embroilment of other regional actors warned a new report released by the ICG. "A new conflict will also likely affect greater parts of the country, especially the Bekaa Valley, and will not be isolated to the south or the Shiite areas of Beirut which were systematically targeted in 2006," said the report entitled Drums of War: Israel and the 'Axis of Resistance.' The Lebanese Government is advised to take immediate steps to significantly increase troop numbers in the south and to improve the range and quality of military training and equipment available to its troops as a bulwark against a slide to war. Although conflict is far from imminent and many inhibiting factors continue to prevent the escalation of menacing rhetoric on both sides, the political roots which led to the outbreak of the 2006 war remain unaddressed and the regional situation could prove explosive. "Today, no party can soberly contemplate the prospect of a war that would be uncontrolled, unprecedented and unscripted," said the Project Director Peter Harling of Crisis Group Iraq, Lebanon and Syria, "but the underlying dynamics of the logic of deterrence carry the seeds of possible breakdown."

The alarming information leaked from high-level sources in Europe reporting that a number of prominent EU and Arab leaders foresee in the horizon a destructive regional war in the Middle East between Israel and "Axis of Evil" countries and organizations.

The ongoing Iranian threats to burn Israel and set the whole Middle East ablaze if Iran's nuclear facilities are attacked by either the US or Israel. "If the Americans make the slightest mistake, the security of the region will be endangered. Security in the Persian Gulf should be for all or none," threatened the deputy head of the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps, Yadollah Javani. "Tehran will burn down Tel Aviv" in response to any attack, said Mohammed Khazaee, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations.

Based on all of the above facts, and on many other factors, another devastating war between Israel and Hezbollah that could also involve Hamas, Syria and Iran seems to be inevitable. Sadly, Lebanon is again going to be a battlefield in this coming war.

Hopefully, this time Israel backed by the Western and moderate Arab countries will push Hezbollah out of Lebanon as it did in 1982 with the PLO. The region deserves a lasting peace that cannot be achieved while Hezbollah holds the Lebanese people hostage, Syria breeds and exports terrorists while oppressing its own people, Hamas enslaves the residents of Gaza residents by aborting all peace initiatives with Israel, and Iran endeavors to own a nuclear bomb with dreams of reviving the Persian Empire by terrorism and mass destruction.

History tells us that peace prevails only in the aftermath of wars. This is what happened after the World Wars. Once again, peace will be the fruit of the coming Middle East war if Israel, the West, and moderate Arab countries stand tall and courageously execute a well planned war to defeat the "Axis of Evil" countries and their terrorist proxies.

Hezbollah says it will strike heart of Israel if Lebanon hit

By Natacha Yazbeck (AFP) – 11 hours ago
http://www.google.com/hostednews/afp/artic...LPbEh5WCstwj2QQ

BEIRUT — Hezbollah is ready to strike the heart of Israel in the event of new aggression on Lebanon, the party's deputy chief said on Wednesday, a day after deadly clashes between Lebanese and Israeli troops.

"Israel must understand that any aggression on Lebanon, no matter how small, gives us the complete right to retaliate when and how we find appropriate and in line with Lebanon's political interests," Sheikh Naim Qassem told AFP in an exclusive interview on Wednesday.

"Hezbollah chooses when to be patient and when to retaliate," he added.

Hezbollah and its arch-foe Israel fought a 34-day war in the summer of 2006 that destroyed much of Lebanon's infrastructure. More than 1,200 Lebanese, mainly civilians, and 160 Israelis, mainly soldiers, were killed.

Qassem's comments came a day after the worst clashes along the border since the 2006 war. The fighting, in which four people were killed, also marked the first serious confrontation between Lebanese and Israeli soldiers in decades.

Israel in recent months has warned that it would target Lebanese institutions if Hezbollah, which has two ministers in Lebanon's unity government, fired rockets across the border.

But Qassem was unfazed and said the Shiite party, the most powerful political and military force in Lebanon, was capable of facing Israel's military might although it was not looking for a fight.

"When Israel threatens to destroy Lebanon, it knows Hezbollah is capable of making Israel suffer accordingly," Qassem said, adding that he did not expect conflict in the immediate future.

"Israel's territory will be completely exposed and they will have to bear responsibility for that aggression and pay the price."

Hezbollah chief Hassan Nasrallah has previously said that his group, which is backed by Syria and Iran, has the military prowess to reach Tel Aviv airport and other strategic targets inside Israel.

Nasrallah said following Tuesday's clashes that he had restrained his forces to avoid an escalation but that he would not stand idle if the Lebanese army comes under fire again.

Sheikh Qassem said his party held the UN Security Council responsible for all Israeli "violations" of Resolution 1701 which ended the 2006 war, including the latest skirmish.

Tension has been on the rise in Lebanon since Israel accused Hezbollah of stockpiling sophisticated weapons earlier this year in anticipation of a new conflict.

But Qassem brushed aside questions on his party's military capability, saying simply that it had reached a "balance of deterrence" with the Jewish state.

"We have repeatedly said that the Islamic resistance is highly prepared... and does not need time to get ready to defend itself and move straight into action."

Hezbollah is the only group that refused to disarm after Lebanon's 1975-1990 civil war, arguing that its weapons are necessary to fight Israel, which occupied mainly Shiite southern Lebanon for 22 years until 2000.

The militant group fired close to 4,000 rockets in the 2006 war, and Israel estimates that Hezbollah has since stockpiled more than 40,000 rockets, some of which could reach major population centres.

Nuclear war imminent, Castro says

Thu, 05 Aug 2010 01:01:32 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13749...ionid=351020101

Former Cuban leader Fidel Castro is to address the country's National Assembly to warn about an imminent nuclear war involving the United States, Iran, and Israel, state media reported.

Castro is expected to address the assembly on Saturday for the first time in four years to sound the warning, AFP reported on Wednesday.

On July 26, he told a group of Cuban intellectuals that he had formally requested "a meeting of the National Assembly… to explain all of the information that I have gathered on this."

The meeting, to be held one week after the first of the two annual National Assembly meetings, will focus on "analyzing several issues of the international situation," read the brief official statement that appeared in state media.

On July 31, 2006, in order to take time to recover from surgery on his intestines, Castro temporarily delegated his duties as president to his brother Raul Castro.

In February 2008, Fidel Castro announced he would be stepping down and on February 24, 2008, Raul Castro was elected president.

However, Fidel Castro still holds the powerful position of first secretary of Cuba's Communist Party.

Former US ambassador warns against new Lebanese-Israeli war

August 5, 2010

http://www.nowlebanon.com/NewsArticleDetails.aspx?ID=191833

In an interview with Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Anbaa published on Thursday, former US Ambassador to Egypt and Israel Daniel Kurtzer warned against a possible new Lebanese-Israeli war.

Lebanese and Israeli troops exchanged fire on Tuesday along their tense border in the fiercest clashes since the 2006 July War, with two Lebanese soldiers, a journalist and a senior Israeli officer dying in the violence.

Kurtzer said that there should be UN or US efforts to mediate between Lebanon and the Jewish State to ensure security along their common border.

Another war can be disastrous, said Kurtzer, adding that there already is tension in the Middle East.

He also said that Turkey would be a good candidate to mediate between Hezbollah and Israel.

Jumblat Sounds Alarm: Confrontation with Israel Likely Any Minute, But We Are Ready to Fight

Beirut, 05 Aug 10, 07:41

Druze leader Walid Jumblat said a confrontation between Lebanon and Israel is likely to erupt at any minute, but warned that Lebanon stands ready to fight.

He said in remarks published Thursday by the daily As-Safir that Tuesday's border shooting underlines that Lebanon's only guarantee is a strong army that works alongside the Resistance.

Jumblat said he will discuss his Damascus visit during a press conference to be held at his house in Clemenceau Thursday.

At the crossroads to peace and war in the Middle East

By Michael B. Oren

Friday, August 6, 2010
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/conte...0080505132.html

Rarely have the lines in the Middle East's sands been drawn so distinctly. Arrayed on one side is the peace-seeking camp that opposes militant extremism and favors direct talks between Israel and the Palestinians. On the other are the organizations, many of them surrogates for Iran, that work to undermine moderate governments and violently impede any effort for peace.

Recent events have revealed the dimensions of this divide. On the same day last month that the Arab League authorized Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas to move from proximity talks to direct negotiations with the Israeli government, Hamas terrorists in Gaza fired a Grad rocket at the southern Israeli city of Ashkelon. This week, as the Obama administration joined with Egyptian and Jordanian leaders in urging Abbas to act on the Arab League's instruction, terrorists launched rockets from Egypt's Sinai Peninsula into Jordan and Israel.

Finally, in an attack this week characterized by State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley as "wholly unjustified and unwarranted," Lebanese snipers shot and killed an Israeli commander, a father of four, who was overseeing routine tree-pruning maintenance on Israel's side of the northern border. A second officer was seriously wounded. Although the maintenance work was fully coordinated with the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, and the fatal shot was fired by the nominally independent Lebanese Armed Forces, Hassan Nasrallah, the head of Hezbollah, sent a television crew to film the ambush. He applauded the murder as a "heroic confrontation" and threatened to "cut off the arm" of Lebanon's enemies, ostensibly by firing his Iranian- and Syrian-supplied arsenal of more than 42,000 rockets at Israeli cities and towns.

Israel retaliated against these attacks by striking hostile targets in Gaza and Lebanon. At the same time, however, the Israeli government reiterated its commitment to advancing swiftly to discussions on all the core issues: borders, security, refugees and Jerusalem. In an effort to "create a more comfortable climate for the start of direct talks between the State of Israel and the Palestinian Authority," Israeli Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu met with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and King Abdullah of Jordan. Both Arab leaders expressed their support for the direct negotiations.

In a further effort to generate conditions conducive to peace, the Israeli government consented this week to participate in a United Nations panel on the so-called flotilla incident. On May 31, Israeli forces clashed with members of a Turkish extremist group who were trying to break the maritime blockade of Hamas-ruled Gaza. The panel, chaired by the former prime minister of New Zealand and the outgoing Colombian president, includes Israeli and Turkish representatives; it will review the investigations conducted in Israel and Turkey and recommend ways of avoiding such confrontations in the future.

All of these events are occurring against the backdrop of heightened sanctions against Iran. These strictures, particularly those that impede Iran's ability to import and export petroleum products, are beginning to show signs of having an impact. Many observers feel that, when confronted by the sanctions' implacability, the Iranian regime will opt to negotiate or, according to an alternative scenario, trigger a Middle East war. Such was the case in 2006 and 2008, when Iran instructed Hezbollah and Hamas, respectively, to initiate hostilities against Israel.

This is the moment that the direction of the Middle East may be determined, whether the region moves toward escalating tensions, possibly leading to further violence, or toward face-to-face negotiations and concerted efforts to reduce animosities. Much will depend on the Palestinian Authority's willingness to enter direct talks as well as on the steadfastness of pro-Western governments, in the region and beyond, to stand up to Iran and its proxies.

Summer is traditionally a time of war in the Middle East. This summer, however, might well prove the reverse -- the crucial junction toward peace. Israel stands at this intersection prepared to defend itself but also ready to make the sacrifices and hazard the risks to end the conflict definitively. The line has indeed been drawn in the Middle Eastern sand. The coming weeks may show which way it will shift.

Should Israel attack Iran's nuclear weapons facilities without waiting for green light from the US? Con

Friday, August 06, 2010
By Rafael Reuveny | Juneau Empire
http://www.juneauempire.com/stories/080610...691670553.shtml

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - A unilateral Israeli strike on Iran's nuclear facilities would likely have dire consequences, including a regional war, global economic collapse and a major power clash.

For an Israeli campaign to succeed, it must be quick and decisive. This requires an attack that would be so overwhelming that Iran would not dare to respond in full force.

Such an outcome is extremely unlikely since the locations of some of Iran's nuclear facilities are not fully known and known facilities are buried deep underground.

All of these widely spread facilities are shielded by elaborate air defense systems constructed not only by the Iranians, but also the Chinese and, likely, the Russians as well.

By now, Iran has also built redundant command and control systems and nuclear facilities, developed early warning systems, acquired ballistic and cruise missiles and upgraded and enlarged its armed forces.

Because Iran is well-prepared, a single, conventional Israeli strike - or even numerous strikes - could not destroy all of its capabilities, giving Iran time to respond.

Unlike Iraq, whose nuclear program Israel destroyed in 1981, Iran has a second-strike capability comprised of a coalition of Iranian, Syrian, Lebanese, Hezbollah, Hamas, and, perhaps, Turkish forces. Internal pressure might compel Jordan, Egypt, and the Palestinian Authority to join the assault, turning a bad situation into a regional war.

During the 1973 Arab-Israeli War, at the apex of its power, Israel was saved from defeat by President Nixon's shipment of weapons and planes. Today, Israel's numerical inferiority is greater, and it faces more determined and better-equipped opponents. After years of futilely fighting Palestinian irregular armies, Israel has lost some of its perceived superiority - bolstering its enemies' resolve.

Despite Israel's touted defense systems, Iranian coalition missiles, armed forces, and terrorist attacks would likely wreak havoc on its enemy, leading to a prolonged tit-for-tat.

In the absence of massive U.S. assistance, Israel's military resources may quickly dwindle, forcing it to use its alleged nuclear weapons, as it had reportedly almost done in 1973.

An Israeli nuclear attack would likely destroy most of Iran's capabilities, but a crippled

Iran and its coalition could still attack neighboring oil facilities, unleash global terrorism, plant mines in the Persian Gulf and impair maritime trade in the Mediterranean, Red Sea, and Indian Ocean.

Middle Eastern oil shipments would likely slow to a trickle as production declines due to the war and insurance companies decide to drop their risky Middle Eastern clients. Iran and Venezuela would likely stop selling oil to the United States and Europe.

From there, things could deteriorate as they did in the 1930s. The world economy would head into a tailspin; international acrimony would rise; and Iraqi and Afghani citizens might fully turn on the United States, immediately requiring the deployment of more American troops.

Russia, China, Venezuela, and maybe Brazil and Turkey - all of which essentially support Iran - could be tempted to form an alliance and openly challenge the U.S. hegemony.

Russia and China might rearm their injured Iranian protege overnight, just as Nixon rearmed Israel, and threaten to intervene, just as the U.S.S.R. threatened to join Egypt and Syria in 1973. President Obama's response would likely put U.S. forces on nuclear alert, replaying Nixon's nightmarish scenario.

Iran may well feel duty-bound to respond to a unilateral attack by its Israeli archenemy, but it knows that it could not take on the United States head-to-head. In contrast, if the United States leads the attack, Iran's response would likely be muted.

If Iran chooses to absorb an American-led strike, its allies would likely protest and send weapons, but would probably not risk using force.

While no one has a crystal ball, leaders should be risk-averse when choosing war as a foreign policy tool. If attacking Iran is deemed necessary, Israel must wait for an American green light. A unilateral Israeli strike could ultimately spark World War III.

FM: Iran fully supports Lebanon, Syria

Sun, 08 Aug 2010 09:01:06 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13787...ionid=351020101

Iranian Foreign Minister Manouchehr Mottaki has expressed Iran's full support for Lebanon and Syria in the event of any possible Israeli aggression.

The Iranian government and nation is fully prepared to support the Lebanese and Syrian nations and governments in the face of a possible Israeli aggression, Mottaki said at a joint press conference with his Lebanese counterpart Ali al-Shami in the Iranian capital Tehran on Sunday.

The Iranian minister further added that the three countries are constantly exchanging views about Israel's war threats and said Iran will offer any assistance to Lebanon and Syria.

Mottaki strongly condemned the recent aggression by Israeli forces near Lebanon's southern border, saying, "Moves by the Zionist regime and the recent aggressions showed its desperation rather than an indication of a will and decision to display its strength."

"Iran reserves the right for the Lebanese government, nation and army to stop any aggression in their defense and put all ways to pursue the case through international circles on their agenda," he said.

Mottaki further added that that the UN peacekeeping force, known as UNIFIL, failed to fulfill its duty and to prevent such aggressions.

According to the Iranian minister, regional countries will not allow Israel's hit-and-run policies to continue.

He noted that Iran and Lebanon enjoy common stance on regional and international issues and support the establishment of just systems in international relations.

Iran praises Beirut trilateral summit

Sun, 08 Aug 2010 22:37:16 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13796...ionid=351020101

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has hailed Lebanon's move to arrange the recent trilateral summit with Saudi Arabia and Syria.

Commending the summit which was held in Beirut, the Iranian president said the meeting foiled Israel's attempts to sow seeds of discord among Syria, Lebanon and the resistance movement Hezbollah.

Ahmadinejad made the remarks in a meeting with visiting Lebanese Foreign Minister Ali al-Shami in Tehran on Sunday.

Tehran reassured Beirut that it will stand beside the Lebanese nation in case of any military threats from Israel.

Al-Shami, in his turn, hailed Iran's support for the Lebanese nation during the Israeli aggression in 2006.

Earlier on Sunday, the Lebanese minister met his Iranian counterpart and Secretary of Supreme National Security Council.

Iranian Foreign Minister Manouchehr Mottaki told al-Shami that the Iranian government and nation will fully support the Lebanese and Syrian nations and governments in the face of a possible Israeli aggression.

The Iranian minister further added that the three countries are constantly exchanging views about Israel's war threats and said Iran will offer any assistance to Lebanon and Syria.

The head of the Supreme National Security Council, Saeed Jalili, said that the "power of resistance and unity of the Lebanese Army does not let the Zionist regime to even cut a tree."

“Earlier, the Zionist regime could advance to the borders of Beirut fearlessly. Today the Zionist army gets a strong response from Islamic resistance for cutting a tree near the border,” Jalili said.

Al-Shami and Jalili also discussed trends in regional cooperation, expansion of bilateral ties and emphasized the importance to promote unity and resistance.

On Wednesday, Israeli and Lebanese troops exchanged fire when Tel Aviv moved to uproot trees on the Lebanese side of the border line, claiming that they were blocking its border monitoring cameras.

The skirmish killed four Lebanese, including a journalist, and a senior Israeli officer.

The skirmish left four dead, including two Lebanese soldiers, one reporter, and a senior Israeli officer.

The incident marked the first border skirmish between the two sides in four years.

Iran criticized the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon for failing to protect Lebanon's sovereignty.

Ahmadinejad to visit Lebanon after Ramadan: FM

8 Aug 2010
http://www.google.com/hostednews/afp/artic...DiikNniKP_nlx9Q

TEHRAN — Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad will visit Lebanon after the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan, a top official said Sunday, as Tehran pledged its support to Beirut and Damascus in face of any "aggression" from Israel.

"The president will go to Lebanon at the first occasion after Ramadan," Foreign Minister Manouchehr Mottaki said at a joint news conference with his visiting Lebanese counterpart Ali al-Shami.

The holy month, during which the Muslim faithful abstain from eating, drinking, smoking and having sex during daylight hours, is expected to begin on Thursday in Iran, depending on the sighting of the new moon.

The last visit by an Iranian president to Lebanon was by reformist Mohammad Khatami in May 2003, while Lebanese President Michel Sleiman had visited Tehran in November 2008.

Mottaki also pledged Iran's support to Lebanon and Syria against any threats from Israel.

"The government of the Islamic republic and the Iranian nation are standing with the Lebanese and Syrian governments and nations against the aggression and threats of the Zionist regime," Mottaki said.

He said Iran was holding continuous consultations with Beirut and Damascus and Tehran is "ready to answer positively any request from its brothers."

Mottaki and Shami lashed out at Israel as they condemned the Jewish state for the recent clashes along the Israel-Lebanon border and the May 31 raid by its commandos on an aid flotilla heading to the blockaded territory of Gaza.

"The survival of the Zionist regime is facing serious problem," Mottaki said in comments translated by the English language Press TV channel.

Shami, who acknowledged Iran's support over the Arab-Israel issue, added that "Israeli aggression is due to its hostile nature."

On August 4, a deadly firefight on the border between Israel and Lebanon, took the lives of an Israeli colonel, two Lebanese soldiers and a Lebanese journalist.

The May 31 Israeli raid on the aid flotilla left nine pro-Palestinian activists dead and sparked an international outcry against the Jewish nation.

'Region will crush Israel if attacked'

Tue, 10 Aug 2010 09:18:49 GMT
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=13811...ionid=351020101

Iran says regional countries will give Israel a crushing response, if the regime makes any military action against any country in the region.

Israel is basically seeking violence and confrontation in the region in order to make up for its failures in its previous war in the Middle East, said Iran's Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ramin Mehmanparast in his weekly press briefing on Tuesday.

"What Israel should be aware of, is that any military movement against any country in the region will prompt a strong reaction of regional countries, which makes the regime think twice," he added.

He said that the resistance of regional states will eliminate the possibility of any military strike in the Middle East region.

Meanwhile, the Iranian Foreign Ministry Spokesman reiterated that Tehran does not intend to hold any bilateral talks with Washington.

The subject of any future talks with the US, however, would be over international crisis, the root cause of world problems and their solutions, Mehmanparast said.

The foreign ministry official further blamed the US and the West for their logic behind their policies which he said is the root cause of international miseries, offering the West Iran's solutions to the crisis.

UK animal feed helping to destroy Asian rainforest, study shows

More than a tenth of the world's palm kernel meal, a by-product of palm oil, is fed to British pets and livestock

Fred Pearce
guardian.co.uk, Monday 9 May 2011 16.30 BST
http://www.guardian.co.uk/environment/2011...sian-rainforest

British cats, dogs, cows, pigs and even goldfish are helping destroy the rainforests of south-east Asia. A new study for the government finds that more than a tenth of all the world's palm kernel meal – a lucrative by-product of the production of palm oil – is fed to British animals.

Palm oil is an ingredient in an estimate third of all products on supermarket shelves, from biscuits and margarine to shampoo and confectionery. And it turns up on garage forecourts in biodiesel. Britain imports more than half a million tonnes of the oil a year. But the study for the Department of Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) reports that Britain imports even more palm kernel meal, mostly for animal feed.

The report found that while retailers and manufacturers of branded foods are rushing to buy certified "sustainable" palm oil that does not destroy the rainforests, animal feed manufacturers show "little awareness of sustainability". British imports of sustainable palm kernel meal are precisely zero.

The report, Mapping and Understanding UK Palm Oil Use, names three companies responsible for supplying most of the palm kernel meal for animal feed in Britain: the manufacturers AB Agri, owned by Associated British Foods, and BOCM Pauls, plus the commodity trader ED&F Man.

Some companies, it says, excuse themselves by claiming their product is simply a by-product of palm oil production – and oil is increasingly being certified. But the Defra official Sara Eppel, who unveiled the findings at a conference on palm oil at London zoo last Friday, said that didn't wash. "It's not just a by-product," she said, especially in Britain where "we import five times as much kernel from Indonesia as palm oil."

Eppel also reported that the British government was not blameless. It buys a lot of food and other products containing palm oil, yet "government buying standards don't currently cover palm oil sustainability". And proposed rules due this year on food purchases won't include palm oil either.

Most of the world's oil palm is grown on giant plantations in Malaysia and Indonesia, where campaigners have documented continuing deforestation to meet growing world demand. The conference heard that plantations cause an 85% loss of biodiversity. Oil comes from the oil palm's fruit, while kernel meal comes from palm nuts.

The good news from the report – compiled by Proforest, a not-for-profit consultantancy based in Britain – is that Britain is importing 40% less palm oil than five years ago. And almost a quarter of what we do import is now certified sustainable by the industry's green watchdog, the Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil.

The bad news is that while supermarkets and manufacturers of branded goods are responding to growing consumer concern by seeking out sustainable suppliers, others have not changed their purchasing policies. They include the nation's restaurants, canteens and pubs – and the British government.

Bin Laden kill conveniently paves way for security checkpoints everywhere -- shopping malls, sports stadiums, grocery stores, churches

Saturday, May 07, 2011 by: Ethan A. Huff, staff writer http://www.naturalnews.com/032308_Bin_Lade...l#ixzz1Ls8fGQrZ

Now that Osama Bin Laden is allegedly dead (for something like the ninth time), prepare to eventually be groped, molested, and herded through naked body scanners and other X-ray scanning machines everywhere you go. According to a recent CBS New York report, "counter terrorism" experts and other "security" officials are gearing up to require all Americans to essentially show their papers everywhere they go -- at the shopping mall, sports stadium, museum, grocery store, and even at church.

Security consultant David Boehm told CBS that because of Osama's supposed death, terrorists will now likely go after smaller, more common "soft" targets , which conveniently equates to government security checkpoints being set up all over the place. A classic play taken right from the false flag handbook, the proposed new security measures are posing as a necessary protocol to keep Americans "safe" and "secure" from the terrorists.

"The reason they're called 'soft' is because it's so easily accessible to anyone," said Broehm to CBS. "There has to be security checks for the safety of all people."

Broehm also went on to suggest that Americans need to be spying on each other more, and acting as "eyes and ears" to help the police in "keep[ing] each other safe." The same CBS article that quotes Broehm even had the gall to insanely call such domineering, tyrannical police state activity "freedom" with a "heavy price."

But this is the way those controlling the American government work. A disaster or attack occurs, the people react, and the government comes up with a convenient "solution" that seizes more freedom and liberty from the people. And if the people are unwilling to sacrifice that freedom in the name of safety and security, then more disasters and attacks mysteriously occur to scare the people into submission. In this case, the Osama charade is flagrantly and openly being used to usher in more government tyranny.

Breastfeeding 'cuts risk of your child becoming badly behaved'

By Jenny Hope
Last updated at 12:55 PM on 10th May 2011
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/health/article-...ly-behaved.html

Just four months of breastfeeding can cut the risk of children becoming badly behaved by almost a third, a study suggests.

It found 16 per cent of children brought up on formula milk had problems including anxiety, lying, stealing and hyperactivity – more than double the proportion breastfed for at least four months.

When other influences are taken into account, such as social and economic background, the reduction in the risk of behavioural problems at age five brought about by breastfeeding is 30 per cent, according to the Oxford University study.

New mothers are advised to breastfeed for the first six months to protect their babies against stomach bugs, chest infections, asthma, eczema and allergies. It also has health benefits for mothers.

But the UK has one of the lowest breastfeeding rates in Europe, with almost one in three new mothers never attempting it, compared with 2 per cent of mothers in Sweden.

The study of 9,500 mothers and babies was led by Dr Maria Quigley of the National Perinatal Epidemiology Unit at Oxford University.

Dr Quigley said possible reasons for the findings included greater interaction between mother and child because of close physical contact from an early age.

In the study of infants born in the UK over a 12-month period between 2000 and 2001, 29 per cent of children born after a full-term pregnancy and 21 per cent of those born prematurely were breastfed for at least four months.

Parents were asked to complete questionnaires designed to assess the behaviour of their children at the age of five.

The results showed that 16 per cent of formula-fed children and 6 per cent of breastfed children were given abnormal scores, indicating behavioural problems.

For full-term babies, the pattern persisted after taking account of social and economic factors, says a report in the journal Archives of Disease in Childhood.

Dr Quigley said: 'We found that children who were breastfed for at least four months were less likely to have behavioural problems at age five. However, that observation might not have been the direct result of breastfeeding – it could have been down to a number of factors.

'As a group, mothers who breastfed for four months were very different socially to those who formula fed. They were more likely to be older, better educated and in a higher socio-economic position.'

Dr Quigley added: 'We just don't know whether it is because of the constituents in breast milk which are lacking in formula, or the close interaction with the mum during breastfeeding.

'But it does begin to look like we can add fewer behavioural problems as another potential benefit of breastfeeding.'

Norwegian fjords could provide us with electricity

Craig Woodhouse, Political Reporter
11 May 2011
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...-electricity.do

The Norwegian fjords could be used as a giant "battery" to power Britain under plans being promoted by ministers today.

Energy Secretary Chris Huhne is pushing the plan as part of moves towards a European "supergrid". It would see a giant electricity cable laid between Britain and Norway to take advantage of hydro-electric power. During times of low demand here, excess electricity would travel under the North Sea to pump water from a low lake to a high lake in Norway. At times of high demand, the water would generate electricity which would return under the sea to British homes. The details emerged as a new cable linking Britain and Holland was switched on.

China powered by coal - but it can't get enough - Frank Holmes

Huge demand and reduced coal supplies means China is rationing power this year and consequent high prices are benefiting exporters and domestic producers alike.

Author: Frank Holmes
Posted: Tuesday , 03 May 2011

SAN ANTONIO (US Global Investors) - International coal prices hit $124 per ton this week, the highest levels in five months, as strong demand from reconstruction projects in Japan and reduced supply from flood-ravaged Australia has made coal supply tight. The floods in Queensland, Australia cut the country's output of coal by 15 percent and other big coal producers such as Indonesia, South Africa and Colombia are experiencing similar production cuts due to floods of their own.

At the end of March 31, coal prices were 33 percent higher than a year ago and earlier this month, mining giant Xstrata inked a one-year deal with a Japanese utility at $130 per ton, effectively setting a floor under coal prices in the near-term. That's up from $98 per ton the company made in a similar deal a year ago.

Perhaps no country is more affected by this development than China. With its economy powering ahead with 9.7 percent annual GDP growth during the first quarter, Chinese electricity use was up 13.4 percent on a year-over-year basis over the same time period, according to China's National Energy Association (NEA). China's overall electricity consumption is now expected to rise 12 percent this year, up from the 9 percent growth the NEA forecasted in January.

China's Electricity Council said the country may face power shortages of 30 million kilowatts during the summer so the government has moved quickly to put restrictions in place as the peak season approaches. Big industrial provinces such as Guangdong and Zhejiang are already scaling back power consumption. These reductions are likely to hinder aluminum, cement, zinc and steel output, according to Macquarie Commodities Research.

China's Energy Consumption by Type (2008)

Source: EIA International Energy Statistics 2008

In addition, the National Development and Reform Commission (NRDC) called a meeting this week of domestic coal suppliers such as Shenhua Energy and China Coal Energy to ensure stable supplies, the China Daily said.

Coal powers the Chinese economy. The country is the world's largest consumer, gobbling up nearly half of the world's coal consumption in 2009. Coal accounted for 71 percent of China's energy in 2008-more than three times the United States' share. The Electricity Council estimates that the country's coal demand will reach 1.92 billion tons in 2011, up nearly 10 percent from 2010.

China hasn't always been such a glutton for coal. In fact, coal consumption actually declined from 1996 to 2000. However, consumption has shot up 180 percent since then and China accounted for 80 percent of demand growth between 1990 and 2010, according to BP.

This is because demand for electricity exploded over that time. China's rapid urbanization and rising middle class has led to an exponential number of new refrigerators, air conditioners and other appliances in homes.

Despite the rise in incomes and increased consumer demand, China's electric power consumption remains relatively low. You can see from the chart on the right that the U.S. consumes roughly four times the amount of electricity per capita than China. The world's second-largest economy even trails Greece, Poland and Hungary.

Luckily for China, it sits atop the third-largest amount of recoverable coal reserves in the world behind the U.S. and Russia. The country ramped up its coal production from 645.9 million tons of oil equivalent in 1999 to 1,552.9 million tons in 2009. Despite this increase, production couldn't keep up and the country became a net importer of coal in 2009. Production jumped over 15 percent during 2010 but the country was still forced to increase coal imports by 42 percent in order to meet demand, according to the China Daily.

There are two types of coal. Thermal coal is burned in furnaces to create electricity and metallurgical coal, also called coking coal, is used to create concrete and steel. China's coal reserves are light on the latter, which has required China to rely on countries such as Australia, Indonesia and Russia for supply.

These imports are playing a vital role in China's infrastructure boom. The U.S. Energy Information Administration (EIA) estimates that Australia's total exports to Asia, which also includes Japan and India, will increase 64 percent to 394 million tons by 2035. This accounts for 94 percent of Australia's total exports.

Coal exports from Indonesia, Asia's second-largest source of coal, are expected to rise 26 percent over the same time period, according to the EIA. In 2009, China signed a 25-year, $6 billion loan-for-coal agreement with Russia that will supply the country with 15-20 million tons of coal.

The Chinese government made it clear that it wants to wean the country's power grid from coal. That's proven to be a difficult task. China's 12th Five Year Plan calls for big improvements in energy efficiency and the development of additional sources including natural gas.

Massive projects such as the Three Gorges Dam have sought to increase capacity of alternatives, but hydroelectric, nuclear and other renewables combined make up only 10 percent of total power. In addition, low water levels due to a drought in Southern China have reduced current hydroelectric capacity.

The ongoing disaster at the Fukushima nuclear plant in Japan has delayed but not squashed China's nuclear ambitions. The country has plans to build more than two dozen plants by 2020, accounting for 40 percent of new nuclear facilities around the globe.

Only time will tell if the effort will be successful. The EIA forecasts that China's power generation from coal will increase by 2035 but will only account for 62 percent of total power generation at that time. However, the EIA says that absolute coal consumption will nearly double as the economy continues to grow and electricity demand remains strong.

With coal's short- and long-term status atop China's energy mix intact, we think some domestic coal producers stand to benefit. To participate, we've taken positions in several coal producers including Shenhua Energy and Yanzhou Coal which we believe offer tremendous potential for the China Region Fund (USCOX).

Frank Holmes is CEO and Chief Investment Officer of US Global Investors (www.usfunds.com). Michael Ding and Xian Liang, analysts for the China Region Fund (USCOX), contributed to this commentary.

Home pupils to learn via Net at 'virtual school'

Anna Davis, Education Correspondent
27 May 2011
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...rtual-school.do

The first government-funded "virtual school", with lessons streamed via the internet to pupils at home, could open next year.

Up to 450 students could join the secondary, which would be based in Ealing, Slough or Windsor. It would be a free school and would take children who are currently educated at home.

If Education Secretary Michael Gove approves the business plan it could open in September 2012. John Edwards, principal of Periplus Home Education, which would run the school, said: "There are 80,000 home-educated students with no government support. Parents do a fantastic job but many pay for education online or tutors."

Teachers, hired in the same way as at mainstream schools, would deliver lessons from a main building. Students would be able to see them, but teachers would not see the children and classmates would not see each other.

Pupils would need a computer and broadband connection, but everything else would be provided by the school. An adult would have to be in the house while lessons are in progress.

US army blasts holes in Missouri levee to save town from flooding destruction

Farmers angry as Mississippi allowed to drown 130,000 acres of rich farmland, while ailing Illinois town is spared

Suzanne Goldenberg
guardian.co.uk, Tuesday 3 May 2011 11.59 BST
http://www.guardian.co.uk/environment/2011...ing-destruction

Engineers have blown up a levee in the midwest, hoping to save a historic town from destruction by raging flood waters – but condemning 130,000 acres (53,300 hectares) of rich agricultural farmland.

Late on Monday night, the US army corps of engineers began detonating charges embedded in the levee at Birds Point, Missouri, in order to create a 2,000-ft breach. The blasts were expected to lower the waters of the Mississippi by up to 7ft, thus sparing the city of Cairo, Illinois. But the breach in the levee was also expected to drown a vast expanse of rich farmland under water, sand and silt. Ninety homes were also at risk.

The decision – which has been fiercely contested in the courts – set a fading town of 2,800 mainly African American residents against relatively well-off farmers. "Making this decision is not easy or hard," major general Michael Walsh, commander of the army corps, told reporters. "It's simply grave – because the decision leads to loss of property and livelihood, either in a floodway or in an area that was not designed to flood."

Cairo, which lies on the confluence of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, was an important steamboat port in the 1800s, and served for a few months as the headquarters for the union armies of Ulysses S Grant early in the civil war. But the town is long past its heyday, and the decision to save the town outraged Missouri farmers and state officials who had fought to block the demolition in court.

Stephen Tilley, the speaker of the Missouri house, even went so far as to suggest that Cairo was so dilapidated as to be expendable. When asked by a reporter which he would rather see underwater, the town or farmland, Tilley replied emphatically: "Cairo. I've been there. Trust me, Cairo."

But the legal battle was exhausted on Sunday night when the US supreme court refused to hear an emergency appeal from Missouri's attorney general.

By Monday afternoon, with more rainfall straining the 64ft floodwall, the town was deserted. Almost all of the residents of Cairo had already been evacuated, and were waiting to see if the homes they had left behind would be saved or left for the flood waters.

"It was equal to having been in Vietnam," said Mattie Woods, 63, who was born and raised in the town. "We have had flooding before, but we have never really faced total disaster. This one was full devastation for all of us."

A number of people who tried to return for belongings earlier on Monday were ordered to go back. "They just weren't letting anyone in," said resident Eddie Smith.

Mr Smith had left his home after spending several anxious days watching the water rise around the tyres of his car. By the time he left last Tuesday (a week ago), "the water was coming right up to the front step," he said. "I've never seen the river do this before."

Members of the Illinois national guard were deployed filling sandbags, and packing explosives into pipes embedded in an area of the levee downriver from the town.

The army corps of engineers was planning a second series of explosions on Tuesday to try to drain the water from the farmland that contain corn, wheat and soybean crops.

Notice folks that the precious metals have been suppressed once again. Silver has been crippled by a massive drop. This is to scare you into submission so you'll hand over your physical legal tender for debt chattel currency. Do not fall for the game, you have money and always remember that. We always expected a big attack on metals at some point before the real fun starts in this arena. Stay strong and don't worry, they love you to knee-jerk to fear! Silver is down to $41.56 after almost hitting $50 an oz. Gold's had a $30 drop but is steady in comparison to Silver. J.P Morgan is petrified about people buying physical silver. So for now they've lowered their debts around $7 billion but we will have the last laugh.

Gold, Silver Prices Plummet After Hours

By Alix Steel
05/03/11 - 02:56 PM EDT
http://www.thestreet.com/story/11103387/1/...?cm_ven=GOOGLEN

NEW YORK (TheStreet) -- Gold and silver were pummeled Tuesday on a surprise rate hike in India and a volatile U.S. dollar on a broad commodity selloff.

Gold for June delivery closed down $16.70 to $1,540.40 an ounce at the Comex division of the New York Mercantile Exchange. The gold price has traded as high as $1,551.40 and as low as $1,516.20, but was tanking almost $30 in after-hours trading. The spot gold price was down more than $15, according to Kitco' gold index.

Silver prices fell another $3.49 to $42.58 an ounce and almost breached the $40 level in after-hours trading. The CME has raised margin requirements again for silver by another 11.6%, the third time in a week. It will now cost a trader $16,200 to buy a 5,000 ounce contract, the move will go into effect Tuesday after market close and leveraged traders were dumping positions to avoid having to pay more for silver. If there is more leverage to shake out of the market then silver prices could continue to slide looking at $38 as the ultimate support level.

In contrast, it only costs $6,751 to buy a 100 ounce gold contract, which at current prices is worth $154,300 while silver's 5,000 ounce contract is worth $222,350.

In the latest commitment of traders report ending April 26th, speculative long positions in silver sunk 10.8% while short positions jumped 24%. For gold, speculative longs sunk 5% and short positions were flat as more traders bet against the rise in the silver price.

Both gold and silver were struggling Tuesday as the ratio between the two metals continues to adjust now at 35 versus 31 when metals were at recent highs.

"This weekend's outlier aside, silver tends to match-and-extend whatever gold's doing. So a rising gold/silver ratio typically comes together with falling prices for both," says Adrian Ash, head of research at BullionVault.com. "Anyone expecting a shift back to the historical or pre-modern levels (of 16 and 12 respectively) should note the ratio's huge swings through 1979 and 1980."

Mark Johnson, co-manager of USAA Precious Metals and Minerals Fund, thinks the gold/silver ratio should be closer to 60 rather than 30 and only has a 0.5% position in silver. "Five months ago [we had] 8% silver and now [we have] less than 0.5% in silver." If the ratio got to 60:1, Johnson would get interested in the metal again.

"Gold will do better," says Johnson, who thinks that recent silver mines will ramp up supply so fast that it will overtake demand. "We view volatility [in gold] as an opportunity ... [during] significant downward moves we are in there buying"

Leading the charge against gold and silver today was a stronger U.S. dollar, with the U. S. dollar index seeing some volatility, now adding 0.04% to $73.09, and a surprise rate hike in India.

India raised rates by 50 basis points to fight inflation, currently at 8.89%, with the overnight lending rate at 7.25%, but negative real interest rates still persist.

Australia's central bank also warned of rising inflation but took no rate hike steps and the heat mounts for the Bank of England and the European Central Bank when they meet on Thursday. With growth and manufacturing activity in England anemic, at best, no rate hike is expected and the ECB, which raised rates 25 basis points at its last meeting, is not expected to raise rates at consecutive sessions. Nevertheless, hawkish commentary should emerge with inflation in the UK at 4% and the EU at 2.7%.

"Gold and silver are ... in much need of a bout of consolidation," says James Moore, research analyst at FastMarkets.com, "with silver particularly vulnerable to long liquidation ... But, with real-interest rates still largely negative, the rise in terror concerns and ongoing issues, gold is more likely to be cushioned." Many experts are still waffling on trying to find a range for silver but think that $1,500 is a good support level for gold.

One puzzlement in the gold community is the lack of leverage gold stocks currently offer. Monday when gold rallied intra-day almost $20, Barrick Gold(ABX_), for example, ended the day down 2.67%. So either the gold stocks are a leading indicator of a further selloff in the gold price or the days are gone when gold stocks provide 2:1 leverage.

Johnson thinks that the leverage will come back as input costs, particularly oil, stabilize but the gold price moves higher. "They do de-link ... oil stabilization [is] a catalyst for the gold price." Johnson lists Iamgold(IAG_) as his favorite gold stocks, one of three gold stocks in the CBOE Gold Index(GOX) that has posted positive returns this year.

Other analysts think that once companies report first quarter earnings and deliver good production, manageable cash costs and free cash flow, that markets will respond accordingly.

Leo Larkin, equity analyst with Standard & Poor's, who follows Barrick, Newmont Mining (NEM_) and Randgold(GOLD_), says that investors would just rather buy the physical metal or the SPDR Gold Shares(GLD_) rather than be exposed to the risks of miners.

"The ease to which you can gain exposure from the GLD [is] detracting from investing in the stocks." Larkin says good cash flow hasn't made a difference for the stocks in the past and that, in general, earnings are looking good for most companies with good production and cash flow.

Some companies might be forced to ramp up their dividends to attract investors but that in the end "if the gold price really starts to accelerate and input costs don't go up as much as the price of gold ... then you might finally see the stocks react," says Larkin.

The immediate worry is that gold stocks are foreshadowing lower gold prices, but Larkin says "[it's] a different environment" with more physical buying of gold and more companies offering gold storage. Larkin has no affiliation or ownership in any of the stocks he follows.

Gold mining stocks were suffering. Yamana Gold(AUY_) was down 3.23% to $11.97 while Harmony Gold(HMY_) was losing 4.61% to $14.49. Other gold stocks, New Gold (NGD_)and Gold Fields(GFI_) were trading at $10.14 and $16.77, respectively.

Silver Has Biggest Three-Day Drop Since 1983

By Margot Habiby - May 4, 2011
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-05-04/s...ties-lower.html

Silver had its biggest three-day drop since March 1983, crude oil tumbled to a two-week low and gold, copper and grains fell after money managers made near-record bets on high commodity prices in April.

Silver plummeted 19 percent since April 29 as increases in Comex margin requirements drove investors away, and oil declined after a U.S. report showed supplies surged. A drop in a gauge of U.S. service industries and lower-than-forecast jobs growth damped economic optimism. Twenty-two of 24 commodities in the Standard & Poor's GSCI Total Return Index fell. Treasuries rose.

Commodities from oil to corn to gold surged for an eighth month in April, with the S&P GSCI index beating bonds, stocks and the dollar every month since December, the longest stretch in at least 14 years. Prices that no longer reflect fundamentals are likely to retreat in the next three to six months before rebounding, Goldman Sachs said in reports April 11 and April 15.

"The big correction in silver kind of led the way, and that got people looking at commodities as a whole," said Richard Ilczyszyn, a market strategist at Lind-Waldock, a broker in Chicago. "There seems to be a little reduction in risk globally. We've seen the equity market pull back, crude pull back, silver and gold. We saw a flood into Treasuries. That tells me people are looking for safety right now."

Silver futures for July delivery slumped $3.197, or 7.5 percent, to settle at $39.388 an ounce on the Comex in New York. Yesterday's decline was 7.6 percent, while a day earlier it was 5.2 percent.
Margin Requirements

CME Group Ltd., Comex's owner, this week raised the minimum amount of cash that must be deposited when borrowing from brokers to trade silver futures to $16,200 per contract from $14,513, effective at the close of business yesterday, the second increase in less than a week. A year ago, the margin was $4,250. Silver futures rallied 57 percent this year through April.

The price touched $49.845 on April 25. Silver reached a record $50.35 in January 1980 as the Hunt brothers tried to corner the market.

The S&P GSCI index fell 1.5 percent to 731.86 at 3:02 p.m. in New York. It reached a 32-month high of 762.22 on April 11.

Oil fell 1.6 percent after the U.S. Energy Department reported stockpiles rose 3.42 million barrels to 366.5 million last week, the highest level since October. Inventories were forecast to gain 2 million barrels, a Bloomberg News survey showed. Lower-than-forecast growth in service industries and employment reduced optimism about the economic outlook.
Bearish Numbers

"The inventory numbers were much more bearish than expected," said Andre Julian, chief financial officer and senior market strategist at OpVest Wealth Management in Irvine, California. “We were already poised for a move lower when the inventory data and the negative economic numbers came out. This is looking like a perfect time to take risk off the table.”

Crude oil for June delivery fell $1.81 to $109.24 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the lowest settlement since April 19. Prices are up 32 percent from a year ago. Gasoline for June delivery slipped 0.2 percent to $3.3225 a gallon. Natural gas for June delivery fell 9.3 cents to settle at $4.577 per million British thermal units on the Nymex.

The Institute for Supply Management’s index of non- manufacturing companies declined to 52.8 last month, lower than the median forecast of economists surveyed by Bloomberg News, from 57.3 in March. Readings greater than 50 signal growth. Another report showed the pace of hiring cooled in April.
Equities, Treasuries

Stocks fell and Treasuries rose on concern that a slowdown in economic growth that began in the first three months of the year is extending into the second quarter. The report validates the Federal Reserve’s decision last week to maintain record monetary stimulus to bolster the world’s largest economy.

Estimates in the Bloomberg survey of 73 economists ranged from 54.5 to 59. The Tempe, Arizona-based group’s index of the industry, which accounts for about 90 percent of the economy, averaged 56.1 in the five years to December 2007, when the last recession began.

The Standard & Poor’s 500 Index fell 0.7 percent to 1,347.31 at 3:05 p.m. in New York. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note declined today to 3.2 percent, the lowest level since March 17.

Employment at U.S. companies increased by 179,000 in April, the smallest gain in five months, according to figures today from ADP Employer Services. The median estimate in a Bloomberg survey called for a 198,000 gain.

“The investment funds are dumping commodity positions because of the uncertainty about world growth,” said Shawn McCambridge, the senior grain analyst for Prudential Bache Commodities LLC in Chicago. “People are worried that the global consumer is scaling back spending.”
Wheat, Soybeans

Wheat futures for July delivery fell 21.25 cents, or 2.7 percent, to $7.72 a bushel at 1:15 p.m. on the Chicago Board of Trade, the lowest settlement since March 30. Before today, the most-active contract gained 58 percent in the past year as adverse weather reduced global production.

Soybean futures for July delivery dropped 11.75 cents, or 0.9 percent, to $13.52 a bushel, the lowest close since April 15. The price dropped 2.2 percent in the previous two days. Before today, the oilseed, used to make livestock feed and cooking oil, gained 38 percent in the past year.

The U.S. is the world's leading exporter of corn, soybeans and wheat.

The Thomson Reuters/Jefferies CRB Index of 19 raw materials headed for the biggest drop in three weeks. Only corn, cattle and hogs posted gains today.
Corn Gains

Corn futures for July delivery rose 5.75 cents, or 0.8 percent, to close $7.295 a bushel in Chicago, erasing an earlier drop to $7.1625, the lowest since March 31.

Corn is the biggest U.S. crop, valued at $66.7 billion in 2010, followed by soybeans at $38.9 billion, government figures show. Wheat is the fourth-largest, behind hay, at $13 billion.

Gold futures for June delivery fell $25.10, or 1.6 percent, to $1,515.30 an ounce. On May 2, the metal rose to a record $1,577.40. Before today, the price gained 30 percent in the past year.

Gold declined after a report that Soros Fund Management LLC, the $28 billion hedge fund run by Keith Anderson, has sold much of its gold and silver holdings. The report in the Wall Street Journal today, cited unidentified people. Many of the sales took place over the past month as there was a reduced risk of deflation, according to the report.

Copper for July delivery lost 11.9 cents, or 2.8 percent, to $4.1340 a pound on the Comex in New York.

Royal newly-weds to visit US after Canada tour

The newly-weds are preparing for their first official overseas tour

5 May 2011 Last updated at 14:07
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-13291219

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge are to pay an official visit to the US following their first overseas tour to Canada this summer.

Prince William and his new wife will extend the trip with a three-day visit to California from 8-10 July, said their spokesman.

Announcing the visit on its Twitter page, Clarence House said a full itinerary would be published later.

It will be the first official visit to the US for the duke.

While the prince has previously visited the States in a private capacity, this will be the duchess's first trip to the country.

The prince returned to his job as an RAF search and rescue helicopter pilot this week after marrying the duchess on Friday at Westminster Abbey.

The couple spent their first weekend as a married couple at a secret location in the UK, and opted to postpone their honeymoon until a later date.

They will begin their first joint official overseas trip by touring Canada from 30 June to 8 July, including visits to Alberta, the Northwest Territories, Prince Edward Island, Quebec and the capital, Ottawa.

Speaking earlier this year Canadian PM Stephen Harper said it was a testament to Canada's "very close relationship with the Royal Family".

It is believed the couple will take part in Canada Day celebrations in Ottawa on 1 July.

William visited the Commonwealth country in 1998 aged 15, touring Vancouver with his father the Prince of Wales and brother Prince Harry.

The Queen visited Canada last July, and in 2009, Prince Charles and the Duchess of Cornwall spent 11 days there.

Total invests £800m in US solar power firm

French oil company is to buy 60% of SunPower Corporation, the second biggest solar panel manufacturer in America

Terry Macalister
guardian.co.uk, Friday 29 April 2011 16.37 BST
http://www.guardian.co.uk/business/2011/ap...ower-renewables

Total, one of the world's largest oil companies, is to make a $1.38bn (£800m) investment in solar power reversing a trend that has seen Shell and BP cut back their involvement in green energy.

France's biggest company is to purchase 60% of SunPower Corporation, the second biggest solar panel manufacturer in America, and use it as a new springboard into a renewable sector struggling for competitive edge.

Shares in SunPower surged 40% after it revealed a "friendly tender offer" from an oil company that had been expected to put major new investment into nuclear rather than solar or wind, at least until the Japanese earthquake raised new questions about the safety of atomic power.

"The world future energy balance will be the result of a long-term transition in which renewable energies will take their place alongside conventional resources," said Philippe Boisseau, president of Total's gas and power division.

Total has been raking in enormous profits from oil at $120 a barrel – but is said to see renewables energy as a useful hedge. High crude prices make alternative power sources more attractive but the solar industry has also been hit in places such as Britain, Germany and Spain which have started to cut their public subsidies as part of wider plans to reduce debt levels.

Total is not an entire newcomer to renewables. It has held a half share in two solar firms since the early 1980's – Photovoltech and Tenesol. In November Total unveiled plans to build a solar panel manufacturing plant in the Moselle region of France with annual capacity of 220,000 solar panels a year. The oil company will now inject $1bn into SunPower over the next five years allowing the US solar business to "accelerate our power plant and development business," according to its chief executive Tom Werner. SunPower has been hit by mounting competition from lower cost Chinese panel makers but still claims to design, manufacture and deliver the highest efficiency solar products in the industry.

BP and Shell made major forays into renewables but have backed off in recent years. BP shut down its stand alone Alternative Energy head office while Shell sold off a major part of its photovoltaic module production to SolarWorld of Germany in 2006 and then disposed of its solar rural business in the developing world.

Total had been investing in nuclear having acquired an 8.33% interest, in the consortium commissioned to develop the European pressurized reactor project in Penly, France, with EDF and GDF Suez.

The Fukushima plant accident – coupled with the 25th anniversary of the Chernobyl accident – has spread a pall of negativity over nuclear energy business.

The united states of America has been taken over. The covert coup d'état to destroy the states and bring about a Global dictatorship took place right under everyones noses since the 19th Century. One of the final attacks to finish off America once and for all is the engineered economic collapse to come between December 2010-July 2011 onwards.

Blairs to attend Pope speech in Westminster Hall

18 Aug 2010
http://www.google.com/hostednews/ukpress/a...HXUlXwRohqv7nTg

Tony and Cherie Blair will attend a speech by the Pope at the Houses of Parliament during his forthcoming visit to Britain, officials have said.

The former prime minister and his wife have confirmed they will be among the guests when the Pontiff gives an address to civic leaders in Westminster Hall.

It is not known whether the Blairs, who are both practising Catholics, will meet Pope Benedict XVI in person during his four-day state visit to the UK.

A source familiar with plans for the Pontiff's trip said there was "no specific Tony Blair moment" in the itinerary. The Pope will give an "address to civil society", including MPs, peers, local councillors and religious leaders, in Westminster Hall on September 17.

All four living former prime ministers - Margaret Thatcher, John Major, Mr Blair and Gordon Brown - and their spouses have been invited to hear the speech. They have all confirmed they intend to attend, a Cabinet Office spokesman said.

The Pope is expected to greet some of the guests personally at the event, although officials have not said who they are.

Westminster Hall is of particular significance because it was the scene of the trial and sentencing to death of English Catholic martyrs St Thomas More and St Edmund Campion.

Mr Blair was born an Anglican but converted to Catholicism in December 2007 after standing down as prime minister, while his wife is a lifelong Catholic.

He visited Pope Benedict XVI in Rome in June 2007 during his "farewell tour" before leaving Downing Street, and gave the Pontiff a portrait of Cardinal John Henry Newman, Britain's most famous convert to Catholicism.

The Pope's trip will include a celebration of the beatification of Cardinal Newman at Cofton Park in Birmingham on September 19, bringing the 19th-century theologian a step closer to becoming England's first non-martyred saint since the Reformation.

The Vatican in truth has always had control of Jerusalem for a long time regardless of flim flam excuses. The final nail in the coffin of those who disagreed was when the Oslo Accords of 1993 was signed in Washington D.C where by Shimon Peres handed over Jerusalem to the Vatican. This is one thing the jew-hating crowd won't comment on. -Craig

Vatican Grand Master ready to return and bring «peace» to Jerusalem

Cardinal John Patrick Foley is waiting for the green signal from Tony Blair. The Grand Master of the Order of Holy Sepulchre is ready to return and bring peace to Jerusalem.

Cardinal John Patrick Foley is the Grand Master of Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem.

Last time the Vatican controlled Jerusalem was in 1291 A.D. In 1937, it looked like the Vatican and the Order of Holy Sepulchre was on their way back to control the city. The British occupational power was promoting Jerusalem as an International zone, not controlled by neither Jews nor Muslims.

In 1948, a powerless Vatican could only watch Jews and Muslims dividing Jerusalem between them. Roma was powerless because it had been on the loosing team during Word War II: The Pope put his hope in Fascists Italy winning the war together with Nazi-Germany. Hitler was baptized and confirmed as a Catholic. Mussolini converted to Catholicism as an adult.

John Patrick Foley was ordained as Cardinal of the present Pope

The Pope lost another battle in 1967. Nations like United States of America had still not recognized the Vatican statehood, and established a post of US ambassador to the Papal throne. The Vatican it self had still not recognized the state of Israel, an event that took place first in 1994. The Pope was only able to sit and watch the Jewish state of Israel taking full control of «The Holy city» at the end of the six day war.

Today, everything has changed. The Bush family, the Clintons and Obamas have all recognized the Pope as the «Holy Father». The former Prime Minister of United Kingdom Tony Blair has even converted to the Roman religion, and works for the establishment of Jerusalem as an international zone, under control of an International recognizable body.

The best candidate is obviously the «Order of Holy Sepulchre». They have an historic claim to the «Holy city», even though its more than 700 years since they ruled in Jerusalem. The Ottoman Empire allowed Pius IX to re-established the Latin Patriarchate of Jerusalem in 1847. If the Pope in Rome can promise the Muslims that they will evict the «Zionist control» over Jerusalem, they will agree to the «peace plan» Tony Blair soon will be promoting.

Freemasons all over the World will rejoice, and support Tony Blair. For since they claim to be the successors to the Jewish King Solomon, they will be happy that Jerusalem will be back at the mercy of true Order brothers.

[dohtml]<img src="http://ivarfjeld.files.wordpress.com/2009/09/flag.jpg" width=300 height=300>[/dohtml]
The flag of the «Order of Holy Sepulchre» at their international head quarter in Rome.

Tony Blair is the latest promoter of a Papal inspired «peace» in Jerusalem.

The only people who will not agree to this shift of power, will be Bible faithful Christians and religious Jews, the chosen people of God. But no one will listen to them, because they will have lost all their powers, as explained in Daniel chapter 12 verse 7:

«When the power of the holy people has been finally broken, all these things will be completed».

Medal of the Catholic Order who claim Jerusalem is theirs

The crest of the Order of The Holy Sepulchre

But all followers of the true Messiah will anyhow rejoice. Because they know that the coming reign of antichrist in Jerusalem will have to take place, just before the return of Jesus of Nazareth, the root of Jesse the Lion of Judah

Roman Catholic Knights of the Order of The Holy Sepulchre

There are a few challenges ahead.

First, that there is no peace inside the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem it self. The priest and monks of different Catholic denominations fights like cats and dogs at least once a year, physically abusing each other.

Second, Jews and Christians will not agree to the commandments of the Papal Order, like the command 8 (a), where the Vatican demand that the knights must worship whom they claim is a «Palestinian Queen»:

8. (a) The Feast in honour of Holy Mary Queen of Palestine (Sunday within the Octave of the Assumption)

Likewise Islam falsely claims that both Jesus and his mother were Palestinians, not Jewish.

Ex-FBI agent claims Lee Harvey Oswald did not kill John F. Kennedy

Published on 08-22-2010 Email To Friend Print Version
http://www.irishcentral.com/news/Ex-FBI-ag...-101150699.html

A retired FBI agent has come forward with evidence that President John F. Kennedy was not killed by Lee Harvey Oswald in Dallas, Texas on Nov 22, 1963.

The Korean War veteran and retired FBI agent, Don Adams, was interviewed by a FOX 8 news reporter. He told the reporter that he worked as an FBI field agent in Thomasville, Georgia.

Adams, who is now 80-years-old, told the reporter that one of his assignments was to investigate "one of the most violent men in the country," Joseph Milteer.

Adams had an informer who recorded a conversation with Milteer just weeks before the assassination. In the tapes the extreme right radical, with links to the KKK and States Right Party, can be heard talking about the best way to shoot the President. He say the prime location "is from an office building with a high powered rifle."

Agent Adams and his team located Milteer in Quintan, Georgia on November 27, 1963 but the Senior Agent would not allow a proper investigation.

"I said, 'Boss wait a minute, we have an opportunity to elicit tremendous information from him' and he replied 'five questions and nothing more'," said Adams.

Milteer was asked if the President was going to be assassinated. He replied "Oh yes. It's in the works."

It is Adams belief that this information should have been enough for the FBI and the Secret Service to have stop President Kennedy and his wife from travelling.

After the assassination had been carried out Milteer was "jubilant" and bragged about it. He said "You thought I was kidding when I said he would be killed from a window with a high powered rifle."

Milteer was never mentioned in the Warren Commission Report which investigated the assassination. The report from FOX 8 said "Adams suspects Milteer was definitely involved in President Kennedy's death, but he says Oswald absolutely was not."

Cherie Blair: Catholics should not apologise for where we're from 17.09.10

http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...re-were-from.do

Cherie Blair today told fellow Catholics, "we shouldn't apologise for where we've come from".

Ex-prime minister Tony Blair's wife spoke out during an interview on breakfast television after the Vatican criticised Britain for its secularism.

Pope Benedict XVI has warned the nation not to lose sight of its Christian roots.

Mrs Blair, a practising Catholic and human rights barrister, told viewers of ITV's Daybreak show: "Everyone knows that this country has traditionally been a Christian country.

"Our religion has formed our culture, our music, the great art, and that is something to celebrate, that's for sure, and we shouldn't apologise for where we've come from."

The QC said it was a cause for celebration that believers and non-believers could live side by side in Britain.

Mrs Blair defended the pontiff's visit, paid for by the state.

Asked if she recognised the visit was being thrust down people's throats and "antagonising people", she said: "Yesterday there was an overwhelmingly positive response to him on the streets of Scotland and, yes, this is a state visit, and as a state visit the state pays as it's a reciprocal visit for the Queen having been there before.

"But it is also a spiritual visit and for that the church is paying."

The QC's husband converted to her religion in 2007 after leaving office.

This morning they will join Pope Benedict at Westminster Abbey for an ecumenical service where Mrs Blair said her husband would be sitting next to Gordon Brown, his successor in Downing Street.

Tony Blair's sister-in-law Lauren Booth converts to Islam after a 'holy experience' in Iran

By Mail On Sunday Reporter
Last updated at 2:02 PM on 24th October 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...ience-Iran.html

Tony Blair's sister-in-law has converted to Islam after having a 'holy experience' in Iran.

Broadcaster and journalist Lauren Booth, 43 - Cherie Blair's half-sister - said she now wears a hijab head covering whenever she leaves her home, prays five times a day and visits her local mosque 'when I can'.

She decided to become a Muslim six weeks ago after visiting the shrine of Fatima al-Masumeh in the city of Qom.

'It was a Tuesday evening and I sat down and felt this shot of spiritual morphine, just absolute bliss and joy,' she told The Mail on Sunday.

When she returned to Britain, she decided to convert immediately.

'Now I don't eat pork and I read the Koran every day. I'm on page 60. I also haven't had a drink in 45 days, the longest period in 25 years,' she said.

'The strange thing is that since I decided to convert I haven't wanted to touch alcohol, and I was someone who craved a glass of wine or two at the end of a day.'

Refusing to discount the possibility that she might wear a burka, she said: 'Who knows where my spiritual journey will take me?'

Before her awakening in Iran, she had been 'sympathetic' to Islam and has spent considerable time working in Palestine. 'I was always impressed with the strength and comfort it gave,' she said of the religion.

Miss Booth, who works for Press TV, the English-language Iranian news channel, has been a vocal opponent of the war in Iraq.

In August 2008 she travelled to Gaza by ship from Cyprus, along with 46 other activists, to highlight Israel's blockade of the territory.

She was subsequently refused entry into both Israel and Egypt.

In 2006 she was a contestant on the ITV reality show I'm A Celebrity .••.••. Get Me Out Of Here!, donating her fee to the Palestinian relief charity Interpal.

She said she hoped her conversion would help Mr Blair change his presumptions about Islam.

During her visit to Iran last month, Booth wrote a public letter to Mr Blair asking him to mark Al-Quds (Jerusalem) day - a protest at Israel's occupation of Palestine.

The missive was a bitter attack on the former Prime Minister, who is now a Middle East envoy working for peace in the troubled region.

'The men, women and children around me withstood a day of no water and no food (it's called Ramadan, Tony, it's a fast),' Booth wrote.

'Coping with hunger and thirst in the hundred degrees heat, as if it were nothing. They can withstand deprivation in the Muslim world.

'Here in Iran they feel proud to suffer in order to express solidarity with the people of Palestine. It's kind of like the way you express solidarity with America only without illegal chemical weapons and a million civilian deaths.'

She adds: 'Your world view is that Muslims, are mad, bad, dangerous to know. A contagion to be contained.

'In the final chapter [of his autobiography] you say we need a "religious counter attack" against Islam. And by "Islam" you mean the Al Quds rallies, the Palestinian intifada (based on an anti Apartheid struggle Tony, NOT religious bigotry), against every Arab who fails to put their arms in the air as the F16 missiles rain on their homes and refugee camps and sing a rousing chorus of 'Imagine all the people...'

Booth moved to France with her family - husband Craig Darby and two daughters Alexandra and Holly in 2004.

Her husband was seriously injured in a motorcycle accident in April 2009 when he was drunk and not wearing a helmet.

He suffered a severe brain injury, a fractured neck, damage to his spine and several broken ribs and was in a deep coma for two weeks.

The 42-year-old had to learn how to walk and talk again. He lost much of his memory, has sight problem and cannot work.

The couple decided to move back to Britain to help his recovery and reduce the amount of time Booth has to work away from home.

Booth took part in I'm A Celebrity... Get Met Out of Here! in 2006 alongside Myleene Klass and Jason Donovan, finishing ninth.

Of her relationship with the Blairs, she said at the time: 'I'm happy to criticise them politically if they deserve it but that on a personal level we get on fine.'

Mr Blair was famously told not to 'do God' by his spin doctor Alistair Campbell while he was Prime Minister.

But on leaving office, he converted to Catholicism after starting to go to Mass - saying later that it was his wife who spurred his decision.

He said last year that it was like 'coming home' and is now 'where my heart is, where I know I belong'.

Lauren Booth declares herself bankrupt

Lauren Booth, sister-in-law to Tony Blair, has filed for bankruptcy.

By Anita Singh 6:31PM GMT 30 Dec 2010
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/uknews/823...f-bankrupt.html

Ms Booth's creditors reportedly include her half-sister, Cherie Blair, who is said to have loaned her £15,000 last year.

The petition for bankruptcy was filed in the High Court earlier this month. The 43-year-old journalist got into financial difficulty after moving to France six years ago with her husband and two children.

The couple ploughed tens of thousands of pounds into renovating their farmhouse in the Dordogne, only for it to fall into negative equity.

In April 2009, her husband, Craig Darby, suffered serious head injuries in a motorcycle accident which left him unable to work.

Writing earlier this year, Ms Booth admitted that she had failed to "keep a rein" on the family finances. "With bank accounts in two countries, a partner with no income and the turbulence of both the financial and the job market to take into consideration, I needed to be a fiscal pedant to get the books right. I never trained as an accountant," she said.

The family moved back to Britain and Ms Booth is currently living in Muswell Hill, north London. The pro-Palestinian campaigner made headlines recently by announcing that she had converted to Islam.

Ms Booth and Mrs Blair share the same father, Tony Booth, the actor best known for his role in Till Death Us Do Part.

Tony Blair's priest fixed papal knighthoods for cash: Senior Catholic took up to £50k donations for honours

Senior Catholic Fr Michael Seed admits soliciting charity donations of up to £50,000 for prestigious honours

Franciscan Friars ‘appalled’ by MoS disclosures... as Seed admits his actions could be ‘morally wrong’

Suspended: Father Michael Seed's superiors are said to be 'appalled'

One of Britain's most high-profile Catholic priests has admitted arranging papal knighthoods for wealthy businessmen for money.

Father Michael Seed, who regularly celebrated Mass for Tony Blair and his family in Downing Street, now faces questions from his religious order after an investigation by The Mail on Sunday.

The most damaging evidence concerns his attempted cultivation of an Israeli arms dealer, Hezi Bezalel, who was seeking business opportunities in the Balkans.

It shows that Fr Seed, a former ecumenical adviser to the Archbishop of Westminster, had 'agreed' a papal knighthood for Mr Bezalel before approaching him. In return for a £45,000 donation to charity, Fr Seed said he could also introduce Mr Bezalel to influential Balkan politicians 'and the man who looks after all arms for the region'. Mr Bezalel declined the offer, saying he did not give to charity 'under instruction'.

Papal knighthoods are awarded to lay men and women for conspicuous service to the church and society. They are among the highest honours the Pope can bestow.

Tonight a source close to Fr Seed's order, the Franciscan Friars of the Atonement, said his superiors were 'appalled'. Although he failed to solicit funds from Mr Bezalel, at least four wealthy Britons were impressed by his overtures. Fr Seed admitted they made donations to an Archbishop friend's charity in Serbia to become papal knights.

It was unclear last night if the four, who are each understood to have contributed between £25,000 and £50,000, had done anything else to merit their honour.

Our inquiries also reveal that:
Fr Seed gave a £34,000 cheque drawn from his order's charity bank account to a friend, Chinese businesswoman Xuelin Black, who later paid the money into his personal account. Last night the order said it was auditing accounts over the disclosure. Ms Black, 47, who was made a papal dame by Pope Benedict XVI, is a Tory donor and adviser to the Government's Big Society project.
Fr Seed is on indefinite leave from his order after claims that he marked the 25th anniversary of his ordination in January with a champagne party at a racy club, with entertainment provided by men dressed as nuns.
He lives rent-free in a flat owned by one of his wealthy papal knights in exclusive Dolphin Square in Pimlico, Central London.

Fr Seed, who has taken a vow of poverty, denied profiting from any of the deals. But he agreed that trying to solicit funds from Mr Bezalel could be seen as 'morally wrong'.

Asked if he thought many would see the deal as an abuse of the papal honours system, he said: 'Of course I do.'

Fr Seed is honorary chaplain to the International Committee on Human Dignity, based at the European Parliament in Brussels. But it was as unofficial Catholic envoy to Parliament that he acquired many well-connected friends. He was praised by Cherie Blair for turning 'the great into the good' and helped to convert Tony Blair, Ann Widdecombe, John Gummer and the Duchess of Kent.

Admission: Father Seed is facing questions from his religious order

When he approached Mr Bezalel in November 2008, he had recently left his post as ecumenical adviser to Cardinal Cormac Murphy-O'Connor, then Catholic Primate of England and Wales.

The Mail on Sunday can reveal that Fr Seed and his go-between, American corporate strategist Kalman Sporn, 39, constructed a careful plan to try to win over Mr Bezalel.

Central to their strategy was Archbishop Eugenio Sbarbaro, the Vatican's ambassador to Serbia, who had the power to nominate people for papal knighthoods. He has been a close friend of Fr Seed for nearly 30 years and Fr Seed was soliciting funds for the Archbishop's Belgrade charity, The Path to Peace in the Balkans Foundation.

In an email to Mr Sporn dated November 17, 2008, Fr Seed wrote: 'Spoke to Eugenio – Hezi can meet President [of Montenegro, Filip Vujanovic] any time he wishes – Eugenio will call him.

'Eugenio will also introduce Hezi to the man who looks after all arms for the region of Serbia, Montenegro and the Balkans in general – he is a friend of Eugenio – my side of deal is done – Eugenio will entertain Hezi in Belgrade. We must act quickly as Eugenio might be going on vacation in a week or so to his family in Italy, near Genoa, till early December. Papal knighthood is also agreed.' The following day Fr Seed sent an email to Mr Bezalel couched in more formal language.

In it, he said he understood from Mr Sporn that 'you are seeking a meeting with the President of Montenegro and I am only too happy to facilitate that for you whenever you wish'.

Fr Seed added: 'I have spoken with the Archbishop and he is only too happy to assist you in any way you wish. I have told him of your particular interests and he is again familiar with the specific people (at the highest level) you wish to meet. As he has been in the region for nine years he is very well known and trusted by all.'

Although he made no mention of a papal knighthood at this point, Fr Seed raised the matter in an email to Mr Sporn later that day. He included advice on how to court their target.

He told Mr Sporn: 'We must wait and see now – my email says it all – no mention of Papal Knighthood though – you can do that.' He advised Mr Sporn to stress how 'good' the honour has been for two British philanthropists. One was made a Knight of the Pontifical Order of Pope Saint Sylvester in 2004. Archbishop Sbarbaro gave him the award for his support for 'inter-faith initiatives' in the Balkans.

'Turning the great into the good': Father Seed converts Ann Widdecombe to Catholicism

In the 2008 email to Mr Sporn, Fr Seed said of the papal knighthood nomination process: 'We have time – he can submit even as late as April 09 if necessary. [Archbishop Sbarbaro retired in late 2009.] He [the Archbishop] is submitting names next in January.

'Hezi could be on that list and be invested in February, perhaps at the Ritz hotel, London. I can get the grand rooms free of charge – or wherever he wishes. Eugenio would come over for it.'

Mr Bezalel was unmoved by Fr Seed's offer, though he told him on November 21 that his representative in the Balkans 'will approach you should we need'. Undeterred, Mr Sporn told Mr Bezalel next day: 'I don't think you understand the context and nature of Father Seed's recommendation; so I will spell it out for you. If you Hezi Bezalel make a sizeable contribution to the charitable efforts of His Excellency Eugenio Sbarbaro in Belgrade; then on a diplomatic level you will be introduced to certain heads of state in both Serbia, Montenegro and Croatia. A sizeable contribution is more than $75,000 [£47,000]. The Vatican can open certain doors for you ...'

Mr Sporn tried again soon after. Accusing Mr Bezalel of being 'short-sighted', he told him: 'Within days you could be sitting with the Presidents of Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro selling them technologies they want and need. To achieve direct access... surely 75,000 is a small fee.'

Later that day, Mr Bezalel replied by email: 'I don't like this approach. When I give to charity it's because I want and not under instruction. I'm trying to be as polite as possible. So please let's forget about it.'

Friend: Archbishop Sbarbaro made nominations for papal knighthoods

Fr Seed was a student at the Catholic University of America when he met Archbishop Sbarbaro in Washington in the early Eighties. The Archbishop was charge d'affaires at the Vatican embassy.

This January, the Archbishop flew to London to conduct a Mass at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, in Mayfair, marking Fr Seed's 25 years as a priest. At a party afterwards at the Pigalle Club in Piccadilly, known for its racy floor shows, many were taken aback when men appeared on stage wearing nuns' habits.

Party guests ranged from Westminster diocese clerics to millionaire benefactors who had flown in by private jet.

His order exclaustrated Fr Seed, meaning he is suspended indefinitely but is bound by his religious vows.

Last night Fr Seed said he was introduced to Mr Bezalel by Mr Sporn, a New Yorker who keeps a blown-up photo in his apartment of himself with Tony Blair.

Admitting the emails were 'extremely damaging', Fr Seed said: 'I regret the language used. It was because I was dealing with Kalman Sporn, who is very blunt. I had to use language that he understood.' When it was put that he was effectively trying to facilitate a potential arms deal, he replied: 'I can't deny that ... it's terrible.'

But he said all the funds he solicited helped charity in the Balkans. He said donations went to Archbishop Sbarbaro, who then distributed them as he saw fit. 'At the heart of this is goodness,' he said.

Asked if he thought donors he recruited were motivated more by a papal knighthood then helping good causes, he laughed: 'I can't answer that.' He admitted he is living in a London flat owned by Gregory King, a Glaswegian corporate money lender whose fortune is estimated at £200 million. Fr Seed claimed that Mr King, who could not be contacted last night, received a papal knighthood after donating to Archbishop Sbarbaro's charity.

Archbishop Sbarbaro said yesterday: 'Fr Seed is a very good man. When I was ambassador I met a lot of people and I awarded papal knighthoods but this was a secondary part of my work.'

He could not remember discussing Mr Bezalel with Fr Seed but said: 'The Church rewards people who are charitable. I still work for the foundation and we are completing two works in Serbia which came about through kind donations.'

Mr Bezalel did not respond to calls last week. He has many other business interests.

The Franciscan Friars of the Atonement, based in New York, stressed they were unaware of Fr Seed's 'involvement with soliciting funds for any charitable organisation'. They were 'most definitely not aware of any promises or implied promises of a papal knighthood'.

High-profile: Father Michael Seed regularly celebrated Mass for Tony Blair and his family in Downing Street

Mr Sporn said the emails referred to helping Mr Bezalel with introductions to politicians who could faciliate Balkans technology deals.

He said: ‘Hezi was involved in the arms trade but for five years he has been a distributor for security technology for software companies.

‘Sometimes when you are raising money for charity, the language may sound heavy-handed but the overall result is beautiful. Fr Seed and I were raising money for Path to Peace, which brings Jews, Muslims and Christians together in the former Yugoslavia. Hezi already had business interests there and the approach was that he should use them to support this charity.'

He said he and Fr Seed would not have been remunerated if Mr Bezalel had agreed to their proposal.

Riddle over the £34,000 he gave to Tory donor

Questions: Father Seed with Tory donor Xuelin Black

A Chinese businesswoman is at the centre of a mystery over why Fr Seed gave her £34,000 from his order's charity bank account.

Xuelin Black, 47, has lived in London since the late Nineties 'developing business and political interests'.

In the run-up to last year's Election she donated £50,000 to the Tories and was later invited to their summer ball. She now advises Mr Cameron's Big Society 'Tsar' Lord Wei.

Last night the Franciscan order was investigating why Fr Seed gave her the £34,000 cheque drawn from its charity account. She held on to it for two months before paying it into Fr Seed's personal account.

Fr Seed described it as a 'loan' when questioned by The Mail on Sunday but declined to elaborate.

Miss Black, who runs an import business was made a papal dame by Pope Benedict XVI. She insisted yesterday that Fr Seed had inherited money following an elderly relative's death.

'He didn't have a bank account so I held on to it for a couple of months while he opened one,' she said. She added that she was introduced to Archbishop Eugenio Sbarbaro by Fr Seed at a party 'years ago'.

She said: 'He [the Archbishop] told me about his good work and asked if I could help. I made a donation a few years later. I didn't expect to be made a papal dame. I do loads of work for charity.' She said the Archbishop flew to London to present her with the honour at the Ritz hotel. Fr Seed was also there.

Elite band of 400 Britons

Prized: The papal knighthood medal for which four Britons allegedly donated up to £50,000 to a charity n the Balkans

Britain now has 400 papal knights – an award that Popes have been making since the early Middle Ages.

Originally they were conferred to the nobility.

But today the Papal Orders of Chivalry are a means for the Holy See to distinguish all those who have served the Church well.

British papal knights are traditionally members of the Pontifical Orders of Saint Gregory the Great and Pope Saint Sylvester.

Most are Catholics but some come from other faiths.

Knights and dames wear their badges suspended from a ribbon on their left breasts at ceremonies.

They are entitled to wear a uniform of their order. Dames wear capes.

The uniform of St Gregory is dark green, with silver buttons and braiding; that of St Sylvester is black, with gold buttons and braiding.

The uniform is accompanied by a cocked hat and dress sword.

Those honoured do not have specific obligations.

But it is customary to take part in major diocese events like consecrating bishops and ordinating priests.

Spanish Navy receives its largest warship 'Juan Carlos I'

04 Oct 2010
http://www.brahmand.com/news/Spanish-Navy-.../5072/1/10.html

FERROL, SPAIN (BNS): The Spanish Navy has received its largest multi-role warship 'Juan Carlos I' from the country's leading ship-building company Navanita.

The amphibious assault ship, named in honour of Juan Carlos I, the present King of Spain, was handed over to the navy during a ceremony held at Navanita's shipyard in Ferrol on September 30.

The King Juan Carlos I, Defence Minister Carmen Chacón and other officials were present on the occasion, the Defence Ministry said in a statement.

The construction of the multi-role ship began in 2005 and it was launched for sea trials in 2008.

The 231 meters long and 32 meters wide warship has a water displacement of 27,079 tonnes. It can cruise at a maxmimum speed of 21 knots (39 km/h). The ship can carry a cargo of 26,000 tons and a crew of 243 persons.

In its amphibious role, the warship can carry and operate up to 30 aircraft, including medium and heavy helicopters.

'Juan Carlos I' will be the largest ever warship operated by the Spanish Navy in its history.

911 Truth
05 Oct 2010

Message: Just wanted to drop you a line. I've been researching 911 for several years now. Your video on ground zero blew me away. I never looked up ground zero in the dictionary. How smart of you! I never believed the report of jet fuel! OMG really! I have too many builders and engineers in my family and they called it BS a long time ago. I'm a nurse and the thing that puzzled me was the sudden sickness and death of the first responders. They are claiming it was from asbestos poisoning. It can take years and several exposers to get sick from asbestos, not everyone developes cancer from abestos also. I started to research what first responders were dieing of and it did not add up to me. Over 900 dead from large tumors (fast growing) cancers of the lungs, liver, gall bladder, lymphomas. This sounds a great deal to me like radiation sickness. You don't get these types of cancers from Asbestos! The EPA cleared these people because they wanted them to die, clear any whitness to their crime. Prepare yourself my friend it will be a bumpy ride! God Bless.

Hi Craig, can you prove that statement?
...because, I actually live in Spain, you know...

I hope you didn't came up with that through divine inspiration.
I need proof, and better if it is solid.

Its merely a possible scenario my friend from whats coming about with this nuclear exercise in November and the current situation. Just kind of made sense to me that this could be a possibility. Don't panic because we'll all be in the same boat around the World when it happens regardless of source nation. The economy will be taken down. Only worry if you're near the radiation zone. Always remember that suitcase nukes aren't that scary at all.

mvltiversal - October 5, 2010 06:13 PM (GMT)

Oh, ok.

Btw, I'm not afraid of dying, but was wondering if it could be France, because the islamic community in that country is somehow enfuriated with the government, and it could be a great false flag attack after the banning of the burka, and so the black/grey order could incite more the coming final confrontation...

...we will see what happens.

God bless!

Hi Craig,

Why do you have Iron Mountain in written in your post in parantheses. I have read that document. How authentic is the document? Do you have any idea?

Narrow_Is_The_Way - October 6, 2010 08:27 PM (GMT)

This video really needs to be subbed or dubbed in Spanish for the Spaniards with a video editor. Changing the voice of that lady with the "Loquendo program" by using the voice of Jorge the Spaniard, and posting it not only on youtube but also that Spanish site "TU.TV".

This facade of a monarch needs to be exposed by all, if possible.

I fully believe that the Iron Mountain Report is authentic and anyone with open eyes and ears can especially see and hear this clearly today. Just go over it all again and just note what has been happening. You have all these false threats being set up to take the place of war such as climate change, terrorists and alien scenarios. The later has recently being ramped up ready for the greatest hoax of all time at some point which will also be the only way to destroy all the religions. Apart from 1947 you can say Knight of Malta, Ronald Reagan was the more modern start of the Alien invasion indoctrination. Also I don't recall speaking of the Iron Mountain Report in this video but I did quickly in the chemtrail video. I consider the video below to be one of the most important on the internet.

The Spanish Inquisition

http://www.reformation.org/spanish-inquisition.html

"Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices." (II Corinthians 2:11).

The Spanish Inquisition in action in the New World!!

The Spanish told the Indians that they had a disease that only gold could heal....On the island of Cuba the cacique or chief denied that he had any hidden gold. As a result he was BURNED ALIVE:

Here is a report from a Dominican priest named Bartolomé de las Casas who was an eyewitness to many of the atrocities committed by his own people:

"The Spaniards told the Indians that they had a disease that only gold could heal. They demanded that the Cuban cacique Hatuey reveal the location of the gold. He denied that he had any hidden gold and as a result he was ordered to be burned alive.
When the cacique was bound to the post, a Franciscan friar ... told him some of the matters of our Faith, which the chieftain had never before heard. . . . The padre told the cacique that if he wished to believe these things, he would go to Heaven ... but if not, he would go to Hell and suffer eternal torment and sorrow. The cacique ... asked the friar if Christians went to Heaven, and was told that the good ones did. The cacique, without further thought, said that he did not wish to go to Heaven but to Hell, so as not to be with Spaniards or see such cruel people."(Las Casas, The Devastation of the Indies: a Brief Account, p. 45).

The Spanish Inquisition in action in the Old World!!

On May 31, 1559, Dona Isabella and a group of Protestant Christians were worshipping the Lord in a home. It was reported to the Holy Office and they were all arrested and arrayed before the dreaded Inquisition.

Dona Isabella was the cousin of King Philip II. She was at least 7 months pregnant at the time.

Not even her blood relationship with the emperor could save her. She was placed on the rack and tortured in order to get her to implicate others and deny her Faith in Christ.

Dona Isabella remained steadfast to the end and refused to recant. As a result, she was burned alive at the stake. Dona Isabella and her unborn child both ascended to Heaven in the flames.

Dona Isabella was tortured and burned alive at the stake for her Faith in Christ.

St. Paul brought TRUE Christianity to Spain

The worldwide spread of true Christianity began when the Apostle Paul met the Risen Christ on the Damascus Road. At high noon, he experienced a tremendous vision from Heaven that knocked him to the ground:

Saul of Tarsus experienced a heavenly vision on the Damascus Road. "And it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.
And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?
And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.
And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.
And I said, What shall I do, LORD? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do." (Acts 22: 6-10).

The first place that St. Paul went after his conversation to Christ was to ARABIA:

"But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:
Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into ARABIA, and returned again unto Damascus" (Galatians 1:15-17).

St. Paul was an ARMY OF ONE as he preached the Gospel throughout the Roman Empire. His next major destination was Rome. After traveling all over the Roman Empire with the Good News that Jesus was Risen from the dead, he was arrested in Jerusalem and almost killed by the fanatical false religious leaders. Despite their murderous attempts on his life, the Lord promised him that he would testify of Him at Rome:

"And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at ROME" (Acts 23:11).

After establishing the true congregation at Rome, Paul was ordered to stand before Caesar (Nero). Nero acquitted him of any crime and set him free. It was then that Paul went to Spain and established true Christianity there. We have no record of Paul's supernatural ministry in Spain because ALL the history of the early Christians was destroyed in the last great pagan persecution of the congregation. The history in the Book of Acts ends with Paul a prisoner at Rome:

"Whensoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled with your company" (Romans 15:24).

"When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain" (Romans 15:28).

St. Paul did reach Spain and planted the good tree of TRUE Christianity there. Tradition says that he went as far west as Britain before his final arrest and death by beheading at Rome.

God knew that during the congregation age, Satan would concentrate all of his activity in the following areas, so Jesus sent His Apostle Paul to forestall Satan and set up the true congregation in these 3 places.

ARABIA ... ROME . . . SPAIN

As the Apostle to the Gentiles, and divinely guided by the Holy Spirit, the Apostle Paul made these 3 destinations the principal focus of his ministry.

Emperor Constantine and the counterfeit heavenly vision!!

The so-called conversion of Emperor Constantine was an exact COUNTERFEIT of the conversion of Saul of Tarsus. The vision actually happened at the same time of day: high noon:

"Accordingly he (Constantine) called on him with earnest prayer and supplications that he would reveal to him who he was, and stretch forth his right hand to help him in his present difficulties. And while he was thus praying with fervent entreaty, a most marvelous sign appeared to him from heaven, the account of which it might have been hard to believe had it been related by any other person. But since the victorious emperor himself long afterwards declared it to the writer of this history, when he was honored with his acquaintance and society, and confirmed his statement by an oath, who could hesitate to accredit the relation, especially since the testimony of after-time has established its truth? He said that about noon, when the day was already beginning to decline, he saw with his own eyes the trophy of a cross of light in the heavens, above the sun, and bearing the inscription, CONQUER BY THIS. At this sight he himself was struck with amazement, and his whole army also, which followed him on this expedition, and witnessed the miracle. "(Eusebius, Life of Constantine, p. 490).

Emperor Constantine was the first Pope and the founder of Roman Catholicism. Many of the barbarian tribes of northern Europe embraced this new religion with the familiar CROSS emblem. One of these tribes was called VISIGOTHS or West Goths. The Visigoths invaded and conquered Spain around 500 A.D.

The Visigoths brought Roman Catholicism to Spain!!

The Visigoths established the Papal Roman hierarchy in Spain. They ruled that country for about 2 centuries and the condition of the people was far WORSE than under pagan Rome.

Here is a quote from the great historical classic The Story of the Moors in Spain:

"Such was the condition of Spain when the Mussulman approached her borders. A corrupt aristocracy divided the land among themselves ; the great estates were tilled by a wretched and hopeless race of serfs ; the citizen classes were ruined. On the other side of the straits of Gibraltar were the soldiers of Islam, all hardy warriors, fired with the fervour of a new faith, bred to arms from their childhood, simple and rude in their life, and eager to plunder the rich lands of the infidels. Between two such peoples there could be no doubt as to the issue of the fight; but to remove the possibility of doubt, treachery came to the aid of the invaders." (Stanley Lane-Poole, The Story of the Moors in Spain, p. 8).

The Moors destroyed the Visigothic kingdom of Spain

The Moors were a Moslem tribe from North Africa called Berbers. They invaded Spain in 711 and soon had almost the entire country under their control except for a small area in the north

In 710, a battle for succession to the Visigothic throne erupted in Spain following the death of King Witiza. A dynastic conflict prevented the succession of Witiza's son, and Roderick, duke of Baetica, claimed the throne. In an effort to oust Roderick, Witiza's family appealed to Muslims in North Africa for help. The Muslims quickly agreed.

In 711, a Muslim army under the command of Berber general Tariq ibn-Ziyad crossed the Strait of Gibraltar and invaded Spain. After defeating Roderick's army at the Battle of Guadalete in southern Spain, Muslim forces advanced swiftly into the rest of Spain. They never left until 1492!!

Portugal was created in 1139

More countries mean MORE WARS so the Vatican created the country of Portugal in 1139.

Beginning around 800 A.D., Vikings began attacking the coast of Spain. Out of this Viking enclave was created the country of Portugal with military help from Papal England.

Not only was there constant warfare between the Roman Catholics and the Moors but now was added an additional country to fight. The constant warfare hardened the people so that by the time of the discovery of the New World a horrible engine of destruction was created which was called the Spanish Inquisition.

The Moors surrendered to Ferdinand and Isabella in Jan. 1492, after occupying Spain for 781 years.....What a coincidence!!!!

The constant conflict created a hard cruel ruthless Spanish citizenry which was epitomized by the Spanish Inquisition.

This allowed for the redeployment of the Spanish army to the New World just in time to block the English and French colonization!!

Pope Alexander VI gave the entire New World to the Spanish Inquisition!!

Now that Satan had created his masterpiece called the Spanish Inquisition, it was time to present it to the world.

Satan gave Rodrigo Borgia 12 years in the Papacy to accomplish his mission!!

That mission was to steal the entire New World from John Cabot and England and give it to the Spanish Inquisition... Pope Alexander VI published a Bull giving the entire New World to Spain and absolutely forbidding ANY other nationality from even visiting the western continent without a license from Ferdinand and Isabella . . . and their successors!!

The Italians have a tradition that Borgia was so wicked that even the devil was ashamed of his behavior and came for him before the 12 years were up!!

His grandson, Don Francis Borgia, was the co-founder of the Jesuits.

The main mission of the Jesuits —besides fighting the Reformation — is to ensure that the Bull of Borgia is implemented in the New World.

The economic, military and "educational" arm of the Spanish Inquisition!!

The "Federal" Reserve Bank is the economic arm of the Spanish Inquisition.

This Bank uses USURY and the printing press paper money system as a weapon to destroy the Protestant U.S. Republic and its God given Constitution:

He who pays the piper calls the tune so the Spanish Inquisition "Federal" Reserve Bank has a virtual economic stranglehold on the entire country.

Usury is a form of economic warfare and is strictly prohibited by the Bible.

God did permit usury in the Bible but that was to help destroy the 7 wicked nations that inhabited the Promised Land.

Once those nations were destroyed, usury was strictly forbidden by the Scriptures.

The Pentagon is the military arm of the Spanish Inquisition in the U.S. and around the world.

The Pentagon is the military arm of the Spanish Inquisition.

Since the Civil War, the U.S. has faced no threat of foreign invasion so a peacetime standing army is like a leech draining the financial lifeblood of the nation.

During the 19th century, the Spanish Inquisition used Great Britain as their substitute or surrogate in order to conquer and destroy other nations.
Now they are using the U.S. Republic in the exact same manner.

Spanish Inquisition dupes Darwin and Darby!!

When is comes to "education" the Spanish Inquisition is absolutely ruthless. They used Copernicus, Galileo, Kepler and Einstein to attack the FIRST book of the Bible and Darby to attack the book of Revelation—the LAST book of the Bible.

In the secular realm they used DARWINISM or EVILution to destroy faith in the Genesis and scientific account of Creation. All the schools under their control teach Darwinism or the theory that the earth is millions of years old and that man came from monkeys.

This deadly Spanish Inquisition Jesuit has sent millions of soul to hell believing that they were just animals that time and chance happened to place on this small planet.

He stole his theory from ancient Egypt where monkeys were a vital part of the Pharaonic religion.

EVILution destroys faith in God and the Bible. With no fear of a coming judgment, politicians and others have no qualms about taking bribes from the "Federal" Reserve Bank in order to deliver the country to the Spanish Inquisition.

Darwin lied and denied the existence of giants and he claimed to have found the missing link in Patagonia, Argentina.

John Nelson Darby

John Nelson Darby is known as the father of FUTURISM or Dispensationalism.

Unlike Darwin, who convinced the world that the Genesis account of Creation happened in the distant PAST, Darby convinced the world that the Book of Revelation— the last book of the Bible— applied only to the distant FUTURE or the last 7 years before the end of the world.

Prior to Darby, all Protestant Christians believed that the Book of Revelation was a history of the Christian congregation from the first century to the end of time.

They believed that the great falling away happened soon after the end of the apostolic age and that the Papal dynasty answered in every way to the great apostasy or falling away predicted by the Apostle Paul.

They believed that the Pope was Antichrist and that the Papal dynasty was the Whore of Babylon vividly described in Revelation chapters 17 and 18.

Since Antichrist would not be revealed until years in the future, the Christians were lulled into a deep sleep and stopped preaching like Saint Martin Luther and the early Reformers.

Jesus said that His followers were the SALT of the EARTH and the LIGHT of the world. Thanks to Darby, the salt has lost his savour and is good for nothing but to be trampled underfoot of the great Papal wild beast from hell. Here is an apt description of most of the Christian congregation today:

"His watchmen are blind: they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber." (Isaiah 56:10).

And again:

"So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue (spit) thee out of my mouth." (Revelation 3:16).

Like Darwin, Darby did a tremendous job for the Spanish Inquisition.

Pope to meet Spanish king

2010-09-24 18:00
http://www.news24.com/World/News/Pope-to-m...h-king-20100924

Vatican City - Pope Benedict XVI will meet the Spanish king in November on a trip to Barcelona, where he will also consecrate the city's long-unfinished Sagrada Familia cathedral, the Vatican said on Friday.

On the pope's 18th trip abroad since the beginning of his pontificate in 2005, Benedict will arrive on November 6, greeted by heir to the Spanish throne, Prince Felipe, and his wife in Santiago de Compostela in the northwest.

The following day he will meet King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia, before celebrating consecration mass in the famous Sagrada Familia cathedral designed by modernist architect Antoni Gaudi.

The cathedral, which has been in construction for years before and after the Catalan's death in 1926, is today a world heritage site.

The pope's trip had originally been announced in March when Spain was in the midst of a major row over abortion.

A new law allowing women to end their pregnancies up until 14 weeks was approved by the Spanish parliament on February 24.

Bishops strongly opposed the legislation and demanded its "abolition as soon as possible".

The law took effect on July 5.

A few weeks later a top Vatican prelate attacked Spanish Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero over the new legislation.

Ignacio Carrasco de Paula described the law as "senseless, absolutely senseless, and corresponds to Zapatero's mindset", in an interview with the Italian-language religious monthly Il Consulente Re.

Benedict's November trip, which will conclude with a visit to a charity for handicapped children, does not include a visit to Spanish capital Madrid, as the he is due to travel there in August next year, to mark World Youth Day.

Car sales plunge 37.7% in October

Car registrations stood at 23,334 units in the first fifteen days of October, representing a decrease of 37.7% over the same period last year.

2010-10-18
http://translate.google.com/translate?js=n...4621%2F&act=url

Thus, the automotive demand recorded the fourth consecutive decline so far this year mainly due to the end of 2000E Plan during his year of got boost car sales and create a "mirage of recovery" on a market becomes to show signs of extreme weakness to fall around 40%.

In this situation, Ganvam has requested in recent weeks to the main political parliamentary parties (PSOE, PP and CiU) to promote a proposal to amend the State Budget (PGE), 2011, which are currently in process, so that include a program of direct aid to the purchase of cars similar to the late 2000E Plan. It has also urged the Minister of Industry, Tourism and Trade Miguel Sebastian, who received urgently to the vehicle sales sector in order to address possible solutions to the dramatic situation that is currently engaged.

According Ganvam, to advance the program of aid and the VAT increase has exacerbated the agony of a sector very weak and without financial muscle to cope with a new stake, as evidenced by the disappearance of 10% of SMEs dealers and 30,000 jobs since the crisis erupted in 2008. Sellers fear the loss of 100,000 registrations in the second half and the destruction of 10,000 jobs in the official distribution networks.

General collapse throughout

By region, without exception, all regions experienced declines in their sales during the first half. Thus, car registrations were symptoms of extreme weakness with significant crashes in Castilla and León (-53.1%), Basque Country (-52.4%), Cantabria (-51.6%), Asturias (-50, 1%) and Galicia (-50%). Also, sales in the autonomous cities of Ceuta and Melilla fell by 56.5%.

Then followed the Valencian Community, with a drop of 45.8% in the first half of the month, Murcia (-44.4%), La Rioja (43.9%), Navarra (-41.6%) , Ontario (-41.2%) and Castilla-La Mancha (-39.4%).

The minor decreases in the numbers of registrations but no less significant corresponded to the Balearic Islands (-37%), Aragon (-36%), Canarias (-32.1%), Catalonia (-28.9%) and Madrid (-20.5%).

Las ventas de coches se desploman un 37,7% en octubre

Las matriculaciones de automóviles se situaron en 23.334 unidades en los quince primeros días de octubre, lo que supone una bajada del 37,7% con respecto al mismo periodo del año anterior.

2010-10-18
http://www.libertaddigital.com/economia/la...bre-1276404621/

De este modo, la demanda automovilística registra la cuarta caída consecutiva en lo que va de año debido principalmente al fin del Plan 2000E que durante su año de vigencia consiguió dinamizar las ventas de automóviles y crear un "espejismo de recuperación" sobre un mercado que vuelve a dar muestras de extrema debilidad con caídas cercanas al 40%.

Ante esta situación, Ganvam ha solicitado en estas últimas semanas a los principales grupos parlamentarios políticos (PSOE, PP y CiU) que promuevan una propuesta para enmendar los Presupuestos Generales del Estado (PGE) de 2011, que están actualmente en tramitación, de manera que incluyan un programa de ayudas directas a la compra de coches similar al desaparecido Plan 2000E. Asimismo, ha instado al ministro de Industria, Turismo y Comercio, Miguel Sebastián, a que reciba con carácter urgente al sector de venta de vehículos con el fin de abordar posibles soluciones a la dramática situación en que se encuentra inmerso actualmente.

Según Ganvam, el fin anticipado del programa de ayudas y la subida del IVA ha agudizado la agonía de un sector muy debilitado y sin músculo financiero para hacer frente a un nuevo envite, como evidencia la desaparición del 10% de las pymes concesionarias y 30.000 empleos desde que estallara la crisis en 2008. Los vendedores temen la pérdida de 100.000 matriculaciones en este segundo semestre y la destrucción de hasta 10.000 puestos de trabajo en las redes de distribución oficiales.

Desplome generalizado en todo el territorio

Por comunidades autónomas, todas las regiones sin excepción experimentaron caídas en sus cifras de ventas durante la primera quincena. Así, las matriculaciones de coches dieron síntomas de extrema debilidad con desplomes significativos en Castilla y León (-53,1%), País Vasco (-52,4%), Cantabria (-51,6%), Asturias (-50,1%) y Galicia (-50%). Asimismo, la ventas en las ciudades autónomas de Ceuta y Melilla retrocedieron un 56,5%.

A continuación, le siguieron la Comunidad Valenciana, con un retroceso del 45,8% en la primera mitad del mes, Murcia (-44,4%), La Rioja (43,9%), Navarra (-41,6%), Andalucía (-41,2%) y Castilla-La Mancha (-39,4%).

Los menores retrocesos en las cifras de matriculaciones pero no por ello menos significativos correspondieron a las Islas Baleares (-37%), Aragón (-36%), Canarias (-32,1%), Cataluña (-28,9%) y Madrid (-20,5%).

One in five Spaniards live in poverty

Thu Oct 21, 2010 10:26PM
http://www.presstv.ir/detail/147691.html

One out of every three Spanish households is struggling to make ends meet while more than one in five Spanish citizens live in relative poverty.

The report released by Spain's national statistics office on Thursday defined 'people living below the poverty line' as those who are forced to get by on less than 60 percent of the country's recognized average income.

According to the report, the proportion of Spaniards living below the poverty line grew to 20.8 percent this year from 19.5 percent in 2009, AFP reported.

In addition, the average household income in Spain fell by 2.9 percent in 2009 to 25,732 Euros per year. This means that people living under the poverty line earned less than 15,439 Euros annually or 1,287 Euros a month.

The report added that 30.4 percent of all households reported having "difficulty" or "great difficulty" making their income last for the entire month. This figure was up from 26.2 percent in 2005, when the Spanish economy experienced a property boom.

The property bubble busted, however, plunging Europe's fifth-largest economy into its worst recession in decades in 2008 and sent the unemployment rate soaring to more than 20 percent, the highest in the euro zone.

Spain's military takes over air traffic control

Madrid's Barajas airport, the busiest in Spain, was one of the first to be affected

3 December 2010 Last updated at 23:44
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-europe-11913878

Spain's military has taken over the country's air traffic control after civilian traffic controllers called in sick en masse.

The move - authorised by the government - comes after several airports across Spain were shut after traffic controllers' unauthorised walkout.

Most of Spain's airspace remains closed after the strike began.

The controllers are involved in a dispute with Spanish airport authority Aena over hours and conditions.

Earlier on Friday, Spanish Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero's office warned that the military would take over planning, supervision and control of the country's airspace unless the controllers called off the unsanctioned strike.

Spanish Transport Minister Jose Blanco also condemned the strike, saying: "We will not allow this blackmail, which is using citizens as hostages."

The controllers' action began at 1700 local time (1600 GMT), resulting in the shutdown of about 90% of Spain's airspace, with the exception of the southern region of Andalucia.

The BBC's Sarah Rainsford in Madrid says the action has disrupted air traffic across the country at the start of a holiday weekend. Many passengers were left stranded on runways.

Madrid's Barajas airport was one of the first to be affected, along with airports on Majorca, Ibiza and Menorca in the Balearic Islands.

Barajas is the busiest airport in Spain - a hub for international and national flights, and the base for the national carrier Iberia.

Late on Friday, Aena said flights from Barcelona airport were "resuming progressively" after about half the controllers arrived for their evening shift.

However, flights from the airport to Madrid and the Balearic islands were still suspended, it said in a statement.
'Crime'

Aena has called the action irresponsible and threatened to take punitive action against the controllers.

The strike action could affect the travel plans of up to 250,000 people

"The decision to paralyse air traffic in the country is extremely serious and, as well as being extremely serious misconduct that could be punished with disciplinary dismissals... it constitutes a crime," Aena said.

Iberia has cancelled all flights from Spanish airports until 1000 GMT on Saturday.

Aena estimates that the strike action could affect the travel plans of up to 250,000 people.

"All flights are blocked, there's a huge lot of people here, sitting around everywhere. Right now everyone is calm, but we don't know what's happening," said one traveller at Barajas airport.

"The captain came out to say Spanish airspace had suddenly shut, with no prior warning," another passenger stuck in a plane at Palma told Spanish radio.

Zapatero may declare a state of alarm and stop drivers who do not work

The First Deputy Prime Minister, Alfredo Perez Rubalcaba. | Efe
The alarm state would mobilize militarily to all drivers

Updated Saturday 12/04/2010 2:16 hours
http://www.elmundo.es/elmundo/2010/12/04/e...1291425368.html

The Prime Minister, José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero, will convene on Saturday a special cabinet meeting to proceed to declare a state of emergency if the situation does not change air traffic, said the First Deputy Prime Minister, Alfredo Perez Rubalcaba.

If this occurs would be the first time this has happened in the history of Spanish democracy.

As announced by the First Deputy Prime Minister, Alfredo Pérez Rubalcaba, in his second appearance tonight at the Ministry of Development, the state of alarm that would be mobilized militarily all drivers.

If one does not go to his place to court will immediately charged with a crime that may involve substantial imprisonment, he added.

Rubalcaba, who appeared alongside the Development Minister, José Blanco, and Defense Minister, Carmen Chacón, recalled that at this time the Air Force has moved to exercise the control of air navigation.

The vice president said the assistance of the controllers to the towers has been uneven, in some cases "merely formal" because although they have gone to their posts "in practice are not working."

Retransmitted Rubalcaba government apology to all citizens who have been "severely disrupted" their activities, especially those who are spending the night at some airports in Spain and what the Government has made available to all media disposal to "make the night easier."

We concluded Rubalcaba, urge the public that the government "is determined" to act, using all instruments that the rule of law offers "to prevent a group of workers to defend some of their privileges seriously disrupting life national. "

Rubalcaba said that until this Saturday there will be no new appearances of the Government after the Council of Ministers, called for nine o'clock.

Peres: All of Europe under nuclear threat

On visit to Spain, president also criticizes Gaddafi for 'spending more on clothes than on people'

Ronen Medzini Published: 02.23.11, 13:46 / Israel News
http://www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-4032908,00.html

President Shimon Peres warned against the Iranian nuclear threat Wednesday, also inveighing against Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi amid bloody protests signifying the possible overturning of his regime.

In a speech Peres gave before senior journalists and diplomats in Spain, Peres said Gaddafi was concerned only for himself. "You can see by his outfits how much he spends on clothing rather than on people," he said.

On the rapidly spreading protests in Arab states Peres said, "Israel supports the strengthening of democracy and peace in the Middle East. The youth of the region demand freedom, equal opportunities, and the right to live decently and we applaud this."

He added that the recent developments in the region provide both Israel and the Palestinians with an opportunity to return to direct negotiations. "The gaps between the sides are not too big," Peres said.

Peres also offered a calmer reaction than other Israeli officials to the passing of Iranian ships through the Suez Canal Tuesday.

"The Iranian ships are a cheap provocation and not a threat," he said. However, he also had a warning for European countries regarding the Islamic Republic. "You are sleeping. One day you will wake up with nuclear warheads pointed at Madrid," he said.

"The real threat stands as a clear warning sign to Europe and the entire world: Iran is developing nuclear weapons for mass destruction, and when nuclear weapons reach the hands of terror organizations, Iran's satellites, all of Europe's capitals will be under existential threat," Peres warned.

"Leaders who have their pictures taken beside Ahmadinejad should be ashamed, and he must not be invited to march on the UN's red carpets."

Peres added that the Iranian threat encompasses all of Europe. "Spain has suffered very serious terror attacks, and this will be the fate of many countries in the world if drastic measures are not taken against Iran," he said.

The president also joked that he was "disappointed" at the warm welcome he received in Spain, explaining that he was accustomed to be received with protests and threats.

At this very minute the populace of the U.K are being subliminally conditioned to the coming Food crisis and rationing which will take place. Only weeks ago TESCO announced to its loyalty card (Big Brother) customers that they'd be delving deeper into their customers purchases. Loyalty cards are so in the future supermarkets will know what your weekly shop usually is and then you'll no longer be able to purchase anything over this amount. The Elitists do not want food hoarders as this doesn't allow for control.

Obama Orders Military To Prepare For Spring Food Riots

Posted by EU Times on Jan 13th, 2011 // 217 Comments
http://www.eutimes.net/2011/01/obama-order...ing-food-riots/

A grim report prepared by France's General Directorate for External Security (DGSE) obtained by Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service (SVR) states that president's Obama and Sarkozy have "agreed in principal" to create a joint US-European military force to deal exclusively with a Global uprising expected this spring as our World runs out of food.

According to this report, Sarkozy, as head of the G-20 group of developed Nations, called for and received an emergency meeting with Obama this past Monday at the White House wherein he warned his American counterpart that the shock rise in food prices occurring due to an unprecedented series of disasters was threatening the stability of the entire World and could lead to the outbreak of Total Global War.

Just last week French Prime Minister Francois Fillon underlined that one of France's top

G-20 priorities was to find a collective response to “excessive volatility” in food prices now occurring, a statement joined by Philippe Chalmin, a top economic adviser to the French government, who warned the World may face social unrest including food riots in April as grain prices increase to unprecedented highs.

The fears of the French government over growing Global instability was realized this past week after food riots erupted in Algeria and Tunisia and left over 50 dead. So dire has the situation become in Tunisia that their government this morning rushed in massive amounts of troops and tanks to their capital city Tunis and instituted a Nationwide curfew in an order to quell the growing violence.

The United Nations, also, warned this past Friday that millions of people are now at risk after food prices hit their highest level ever as Global wheat stocks fell to 175.2 million tons from 196.7 million tons a year ago; Global corn stocks are said may be 127.3 million tons at the end of this season, compared with last month’s USDA outlook for 130 million tons; and Global soybean inventories will drop to 58.78 million tons at the end of this season, from 60.4 million tons a year earlier.

Robert Zoellick, president of the World Bank, further warned this past week that rising food prices are “a threat to global growth and social stability” as our World, for the first time in living memory, has been warned is just “one poor harvest away from chaos”.

Important to note about how dire the Global food situation has become is to understand the disasters that have befallen our World’s top wheat growing Nations this past year, and who in descending order are: China, India, United States, Russia, France, Canada, Germany, Ukraine, Australia and Pakistan.

From China’s disaster: 2010 China drought and dust storms were a series of severe droughts during the spring of 2010 that affected Yunnan, Guizhou, Guangxi, Sichuan, Shanxi, Henan, Shaanxi, Chongqing, Hebei and Gansu in the People’s Republic of China as well as parts of Southeast Asia including Vietnam and Thailand, and dust storms in March and April that affected much of East Asia. The drought has been referred to as the worst in a century in southwestern China.

From India’s disaster: A record heat wave and growing water crisis in India are forcing politicians to consider implementing user fees and other measures to conserve water. Sri Lanka’s President Mahinda Rajapaksa yesterday instructed ministers and officials to prepare a strategic plan to face an impending food crisis as there were signs that the World is to confront a food shortage by next April.

From Russia’s disaster: (10% of total World’s output, 20% for export) they were hit by the highest recorded temperatures Russia has seen in 130 years of recordkeeping; the most widespread drought in more than three decades; and massive wildfires that have stretched across seven regions, including Moscow.

From France's disaster: The French government lowered their wheat crop forecast by 2.7% over last year due to drought and cold weather.

From Canada's disaster: Record setting drought has affected their main grain producing provinces in the Western part of their Nation.

From Ukraine's disaster: (the World's top producer of barley and sixth biggest of wheat) hit as hard as Russia by fire and drought to the point they have halted all their exports of grains in 2011.

From Australia's disaster: Fears of a Global wheat shortage have risen after the Queensland area of Australia was hit by calamitous flooding. Andrew Fraser, Queensland's State Treasurer, described the floods as a "disaster of biblical proportions". Water is covering land the size of France and Germany. It is expected to reach over 30 feet deep in some areas in coming days.

From Pakistan's disaster: Floods have submerged 17 million acres of Pakistan's most fertile crop land, have killed 200,000 herd of livestock and have washed away massive amounts of grain and left farmers unable to meet the fall deadline for planting new seeds, which implies a massive loss of food production in 2011, and potential long term food shortages.

Not only have the vast majority of our World's top wheat producers been affected, but also one of the main grain producing regions on the Planet, South America, has been hit by disasters too where an historic drought has crippled Argentina and Bolivia, and Brazil, that regions largest Nation, has been hit with catastrophic floods that have killed nearly 400 people in the past few days alone.

Even the United States has been hit as a catastrophic winter has seen 49 of their 50 States covered by snow causing unprecedented damage to their crops in Florida due to freezing weather, and record setting rains destroying massive numbers of crops in their most important growing region of California.

And if you think that things couldn't get any worse you couldn't be more mistaken as South Korea (one of the most important meat exporters in Asia) has just this past week had to destroy millions of farm animals after an outbreak of the dreaded foot-and-mouth disease was discovered.

To how horrific the Global food situation will become this year was made even more grim this past month when the United States reported that nearly all of their honey bee and bumblebee populations have died out, and when coupled with the "mysterious" die-off of the entire bat population in America means that the two main pollinators of fruit and vegetable plants will no longer be able to do their jobs leading to crop losses this report warns will be "biblical and catastrophic".

Chillingly to note is that after meeting with Sarkozy, Obama began implementing his Nation's strategy for keeping the truth of this dire events from reaching the American people by ordering all US citizens to have an Internet ID so that they can be tracked and jailed should they begin telling the truth.

And so today, as agricultural traders and analysts warn that the latest revision to US and Global stocks means there is no further room for weather problems, a new cyclone is preparing to hit Australia, brutal winter weather in India has killed nearly 130, and more snow is warned to hit America, and we're not even two full weeks into 2011… may God have mercy on us all.

http://one-heaven.org/canons_positive_law/article_1010.htm

III. Rights
3.2 Rights Suspension and Corruption
Article 101-Mortgage
Canon 1305
A Mortgage is a complex bundle of rights, encumbrances and transactions involving primarily a lease, lien and loan issued through a Temporary Testamentary Trust known as a Cestui Que (Vie) Trust under Estate Law.

Canon 1306
The first component to a Mortgage is a Lease formed through the creation of a Cestui Que (Vie) Trust whereby the higher Estate such as a State, Territory or Nation conveys Title to the financial institution as Landlord and the borrower as Tenant. Leases within a standard Mortgage are usually fixed in term, such as fifteen, twenty years and sometimes for even a longer term. Once the lease expires, the Cestui Que (Vie) Trust dissolves and title returns to the higher Estate. Under modern Estate Law, A borrower of a mortgage is always a tenant, never an owner.

Canon 1307
The second component to a Mortgage is a consensual Commercial Lien issued under Estate Law whereby a lien placed upon a Real Estate Deed and Title under Estate Law whereby a lender is granted certain Rights to seize Title over the Real Estate Property of the borrower, usually only after Foreclosure is granted.

Canon 1308
As all Mortgages now are Commercial Liens issued under the Estate Law of Securitized Estates, it is now the banks and financial institutions that are legally considered the Executors and Administrators with the borrowers always considered tenants, whether the loan is fully paid or not.

Canon 1309
The third component to a Mortgage is the loan which has two important elements, the principal representing the actual loan itself and the interest, lawfully representing rent of the tenant to the landlord.

Canon 1310
Under Trust law and Estate Law the executives of financial institutions of Executors and Administrators under Estate Law are obliged to perform as duty bound officers of a Testamentary Trust and not materially alter any conditions of the Deed and Title which represents a formal Will. Deliberate fraud in altering a Deed and Will constitutes a most grave injury to the whole of Estate Law of the Roman System and if uncontested and unrepaired is tantamount to the open consent by the most senior Executors and Administrators of the highest Estates that the whole system is now null and void.

Canon 1311
The Promissory Note and Application Form signed by a lender as part of a Mortgage is material to the Deed and Will of the Estate. Therefore, by Estate Law, any fraud or deception in materially altering the terms of the Testamentary Trust immediately disqualifies the executive from acting as Executor or Administrator with the financial institution assuming full liability.

Canon 1312
Any inferior Roman court that openly permits the unrepaired and open fraud of Trust Law, Estate Law and the law of Wills by refusing to repudiate any financial institution that monetizes or multiplies the sale of a loan without consent or remedy to the borrower openly consents that the whole system of Roman Trust Law, Estate Law and Wills no longer applies and is null and void.

Canon 1313
By definition, any Property taxes charged by the higher estate to the tenant are the direct responsibility of the landlord. Where a court seeks to foreclose on a property against the tenant and not the financial institution, constitutes a gross fraud and if unrepaired is an open consent that Roman Trust Law, Estate Law and Contract Law no longer applies and is null and void.

Canon 1314
Equity does not exist in Mortgage as the terms of ownership is always a lease. Any claim therefore of equity is a fraud and misrepresentation of contract by the lender and higher estates.

Canon 1315
The sale of a "home" or "property" merely represents an assignment and then novation of lease with most mortgages permitting such conveyance providing the landlord of the higher estate can claim some form of compensation from the sale through taxes.

Canon 1316
Providing a financial institution has not committed fraud against the Deed and Will of the Estate under which a Mortgage is applied against Real Estate, the institution must first seek a granting of Foreclosure before seizing the property. This is because the lender is their tenant under a fixed-term lease.

[DOHTML]</CENTER>[/DOHTML]
I was given information today from a professional Chinese Doctor about a special herbal water. I've been told to give and tell all I know who have cancer or want to learn how to attack cancer about this water. This Chinese Doctor drinks this detoxification tonic water daily. She has no other fluid intake other than the odd medicinal herbal tea if she has noticed her pulses require it. This Doctor originates from China and has been practicing Traditional Chinese Medicine for twenty five years or more. If you look at this Doctor you would think she's either in her late twenties or very early thirties. She has the youthfulness in every way including how quickly she works and sprites around. I was shocked when she told me that she was forty seven years old. This Doctor will be very youthful in her old age. She informed me that she had a daughter who was twenty two years old. My God I wondered, I bet she looks like a fetus if her mother's anything to go by. All I then thought about was how right I'd been to start studying Traditional Chinese Medicine methods of healing. Moving forward from the good teachings of Dr John Ray Christopher to an even further deepness on healing which Christopher just could not match unfortunately as with most Westerners.

After discussing today with her in detail about the Unitarian Trophoblastic theory of cancer she gave me something in return. She showed me an old plastic Coke bottle on the side which contained a golden looking fluid. This was most obviously not the dreaded poison called Coca Cola. She told me that the fluid was a decoction extraction of the medicinal compounds of Ludou. In the West this is of course known as the Green Mung bean. I asked her what is it good for? she replied "for destroying the cancer cell". But in order for it to destroy the cancer cells you have to dramatically increase the Mung bean content by twelve times the preventative dosage.

[dohtml] <embed id=VideoPlayback src=http://video.google.co.uk/googleplayer.swf?docid=-8384134159042346609&hl=en&fs=true style=width:400px;height:340px

Upon leaving from her practice I said to her I would check up the chemical compounds within the Mung bean and see if there were any saponins present. I suspected that this may be the case and that they must be working similar to how the proteolytic enzyme would on the negatively charged sheath which protects the cancer cell from a body immune system attack. The body's immune system is also negatively charged thus when two negatives come together they will repel. The human immune system searches out and destroys only those intruders and problems of a positively charged nature. Proteolytic enzymes produced by the Pancreas and certain foods will destroy this protective sheathing of the cancer cell which allows the immune system to see a positive charge finally. Trypsin and Chymotrypsin enzymes are your main lines of defense against the cancer cell. These will be impaired if theres localised constipations affecting the Pancreas organ where their produced. This is why cancer needs a complete whole body program designed to clean out the system and rebuild all organ functions. We see these protocols employed by all the great cancer healing doctors of old like Dr John Ray Christopher, Dr William Donald Kelly and Dr Max Gerson. Expecting an immune system to attack anything whilst the Kidneys are dysfunctional is a grave mistake. Unless the Kidneys are functioning correctly you'll have very little of what is termed an immune system. The same goes for the Spleen which is directly tied to your immunity more from a Qi point of view. The Kidneys supply the Bone Marrow and this is your immune system source.

[dohtml] <img src="http://i568.photobucket.com/albums/ss128/blackpope1/RedClover.jpg" height=340> [/dohtml]
After researching the Mung bean I found exactly what I was looking for and that was saponins. I also noted that these were present in Dandelion which is another great aid in dealing with cancer and detoxification. These saponins act as like a soapy detergent in the body and destroy the cancer cell membrane. Now with knowledge of the Unitarian Trophoblastic theory is it any wonder why foods and herbal medicines containing these saponins have an effect on the cancer cells as we've been seeing? We can find saponins in the mineral rich super food called Alfalfa along with herbs, Red Clover, Chaparral, Poke root, American & Asian Ginseng roots, Aloe Vera gel, Comfrey, Cayenne Pepper, Licorice root & Astragalus root. Interesting how we find these herbs are very useful in the reversal of cancer. Dr John Ray Christopher devoted a whole chapter in his book just on the herbal medicine, Red Clover. Red Clover was the first herb Dr Christopher would mention if anyone spoke of cancer. Many of the great cancer reversal herbal formulas all made use of this particular herb amongst others. Sir Jason Winter's tea is made up of a large percentage of Red Clover for instance. We also should note the powerful cancer reversal herb called Chaparral and its extremely potent free radical scavenging properties. Below I've compiled a comprehensive list of herbs which contain saponins for you to research at your own will:

> Blue Cohosh root, Baby's Breath flower, White Horehound herb, Basil herb, Thyme herb, Sage leaf, Couch Grass root, Linden flower, Mullein leaf, Marshmallow root, Solomon's Seal root, Chickweed herb, Asparagus root, Suma root, Culver's root, Fringe Tree Root bark, Cowslip root, Bittersweet stalk, Jamaican Sarsaparilla root, Rosemary leaf, White Deadnettle herb & root, Helonias root, Sea Holly root, Gravel root, Lily of the Valley herb, Hawthorn berry, Milky Oat berry, Yucca, Bright Bugleweed herb, Garden Balsam seed, Cowcockle seed, White Oxknee root, Lock Yang stem, Proud Pink herb, Asian Poke root, Caper Spurge seed, Rooting Lobelia herb & root, Japanese Dogwood berry, Cherokee Rosehip, Long Yam root, Jujube berry, Sour Jujube seed, Hemsleya tuber, Lychee seed, Bush Cherry kernal, Prince Ginseng root, Vohitoikidy, Mountain Yam root, Downy Bellflower root, Mimosa bark, Popcorn Senna, Oriental Arborvitae berry, Thin-Leaf Milkwort root, Selfheal Spike, Potato Yam tuber, Field Thistle herb & root, Great Burnet root, Waxgourd seed, Snakegourd fruit, Loquat leaf, Red Spike Thorn, Prime White root, Honeylocust pod, Sichuan Fritillary bulb, Abalo, Upright Ladybell root, Know Mother root, Dwarf Lilyturf root, Horsetail herb, Centipeda herb, Pseudoginseng root, Kochia seed, Rose of Sharon Root bark, Paris root, Wild Cassia, Spikemoss gerb, China root, Glabrous Greenbrier root, Winter Cherry herb, Worm-cure albizia, Japanese Honeysuckle flower, Soap Nut tree, Taiwan Schefflera leaf and stem, Red Stinkwood leaf & bark, Asian Buplever root, Prepared Giant Typhonium root, Prepared Dragon Arum Corm, Field Lotus herb, Chinese Quince fruit, Nippon Yam root.

[dohtml] <img src="http://i568.photobucket.com/albums/ss128/blackpope1/pineapple.jpg" height=340><img src="http://i568.photobucket.com/albums/ss128/blackpope1/papaya-clean-FD-lg.jpg" height=340> [/dohtml]
So it seems we have another great gift from the creator in the plant kingdom which will help to fight the cancer cell like the proteolytic enzyme. The creator gave us wonderful foods like Papaya which is loaded with proteolytic enzymes such as Papain, Chymopapain, Chitinase, Caricain, Papaya Peptidase A & B. One should consume daily two or more of these fresh and ripe but not over ripe when one suffers cancer. If their over ripe or under ripe then you'll have less enzymes. Then we move onto the wonderful Pineapple which contains the very useful proteolytic enzyme called Bromelain. I suggest at least one large fresh Pineapple throughout the day for cancer sufferers. In fact people are warned off eating the stem of the Pineapple but this is where the most Bromelain will be found other than its stalk which no one would want to eat. We then have the grape which is also a storage of saponins and highly useful. The Chinese highly prize the food we take for granted known as the tomato. The Chinese understand its great nutritional value and when we bare in mind that its so common and easy to get hold of then we should appreciate it more. The Tomato also contains saponins along with many other foods if you study. We just wouldn't go overboard with the tomato as it will eventually increase acidity in the body. This is something we would prefer to fight against and try to keep alkalinity up. It would be most wise for you all to now study saponins carefully and adjust your diets accordingly to either prevent or attack cancer.

[dohtml] <embed src="http://www.youtube.com/v/HQuODiMlUsc&hl=en_GB&fs=1&" type="application/x-shockwave-flash" allowscriptaccess="always" allowfullscreen="true" width="400" height="340"></embed> [/dohtml]
From a cancer point of view I found saponins interesting not only from a cell membrane point of view either. I noticed how their very active against fungus, bacteria and viruses. We're finding out more about the role of cancer by the day, one of the interesting angles to the dis-ease is its ties with fungus. This has been highlighted more so recently thanks to an oncologist based in Italy known as Dr. Tullio Simoncini. Where does fungus arise from? It comes from filth and is a natural cleansing reaction on this planet as with bacteria and protein solvent viruses. If one removes the filth then the fungus, bacteria or virus cannot be present and wouldn't want to be present. It is most obvious the cancer patient has immune deficiency along with internal localized constipations creating energy blockages and therefore a building up of filth. I spoke about this multiple organ dysfunction above and how all the five Viscera must be functionally build back up medicinally. Without a whole body healing approach you will fail in the battle against cancer. You may remove a cancer but if your lifestyle continues as it did prior to the cancer and the pollutions, junk foods continue well it will be straight back. This is where Dr Simoncini falls way short as he addresses only the symptom by flushing out the cancer area with sodium bicarbonate. This hasn't addressed the lacking gut flora, weakened spleen, dysfunctional kidneys, liver, colon and pancreas. In truth Dr Simoncini is actually compounding the problem by adding more imbalance to the system via extreme alkalinity. One should never over alkalize or acidify the human system. Bypassing the human body's natural defense system of the gut by going into the vein via injection is totally going against true healing of the body. All good vitalists agree we should never break the hermetic seal of the human body which protects us from a whole range of dis-ease. So we see now how saponins may be useful in killing a cancer causing virus like SV40 or similar and any fungus surrounding the cancer as evidenced by Dr Simoncini. One of the great helps in attacking cancer was the herbal medicine known as Garlic. Garlic too is a great anti-fungal with extreme anti-viral and anti-bacterial properties. We also find that Garlic contains saponins which should interest all reading this article as we connect the dots. From a Mung bean point of view we see how it can remove heavy metals, pesticides and poisons. This is exactly what we need to do and remove the pollution from the body and thus no more filth. Mung beans seem a good aid with the poisons as are the Red Chinese dates known as Jujube, Da Zao or Ziziphus. The Red Chinese date also aids the Spleen and thus immunity. These two have saponins within them. I was interested to see how the Adzuki bean is useful for detoxification also and how some Chinese Doctors utilise these along with Mung beans and Hyacinth beans in some herbal medicine formulas including for pandemic flus even.

When preparing Mung bean water you must decide if you need a preventative dosage or a cancer reversal dosage of this drink. If you desire a healthy drink which can help prevent you getting cancer then the amount of Mung beans used is 250 grams. If you have cancer then you must use 3 kilograms or 3000 grams for your water instead of the small 250 grams in comparison. This is of course a twelve fold increase in strength as you would expect for such a complicated and powerful dis-ease such as cancer. To prepare your water is very simple and takes no time at all. I suggest you use steam distilled water ideally but this may not be viable so you can use a good clean bottled water or any non halogenic (fluoridated or chlorinated) water source. I say steam distilled because in truth when one makes a medicinal decoction or infusion the less minerals present already in the water source the better. This will allow for even more of the plant compounds to enter the solvent your using which is logical thinking. So try to make sure your water isn't hard or else you will simply have less medicinal power in your finished Mung bean water. So we now have the Mung beans and the water source ready. Simply get a large pan with a covering lid. Fill the pan with the desired grams of Green Mung beans then pour all your water into the pan on top of the beans. I will share your water needs later. You then turn your cooking ring up to full fire and wait for the bean water to now start bubbling up. Do not lower the full fire and just keep it going for five minutes after the bubbling starts. Now you can simply switch off and remove from the heat. Let the pan settle till cool then bottle. This is your Mung bean water completed and its as simple as this. You may also eat the Mung beans themselves too.

[dohtml] <img src="http://i568.photobucket.com/albums/ss128/blackpope1/BodysCryWater.jpg" height=340> [/dohtml]
If one studies the work of Dr Fereydoon Batmanghelidj on water they will know how to work out their individual water needs based on their weight. In order to work out your water needs you simply weigh yourself in pounds. Now half this figure and this will be how much water you need but not in pounds it needs to be fluid ounces. Therefore to make it simple if a lady weights 100 lbs then she would need 50 fl oz of water a day for her own individual needs. For each 250ml or mug of water you're intake in fl oz is 8 and of course 32 fl oz is equal to 1 litre. You see here how someone who's larger would need a lot more water than someone slim. In the West too many people take the same large dosages of water when they find out about needing to drink water. Commercials and articles push the same water amounts to everyone which is nonsense.

[dohtml] <img src="http://i568.photobucket.com/albums/ss128/blackpope1/339420-26424-47.jpg" height=340> [/dohtml]
So with your Mung bean water you take the amount you've calculated throughout the day. So if you need two litres you'll take four pints or eight mugs throughout the entire day. This means you'll be drinking nothing else but Mung bean water unless you have a medicinal herbal tea to take as well. The taste is quite pleasant and I'm sure if you didn't like it too much that you could sweeten it with fresh green Stevia but not the processed white version which again is a poison. I do not wish for people to sweeten their drink with sugars which may aid their cancer development. Ideally just drink and eat what you need even if you dislike the taste. You have to get a mind frame where by you attack your problem no matter what. Remember the old saying, "what tastes bad usually does you good." Not often have I come across a nice tasting medicinal plant, its not a common thing unfortunately. Not many can be as pleasant as Licorice root and well Ginsengs can taste utter disgusting just as Coptis does, which tastes like burnt wood and highly bitter. This new mind frame will be part of your new lifestyle towards getting well again. You must truely change your ways from mind to the physical to the diet otherwise you will be a lost cause and struggle to find true health.

[dohtml] <img src="http://i568.photobucket.com/albums/ss128/blackpope1/YinYang.jpg" height=340> [/dohtml]
I would recommend feminines stop taking the Mung bean water when their on their monthly cycle. I would also recommend you cut back on Mung bean water during the Autumnal and Winter seasons. All three of these areas are tied to cold within the body. Cold is one of the causes of illness within the human body. We use the cold and cooling herbs to counter too much heat within the body. If one can balance their foods and herbal intake with both correctly then of course both can be continued throughout most periods of the year. This is extremely difficult though and you should abide by the laws of nature. For instance the Spring is very drying so we don't want to dry the body further. We would make use of the Spring food called Watermelon and especially if heat is within the heart for example. If you have a Yang Qi deficiency then you would not want to take Mung beans often and you'd be concentrating on various warming herbs and foods. This is how Mung bean would help in a pandemic flu by helping to counter the heat in the system produced by the symptoms of flu. You must make sure you monitor your bodies needs down to the deepest energetic levels which Traditional Chinese Medicine goes to. This will bring balance back to the system and only then can your body heal itself correctly and not before.

A correction to the cancer dosage needs to be addressed. The proper level of Mung beans for cancer sufferers is 1500 grams or 1.5 Kilograms. My doctor friend made the mistake due to a translation error. Please note this from now on.

Very impressive video techniques, zooming into focal points in the images.

Video making is not my forte I will hold my hands up & admit.

I doff my metaphorical hat to you Craig!

Note how Leo pronounces Ignatius as "ig-NAZI-o" or similar!

"Ignazio" Loyola: makes one think about the SS being based patterned after the Jesuits.

Halvor - December 17, 2010 07:59 AM (GMT)

Leo has been promoting the Knights Templars, them being in opposition to the Knights of Malta and the Jesuits. Can anyone expound a bit on this image of the Knights Templars being the "good guys"?

soulinspiration - December 18, 2010 02:10 AM (GMT)

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR & THE VARIOUS & VARIED INHERITORS OF THEIR LEGACY

There are different branches of the Knights Templar that resulted after the early 14th century Papal suppression. Some Templars joined other orders while others formed new orders. Some maintained Papal/Romanist allegiance (which I personally think was always a survival strategy for the original Templars, who had their own agenda) while others became vehicles to undermine & thwart the Papal Religious Empire.

There are neo-Templar bodies such as the OSMTH, there is a Knight Templar degree/ order within the York Rite, there are various Scottish Knights Templar orders, the Order of the Garter is Templar-based & both the Skull & Bones & the Jesuits, neither of whom get much love from myself, are two nefarious tributaries of aspects of Templar symbolism & secrecy. The Scottish Rite, the Societas Rosicruciana, the Memphis-Misraim & the Martinists would be among the many other groups which draw at least inspiration from the Templars.

In Scotland the Sinclairs were the keepers of the Templar heritage which eventually gave birth to Freemasonry, which I believe was originally anti-Papal but that certain Masonic branches that later appeared were either set up by the Jesuits (e.g. the advanced degree system that they developed at Clermont College, Paris in the middle of the 18th century that eventually became the Scottish Rite) or were gradually co-opted by them (the top levels of the United Grand Lodge of England).

I have made a strong case elsewhere at this forum for the Freemason King James VI/I being a Jesuit agent & attempting to weaken the Sinclairs' influence over Freemasonry in Scotland. Masonic historian Robert Lomas states that James VI/I brought speculative Freemasonry to England & I agree. Operative Freemasonry had been in existence for many centuries by that name. Speculative Freemasonry - which is what we just call Freemasonry today can be traced back to 1st Earl of Caithness William Sinclair's Rosslyn Chapel, but really started developing around the latter part of the 16th century in Scotland.

This Jesuit infiltration of other inheritors of the Templar legacy apparently continues apace, as Leo revealed in recent days that Ian Sinclair who is the head of a certain Scottish Knights Templar order (there is more than one) has recently disassociated with Mark Pinkham - the North American Grand Prior of the socalled International Order of Gnostic Templars. Pinkham is a Gnostic Luciferian & not a Gnostic Christian, just to make things clear. Gnosis being the Greek word of knowledge based on direct experience. Walking home tonight I had Gnosis of snow under my boots! Anyway, Pinkham it seems is also a Thelemite - according to Leo. Mind you Leo has had his Thelemic moments in the past.

So the Templar orders (such as they are - some seemingly consist of very small numbers of individuals, unlike say the OSMTH which is significantly larger) that Leo has referred to since about April 2008 in the manner of which you speak would seem to contain members who are neither pro-Jesuit nor pro-Papacy & are critical of & even hostile to both. This situation also seems to be paralleled in the Ancient & Primitive Rite of Memphis-Misraim: some lineages/obediences are fronts for the military/intelligence networks, while others it would seem are more focused on hermetic matters. I get this impression of more mainstream Freemasonry too - that there are certain lodges with certain focuses that veer towards these two extremes, although the vast bulk of them are far more mundane. It does seem a complex situation - but the world is a complex place, so that is a more realistic scenario than the comic book 2-D version that is the specialty of the vast majority of those who write & speak on the matters of conspiracy & secret societies.

One thing is for sure is that the true story of the post-suppression Templar history is yet to be written. Be wary of those who claim to know it all about such complex matters. Honestly, I'd be surprised if the full picture is grasped by any in these secret societies. The Illuminati is not just the Bavarian Illuminati, it did not begin with them. The Illuminati encompasses all the higher levels of all of the orders which can be traced back to the Templars - which is the vast majority of secret societies in Europe & the New World. The Illuminati include the 15th century Rosslyn Chapel-building William Sinclair of Scotland who had nothing to do with the Alumbrados ("Illuminated Ones") of Spain. I have heard it claimed that "the Illuminati are the Jesuits" & "the Jesuits are the Knights Templars" but these are not merely oversimplifications but partial truths that are also partial fallacies & do not help matters.

All of us in Europe owe the Templars a great deal of gratitude, whereas I feel the opposite about the Jesuits - although I cannot deny their achievements & incredible skills. I have read a bit about Athanasius Kirch(n)er & it is hard to dislike the guy who was one impressive polymath. The Templars kept the Muslims from encroaching further on Europe than they already had & they refused to join in on the the attacks on the Albigensians & Cathars that became a genocide & was the Papacy's only Crusade of the middle ages against Europeans & Christians. The Jesuits on the other hand ran the Inquisition at one stage.

Maxi from this forum has presented a good case recently that the Order of Montesa was a clear link between the Templars & the Jesuits:

The Spanish branch of the Knights Templars, in control of the King of Spain, James II of Aragon, created the Order of Montesa, which received all the assets and properties of the Order of the Knights Templars... The last Grand Master of this Order was Pedro Luis Garcerán de Borja, elected at the age of 17, and the brother of Francisco de Borja, related to the King of Spain, (which was also under his control) and 3rd Superior General of the Society of Jesus. So... even following the money we can trace the Templar origin of the Jesuits.

Brother Maxi.

Adding more thoughts of my own in response to your question Halvor, it would seem that there are still remnants of Templarism that are neither Jesuit lackies nor advocates of Roman Catholicism. The traditional history of the Royal Order of Scotland has it that it was many centuries earlier formed as the Order of the Rosy Cross in 1314 after the Battle of Bannockburn.

One of my mother's father's ancestors was knighted by Robert the Bruce for commanding victorious troops after that battle against the English. Into which order? The records that I have come across to date are unspecific, but if this Order of the Rosy Cross (which became by the 1730's the lower of the two degrees of the Royal Order of Scotland) was indeed founded when & where its tradition has it then it may well have been into that order.

The Sinclairs & Stewarts (who were quite jealous of the Sinclairs & would also essentially declare war on them on a number of occasions!) married into our family many times, no doubt due to our Norse royal heritage (note that Norway's royalty has essentially been of Germanic-derivation since the 15th century & from that time to this can in no way be seen as the true spiritual inheritors of the ancient Norse royal houses). People read all sorts of things into every example of such intermarriages, but part of it I strongly suspect was to not only to maintain some independence from the Vatican but to provide a continuing force against Rome. The Stewarts eventually went back to their Babylonian mother & some of them are buried there.

The world of conspiracy research is it seems more often than not like the story of the blind men & the elephant - if sometimes in reverse (i.e. rather than one thing being thought to be many things, many things are mistaken for being one thing). Wikipedia - I have just discovered - has a great page on the "Blind men and the elephant" which I will post the text of here in full, as it is most "illuminating" ;D :

QUOTE

Blind men and an elephant

The story of the blind men and an elephant originated in India and is used to demonstrate either the relativity, or the inexpressible nature, of truth.

The story

In various versions of the tale, a group of blind men (or men in the dark) touch an elephant to learn what it is like. Each one feels a different part, but only one part, such as the side or the tusk. They then compare notes and learn that they are in complete disagreement.

The stories differ primarily in how the elephant's body parts are described, how violent the conflict becomes and how (or if) the conflict among the men and their perspectives is resolved.

Jain

A Jain version of the story says that six blind men were asked to determine what an elephant looked like by feeling different parts of the elephant's body. The blind man who feels a leg says the elephant is like a pillar; the one who feels the tail says the elephant is like a rope; the one who feels the trunk says the elephant is like a tree branch; the one who feels the ear says the elephant is like a hand fan; the one who feels the belly says the elephant is like a wall; and the one who feels the tusk says the elephant is like a solid pipe.

A king explains to them:

"All of you are right. The reason every one of you is telling it differently is because each one of you touched the different part of the elephant. So, actually the elephant has all the features you mentioned."[1]

This resolves the conflict, and is used to illustrate the principle of living in harmony with people who have different belief systems, and that truth can be stated in different ways (in Jainist beliefs often said to be seven versions). This is known as the Syadvada, Anekantvad, or the theory of Manifold Predictions.[1]

Buddhist

The Buddha twice uses the simile of blind men led astray. In the Canki Sutta, much like in the Christian Gospel (Matthew 15.14), saying about the blind leading the blind, using a row of blind men holding on to each other as an example of those who follow an old text that has come down generation after generation.[2] In the Udana (68–69)[3] he uses the parable to describe sectarian quarrels. A king has the blind men of the capital brought to the palace, where an elephant is brought in and they are asked to describe it.

"When the blind men had each felt a part of the elephant, the king went to each of them and said to each: 'Well, blind man, have you seen the elephant? Tell me, what sort of thing is an elephant?"

The men assert the elephant is either like a pot (the blind man who felt the elephants' head), a winnowing basket (ear), a plowshare (tusk), a plow (trunk), a granary (body), a pillar (foot), a mortar (back), a pestle (tail) or a brush (tip of the tail).

The men cannot agree with one another and come to blows over the question of what it is like and their dispute delights the king. The Buddha ends the story by comparing the six blind men to preachers and scholars who are blind and ignorant and hold to their own views: "Just so are these preachers and scholars holding various views blind and unseeing.... In their ignorance they are by nature quarrelsome, wrangling, and disputatious, each maintaining reality is thus and thus." The Buddha then speaks the following verse:

O how they cling and wrangle, some who claim
For preacher and monk the honored name!
For, quarreling, each to his view they cling.
Such folk see only one side of a thing.[4]

Sufi Muslim

The Persian Sufi poet Sanai of Ghazni in Afghanistan presented this teaching story in his The Walled Garden of Truth.[5]

Rumi, the 13th Century Persian poet and teacher of Sufism, included it in his Masnavi. In his retelling, "The Elephant in the Dark", some Hindus bring an elephant to be exhibited in a dark room. A number of men feel the elephant in the dark and, depending upon where they touch it, they believe the elephant to be like a water spout (trunk), a fan (ear), a pillar (leg) and a throne (back). Rumi uses this story as an example of the limits of individual perception:

The sensual eye is just like the palm of the hand. The palm has not the means of covering the whole of the beast.[6]

Rumi doesn't present a resolution to the conflict in his version, but states:

The eye of the Sea is one thing and the foam another. Let the foam go, and gaze with the eye of the Sea. Day and night foam-flecks are flung from the sea: oh amazing! You behold the foam but not the Sea. We are like boats dashing together; our eyes are darkened, yet we are in clear water.[6]

Hindu

Ramakrishna Paramahamsa used this parable to discourage dogmatism:[7]

"A number of blind men came to an elephant. Somebody told them that it was an elephant. The blind men asked, ‘What is the elephant like?’ and they began to touch its body. One of them said: 'It is like a pillar.' This blind man had only touched its leg. Another man said, ‘The elephant is like a husking basket.’ This person had only touched its ears. Similarly, he who touched its trunk or its belly talked of it differently. In the same way, he who has seen the Lord in a particular way limits the Lord to that alone and thinks that He is nothing else."

John Godfrey Saxe

>
> And so these men of Hindustan
> Disputed loud and long,
> Each in his own opinion
> Exceeding stiff and strong,
> Though each was partly in the right
> And all were in the wrong.

One of the most famous versions of the 19th Century was the poem "The Blind Men and the Elephant" by John Godfrey Saxe (1816–1887).

The poem begins:

It was six men of Hindustan
To learning much inclined,
Who went to see the Elephant
(Though all of them were blind),
That each by observation
Might satisfy his mind[8]

They conclude that the elephant is like a wall, snake, spear, tree, fan or rope, depending upon where they touch. They have a heated debate that does not come to physical violence. But in Saxe's version, the conflict is never resolved.

Moral:
So oft in theologic wars,
The disputants, I ween,
Rail on in utter ignorance
Of what each other mean,
And prate about an Elephant
Not one of them has seen![8]

Modern treatments

The story is seen as a metaphor in many disciplines, being pressed into service as an analogy in fields well beyond the traditional. In physics, it has been seen as an analogy for the wave–particle duality.[9] In biology, the way the blind men hold onto different parts of the elephant has been seen as a good analogy for the Polyclonal B cell response.[10]

There is an element of self-reference in the many interpretations of the story. In this light Idries Shah has commented on its function as a teaching story:

...people address themselves to this story in one or more [...] interpretations. They then accept or reject them. Now they can feel happy; they have arrived at an opinion about the matter. According to their conditioning they produce the answer. Now look at their answers. Some will say that this is a fascinating and touching allegory of the presence of God. Others will say that it is showing people how stupid mankind can be. Some say it is anti-scholastic. Others that it is just a tale copied by Rumi from Sanai – and so on.[11]

Cultural references

In 2010, the pharmaceutical group Bayer released a television advertisement in the US[12] for their birth control products featuring blindfolded women examining different parts of a rhinoceros, and drawing different conclusions about it. The variation on the story is used to demonstrate the need for "the whole picture" when evaluating birth control products.

Like the Elephant, the Knights Templar of which Leo speaks is not the monolith that it may seem. That totalitarian & horribly mutated branch which is the Jesuits is without doubt the head of the Roman Octopus, but it does not control all of the inheritors of the Templar legacy.

The Soldiers of Satan constantly lie and manipulate the populace of this World daily via their media systems. Force social engineering upon the people through pseudo-science and laws. As we enter the Age of Aquarius we enter into a darkened Satanic society pushed as good for us when in fact its a nightmare. You'll see clearly the enemy in this video. Keep your eyes on the person at the end of the video. You may just be seeing a lot more of him after the Iran war to come.

I wonder if Albert picked that one up from his Jesuit mentor Georges Lemaître.

The Era of the Two Generals.

Dear Craig,

Another masterpiece.

I just noticed in the pic of the Jesuits that both Nicolas and Kolvenhoof are sitting in special white chairs. And none of the others in front are sitting in similar chairs---another evidence that you are right. Both Generals are working together with seeming equal authority.

Your proposition of Scola being the next pope is on target. For the next pope must be an Italian; a Pole and a subsequent German is enough for awhile. And the final pope who will be murdered and rise from the dead will be either a German or an Italian. Why? because the first six kings/Roman Caesars of Revelation 17:9-10 were either Germans/Germanicus or Italian/Flavian.

They were:

Caligula---Germanicus
Claudius---Germanicus
Nero---Germanicus
Vespasian---Flavian
Titus---Flavian

Domitian---Flavian, the "one is" of Revelation 17:10, alive at the time John wrote the Revelation.

The final Roman Papal Caesar/Emperor must be one of the two, I tending to believe he will be Flavian/Italian. Why? because the people of the prince that shall come who destroyed Jerusalem and the Temple as per Daniel 9:26 were Romans. The Emperor and General in Jerusalem at the time were both Flavian---Father Vespasian and Son Titus.

A good video could be made of this.

Excellent work!

Lord Bless,

Brother Eric

Next Pope Betting - Italian Pope expected to replace Benedict

Who will be the next man to ride in the Popemobile?
Bettingpro Staff - 21 Oct 2010
http://www.bettingpro.com/category/Enterta...-2010102100304/

The Papacy is being tipped to return to the hands of the Italians following Pope Benedict's appointment of 24 new cardinals.

Irish Bookmaker Paddy Power now make an Italian their 7/4 favourite to succeed Pope Benedict as the 266th Pope when the time comes. Despite the fact an Italian Cardinal is tipped for the Pontiffs office Nigerian Cardinal Francis Arinze is still the overall frontrunner on the bookies papal book at 2/1.

The boost for Italy comes following the news that a total of ten, almost half of Pope Benedict XVI's new twenty-four strong consistory, are Italian. Come 20th November, a total of 25 of the 120 voting-age Cardinals will be Italian.

Italians held the papacy for 455 years until the election of Poland's John Paul II in 1978, followed by the German-born Benedict in 2005.

Sharon McHugh, spokesperson for Paddy Power, told Bettingpro:

"This is great news for the Italian's who, after 32 years, are longing to see one of their own back in the Vatican."

Amongst those favoured to be the next Pope are Cardinal Angelo Scola from Venice at 6/1, Honduran Cardinal Oscar Rodriguez Maradiaga at 8/1 and Italy's Dionigi Tettamanzi at 12/1.

U2 front-man Bono is the 1000/1 rank outsider. While the odds look stacked against the Irishman it is worth remembering that technically any unmarried Catholic man could be chosen as the next Pope!

All twenty-four new cardinals will receive their red beretta's and rings on November 20th when Pope Benedict officially appoints them as Cardinals.

Where will the Next Pope come from?
7/4 Italy
15/8 Africa
9/4 South America/Central America
10/1 United States
20/1 Spain
25/1 Germany

25/1 France
33/1 UK

Elijah the Tishbite said back in January it's Peter Turkson of Ghana:

30 January 2010

THREE POPES

THE VATICAN POPE JOHN PAUL II

This Pope was born in Poland. His name at birth was Karol Jozef Wojtyla.

During the time of Nazi Germany as a young man, he was a salesman of cyanide which was used to kill Jews in their internment camps. This was the genocide of the Jews of all Europe.

In 1978, as a Cardinal in the Catholic church, he was elected to be their Pope, then named Pope John Paul II. Now we see this Pope Benedict wants to make Pope John Paul a saint? No, this evil Karol Jozef Wojtyla is the son of the devil. While in power he was the head of the Great Whore, the Vatican, as written in Revelation 17:1 to 18.

POPE BENEDICT XVI

Now we have Pope Benedict, formerly known as Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, a former Nazi youth member, who will soon depart this Earth to where all these anti-Christ Popes are in Hell awaiting Pope Benedict to join them together with Pope John Paul II.

POPE PETER THE GREAT

We are now awaiting the last Pope to come upon the scene whose name will be Peter the Great from Ghana, Peter Kodwo Appiah Turkson, who was appointed Cardinal October 24, 2009 by Pope Benedict XVI. He will be the False Prophet. Be patient and see it all happen according to what is written in the King James 1611 Bible and the Geneva Bible, Revelation 16:13-14 and Revelation 19:20.

This is related to your information on einstein, but I do wonder what information you know of Nikola Tesla, I believe the man had a beautiful heartful soul, and I have read that his mother had a significant religious background.

On a syndicated radio broadcast, Jesuit Malachi Martin was asked the following question by a caller:

"I had a Jesuit priest tell me more of the Third Secret of Fatima years ago, in Perth. He said, among other things, the last pope would be under control of Satan... Any comment on that?"

Martin responded, "Yes, it sounds as if they were reading, or being told, the text of the Third [Catholic] Secret [of Fatima's "prophecy"]. But it's sufficiently vague to make one hesitate— it sounds like it."

Newly Discovered Microbe Expands Definition of Life, Says Jesuit

9 December 2010
http://www.jesuit.org/index.php/2010/12/09...fe-says-jesuit/

The discovery of the first known microorganism on Earth to thrive on the toxic chemical arsenic will help expand scientists' understanding of the definition of life, said Jesuit Father Jose Funes, the head of the Vatican Observatory.

"It's clear that if we are searching for life forms in the universe, we have to at least know what to look for: that is, to define what a living being is," said Fr. Funes.

The recent discovery of a life form based on a completely different chemistry "will surely contribute to expanding our conceptual horizons on the subject" of what could be life and living matter, he said in a Dec. 4 article in the Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano.

A team of astrobiology researchers — funded by NASA — recently discovered a microbe strain, called GFAJ-1, in California's Mono Lake, which has unusually high levels of salinity, alkalinity and arsenic.

"Carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen, phosphorus and sulfur are the six basic building blocks of all known forms of life on Earth," according to a NASA press release. However, GFAJ-1 is able to thrive and reproduce using arsenic since it substitutes the toxic chemical for phosphorus in its cell components, the press release said.

Fr. Funes wrote, "In short, it's a microbe that breathes arsenic."

"The study of planets with atmospheres outside the solar system reintroduces the question of the possibility of life in the universe," wrote Fr. Funes. [The Catholic Spirit]

Uganda: U.S., NATO Allies Prepare New Invasion Of Somalia

Published on 07-29-2010 Email To Friend Print Version
By Rick Rozoff - BLN Contributing Writer

The 15th biennial African Union summit in Kampala, Uganda ended on July 27 with mixed results regarding support for U.S. and Western European plans to escalate foreign military intervention in nearby Somalia.

The 35 heads of state present at the three-day meeting were reported to have authorized the deployment of 2,000 more African troops to back up the beleaguered Western-backed Transitional Federal Government (TFG) in Mogadishu and to bring the full complement of forces doing so to 8,000, but the new contingent will probably consist solely of troops from Uganda and Burundi, which supply the approximately 6,000 already serving with the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM). Reports of another 2,000 reinforcements from Djibouti and Guinea are problematic and their deployment remains to be seen, not that pressure will not be exerted on those two nations and others from outside the continent.

AMISOM is the successor to the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) Peace Support Mission in Somalia (IGASOM) set up in 2005 by the six-member group which includes Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan and Uganda and which also was to have provided 8,000 troops for deployment to Somalia. The 53 members of the African Union except for Uganda and Burundi have been loath to commit military units to intervene in fighting in Somalia, whether against the Islamic Courts Union five years ago or against al-Shabaab insurgents currently.

In late 2006 U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice met with Ugandan Foreign Minister Sam Kutesa to plan the earlier IGASOM operation and in January of 2007 Uganda pledged its first troops which, along with those included in a reported offer by Nigeria, were to total 8,000.

Three and a half years later, there are only 6,000 foreign troops in Somalia (now under AMISOM, the only difference being the acronym now employed) and all of those from Uganda and Burundi, both nations U.S. military clients and surrogates.

The African Union (AU) initially approved AMISOM on January 19, 2007 and granted it a six-month mandate. In July of 2010 the real prime movers behind the mission, the U.S. and its NATO allies in the European Union, are pushing for an escalation of armed intervention in Somalia with more Western-trained Ugandan troops conducting open combat operations: Changing the mandate from, to use the terms employed to mask military aggression, peacekeeping to peace enforcement.

The first attempt by the U.S. and its non-African allies to enforce a compliant government in the Horn of Africa nation, Ethiopia's invasion in December of 2006, was assisted by the Pentagon's Joint Special Operations Command (headed up by now retired General Stanley McChrystal until early in 2006), which conducted military operations inside Somalia no later than the beginning of the next year. At the time Ethiopia was the second largest recipient of U.S. military aid in Africa (another of the three countries bordering Somalia, Djibouti, being the first) and American military personnel were stationed in the country. Logistical and other assistance was provided by the Pentagon for the operation.

On the sidelines of the recently concluded African Union summit U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for Africa Johnnie Carson "gathered the presidents of Somalia, Kenya, Tanzania, Djibouti and Uganda, along with the prime minister of Ethiopia for a closed-door session" to push for more aggressive military operations in Somalia. The State Department official was quoted as saying, "We came away even more united and committed to work together strengthen the TFG, to help strengthen AMISOM, to help strengthen the forces for stability in Somalia and to help do as much as we can to help beat al-Shabab. Al-Shabab represents a foreign and a negative influence that cannot only be destructive inside Somalia, but across the entire region." [1]

Note the opprobrium attached to the word foreign. With what Carson called "a wake-up call not only for the region but for Africa as a whole" [2] sounded by deadly bombings in the Ugandan capital on July 11, more foreign troops armed, trained, and airlifted by great powers in North America and Europe are destined for deployment to Somalia.

Officials from the European Union and from Britain and France – the two main historical colonial masters on the African continent – were present at the meeting with Carson and America's East African proxies. [3] A Voice of America report on the closed-door meeting reminded readers that "The European Union, the United Nations and the United States are the main financial contributors to the African Union's AMISOM peacekeeping force in Somalia." [4]

The arm-twisting produced few results. Despite claims by the chairman of the African Union Commission, Gabon's Jean Ping, that troops from Djibouti and Guinea (Conakry) would join AMISOM/IGAD forces from Uganda and Burundi, the additional troops will almost surely come entirely from the last two nations. Also, the nearly three dozen heads of state at the AU summit rejected the Ugandan (and Western) demand for a "peace enforcement" rules of engagement mandate.

The current chairman of the AU, president of Malawi Bingu wa Mutharika, told reporters, "There have been calls for a change in the mandate to a more robust approach to the insurgent attacks in Somalia by Uganda and Burundi, to go beyond Mogadishu, (which is) their current limit, but (we) did not decide on that."

Ping, however, indicated that the U.S. and NATO allies have not abandoned plans for intensified military operations in Somalia, stating, "We need equipment to match with the change in combat approach. We need helicopters for that. The United States and the U.K. are considering our request…." [5] He also mentioned that France could provide additional helicopters.

Even the Attorney General of the U.S., Eric Holder, attended the AU summit as the Obama administration's representative and saw fit to impose his opinions on the 53-nation organization. Before the summit began he met with several of the continent's heads of state and in prepared remarks to the summit affirmed that "The United States…recognizes that ending the threat of al-Shabaab to the world will take more than just law enforcement. That is why we are working closely with the AU to support the African Union's Mission in Somalia. The United States applauds the heroic contributions that are being made on a daily basis by Ugandan and Burundian troops, and we pledge to maintain our support for the AU and the AU Mission in Somalia." [6]

Lightly-armed al-Shabaab militants have now been elevated by Washington to the status of a threat to the world, though Holder's colleague Carson limited his hyperbole to branding them a "negative influence…across the entire region." The dual bombings in Kampala, incidentally, have been attributed to the group as a warning sign to Uganda to remove (and certainly not to increase) its troops in Somalia, but in fact appear like a provocation designed to accomplish the opposite result.

Four days before the AU summit commenced, the defense chiefs of the six Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) nations – Uganda, Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia and Sudan – met to discuss boosting troop deployments to Somalia.

Weeks before IGAD had recommended that not the earlier cited figure of 8,000 but fully 20,000 foreign troops could be deployed to Somalia in yet another attempt to salvage the Transitional Federal Government, which doesn't even control much of the country's capital despite 6,000 Ugandan and Burundian troops serving as its army. 20,000 foreign troops entering Somalia in the face of overwhelming popular opposition is not a peacekeeping mission. It is an invasion.

In mid-July Ugandan officials announced that their nation's neighbors in IGAD and in the Eastern Africa Standby Brigade (EASBRIG) – Burundi, Comoros, Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Rwanda, Sudan, Seychelles, Somalia and Uganda – had given "soft support" should Uganda "go on the offensive in Somalia."

"Ugandan officials now confirm that Kampala is pursuing a two-track strategy that could see it follow Al Shabaab into Somalia with or without UN Security Council consent." A news report disclosed that the Yoweri Museveni administration is prepared to mobilize the entirety of the 20,000 troops needed for a full-scale invasion of Somalia and "military sources say Uganda feels it has the capacity to go it alone in Somalia and has been building up its military strength for such an eventuality." [7]

The nation's air force has acquired "additions to its arsenal in recent weeks" from its Western patrons "in what observers see as a concerted push to increase Uganda's military capability."

Last week a Defence Ministry spokesman stated, "We are one of the most efficient armies in Africa. We can defend our country from anywhere, even within Somalia." The spokesman, Lieutenant-Colonel Felix Kulaigye, added, “Anybody who brings war to us, we take back that war to them. We shall pursue Al Shabaab from Somalia in line with the wishes of the Transitional Federal Government.” [8]

During the last invasion and occupation of Somalia, that of Ethiopia from December of 2006 to January of 2009, fighting between a similar invading force of 20,000 troops and Somali militias resulted in the deaths of over 16,000 civilians and the displacement of hundreds of thousands in the capital in 2007 alone according to the Mogadishu-based Elman Peace and Human Rights Organisation.

The AMISOM mandate (approved by the AU but, as seen above, with no backing by member states except for Uganda and Burundi) excludes the deployment of troops from nations bordering Somalia – Djibouti, Ethiopia and Kenya. Ugandan military forces and equipment have to cross Kenya to reach the country; that is, to be airlifted by United States Africa Command (AFRICOM) and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization into parts of the Somali capital not under the control of rebels.

The Ugandan government, largely rebuffed at the AU summit, is pushing for the maiden deployment of the 10-nation Eastern Africa Standby Brigade (Eastern African Standby Brigade Coordination Mechanism) to Somalia, which would appreciably broaden the scope of the conflict. In addition, it is planning to use forums like the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region (ICGLR) – whose members are Angola, Burundi, the Central African Republic, the Republic of Congo, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Kenya, Rwanda, Sudan, Uganda, Tanzania and Zambia – “which already has provisions that offer some room for intervention.”

“Somalia has already applied to be a member; once that request is approved, Uganda will be able to work together with the Transitional Federal Government and fight Al Shabaab under the legal framework that governs the organisation.” [9]

On July 20 the head of AFRICOM, General William Ward, addressed the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C. and pledged that the U.S. will “provide more training, transportation, and logistical aid to the AU mission, known as AMISOM.” Also, “In a briefing to reporters last week, a senior Obama administration official said the U.S. wants to ‘build up the capabilities’ of AMISOM and the [Somali transitional] government.” [10]

In late April Brigadier General Silver Kayemba, in charge of training and operations for the Ugandan People’s Defense Force (UPDF), was in the U.S. and visited the headquarters of U.S. Army Africa, the Pentagon, the National Defense University and a Marine Corps base. Kayemba, who was also trained in the U.S., said, “This visit strengthens our relationship with the U.S. Armed Forces, particularly with U.S. Army Africa. We are looking forward to even closer cooperation in the future.” [11]

Last month officers of the U.S. 17th Air Force, the air component of AFRICOM (Air Forces Africa) headquartered at the Ramstein Air Base in Germany, traveled to Uganda for what was described as “a senior leader engagement event….to discuss current and future engagement activities between Ugandan People’s Defence Force, Ugandan People’s Defence Air Force and Air Forces Africa.”

The head of the U.S. delegation, Brigadier General Michael Callan, toured the airfield and logistics hangars at the Entebbe Air Force Base and “met with a representative of the U.S. State Department-contracted Dyncorp… which supports the UPDF [Ugandan People's Defence Force] with aerial resupply and troop movements of Ugandan, Burundian, and Somali forces in and out of Mogadishu….” DynCorp International is a private military company that receives almost all of its $2 billion in annual contracts from the U.S. federal government.

General Callan stated, “Uganda is one of only two countries supporting the UN’s AMISOM mission currently. Though the airlift is contracted, it is good to have the understanding of those ground-based missions and capabilities of the UPDF as we pursue future air force and joint initiatives.”

The Defense and Army Attaché at the American embassy in Kampala added, “We’ve been working with their army forces for some time, providing great training opportunities through the Department of State-funded International Military Education and Training, or IMET program and multi-national peacekeeping operations.

Now they would like for us to do that with their air forces." [12]

Both U.S. military officials stressed the Pentagon's role in upgrading Uganda's air force for future operations. "17th Air Force brings focus to those much needed air force activities," as military attaché Army Lieutenant General Gregory Joachim stated. [13]

In developing bilateral and regional collective military partnerships with most every nation in Africa through AFRICOM, the U.S. works closely with its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. This March "Senior figures from the US military's Africa Command were in Brussels…looking to build cooperation with the European Union to boost training and reform for African security forces…." [14]

The Pentagon has between 2,500-3,000 troops from all four major branches of the military assigned to the Combined Joint Task Force-Horn of Africa stationed in Camp Lemonnier in Djibouti, Somalia's neighbor to the north. France has its largest overseas military base and 3,000 troops in the same small nation. Several hundred troops from Britain, Germany, the Netherlands and Spain have also been deployed there under NATO auspices since the beginning of the decade. The U.S. has used its airfield in Djibouti for attacks in Somalia and Yemen.

Last year the Pentagon secured its second major installation in the area, in the Indian Ocean nation of Seychelles, where it has deployed over 130 troops, Reaper unmanned aerial vehicles (drones) and three P-3 Orion anti-submarine and maritime surveillance aircraft.

In addition to the U.S.-led multinational Combined Task Force 150 and Combined Task Force 151 naval deployments off the shores of Somalia (with logistical facilities in Djibouti), NATO and the European Union are running complementary naval operations, Operation Ocean Shield and European Union Naval Force (EU NAVFOR) Somalia – Operation Atalanta, respectively. This March NATO announced it was extending its deployment for another – unprecedented – three years, until the end of 2012. Last month the Netherlands "agreed to a NATO request to deploy a submarine off the coast of Somalia…." [15]

In June the EU followed NATO's lead when its foreign ministers agreed to prolong Operation Atalanta until December of 2012. An EU press release at the time revealed the broader Western strategy in the Horn of Africa region, one by no means limited to "combating piracy": "The root causes of piracy in East Africa lie on land. To address them, the current naval operation is combined with the EU training mission for Somalia (EUTM), which contributes to the strengthening of the Somali security forces." [16]

In fact the EU is training Somali soldiers in Uganda for war in their homeland and NATO is transporting Ugandan and Burundian troops for the same purpose.

A NATO website feature disclosed in March that "the USA has conducted airlift missions under the NATO banner in support of…Ugandan troop rotations. The airlift, which commenced on 5 Mar 2010 and was completed on 16 Mar 2010, was undertaken by USA contracted DynCorp International, transporting 1700 Ugandan troops from Uganda into Mogadishu and re-deploying 850 Ugandan troops out of Mogadishu.

"Part of this policy is the NATO standing agreement to provide strategic sealift and airlift support for African Union Troop Contributing Countries willing to deploy to Somalia, recently extended by NATO until 31 January 2011." [17]

With the deployment of the NATO Response Force Maritime Groups 1 and 2 off the coast of Somalia, first with Operation Allied Provider and since last August with Operation Ocean Shield, the Western military bloc has extended its nearly nine-year-old Operation Active Endeavor naval surveillance and interdiction mission throughout the entire Mediterranean Sea into the Gulf of Aden to the Arabian Sea and the Persian Gulf.

The current commander of Ocean Shield, Dutch Commodore Michiel Hijmans, held a meeting on board the NATO mission's flagship on July 12 with leaders of Somalia's semi-independent Puntland region, which has become a land-based component of NATO operations in the Horn of Africa. According to the bloc, "The purpose of the talks was to build on the existing and growing relationship that has developed between NATO and the Puntland authorities." [18]

Several days later the NATO flotilla docked in Dubai in the United Arab Emirates where Commodore Hijmans broached the subject of "chasing Somali pirates" into the Red Sea, an area not yet covered by the Ocean Shield mandate. NATO warships in the Red Sea would place them off the coasts of Egypt, Sudan, Eritrea, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Djibouti, Jordan and Israel and connect NATO naval operations through the Suez Canal to Active Endeavor in the Mediterranean.

Early this month the French military attaché to Somalia said that the "government of the Republic of France has asked Uganda and other African nations to send more troops to war torn Somalia," and urged "more African states to send troops to Somalia…." [19] France will be instrumental in pressuring Djibouti and Guinea to send troops to Somalia, as both countries are former French colonies and Djibouti is a member of the French Community.

France is among several EU states that have sent troops to Uganda to train 2,000 Somali soldiers for fighting at home. The others are Spain (which is in charge), Britain, Germany, Italy, Greece, Hungary, Belgium, Portugal, Luxembourg, Sweden, Finland, Ireland, Malta and Cyprus. A NATO operation in all but name. German troops deployed in May are to "remain in East Africa for a year." [20]

According to the Christian Science Monitor, "Money for logistical support is coming from the United States, which has reportedly already pumped millions of dollars into similar smaller training programs run by local militaries in Uganda and Djibouti over the past 18 months.

"The EU program to train an army to fight for Somalia's beleaguered transitional government involves 150 instructors from 14 EU countries at a cost of $6 million."

The featured cited above also provided the following background information:

"Since 2004, the US has poured huge resources into initiatives such as Easbrig [Eastern Africa Standby Brigade], using private contractors and military advisers to train almost 60,000 African soldiers such as… Rwandans….Africom has also trained Congolese special forces to operate in the country's mineral-rich forests and reformed virtually the entire Liberian national army. Easbrig is an example of what Secretary of State Hillary Clinton calls 'smart power' – a mixture of military might and nation-building that bears a resemblance to Rumsfeld's concept of the 'long war'….Several critics have likened Africom to a Trojan horse, using the cover of humanitarian aid to pursue America's real strategic interests." [21]

EASBRIG is expected to grow to several thousand troops from as many as 14 nations.

One of the main missions of AFRICOM is create, train and deploy regional military forces to further U.S. and general Western objectives in Africa, the world's second most populous continent. Somalia is the first test case.

Nelson Mandela charity boss: I kept Naomi's blood diamonds secret

Alistair Foster, Showbusiness Correspondent

http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...monds-secret.do

The charity boss at the centre of the Naomi Campbell blood diamond storm today broke his silence and admitted he received "three small uncut" stones from the supermodel.

Jeremy Ratcliffe, former head of Nelson Mandela Children's Fund, today issued a statement after Campbell's testimony at the war crimes tribunal of former African leader Charles Taylor.

During the trial at The Hague yesterday, Campbell, 40, admitted receiving diamonds she assumed were from Taylor. They were given during a stay in 1997 at Mr Mandela's presidential house, where the then South African leader was hosting a dinner at which several celebrities were present.

She testified that two men had knocked on her door late at night and then gave her a pouch with the stones inside, but then claimed she gave them to fellow guest Mr Ratcliffe straight away.

The jewels are crucial to the case as the prosecution is trying to link former Liberian leader Taylor to illegal blood diamonds that funded a civil war in neighbouring Sierra Leone.

Mr Ratcliffe appeared to corroborate her story today and said he would be happy to testify at The Hague — something the prosecution has been pressing for. He said he had kept the diamonds a secret and had now handed them to the authorities.

Police in South Africa today confirmed that Mr Ratcliffe had handed them in and they were now being analysed for authenticity. Musa Zondi, of specialist police unit The Hawks, said: "We sent them to the Diamond Board to have them authenticated and then we will make a decision after that."

Mr Ratcliffe said that Campbell gave him the stones as they boarded a train to leave the presidential house in Cape Town after the dinner. His statement said: "Three small uncut diamonds were given to me by Naomi Campbell on the Blue Train on September 26, 1997. Naomi suggested they could be of some benefit to the Nelson Mandela Children's Fund — but I told her I would not involve the NMCF in anything that could possibly be illegal.

"In the end I decided I should just keep them. A factor that influenced me not to report the matter to anyone was to protect the reputation of the NMCF, Mr Mandela himself and Naomi Campbell, none of whom were benefiting in any way."

At the trial, Campbell said she had been woken in the middle of the night by two men bearing “a gift for you” in the form of a pouch of “dirty looking stones” which she “assumed” had come from Taylor. The prosecution was unable to get the supermodel to state they were definitely from Taylor.

Campbell was dragged into the case after US actress Mia Farrow, a fellow guest at the dinner, named her as receiving the diamonds in a statement given to the court.

In a letter, sent on September 7 to all Major Superiors, Fr. General Adolfo Nicolás announced a “Congregation of Procurators” to be held in Africa in July 2012. Such a meeting is held every four years after a “General Congregation” by people elected by the members of their province. During the last General Congregation in January 2008 Fr. Nicolás was elected as Superior General of the Society of Jesus. Important to note is that for the first time a “Congregation of Procurators” will be held outside Europe.

In his letter Fr. General thanked the Superiors for their help in sending the “Annual Letters” by Jesuits and lay partners. Every year some Jesuit superiors and directors are asked to send specific information to Fr. General.

British banks, Barclays, HSBC, others accused of dealing with ‘corrupt’ Nigerian politicians

Last Updated: Monday, 11 October 2010, http://news.myjoyonline.com/business/201010/53677.asp

Corruption monitor, Global Witness has accused some British banks of accepting millions of dollars from Nigerian politicians accused of corruption.

In a report, Global Witness said the British banks Barclays, HSBC, NatWest and Royal Bank of Scotland, took questionable deposits from two former Nigerian governors.

It accused British regulators of failing to take action against the named banks.

Global Witness’ Robert Palmer told the BBC that the report also raised “serious concerns about broader problems across the banking industry.”

He said banks were not doing enough to turn down corrupt money.

HSBC has described the allegations as misguided. Other banks have not yet responded.

Ambulance chiefs didn't give missing Kelly report to us, say police

Last updated at 10:00 PM on 16th October 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...say-police.html

Ambulance chiefs face renewed pressure to explain the loss of a key medical record relating to the death of Dr David Kelly after the investigating police force said it had no record of ever having received the document.

Bosses at South Central Ambulance NHS Trust were criticised last month when The Mail on Sunday revealed they could not find the patient report form (PRF) completed by paramedic Vanessa Hunt, who attended the scene of the former weapons inspector's death in 2003.

A spokesman for the Trust claimed that they had probably handed over a copy of the form to Thames Valley Police at the time of its original investigation into Dr Kelly's death.

But this version of events appears to have been undermined by a new disclosure obtained by The Mail on Sunday under the Freedom Of Information Act.

In response to a request about the PRF, Thames Valley Police said that it had 'no record of such a form being completed, or having requested such a form or being in possession of such a form or copy'.

The admission will embarrass ambulance chiefs and increase demands for an inquest into the death.

Norman Baker, the Liberal Democrat MP who has long maintained that 59-year-old Dr Kelly was murdered, said: 'It is pretty extraordinary that a document of this importance appears to have vanished and neither body will take responsibility for it.'

Dr Michael Powers QC, who is leading a group of doctors campaigning for an inquest into Dr Kelly's death, accused the Ambulance Trust of trying to shift the blame.

He said: 'This document has either been intentionally or incompetently lost. It can only be one or the other.

'The document is the closest thing to a full record of what the ambulance team at the scene saw and noted down. I would have expected such a form to have been filled out and to have been kept, particularly given national and international interest in the case.'

All ambulance crews have to fill out a PRF for every call-out. The details recorded include pulse rate, blood pressure and skin condition, the timing and location of an incident, and any action taken.

The information can play a key role at an inquest. Paramedics giving evidence normally rely on the PRF.

The South Central Ambulance NHS Trust insists the form was completed in accordance with the rules.

At the time of the death, Ms Hunt and her colleague Dave Bartlett, who also attended the scene in woods near Dr Kelly's home, worked for Oxfordshire Ambulance Trust, which has since merged with three others to form

South Central Ambulance Trust.

Mr Bartlett's claim in The Mail on Sunday last month that Dr Kelly's body had been moved added to the increasing demand for an inquest.

The two paramedics lifted Dr Kelly's eyelids, felt for a pulse and applied a heart monitor. These actions should all have been recorded on the PRF.

A copy of the document was not submitted to Lord Hutton's inquiry into Dr Kelly's death. Lord Hutton's 2004 report, which concluded that Dr Kelly slit his wrists to kill himself, was branded a whitewash by critics who pointed to the lack of blood at the scene and other unanswered questions.

A spokesman for the Trust last night said it stood by its previous statements on the PRF and that it could not comment further.

A spokesman for Thames Valley Police said they had never received a copy of the form.

Masonic African Leaders: The Eurocentric Pseudo-Military Orders Ruling Africa

How the Free Masons Rule Africa for their Masonic Masters

In Africa, the Craft has, as its members, such eminent sons as John Kuffuor, president of Ghana, Jerry J. Rawlings, his predecessor, Omar Hadj Bongo, president of Gabon, and Paul Biya, president of Cameroon. Others are Blaise Campaore, president of Burkina Faso, Idris Deby, president of Chad, Mamadou Tanja, president of Niger, Denis Sassou Nguesso, president of Congo Brazaville, his predecessor, Pascal Lissouba and Robert Guei, a general and late head of state of Ivory Coast.

In Senegal, for instance, Freemasons are found in the seat of power despite the fact that majority of the population adhere to the Muslim faith.

In South Africa where the country's parliament is said to be located on a Freemasonry land, Nelson Mandela, the former president is on record as a member. The record shows that he was initiated into black obedience of American Freemasonry called Prince Hall. Kofi Annan, immediate past secretary general of the United Nations, is a prominent Freemason.

In Nigeria, Freemasons were in the drivers' seats in the public and private sectors of the economy from the colonial era up to the late seventies when the Yakubu Gowon military government promulgated a decree which classified Freemasonry as one of the banned secret societies. Its members in the public services were ordered to renounce their membership or resign. Newswatch investigation has revealed that Gowon was bowing to pressures mounted on his government by Islamic leaders, the Baptist and Catholic Churches that were not comfortable with the activities of Freemasons in their fold.

Adewale Thompson, a high degree Mason and a high court judge in Oyo State, captured the under current that prompted the decree in his recent book titled: "Masonic Experience." "Somehow some new converts into christianity aided and abetted by some organisations of questionable motives began an orchestrated persecution of Freemasons which they included in their definition of " Secret societies."

The movement against the group began in Nigeria in the 1970s: "Sometimes in or about 1974, there was hue and cry in the press by some elements against 'secret societies.' It later dawned on us that the campaign was fomented by the church and the mosque using the government as agents. Government departments sent circulars to public officers to denounce membership of 'Secret societies or be sacked. The church called on communities to swear to affidavits that they were not members of secret societies otherwise they could not hold offices in the church. Those who refused to sign were removed from office. The move to ex-communicate members of secret societies was shelved because of the negative turmoil that it could generate."

……..

"While the vast majority of the members are on the first three rungs of the 33 – level hierarchy and have no idea of the hidden agenda, they take a pledge of allegiance " to the society above all else."

… progress beyond the first three degrees by members is at the pleasure of the elites who also impose stiff penalty on any member who divulges the secrets of the Order.

Most initiates are willing to do this because of the temptation of power, wealth and knowledge which (are) hard to refuse, that it is hinted that there are penalties to pay for betraying the society and revealing its secrets and that it is impossible to achieve high levels of initiation within Freemasonry unless one is handpicked by those of higher degrees."

"At the apex of the pyramid of the Brotherhood," these "select few" who know "the full agenda have become known as the illuminati (Latin for illuminated ones). All powerful, they "occupy all top level members of the police and military forces around the world. They are found in every area of society at all levels, but at the top, in the highest social and monetary bracket, the Brotherhood prevails….The Brotherhood owns the law, they own the military, they own the oil companies, pharmaceutical companies and just about everything which provides for the status quo." Associated with this belief is the suspicion that Freemasons ….[are controlling the world]… through the political and economic domination of the USA.

Nelson Mandela's lawyer suspended over stolen £4.5m

Paul Cheston, Courts Correspondent

http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...en-pound-45m.do

Nelson Mandela's lawyer has been suspended for three years after unwittingly helping to launder £4.5•million stolen from the Zambian government.

Mayfair-based Mohamed Iqbal Meer, 70, sent £125,000 to a Swiss outfitter who made suits and shoes for former Zambian president Frederick Chiluba, a tribunal heard.

Meer also paid £50,000 for the education of Mr Chiluba's children in Gstaad from money which had come from the government of the impoverished
African nation, while £256,000 was sent to Mr
Chiluba's wife's bank in New York, it was claimed.

Meer, who acted for Mr Mandela when he was serving 27 years in Robben Island jail, also supplied Mr Chiluba, 67, with bundles of cash when he visited London and helped to build up a property portfolio in Brussels for the former Zambian leader.

David Barton, representing the Solicitors' Regulatory Authority, said Meer had done "immense damage" to the reputation of the profession by failing to question the transfer of the cash between 1995 and 2002. Meer said: "I was naive and very foolish."

Mr Chiluba was acquitted in a Zambian court last year of embezzling £306,000 during his 10-year presidency, after a judge ruled that the funds could not be traced to government money. In 2007 he lost a civil court case in London that found he plundered about £30•million from state coffers.

In a reference for the tribunal, Mr Mandela called Meer “scrupulously honest”. But the lawyer was found guilty of compromising the independence or integrity of a solicitor, permitting money to pass through his client account when there was no underlying transaction and failing to properly investigate the source of money which could have been the proceeds of criminal conduct.

His firm Meer, Care and Desai was originally found liable for the theft at the High Court. In 2008 the Appeal Court cleared his name, ruling he had been “foolish” rather than dishonest.

Nigeria 'to charge Dick Cheney'

Nigeria is to charge Dick Cheney, the former US Vice-President, over a bribery scandal that involves a former subsidiary of energy firm Halliburton.

By Our Foreign Staff 11:57PM GMT 02 Dec 2010
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/finance/newsbys...ick-Cheney.html

Femi Babafemi, a spokesman for Nigeria's anti-corruption agency, said that the charges were due to be brought next week and involved engineering firm KBR and the construction of a liquefied natural gas (LNG) plant in southern Nigeria.

Mr Cheney was Halliburton's chief executive before becoming vice-president to George W Bush in 2001.

Mr Babafemi said the charges were "not unconnected to his role as the chief executive of Halliburton".

KBR last year pleaded guilty in the United States to paying $180m (£115m) in bribes to Nigerian officials prior to 2007, when it broke with Halliburton. KBR agreed to pay $579m (£372m) in fines related to the case in the US.

But Nigeria, along with France and Switzerland, has conducted its own investigations.

Some analysts have suggested the revival of interest in the Halliburton case is an attempt to smear Atiku Abubakar, who is challenging President Goodluck Jonathan for the ruling party's nomination for elections in April.

Opponents of Mr Abubakar, who was in office between 1999 and 2007, have previously tried to link him to the case.

A lawyer for Dick Cheney on Thursday dismissed any allegations that the former US vice president was involved in a bribery scandal in Nigeria as "entirely baseless."

Spain's El Pais newspaper said in a report on Monday that Madrid is trying to reach a deal for the weapons worth three billion euros (4.17 billion dollars) with the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia for the benefit of a subsidiary of Spain in the group of General Dynamics Corps, U.S. defense.

The newspaper said without citing the source of the news that Spain hopes to reach a deal to General Dynamics Santa Barbara to sell between 200 and 270 model from the tank (Leopard 2 no) when the Saudi Defense Minister Prince Khaled bin Sultan official visit to the country in November.

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, a key ally of the United States in the Middle East to modernize its military equipment and put the finishing touches on a contract for military aircraft worth $ 60 billion with the United States, which was announced last week.

Acquired General Dynamics, which provides the U.S. military in Iraq and Afghanistan, the weapons company of Santa Barbara manufacturer of the tank from the Spanish government in 2001.

El Pais said that it expected to meet with Prince Khalid bin Sultan, Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero and King Juan Carlos during his official visit to the country.

It was not possible for the Spanish Foreign Ministry declined to comment immediately

Hakluyt & Company

Hakluyt & Company is a British professional services firm, specialising in business intelligence. It helps a set of mainly blue-chip clients build conviction by providing them with information gathered discreetly via a large independent worldwide network. Client requirements typically involve shedding light on market entry situations, competitor strategies and M&A situations.

The company was founded in 1995 by Christopher James and Mike Reynolds. James retired in mid-2006, stepping up to the firm's advisory board, and was replaced as managing director by Keith Craig.

Hakluyt maintains a large number of "associates" around the world who form an international network of what are effectively its agents, mostly senior individuals with excellent contacts in their own right. These people work independently of Hakluyt and themselves, to preserve the integrity of the information they provide.

Hakluyt is based in Mayfair, London.

The company's advisory board has included many high-profile figures in British industry and government, including William Purves, the former HSBC chairman; Peter Holmes, the former Shell chairman; Brian Cubbon, the former permanent under-secretary of state at the Home Office; Peter Cazalet, former deputy chairman of BP; Lord Inge, former Chief of the General Staff; Lord Trotman, former chairman and chief executive of Ford; Baroness Smith, widow of the former Labour leader; and Frank G. Saudi minister visits Spain, reportedly for major tank deal

http://www.google.com/hostednews/afp/artic...4749a602fe8.a91

MADRID — Saudi Arabia's assistant defence minister will visit Spain next week, officials said Friday, and he is reportedly considering the purchase of Leopard 2E tanks for up to three billion euros.

Prince Khaled bin Sultan, Saudi assistant minister of defence and aviation, will meet King Juan Carlos on Monday, according to the Royal Palace's diary.

He will also see Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero on Tuesday, said a government spokesman, without giving details of their agenda.

Spain's leading El Pais daily this week said the Saudi minister may conclude the purchase of 200 to 270 Leopard 2E tanks for up to three billion euros (4.1 billion dollars), which would be a record deal for the country's defence export industry.

Spanish officials have not confirmed the report.

"There is still no contract. There is the possibility of an acquisition of combat tanks," said Raul Alvarez, spokesman for the defence sector of the major union Comisiones Obreras.

Alvarez said the contract could involve about 200 tanks.

Spain signed a military cooperation agreement with Saudi Arabia in June 2008, seeking to strengthen relations particularly in training and scientific and technical cooperation.

Up to now cooperation has been focused on training Saudi pilots on the Eurofighter at southern Spanish air base of Moron.

Khaled is the de facto head of the defence ministry, in the absence of his father, Saudi Crown Prince and Defence Minister Sultan bin Abdul Aziz, whose health has sparked concerns in recent years.

On Wednesday, Khaled said his father was in good health and taking his annual vacation.

Prince Sultan, minister of defence and aviation since 1962 and crown prince since 2005, left the country in November 2008 to undergo surgery in the United States and then to convalesce in Morocco, returning in December 2009.

Weeping Karzai laments Afghan woes

September 2010 Last updated at 15:40
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-south-asia-11424198

President Hamid Karzai has broken down in tears during a speech at a high school, as he lamented the problems plaguing Afghanistan.

In a nationally televised address to teachers and pupils in central Kabul, Mr Karzai said he feared the war might make his young son leave his homeland.

He later named the members of a special council whose task is to start formal negotiations with Taliban insurgents.

Afghanistan is facing its bloodiest year since the US-led invasion of 2001.

Mr Karzai's speech on Tuesday aimed to promote education in a country whose literacy rate is about 30%.

The president began crying as he said he wanted Afghans to get an education and be self-sufficient.

"Our sons cannot go to school because of bombs and suicide attacks. Our teachers cannot go to school because of clashes and threats of assassination. Schools are closed," he said.

Referring to his three-year-old son, he added: "I want him to go to school here, I swear to God I'm worried, I'm worried, oh people, I'm worried. God forbid Mirwais should be forced to leave Afghanistan."

TV coverage of the speech to hundreds of teachers, students and officials showed some members of the audience were also crying.

The address comes days after a new book by renowned US journalist Bob Woodward cited intelligence that said the Afghan president had been diagnosed with manic depression and was on medication.

Mr Karzai's office said the claims in the book, Obama's Wars, were "highly inflammatory".

Later on Tuesday, Mr Karzai established a peace council tasked with starting formal talks with the Taliban to end the insurgency.

The Afghan president's High Council for Peace - whose creation was announced in June at a Kabul peace conference - is to be made up of about 70 members, including women.

But the BBC's Ian Pannell in the Afghan capital says some of the members are former warlords who spent years fighting the Taliban.

And that may hamper efforts to do the very thing the president is crying out for: bringing an end to the war, adds our correspondent.

Human Rights Watch analyst Rachel Reid said: "Many of these men are unlikely peacemakers. There are too many names here that Afghans will associate with war crimes, warlordism and corruption."

Earlier on Tuesday, a suicide bomber on a motorised rickshaw killed Ghazni province's deputy governor, Mohammad Kazim Allahyar, as he drove to work.

His son, nephew, a bodyguard and two civilians also died, and eight other people were seriously injured.

The Nato commander in Afghanistan, Gen David Petraeus, said meanwhile that a number of insurgents had approached the Afghan government and foreign forces about laying down arms.

But our correspondent says the numbers involved are thought to be small at this time.

He says the bigger picture is of an insurgency fighting to the death in Helmand and Kandahar and expanding in places like Ghazni and Kunduz, and a Taliban leadership that publicly shuns the idea of direct talks with the government.

There are more than 150,000 Nato troops in Afghanistan trying to defeat the insurgency ahead of a scaling down of US troops in the country expected to start next year.

CIA hired Karzai brother before 9/11, Woodward says

By Jeff Stein | September 30, 2010; 7:13 PM ET
http://blog.washingtonpost.com/spy-talk/20...ther_befor.html

Ahmed Wali Karzai, the half-brother of Afghanistan's president and boss of the strategically important Kandahar province, has been on the CIA payroll for over a decade, Bob Woodward writes in his new book, "Obama's Wars."

By the fall of 2008, Woodward says, "Ahmed Wali Karzai had been on the CIA payroll for years, beginning before 9/11. He had belonged to the CIA's small network of paid agents and informants inside Afghanistan. In addition, the CIA paid him money through his half-brother, the president."

Hamid Karzai was plucked from obscurity and installed as president after U.S.-backed Afghan forces chased the Taliban from power following the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

There have been many accounts of his brother's relationship with the CIA over the years, leaving the impression that he is a CIA "agent," i.e., a controlled asset of the spy agency.

But Woodward's account of the CIA's relationship with Karzai, who has also been accused repeatedly -- but not charged with -- protecting the illicit opium trade, is more nuanced.

"He was not in any sense a controlled agent who always responded to U.S. and CIA requests and pressure," Woodward writes. "He was his own man, playing all sides against the others -- the United States, the drug dealers, the Taliban and even his brother if necessary."

Still, the spymasters in Langley went with him.

"It was necessary to employ some thugs if the United States was going to have a role in a land of thugs," they concluded. "Cutting him off might break Wali Karzai's control of the city, and Kandahar might be lost entirely.

"Lose Kandahar," they thought, "and we possibly lose the war."

Last week NATO and Afghan troops launched a major military offensive around Kandahar city, with uncertain results.

Woodward's portrait of Ahmed Wali Karzai dovetails in part with an account provided to SpyTalk last year by Rep. Mike Rogers of Michigan, a former FBI agent and ranking Republican on a House panel overseeing terrorism and human intelligence issues.

Rogers, who has regularly visited Afghanistan, where his brother, an Army general, also served, depicted Ahmed Wali Karzai as someone who "cooperates" with U.S. intelligence, but is not a controlled agent.

"There's a difference between being an intelligence asset and somebody who cooperates," said Rogers. "Asset is an overstatement ... He is a public official who cooperates ... He cooperates when he's talked to -- that's different than an asset."

An American lawyer for Ahmed Wali Karzai rejected the depiction of his client as a paid CIA asset of any kind.

"It is absolutely false that Ahmad Wali Karzai is, or has been, on the CIA payroll," said Gerald Posner by e-mail.

"Since 9/11, it should be noted that Ahmad Wali has worked with virtually all aspects of U.S. and coalition forces, from regular Army, to special forces, to intelligence personnel, and diplomats as well. ..."

Posner added, "Ahmad Wali would be very surprised if the world's most sophisticated intelligence gathering agency, the CIA, had not made contacts with him over time, but they have never identified themselves as such."

Poser also rejected depictions of Karzai as "the landlord in Kandahar for CIA or military facilities rented by the United States," as Woodward wrote.

"He is not the owner of those properties, and does not collect rent from those groups. He has no role in the Kandahar Strike Force. He receives no American taxpayer monies of any type," Posner said.

CIA spokesman George Little reiterated today that, "We don't, as a rule, comment on these kinds of allegations, which have circulated for a long time."

But a U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, praised Karzai's contribution to the war effort, saying he "has made decisive contributions to counter-terror efforts in Afghanistan, and he's helped save Afghan and American lives."

"No one's saying he's perfect, but nobody's found anything yet that would land him in court," the official added. "And Americans have looked. Afghanistan is a tough place. It's clear that he's focused on improving security in his country. He deserves praise for that."

They're doing all this b/c of the tribal peoples who basically will murder anyone who tries to conquer them.

This goes back to the Soviet (US Financed - Lend Lease) Afghan (CIA Financed) war. The mujahedeen were tribal gun-toters.

Two sides fighting for the same masters.

Here's a video of US Soldiers trying to unite the tribes. Tribes basically say f off USA, as they should.

Also notice now the CIA is using the ISI to infiltrate the Afghan masses and back the Taliban while the USA is fighting the crusade against the Taliban.

Pretty sickening.

I have some good vids on this.

The fact Karzai is up on stage trying to "unite" the tribes is the real purpose here (unification). Once they are unified they can be used as a papal tool.

Same system as used in Central America.

Watch out for that NSA furball Wayne Madsen. Coadjutor soft-expose.

The Karzai Family Fortune, Courtesy of U.S. Taxpayers

Michael Tennant
October 9, 2010
http://uruknet.info/?p=m70608&hd=&size=1&l=e

The average Afghan — and, indeed, the average American — may be deriving very little benefit from the United States' continued occupation of Afghanistan and the billions of U.S. taxpayer dollars that continue to be poured into that country, but in both countries the well-connected make out quite handsomely. In Afghanistan, the key to prosperity and power, it seems, is having the surname of Karzai, as in President Hamid Karzai.

"In recent years," the New York Times' James Risen reports, "dozens of Karzai family members and close allies have taken government jobs, pursued business interests or worked as contractors to the United States government, allowing them to shape policy or financially benefit from it." "American officials," Risen writes, "say the Karzais and a handful of other well-connected families have benefited from the billions of dollars that the United States has poured into the country since 2001. That money has helped pay the salaries of some Karzais who are government employees, kick-started real estate development and construction projects involving family members and created demand for businesses tied to the Karzais."

These are not just friends and relations who happened to be in the neighborhood when the U.S. government installed Hamid Karzai as president of Afghanistan, a position he has retained through two somewhat questionable elections. Risen points out that "most of them lived in the United States before going to Afghanistan, leveraging the president's position to put them at the center of a new oligarchy of powerful Afghan families." For example:

Before 2001, Yama Karzai, a nephew of the president, was living with his brothers in Quetta, Pakistan, and receiving financial support from relatives in the United States, Mohammad Karzai [a cousin of President Karzai who lives in Maryland] said. Today, Yama Karzai is a top Afghan intelligence official and owns a house in Virginia, according to land records. He did not respond to inquiries from The New York Times.

Hashim Karzai, a cousin of President Karzai, now works as a consultant to Pamir Airways, an airline based in Kabul that has been controlled by one of Mahmoud Karzai's [President Karzai's brother] business partners, and lives in Dubai on one of the luxurious Palm Islands. In August, he rented the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, one block from the White House, for his son's wedding to a niece of President Karzai, according to Qayum Karzai, the bride's father and the president's brother.

And Mahmoud Karzai, widely considered to be the most well-connected business leader in Afghanistan, said a residential real estate project he has been developing in Kandahar was now worth $900 million, including the value of homes sold. The original five partners, including Mr. Karzai, started with an investment of $4 million, he said. The Kandahar project set off a bitter dispute with the Afghan Army, which claims ownership of the land used for the project.

Qayum Karzai has served in Parliament and in other capacities in the Karzai administration while continuing to own three restaurants in Baltimore. Yet another brother, Shahwali Karzai, "runs his own engineering consulting firm and Mahmoud's real estate project," writes Risen. "Abdul Ahmad Karzai, who worked at the Baltimore-Washington International Airport before his brother became president, now works for the Afghanistan Investment Support Agency, which issues corporate licenses" — licenses without which a corporation cannot legally operate in the country. Other relatives are living high on the hog thanks to contracts with the U.S. military.

In fact, only one of Karzai's five brothers living in the United States in 2001 — a biochemistry professor at Stony Brook University in New York — chose to remain in America upon Karzai's ascension to the Afghan presidency. The lure of U.S. taxpayers' money was simply too great for the others to resist. Mohammed Karzai told Risen, "My relatives have told me they can't understand why I don't come over with them and get rich."

Not surprisingly, with so much money and power being concentrated in the hands of a single family, corruption is commonly alleged. Among the Karzais currently being accused of less than ethical activities are, according to Risen, "[President Karzai's brother] Ahmed Wali Karzai, who denies repeated accusations of ties to the drug trade, and Mahmoud Karzai, whose business dealings are under investigation by American prosecutors." The family, of course, denies such allegations, with both Mahmoud Karzai and Qayum Karzai, for example, claiming their clan is above reproach. Even "Abdul Wali Karzai, the Stony Brook professor, said that his family had been unfairly attacked, but that the second-guessing of everything the Karzais did in Afghanistan explained his refusal to join his brothers," Risen says.

There may be more to the Karzai infestation of the Afghan government than simple greed, however. With President Karzai far from secure in his position, he needs as many loyal people in the government and other centers of power as possible. Ronald E. Neumann, the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan from 2005 to 2007, told Risen, "Karzai is convinced that we are going to abandon him. What's his answer? To create a web of loyalties and militia commanders and corrupt families all knitted together."

Americans can only hope that Karzai's feared abandonment comes to pass. Too many American lives and dollars have been spent on the unconstitutional Afghan project already, especially given that the result has been to create a personal fiefdom for the Karzai family, which continues to enrich itself every day that the U.S. occupation and aid continue. We Americans can't even afford our own corrupt political class; it's time we stopped funding Afghanistan's.

Karzai: 'US Not After Terrorists in Afghanistan'

Global Research, October 5, 2010
Press TV - 2010-10-03
http://globalresearch.ca/index.php?context=va&aid=21315

Afghan President Hamid Karzai has hinted that the US and its Western allies are not serious enough in hunting down terrorists in the country.

Karzai made the remarks at the presidential palace in Kabul in a Saturday meeting with visiting Australian Prime Minister Julia Gillard.

Australia has 1,500 soldiers in Afghanistan and 21 Australian soldiers have been killed in the country since 2002.

The Afghan president said the security situation in Afghanistan does not improve as the US-led foreign forces have not been targeting the militants' main hideouts in the war-torn country, the office of Karzai's spokesman said in a Sunday statement, a Press TV correspondent reported.

Karzai said on Saturday that the US-led foreign forces were pursuing their own national security interests in Afghanistan.

The Afghan president has recently increased criticism of the US airstrikes that have caused a large number of civilian casualties.

Hundreds of civilians have lost their lives in US-led airstrikes and ground operations in various parts of Afghanistan over the past few months.

craig-oxley - August 28, 2010 02:04 PM (GMT)

Folks, Youtube have now removed my 'World War III - Islam Vs Zionism - Kolvenbach and Carlos' video off their site after it hits nearly 10,000 hits showing popularity was gaining. This video of mine was one of my most accepted videos by people waking up and wanting real truth. First of all they slapped a copyright on the video as soon as it was released which blocked Germans from viewing the video. This was easily bypassed via the Chinese Youtube at the time. Now from the 15th of July 2010 they remove the video which has been online since the 10th of February 2010 a good five months later. This is obviously due to the growing popularity of the video. The idea being to remove the video so all the sites embedding the video highlighting truth now no longer respond. This is why I've always gathered information complete on this site because links are not of worth when dealing on sensitive issues. If anyone wishes to host that original video on Youtube please feel free to do so, this Youtube just wants silly idiotic videos from Generation 'X' and is totally against free speech. To me this recent action just proves my information doesn't sit well with the real masters who see me as more of a threat as my popularity gains as interest in my work increases daily. You see what happens with these tyrants is that they tolerate people like me whilst I have a small site not many know of or listen to. When you start opening up to a wider audience and when people finally start to listen, remember and research, well this is a no-no you either get suppressed and censored or harassed (Nazi Carpathic Hostings Inc) or simply removed from the equation entirely.

Try using mirrorfox, liveleak or guba

Google is a CIA/Establishment front designed to propagate mind control television type media. It wasn't designed for the others.

Google's stock price is vastly inflated because all the NWO shills knew it would go big and they invested in it early because they knew it was a official arm--beforehand planning.

The CIA has employees who work at google as censors/monitors. I think these articles are on prisonplanet.

craig-oxley - September 3, 2010 10:30 PM (GMT)

The problem you have with those is no one cares about them as right now the establishment back Youtube and thats where the viewers are. Also notice how Guba has a porn site attached which doesn't sit that well with many people either. Mirrorfox looks a joke.

The populace of the Globe are being brought together as one under the false reincarnated Mother Gaia religion. This is guised in a more modern times veil in order to fool the populaces. The whole idea of this is to destroy national sovereignty, cultures and tongues whilst allowing for a one World system to be put in its place. A false system needs to be put in place to replace the old system of war. This is all so Roman elite families of the Holy Roman Empire can continue to control the World even without the old war systems always used in the past. The populaces are to be dumbed down and entertained to sleep whilst the plot thickens and continues until the Luciferian 'Great Work' is completed. A depopulation agenda during all this continues as sixty plus percent of the Global populace is to be removed from the planet as wished for by the 'Global 2000' report from the Club of Rome. What we are left with is a life of no jobs or hope during the Post Industrial Zero Growth Society as in the past when the British East India Company destroyed civilisations of the past.

Prince Charles hosts 12-day green party

Prince Charles today opened the gardens at Clarence House for a 12-day festival to encourage Britons to adopt a greener lifestyle.

Visitors queued for a rare view of the historic gardens while celebrities arrived to lend their support and to help entertain the public.

Designer Dame Vivienne Westwood, whose World's End collection is made from waste studio fabrics, said: “I was traumatised a year ago by the realisation that we are an endangered species.”

Oliver Webb, nine, came to the garden party on the last day of his summer holidays, before starting back at Cranleigh prep school. He said: “I want to see Prince Charles. I like the environment, I take the bus to school. I grow carrots in the garden at home.”

Don't forget that all sides are controlled, the leaders who who are no longer playing ball, a hindrance or of no use being removed, like the Shah of Iran.
See how the Iranian Revolution with their man in charge was so vital for their plan for Armageddon (and Oil) that the Knights left nothing to chance, using many agencies so no one or even two agencies could mess it up.

From http://rescueattempt.tripod.com/id24.html (profane but useful info):

"In 1978, Khomeini, in Iraq since 1965, was permitted to reside at Neauphle-le-Château in France. Two French police squads, along with Algerians and Palestinians, protected him. Nahavandi notes:

Around the small villa occupied by Khomeini, the agents of many of the world's secret services were gathered as thickly as the autumn leaves. The CIA, the MI6, the KGB and the SDECE were all there. The CIA had even rented the house next door. According to most of the published witness-statements, the East Germans were in charge of most of the radio-transmissions; and, on at least one occasion, eight thousand cassettes of the Ayatollah's speeches were sent, directly to Teheran, by diplomatic bag.

Foreign-affairs analyst du Berrier reported:

French services quickly verified that Libya, Iraq and Russia were providing money. Young Iranians, members of the Tudeh (communist) Party, made up Khomeini's secretariat in France. Working in cooperation with the French Communist Party they provided couriers to pass his orders and tapes into Iran. Their sympathizers in Britain turned the BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation) into a propaganda organ.

Journalists descended in droves on Neauphle-le-Château; Khomeini gave 132 interviews in 112 days, receiving easy questions as their media organs became his sounding board. Nahavandi affirms that, within Iran “the Voice of America, the Voice of Israel and, especially, the BBC virtually became the voice of the revolution, moving from criticism, to overt incitement of revolt, and from biased reporting, to outright disinformation.” "

The Falklands are also very important as a strategic base for control of/access to another "great prize", probably the greatest prize of them all - ANTARCTICA.

Now we know why the UK is building two 65,000 ton aircraft carriers.

Latin America backs Argentina as Britain begins Falklands oil quest http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/uk/article7036764.ece

Argentina cemented a Latin American front over the Falklands yesterday as a British oil rig began drilling in the disputed seas around the islands.

Regional leaders at the Rio Group summit in Mexico were expected to sign up for a resolution backing Argentina in its escalating row with Britain after Brazil and Chile pledged their support.

Venezuela’s vociferous President, Hugo Chávez, set the tone of the summit, offering military support. Characterising Britain as an imperialist relic, Mr Chávez demanded the return of "Las Malvinas", as they are known to Argentinians.

“The English are still threatening Argentina. Things have changed. We are no longer in 1982,” he warned. “If conflict breaks out, be sure Argentina will not be alone like it was back then.”

British control of the archipelago was “anti-historic and irrational”, the former paratrooper continued, asking “why the English speak of democracy but still have a Queen”.

Unlike 1982, when some Latin American nations, notably President Pinochet’s Chile, backed Britain’s campaign to repel Argentina's brief invasion of the islands, the continent now enjoys strong ties between ideologically aligned governments and could mount a powerful resistance to British oil operations.

Mr Chávez was joined by President Ortega of Nicaragua, who predicted that the Rio Group would throw its weight behind Argentina's claim. "We will back a resolution demanding that England return Las Malvinas to its rightful owner, that it return the islands to Argentina," he said.

Brazil, the biggest regional power and traditionally Argentina's main rival, was similarly supportive. "Las Malvinas must be reintegrated into Argentine sovereignty," Marco Aurelio García, foreign policy adviser to President Lula da Silva, said, adding: "Unlike in the past, today there is a consensus in Latin America behind Argentina's claims."

Almost three decades on from the confict, the defeat of Argentina still stings the national consciousness as an historic injury which must be redressed. President Fernández de Kirchner of Argentina has made the issue a central plank of her presidency, whipping up long-simmering resentments that have only been compounded by the prospect of a black gold bonanza in the isolated, windswept archipelago.

The British Geological Survey estimates that up to 60 billion barrels of oil could be beneath Falklands waters, although Desire Petroleum, the company carrying out the drilling, says that the commericially viable reserves are much smaller.

Desire said that test drilling at the Liz 14/19-A exploration site off the Falklands began at 1415 GMT yesterday. "Drilling operations are expected to take approximately 30 days and a further announcement will be made once drilling is completed.

Tensions between the former adversaries rose last week to their highest level since the war, as Argentina attempted to block ships supplying what it says are "illegal" British activities and Britain hit back with a warning that the islands were much better defended than on the eve of the Argentine invasion in 1982

Spanish oil firm Repsol to drill near Falkland Islands

The Ocean Guardian oil platform arrived this week

Spanish oil company Repsol is to drill for oil in an area near the Falkland Islands.

It will drill about 200 miles off Argentina's coast by December, "well within Argentinean waters," a spokesman told the BBC.

The move comes as UK oil companies begin to search for oil in the Falklands, despite strong opposition from Argentina.

An oil platform started drilling in Falklands territorial waters this week.

The platform, the Ocean Guardian, has been towed 8,000 miles from the Cromarty Firth in Scotland.

Repsol said it would explore for oil in a "few" wells in the area.

The spokesman said the fields were about 150 to 200 miles west of where the Ocean Guardian is, which is under licence to UK firm Desire Petroleum.

Last year, Repsol bought the Argentine company YPF - the biggest private oil and gas company in Latin America.

Oil row

Argentina claims sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. It invaded them in 1982, before a UK taskforce seized back control in a short war that claimed the lives of 649 Argentine and 255 British service personnel.

Leaders of 32 Latin American and Caribbean countries at a summit in Mexico unanimously backed Argentina over the oil row.

Argentina has formally asked the United Nations to bring the UK into talks over the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands.

Escalating Falklands oil dispute goes to UN

The diplomatic row over the Falkland Islands deepened dramatically after Argentina announced that it would take its protests over British oil exploration to the United Nations today.

At the Rio Group summit in Mexico yesterday, Buenos Aires won unprecedented support from other Latin American states for its demand that the UK stop drilling in waters near the islands.

Argentina's Foreign Minister is to meet the UN Secretary-General, Ban Ki Moon. A resolution is also set to be tabled in the UN General Assembly condemning Britain for allowing Ocean Guardian to begin drilling 60 miles north of the islands after Argentina annouced new shipping controls. Desire Petroleum, which is operating the rig, has said that the drilling will take about a month. Further exploration is likely by other companies.

David Miliband, the Foreign Secretary, insisted that the exploration was fully within international law. But ministers admit privately that the UK has been preparing for a diplomatic confrontation with Argentina for months.

Although both sides played down the prospect of renewed military conflict, a government source told The Times that a submarine had been made available to supplement the routine military presence, although it is not yet in waters off the Falklands. The Ministry of Defence said that HMS York, a frigate, was expected to remain there for the foreseeable future. The Falklands air defences were quietly upgraded late last year with the arrival of four Typhoon jets.

At the Rio Group summit, Argentina scored a coup in the war of words when 32 heads of state backed its "legitimate rights . . . in the sovereignty dispute with Great Britain". Hugo Chávez, the Venezuelan President, used a television address to reiterate his support, bellowing: "Give the Falkland Islands back to Argentina, Queen of England." But it was the backing of countries such as Chile and Brazil that has concerned British diplomats.

Cristina Fernández de Kirchner, Argentina's President, said that Britain had broken a UN resolution forbidding unilateral development in disputed waters. She accused Britain of double standards in its pursuit of the islands' natural resources but ruled out any military engagement or attempt to block shipping.

British officials said that Gordon Brown and Mr Miliband would wait for the outcome of events at the UN before deciding how to respond. Diplomats in Latin America believe that President Kirchner is using the issue for domestic purposes. "This is principally a PR campaign, not a serious legal or diplomatic effort," said one.

The US offered Britain only tepid support. The State Department said that it took no position on the sovereignty claims of either country.

White House officials contacted by The Times would not be quoted on the dispute — not for fear of being drawn into a diplomatic showdown but because, as one admitted, it had barely registered as a concern for the Administration. A generation ago President Reagan was slow to back publicly Britain's efforts to recapture the islands, but US intelligence proved critical to British military success.

A massive earthquake of 8.3 magnitude has struck close to the city of Concepcion in Chile.

The US Geological Survey said the quake struck at 0634 GMT on Saturday at a depth of 59.4km (36.9 miles).

Concepcion is the second largest city in the country, about 450km south of Santiago. There is no word yet on any casualties.

The US government said a tsunami warning has been issued for Chile, Peru and Ecuador.

Buildings in Santiago were reported to have shaken for between 10 and 30 seconds, with the loss of electricity in some parts of the capital.

Also interesting folks how this occurs on the sixth day of Saturn and its now classed as a 8.8 scaled earthquake. Remember that the number eight is infact seen as a new beginning or creation. Its interesting when you consider that this is week eight of the year 2010 thus giving us an 888, the number of Christ! You can score eighty eight by multiplying eight by the judgement of Saturn being eleven (Jachin and Boaz). -Craig Oxley

A giant pope to watch over Santiago?

By Pascale Bonnefoy - GlobalPost
Published: October 22, 2009 05:51 ET http://www.globalpost.com/dispatch/chile/0...ohn-paul-statue

SANTIAGO, Chile — The neighbors couldn't help but notice the huge head of Pope John Paul II rising out of the sculptor's workshop next door.

Hidden behind the walls, the pope's left hand gripped Jesus on the cross while his right extended outward, an imitation of the gesture he had made during his visit to Santiago two decades earlier.

But this was no private religious homage — it was the makings of a 40-foot-tall bronze statue meant to tower over a bohemian neighborhood in this capital city.

The idea of installing the statue in such a public place has sparked outrage, not only over its enormity but also over the lack of transparency in urban planning.

Not even the Catholic Church supports the project.

“The size of this giant statue is proportional to the lack of delicacy of those who, having money, power and influence, feel they own the city,” said Jesuit priest Felipe Berrios.

The statue was conceived by the privately owned San Sebastian University, which is headed by members of the right-wing, ultraconservative party UDI.

The university is building a campus in front of a park in the Recoleta municipality. In 2007, the mayor of the municipality, Gonzalo Cornejo, decided he wanted to remodel the park. He asked his longtime friend Luis Cordero, vice chancellor of the university and founder of the UDI, to present a proposal.

The $734,000 project involves wiping out the park and its trees to build an underground parking lot, relocating a craft fair that has been there for 20 years and installing a giant pope. Currently named after a young anarchist poet who died after being arrested in the 1920s, the park is to be renamed Park Pope John Paul II.

The statue would sit near the University of Chile’s Law School, a 100-year old national monument that marks the entrance of the bohemian Bellavista neighborhood, full of bars, restaurants, small shops and street vendors, where hundreds of rowdy teenagers and young adults flock to party on weekends.

Cordero put the dean of the school's faculty of architecture, Cristian Boza, in charge of the project, and hired his own brother Daniel, a sculptor, to build it.

But until this September, no one outside of a tight circle knew about the project — not even the National Monuments Council, which has to authorize all such public monuments.

By September the mold was practically finished, but no one would have learned about it if the neighbors hadn't seen the pope's head peering over the street.

The public outcry was quick: the dean and students at the University of Chile, neighborhood organizations, architects, academics and even priests have spoken out against it; newspapers have been bombarded by letters and columns against what one paper calls the “Popesaurus”; students have organized protests; and the monument council called on the municipality to submit the project to its approval, which it finally did in mid-October.

“I don’t have anything against the pope. It’s not him that is controversial. The problem is that it is such a huge statue, and on top of that, financed by a private university. We feel invaded by their new building and their plans to destroy the park. They didn’t consult anyone, and now they are imposing their religious views on the rest of society,” said Carlos Araya, a recent graduate of the University of Chile’s Law School.

Critics dislike they way a private university was put in charge of changing the face of a traditional neighborhood because its friend the mayor asked it to, all in total secret. They say the plan violates urban regulations. Along with the new campus, a movie theater, a cultural center and three 19-floor apartment buildings will also be built facing the park.

Daniel Cordero, the sculptor, says that all of the fuss in unjustified. Statues are usually made bigger because the visual effect once installed makes them look smaller. Besides, he says, the statue will be placed 100 meters away from the school.

“This is the only country in the world where people are terrified of the size of a monument. Cities everywhere are famous for their big monuments. Mexico has four big statues of this pope, and there are more than 100 in the world,” he said.

About 70 percent of Chileans are Catholic, according to the 2002 census, but this particular pope is admired even by many non-Catholics for his mediation between Chile and Argentina in 1978, when both countries were on the brink of war over a territorial dispute.

If approved by the monument council, the statue would be installed in April, facing east toward the Andes mountain range that separates Chile and Argentina. “The pope’s merit is that he avoided a war with Argentina, a war in which an entire generation of youths from both sides of the Andes would have perished. Any monument is small for someone who accomplished such a feat,” said Daniel Cordero.

But however much John Paul II loved and admired, not even the Catholic Church wants this kind of monument. The president of the Bishops Conference, Monsignor Alejandro Goic, said he would have preferred another type of homage: “If you ask me, the best monument would have been scholarships for smart kids from poor families to go to the university.”

Falklands oil firm ready for exploration costs

The Ocean Guardian is in Falkland Islands waters

UK oil firm Falkland Oil and Gas has said that it is ready to fund its share of costs for drilling in the Falkland Islands.

The firm - which has exploration rights for the south and east of the islands - had $93.5m (£61.7m) in cash at the end of 2009, up from $18.8m in 2008.

Argentina is strongly opposed to the drilling, claiming the islands as part of its sovereign territory.

An oil platform arrived in the Falklands in February.

The chairman of Falkland Oil and Gas, Richard Liddell, said: "2010 will be a momentous year. It will see the culmination of the work undertaken since the company was founded in 2004, with the commencement of exploration drilling in our licences."

The rig - the Ocean Guardian, towed 8,000 miles from the Cromarty Firth in Scotland - has been contracted with another UK-listed firm, Desire Petroleum, to explore the area.

"We expect to start this [oil] well in the first half of 2010," Falkland Oil and Gas said.

Argentina claims sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. It invaded them in 1982, before a UK taskforce seized back control in a short war that claimed the lives of 649 Argentine and 255 British service personnel.

Argentina has formally asked the United Nations to bring the UK into talks over the sovereignty of the Falklands.

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely using electromagnetic waves

DoD News Briefing: Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen

Q: Let me ask you specifically about last week's scare here in Washington, and what we might have learned from how prepared we are to deal with that (inaudible), at B'nai Brith.

A: Well, it points out the nature of the threat. It turned out to be a false threat under the circumstances. But as we've learned in the intelligence community, we had something called -- and we have James Woolsey here [puke] to perhaps even address this question about phantom moles. The mere fear that there is a mole within an agency can set off a chain reaction and a hunt for that particular mole which can paralyze the agency for weeks and months and years even, in a search. The same thing is true about just the false scare of a threat of using some kind of a chemical weapon or a biological one. There are some reports, for example, that some countries have been trying to construct something like an Ebola Virus [OMG! Who would do such a thing?], and that would be a very dangerous phenomenon, to say the least. Alvin Toeffler has written about this in terms of some scientists in their laboratories trying to devise certain types of pathogens that would be ethnic specific so that they could just eliminate certain ethnic groups and races; and others [LOL] are designing some sort of engineering, some sort of insects that can destroy specific crops. Others are engaging even in an eco- type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.'

Just switch 'yours,' 'others' and 'they' with 'U.S.,' 'U.S.' and 'U.S.' This was in 1997. Imagine, after eight years of George W. Bush turbo-funding these lunatics, with no end to funding in sight... what they can do now. Oh, BTW. See, also, the list of dead scientists.

The most fascinating might be the Harvard scientist, Dr. Don C Wiley, 'one of the foremost infectious disease researchers' in the United States, who 'got dizzy' and his car fell off a bridge in Memphis, TN.

The bridge where his car was found is only a five-minute drive away and in the wrong direction from where he was staying, leaving authorities with a four-hour, unexplained gap until his vehicle was found. Now Memphis police are exploring several theories involving suicide, robbery and murder.

That's just a 'we-know-we're-f*cking-with-you-and-there's-not-a-damned-thing-you-can-do-about-it' assassination that any detective on 'Law & Order: Criminal Intent' could wrap up in the first half-hour of the episode.

High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program 27 Feb 2010 The High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program (HAARP) is an ionospheric research program jointly funded by the US Air Force, the US Navy, the University of Alaska and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA). Its purpose is to analyze the ionosphere and investigate the potential for developing ionospheric enhancement technology for radio communications and surveillance purposes (such as missile detection). The HAARP program operates a major Arctic facility, known as the HAARP Research Station, on an Air Force owned site near Gakona, Alaska. The most outstanding instrument at the HAARP Station is the Ionospheric Research Instrument (IRI), a high power transmitter facility operating in the high frequency range. The IRI is used to temporarily excite a limited area of the ionosphere... As of 2008, HAARP had incurred around $250 million in tax-funded construction and operating costs.

Presenter: Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen April 28, 1997 8:45 AM EDT

DoD News Briefing: Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen

Cohen's keynote address at the Conference on Terrorism, Weapons of Mass Destruction, and U.S. Strategy at the Georgia Center, Mahler Auditorium, University of Georgia, Athens, Ga. The event is part of the Sam Nunn Policy Forum being hosted by the University of Georgia. Secretary Cohen is joined by Sen. Sam Nunn and Sen. Richard G. Lugar.]

Secretary Cohen: Senator Nunn, thank you very much. As Senator Nunn has indicated, he and I have worked for many years together, along with Senator Lugar. The two of these gentlemen I feel are perhaps the most courageous and visionary to have served in the Senate. They were largely responsible, of course, for adopting the so-called Nunn/Lugar legislation.

I'll comment on that later during the course of the morning, but I've had occasion to meet with a number of Russian counterparts, and as we go through various translations of the communications that we're having, the two words they are able to articulate very clearly, they say 'Nunn/Lugar, Nunn/Lugar. So they know exactly what that means, and that means the Cooperative Thre'at Reduction Act that these two gentlemen were indispensable in shepherding through the United States Congress.

It was Nunn/Lugar I that dealt with the reduction of nuclear weapons between the United States and the Soviet Union in terms of trying to come to grips with how we helped the Russians dismantle hundreds of their nuclear weapons, and also helped them with their destruction of chemical weapons. But they, of course, have looked beyond simply that particular relationship, which is very important, but also looking to the future that we face as far as the rise of terrorism -- both international and domestic; and finding ways in which the Department of Defense can become involved in helping local states and local agencies to deal with the threat of terrorism which is quite likely to increase in the coming years.

It's a pleasure for me to be here. Both Senator Nunn and Senator Lugar are close friends and I look forward to, I think, a very productive seminar. Once again demonstrating that although Senator Nunn has left public service in the Senate, he has not left public service as far as the nation is concerned.

It's a pleasure for me to be here, Sam.

Senator Nunn: Thank you very much, Bill.

. ..Let me ask if there are any questions for Secretary of Defense Cohen.

Q: The dual containment policy in Iran and Iraq, do you think that's conducive to regional stability in that region? And do you think can cause further terrorism in the United States? That type of containment policy in the Middle East.

A: I think Secretary Albright articulated our policy as far as dealing with Iraq, that it's clear that we have been unable to strike any kind of a productive relationship with Saddam Hussein, and as soon as Saddam Hussein is no longer the head of that government, that there's new regime that follows him, that we will look forward to finding ways in which we could engage them in a much more productive fashion, particularly after they comply with all of the UN sanctions. There's an eagerness on our part to do that. But I think as long as he remains in office as the head of that state, it's unlikely that we could have anything but the current policy in place, with very little prospects for relief.

With respect to Iran, I think Iran continues to present a long term threat to the region. They are acquiring and have acquired weapons of mass destruction, substantial levels of chemicals and we believe biological weapons as well. They have made an effort to acquire nuclear capability. So I think that our policy of dual containment is the right one, and we are going to encourage our allies to support that one.

Q: What does it mean that Clinton (inaudible) proliferation?

A: To the extent that we see the level of communication available today, the Internet and other types of interwoven communicative skills and abilities, we're going to see information continue to spread as to how these weapons can be, in fact, manufactured in a home-grown laboratory, as such. So it's a serious problem as far as living in the information age that people who are acquiring this kind of information will not act responsibly, but rather act in a terrorist type of fashion.

We've seen by way of example of the World Trade Center the international aspects of international terrorism coming to our home territory. We've also seen domestic terrorism with the Oklahoma bombing. So it's a real threat that's here today. It's likely to intensify in the years to come as more and more groups have access to this kind of information and the ability to produce them.

Q: How prepared is the U.S. Government to deal with (inaudible)?

A: I think we have to really intensify our efforts. That's the reason for the Nunn/Lugar II program. That's the reason why it's a local responsibility, as such, but the Department of Defense is going to be taking the lead as far as supervising the interagency working groups, and to make the assessments as to what needs to be done. So we're going to identify those 120 cities and work with them very closely to make sure that they can prepare themselves for what is likely to be a threat well into the future.

Q: Let me ask you specifically about last week's scare here in Washington, and what we might have learned from how prepared we are to deal with that (inaudible), at B'nai Brith.

A: Well, it points out the nature of the threat. It turned out to be a false threat under the circumstances. But as we've learned in the intelligence community, we had something called -- and we have James Woolsey here to perhaps even address this question about phantom moles. The mere fear that there is a mole within an agency can set off a chain reaction and a hunt for that particular mole which can paralyze the agency for weeks and months and years even, in a search. The same thing is true about just the false scare of a threat of using some kind of a chemical weapon or a biological one. There are some reports, for example, that some countries have been trying to construct something like an Ebola Virus, and that would be a very dangerous phenomenon, to say the least. Alvin Toeffler has written about this in terms of some scientists in their laboratories trying to devise certain types of pathogens that would be ethnic specific so that they could just eliminate certain ethnic groups and races; and others are designing some sort of engineering, some sort of insects that can destroy specific crops. Others are engaging even in an eco- type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.

So there are plenty of ingenious minds out there that are at work finding ways in which they can wreak terror upon other nations. It's real, and that's the reason why we have to intensify our efforts, and that's why this is so important.

Q: What is response to (inaudible)?

A: We hope we will have access to the defector. In fact I was recently in South Korea and talked with various officials in South Korea. As soon as they complete their own interrogation of this defector, we will have access to that individual. But much of what he has said to date is reflected in the writings that he prepared last year. This is prior to his defection. One would not expect a potential defector to be writing about anything other than what the official doctrine or dogma is of the North Korean government at that time. He is saying essentially what we have known for a long, long time. Namely, that North Korea poses a very serious threat against South Korea, and potentially even Japan, by virtue of having the fourth largest army in the world, by having 600,000 or more troops poised within 100 kilometers of Seoul, of possessing many SCUD missiles, also the potential of chemically armed warheads, the attempt to acquire nuclear weapons. So we know they have this potential, and the question really is going to be what's in their hearts and minds at this point? Do they intend to try to launch such an attack in the immediate, foreseeable future? That we can only speculate about, but that's the reason why we are so well prepared to defend against such an attack to deter it; and to send a message that it would be absolutely an act of suicide for the North Koreans to launch an attack. They could do great damage in the short run, but they would be devastated in response. So we're hoping we can find ways to bring them to the bargaining table -- the Party of Four Talks -- and see if we can't put them on a path toward peace instead of threatening any kind of devastating attack upon the South.

Q: . ..a little bit about the situation in (inaudible)?

A: I really don't have much more information than has been in the press at this point. The Department has not been called upon to act in this regard just yet, so I'm not at liberty to give you any more information than you already have.

Q: . ..the Administration's plans to expand NATO to more European countries. Is there a terrorism element? Or will expanding NATO help you in any way in terms of (inaudible)? Or is it really unrelated?

A: I think the two are unrelated. There is a legitimate debate that will take place in terms of the pace of enlargement or whether there should be enlargement. Secretary Albright and I testified last week before the Senate Armed Services Committee, and it was a very, I think, productive debate. It's something that Senator Nunn, I think, feels very strongly about as well. The two of us, I think, found ourselves on the Senate Floor last year saying it was time for the American people to start debating this issue. So it's very important and there will be legitimate differences of opinion, but it's important that we bring this to the Senate for full debate and disclosure, and bring it to the American people. But I doubt if it's related to the spread of terrorism whatsoever.

Senator Nunn: Thank you very much.

Iraq Opening to BP, Exxon Mobil, Shell for First Time Since 1972

By Anthony DiPaola and Daniel Williams
http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=206...XfGm2.EU&pos=14

March 4 (Bloomberg) -- BP Plc and Exxon Mobil Corp. took the best deal they could get in Iraq last year when they won the largest oil contracts since Saddam Hussein was toppled in 2003. Oil companies may wait a long time to get a better one.

Parliamentary elections may produce a weak or unstable government incapable of tendering new oil contracts, said Samuel Ciszuk, a London-based analyst at IHS Global Insight. He said he does expect the 10 technical-services contracts won by Exxon, BP and 20 other companies to be honored.

“One thing that’s fairly certain is there won’t be a strong coalition, so it may take time for the next government to get its act together,” Ciszuk said in a telephone interview. “Bottlenecks could hold up production increases” if no government forms by June.

Western producers haven’t had access to oil fields in southern Iraq since 1972, when the country nationalized production including concessions owned by the companies now known as BP, Royal Dutch Shell Plc and Exxon.

The contracts awarded in two auctions, which pay a per- barrel fee for development work rather than granting a share in the production itself, will cost the companies a total of about $100 billion to develop deposits, Oil Minister Hussain al-Shahristani said in December. Iraq, with the world’s third- largest oil reserves, will earn about $200 billion a year.

Service Fees

A group led by BP, which vies with Shell as Europe’s largest oil company, will receive $2 billion per year in fees to develop the Rumaila field. A Shell-led group will get $913 million and a group led by Exxon, the largest U.S. oil company, will receive $1.6 billion per year. Each calculation is based on the agreed-to per-barrel fee times the maximum production level.

“We see this as the beginning of a long-term relationship with Iraq and will continue to look for further opportunities,” Andy Inglis, BP’s chief executive for exploration and production, said on a conference call March 2.

Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, whose government signed last year’s oil contracts, is running against an array of opponents. Sunni Muslim, Shiite Muslim and Kurdish factions, along with a pan-sectarian party, all are in the race with Al-Maliki’s Shiite-based Rule of Law coalition.

The sectarian blocs are also divided one against another, making it unlikely any one group can win a majority.

“This is the most wide-open election in Iraq’s history,” said Faleh Abdul-Jabar, director of the Beirut-based Iraq Institute for Strategic Studies, in a telephone interview.

Troop Withdrawal

U.S. troop levels will fall to 50,000 from the current 97,000 by August of this year, according to a schedule laid out by President Barack Obama in February 2009. All troops will leave by the end of 2011 under an agreement with the Iraqi government reached by President George W. Bush.

A change in Iraq’s government won’t affect contracts signed last year, al-Shahristani said in a March 2 interview in Baghdad. The amount of work needed on the contracts means the oil companies can afford to wait for a new government to form and consolidate its power before pressing for fresh production or exploration contracts.

The only region where companies participate in more than fee-for-service work is in Iraq’s north. Companies including Norway’s DNO International ASA are pumping crude in the Kurdish autonomous region under production-sharing agreements not recognized by the central government.

Indecision over forming a government could delay investment in oil projects, said David Bender, a Middle East analyst at Eurasia Group in Washington.

Most Attractive

“Iraq is one of the most attractive oil markets in the world,” Bender said. “The international oil companies may feel that getting in at the beginning improves their long-term prospects.”

Winning contracts to explore undiscovered and untapped deposits under more favorable terms is a long-term goal for producers operating in Iraq, said two officials with oil companies that won contracts last year. The officials asked not to be identified since they aren’t allowed to speak publicly about company policies in Iraq.

Iraq has much work ahead to meet its production goals, so new exploration agreements are unlikely to be signed soon, said Manouchehr Takin, an analyst at the Centre for Global Energy Studies in London.

“People are going to ask, ‘Why should we sell resources that can’t be reproduced? What is the rush?’” he said.

London-based BP and China National Petroleum Corp. agreed in June to produce 2.85 million barrels a day at Rumaila, the only field locked up in the first round and one of Iraq’s largest.

Exxon, based in Irving, Texas, together with Shell, based in The Hague, pledged to pump 2.33 million barrels of crude a day from the first phase of the West Qurna field. Patrick McGinn, a spokesman for Exxon, said in a March 3 e-mail that the company doesn’t comment on political issues.

Shell also was the lead partner with Malaysia’s Petroliam Nasional Bhd., or Petronas, winning a contract to boost output at the Majnoon field to 1.8 million barrels of oil a day.

“Big or small, no company wanted to be left out of Iraq,” Takin said.

Fourth Oil giant Ccompany announces explore 300 km from Tierra del Fuego, Argentina.

It will just south of Falkland, in the vicinity of Tierra del Fuego, along with BHP Billiton as well as oil and mining operations in the provinces of Cuyo, Argentine.

Barclays Bank is also a shareholder in oil company ...

Drilling oil wells are located 300 miles from Staten Island, Province of Tierra del Fuego. Falklands, the nearest point is located 180 kilometers and the most distant at 200, the capital of the Falkland Islands is 280 kilometers. British media lies about the measures which are located the wells so that does not impact the proximity of oil drilling in the population that knows little about the new English looting.

One of the wells are located within 3 miles of the territorial boundary with Argentina, imposed by Britain in 1986 because before that date, the sea belonged to the country.

A fourth company also has a concession to explore another area south of the islands, between Tierra del Fuego and Falkland. It is Borders & Southern Petroleum.

Two of the four firms-and Desire Petroleum, Borders & Southern Petroleum shares held by the Barclays Bank, appointed by Amado Boudou (economy minister of Argentina) for reopening the debt exchange, which in turn is part of one of the main operators in the country, Minera Alumbrera. This is the tenth company in the ranking of exporters in 2009 and his main site is located in Catamarca, Argentine.

The financial institution is the main shareholder of Desire Petroleum and has a percentage of BlackRock, the second capital of Xstrata, which operates Minera Alumbrera in Catamarca and one of the companies' controlling Borders & Southerns, other dealerships who obtained a permit from kelpers government.

Amid the controversy, the Border and Southern Petroleum companies and BHP Billiton, which make up the consortium responsible for exploration north of the islands, discusses begin exploration in waters south of the Falklands. Even assess the possibility of bringing to the South Atlantic a new oil platform or a drill ship, in case you can not use the Ocean Guardian, the newspaper Clarin said today.

The Border and Southern Petroleum and BHP Billiton will join the activities already started in the North Falkland Basin, the Rockopper Desire Petroleum and Exploration.

The aim of this campaign is to determine the petroleum potential of the waters off the Falklands, and usurping, half Argentine Sea with the passivity of the national government.

The area known as "Darwin East" situated 180 kilometers south of the islands, and Stepping around 30 miles away with the first are the first targets of the oil.
Geologically, both areas are underwater continuation of the Andes, and scholars themselves admit to British companies. (so they admit that is argentinian territory) Hence we analyze what, politically, historically and geographically, these seas and these islands are Argentine.

A map helps us see where exactly the place where the wells are located. At the original map with wells in the north, we have added the two wells to the south:

The fourth British oil to announce that explore Argentine Sea Borders & Southern, outlined in orange. We note that one of the five wells where it has licenses to operate is less than 3 miles from the territorial boundary with Argentina, imposed by Britain in 1986.

IHS collects all of the well production data as it happens. You can access all of this through Accumap. Real time (delayed by a couple months) info streams from most development properties, cumulative production, pressure decline rates etc. Most Energy companies use this data for exploration and development planning, but IHS centralizes the data, including land sales, pipe lines, refineries and gas plants. IHS hmmmm.....coincidence?

I'm sure they have a clever acronym if you ask them what it stands for....

Apparently they also collect economic and statistical indicators. I wonder who else gets to use and analyze IHS data?

Also we must remember that Chile is the principal source of COPPER of the world, who have the 35% of world copper reserves.

Now... one of the four companys that are stealing "for the British", the Argentinian oil and petroleum (if that is all they want), is BHP Billiton, who is the world's largest mining company of the world. And BHP owns the giant Escondida Company which owns the 57.5% of the copper of Chile.

So, the same company have interest in Chile as in Argentine. To this is very interesting to note that another director of Barclays is Leigh Clifford who was the Chief Executive Officer of the Rio Tinto Group from April 2000 to April 2007... and Rio Tinto Group is another mining company who owns the 30% of the Chilean copper.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/BHP_Billiton

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Escondida http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Leigh_Clifford

The following is a synthetic chronology of the history of the Chilean copper.

Through history, the Chilean copper has belonged more to big monopolies and companies than the people of Chile.

The economic dimensions of Chile's copper are such that the profits of American companies have won 40% of the total wealth of Chile in the period from 1930 to 1969, thanks to exploitation of mineral Chilean ridiculous prices. Only between 1943 and 1944 the Chilean state lost 500 million dollars for the difference between the price of production and sales that was more than double the receipts for the Chilean treasury.

In 1970 the copper was controlled by monopolies and the American capital.

In the general election Salvador Allende becomes president of Chile after negotiations with Democratic cristians (Allende was a mason as Pinochet). The current election is intended to be bombed by U.S. multinationals and self-Intelligence Agency (CIA), and by the Chilean military who come to kill General Schneider two days before the appointment of Salvador Allende, given the general reluctance to lead a military coup.

Chilean mines were nationalized in the hands of American companies as the "Anaconda", "Cerro Corporation" or "Kennecott".(Anaconda Copper Mining Company was controlled by thge Rothchilds and the Rockefellers. Kennecott Copper Corporation was created by the Guggenheim family and is now owned by Rio Tinto Group the same who owns today the 30% of the cooper of Chile!)

These projects led to the nationalization of the Chilean right opposition which had the unlimited support of the United States. So start to organize street demonstrations, strikes, outs, such as truckers, which was funded from the United States attacks. Pressure also came from outside the refusal of bank loans.

The confident right dismissal of Allende after the 1973 parliamentary elections but the results are almost an absolute majority to the Popular Unity as the military coup leaders begin to take positions in the army moving to the military who still respect the Constitution and the will of the people. Thus, they achieve the resignation of General Prats is replaced by General Pinochet.

Weeks later, on 11 September, the Pinochet-led military assaults of the Currency Palace in a general uprising that destroys democracy in Chile.

In 1981, the Pinochet dictatorship imposed a Mining Concessions Act which provides "full concession" with the same rights of private property. This copper mines return to power of American companies.

On the verge of betrayal: the government of Argentine will accept the british Barclays Bank

The bank's main shareholder of Desire Petroleum, which explores in the Argentine Sea. There are no intentions to protest against Barclays or depart from them. Chancery washes his hands, and their actions are bordering on treason ...

Following a consultation of Clarin, the portfolio of Boudou responded that after studying the issue, found that "there was" no direct connection "between the division of Barclays which will make the exchange and a shareholder of Desire Petroleum. Moreover , considered the court filing and Monner Sans Cafiero has "no grip".

(Clarin) .- The Government seems determined to discriminate between the British bank Barclays and other companies associated with the start of oil exploration in the Falklands, which has sent notes of discouragement and threats of sanctions by operating in the area of dispute sovereignty with the United Kingdom.

Barclays is since last October, by decision of the Ministry of Economy, the global coordinator of an exchange offer that the government will still Argentina's private creditors who were kept out of elected megancaje 2005.

They are investors who are holding shares in default of some 20,000 million dollars in defaulted bonds that did not enter that restructuring of the national debt millionaire.

But at the same time Barclays is a major shareholder of Desire Petroleum, one of which started drilling oil in disputed waters in late February, giving rise to the still dormant and strong diplomatic crosses between the governments of Argentina and United Kingdom.

Also in mid of last month, former Congressman Mario Cafiero and lawyer Ricardo Monner Sans appeared before Judge Julian Ercolini, the Criminal and Correctional jurisdiction, an order of injunction to stay the Government contract with Barclays. According to the complainants involved the bank since last September at 4.5% of Desire Petroleum. Moreover, accused the ministers of economy, Amado Boudou, and Foreign Minister Jorge Taiana, "failure in their duty" to appoint the first for Barclays as global coordinator for the reopening of the swap, and the second for "not to object "to it.

This newspaper has learned, has no intention of protesting against Barclays or depart from them. And yes to move forward in the relationship with this financial institution chosen by the Economy.

The Foreign Ministry said they will protest "for all companies to explore oil in the Falklands by sea". When they raised that seemed the case of Barclays, said, "that exceeds us, the decision is of Economics."

Following a consultation of Clarin, the portfolio of Boudou responded that after studying the issue, found that "there was" no direct connection "between the division of Barclays which will make the exchange and a shareholder of Desire Petroleum. Moreover , considered the court filing and Monner Sans Cafiero has "no grip".

Last month, the government of Cristina Kirchner started a legal war against any company doing business ship tankers Malvinas. He did it through disappointment and protest notes to the companies that are linked to petroleum activities on the islands and with written warnings about their "concern" to the governments of the countries from such companies, including the United Kingdom, Australia , Norway and Denmark.

The spokesman of the Bishops, priest Jorge Oesterheld, admitted today that the Church is "concerned" about the tug between the three branches of government emerged from the use of reserves to pay debts.

"This situation worries the bishops," Oesterheld said in remarks broadcast by the Catholic Informatic Agency of Argentina (AICA). The statement was delivered a day before a meeting of the Standing Committee of the Episcopal Conference of Argentina, who chairs the archbishop of Buenos Aires, Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio S.J.

The meeting will take place from 9:00 pm Tuesday in the see of Suipacha 1032, Retiro neighborhood of Buenos Aires, where a score of bishops for two days to analyze issues relating to the Church's pastoral action.

Also expected to exchange views on the crisis following the NUD of President Cristina Kirchner to use central bank reserves.

So the Jesuits not only steal to us, the Argentinian people, but they also say that we can't use our own money to defend ourselves!!

The bishops will give the document in person to President Cristina Kirchner.

In addition, they will deliver the document to the holders of Deputies and Senate and the Supreme Court.

(Remember that the Catholic Institution created the so called SEPARATIONS OF POWER and splited in three parts; and that the perpetrator of that law was Montesquieu, who was controlled by the masterminds of that law, the Freemasonry which born from the Rosicrucians of the Royal Society of London.

So they divide and conquer... Now, Jesuit Bergoglio will "talk" whith the three powers.)

It is an attempt to ensure that their words are heard and taken into account. Members of the dome of the Church, led by Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio, will request a hearing to President Cristina Kirchner to bring the document in person today and spread in seeking to overcome "the ongoing confrontation" and "greatness" to leaders.

This was revealed by a spokesman of the Bishops, Father Jorge Oesterheld. The priest also said that hearings be requested for the same purpose with the heads of legislative power-holders of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies and the Supreme Court.

The decision of the Bishops to bring the document to the highest authorities of the country was interpreted as a desire of the bishops to give more strength to his words and that these are taken into account.

"We hope the president will give the audience the bishops," Oesterheld response to a question which alluded to the strained relationship of marriage Kirchner with Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio, following criticism and complaints by the cardinal's economic policy presidential couple.

Cnooc to Buy Half of Argentina's Bridas for $3.1 Bln

By Bloomberg News
http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=206...u.cP7pX3A&pos=3

March 14 (Bloomberg) -- Cnooc Ltd., China's biggest offshore oil explorer, said it will buy half of Bridas Corporation from Carlos Bulgheroni for $3.1 billion, giving it a stake in Argentina's largest oil exporter.

Bulgheroni will retain the remaining 50 percent of Bridas, which has oil exploration and production operations in Argentina, Bolivia and Chile, according to a Cnooc statement filed today with Hong Kong's stock exchange. Bridas also owns 40 percent of Pan American Energy LLC, in which BP Plc has a stake.

Cnooc's acquisition adds to at least $13 billion of energy acquisitions by Chinese companies since December 2008 as the nation scours the globe for resources to feed the world's fastest-growing major economy. Cnooc was earlier seeking to bid for a Devon Energy Corp. stake in an Azerbaijan oil field, said two people with knowledge of the matter in February.

"Given China's increasing reliance on imported crude oil and the nation's robust demand in fuel driven by the rapid growth in automobile sales, it is a priority for the Chinese government and its companies to secure resources globally," said Wang Aochao, head of China energy research at UOB-Kay Hian.

'Good Beachhead'

Cnooc Chairman Fu Chengyu said in an interview earlier today that the company has made "good progress" since stepping up efforts to increase cooperation with foreign countries and companies in December 2008. Company President Yang Hua said in a statement that the Bridas purchase represents "a very good beachhead for us to enter Latin America."

China is the world's second-biggest energy consumer, after the U.S., and Cnooc estimates the Bridas acquisition will boost the company's proven reserves by 318 million barrels of oil equivalent and its average daily production by 46,000 barrels. The deal will need to be approved by the Chinese government, Cnooc said.

Pan American Energy was formed in September 1997 through the merger of the Argentine units of Bridas and Amoco Corp., which was acquired by BP in August 1998. Pan American has since become Argentina's second-biggest producer of crude, behind the Argentine unit of Repsol YPF SA and was the country's largest exporter of oil in 2009.

"Cnooc will have to expand overseas production through acquisitions because its domestic fields are unlikely to be able to help the company reach its output goals for this year," said Qiu Xiaofeng, an oil analyst at China Merchants Securities Ltd.

PetroChina Co. in December won approval from the Canadian government to buy a stake in two Alberta oil-sands projects for C$1.9 billion ($1.86 billion). China Petrochemical Corp. completed its C$8.3 billion acquisition of Addax Petroleum Corp. in August.

YPF, as the Argentine unit of Repsol is called, was also named as a possible takeover target by Cnooc last year, as well as by China National Petroleum Corp., the parent of PetroChina. Repsol has been trying to sell its stake in YPF since at least 2008 to fund expansion operations elsewhere.

Royal Navy Deploys Submarine to Falkland Islands

18 March 2010
http://www.naval-technology.com/news/news79781.html

The UK Royal Navy has deployed the nuclear-powered attack submarine, HMS Sceptre, to the Falkland Islands in an effort to enhance security levels in the region.

The Swiftsure Class submarine will join the Portsmouth ships HMS York and HMS Scott, which are already on routine patrol in the region, according to portsmouth.co.uk.

During the deployment, HMS Sceptre will monitor the conservation zone waters surrounding the Falkland islands, where drilling is under way.

The deployment was made necessary as UK firm Desire Petroleum has struck oil.

The 82.9m-long, 9.8m-wide vessel has a displacement of 4,500t.

The submarine can accommodate around 100 personnel and cruise at a speed in excess of 30kt.

Oil platforms were towed to the Falklands in February

One of the oil and gas companies currently drilling off the coast of the Falkland Islands says it may have struck oil.

Rockhopper Exploration said that initial data collected from one well "indicated an oil discovery".

The find would be the first in North Falkland Basin, the area north of the islands currently being explored.

Earlier this year, another exploration company, Desire Petroleum, said its drilling programme had disappointed.

It is currently drilling further wells after it decided to abandon its first oil well.

UK-based Rockhopper said further tests now needed to be carried out on the well.

"We are extremely excited by the results of this well," said Samuel Moody, managing director of Rockhopper.
Shares up

"Current indications are that we have made the first oil discovery in the North Falkland Basin. We will now focus on analysing in more detail the data gathered from the well."

Shares in Rockhopper more than doubled following the announcement. Shares in Desire Petroleum were also up 70%.

Two other Falkland oil explorers, Falkland Oil & Gas and Borders & Southern, also saw their share prices rise.

The current exploration of the waters around the Falklands has proved controversial, as Argentina still claims sovereignty over the islands and the surrounding waters.

When the exploration plans were first announced, UK Defence Minister Bill Rammell said the government had a "legitimate right" to build an oil industry in its waters.

Billionaire Ambani Says $100 Crude Oil to Be New Norm (Update1)

By Natalie Obiko Pearson
http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=206...Ri6XwG7q4&pos=7

May 14 (Bloomberg) -- Billionaire Mukesh Ambani, who runs the world's largest refining complex, said the petroleum industry must be ready for oil prices to rebound to $100 a barrel or more on growing consumption in Asia.

"We have to again be actively prepared to see a three- digit oil price" amid sluggish refining growth and higher marginal cost of production at new fields, Ambani, chairman of Reliance Industries Ltd., said in a speech at a conference in Mumbai today, adding, "$80 to $100 is the norm."

Crude oil for delivery in December 2018, the contract dated furthest into the future, rose to a four-month high of $100.38 on May 3 in New York on concern that the BP Plc oil spill would halt future U.S. offshore drilling. Open interest in December $100 calls, bets that prices will breach that level, reached 84,309 contracts yesterday, making it the most widely held option.

"Ambani is right on with his message," said Victor Shum, a senior principal at U.S. energy consultants Purvin & Gertz Inc. in Singapore. "Crude oil prices are more likely to continue to go up rather than down. I would even venture to say they're likely to range between $70 and $100 to the end of the year."

Oil prices peaked at a record $147.27 a barrel on July 11, 2008, before plummeting to $32.40 on Dec. 19 that same year as the world's worst recession since World War II slashed demand. Global oil demand is forecast to increase 2 percent this year amid growth in emerging markets, stemming two years of declines, according to the International Energy Agency in Paris.

China, India Demand

China and India, the world's two fastest-growing major economies, are leading a recovery and their appetite for oil is expected to outpace the world average by more than three times to 2030, according to the IEA.

Bank of America Merrill Lynch May 11 repeated its forecast that crude prices will exceed $100 a barrel next year as a result of growing demand in emerging economies, and the potential for lower interest rates among those nations.

Reliance's refining complex in Jamnagar refines 1.24 million barrels a day of crude oil into fuels like gasoline, diesel and chemicals used to make plastics, dyes and other products. The company said last month the complex in the western state of Gujarat ran at 108 percent of planned capacity.

"Everyone is worried about excess capacity in our industry" and they underestimate growing consumption in India and China, said Ambani, Asia's richest man. Demand in India for petroleum-based chemicals is growing as fast as 25 percent and similar trends are seen in China, he said.

Super-Size Projects

Rising crude prices will force the industry to become more competitive by building more efficient, “super-size” plants that integrate oil refining and petrochemical manufacturing to take advantage of scale, Ambani said.

“New assets must factor the shift in demand to Asia,” said Ambani. “In a globalized environment, this would necessitate super-size projects. We can, therefore, expect in our industry that projects of $5 and $10 billion range will become a routine norm.”

Oil for June delivery was at $72.95 on the New York Mercantile Exchange at 11:35 a.m. London time, putting its decline this week at 2.9 percent. The benchmark contract last closed above the $100 mark on Sept. 30, 2008.

Oil may rise next week on speculation the dollar will drop against the euro as the European Union’s bailout of almost $1 trillion comes into effect, a Bloomberg News survey showed. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised estimates for global oil demand in 2010 on optimistic outlook for economic growth in China.

Reliance Industries posted a 30 percent increase in profit for the three months ended March 31.

We, the Argentinian people, know that in Malvinas/Falkands there it's not importants and comerciable quantities of petroleum (by the way, i undertand that the english people call the Malvinas as "Falklands", but you dont should do that, as the truthtelling people doesn't must call me "Latino"). I think that the Jesuit Order has created all the Haarpiqukes to get totally control of the oceans and islands of the world.
Why?.. well, i don't know.. maybe the 3th World War?...

Also, remember folks that the Petroleum is generated not by the fosils but by abiotic origins and by the magma. So the American Army it's in Iraq and Afghanistan becouse they want to amalgamate and kill the Shiia Muslim so the British Army is controllinmg the oceans not by the oil, which is just a pretext, an excuse.

BARACK OBAMA SPARKS NEW ROW OVER FALKLANDS

Friday June 11,2010
By Padraic Flanagan
http://www.express.co.uk/posts/view/180325...-over-Falklands

AMERICA has plunged relations with Britain to a new low by siding with Latin American countries demanding new negotiations over the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands.

Officials appointed by President Obama this week demanded fresh talks with Argentina on the sovereignty issue.

But British diplomats have dismissed the move as “symbolic posturing” of no importance.

Argentina has been increasingly bullish over the Falklands – which it calls Las Malvinas – in recent months as British firms continue to explore the islands’ territorial waters for oil.

A resolution passed unanimously by the Organisation of American States on Wednesday stated the “need” for UK and Argentinian talks on the dispute.

In March US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton was accused of dealing Britain “a slap in the face” when she told the Argentine president she supported talks over the island’s sovereignty.

The remarks appeared to shift the American position from the neutrality adopted by Ronald Reagan’s administration in the wake of the Falklands war to support for Argentina’s long-held position. Earlier this year Argentine president Cristina

Fernandez de Kirchner issued a decree forcing ships sailing to the Falklands from Argentina to seek a permit after learning that drilling for oil was under way.

She has also asked for the United States to intervene – and secured backing from Hillary Clinton. A Foreign Office spokesman said yesterday: “The American position is that they recognise the UK administration on the Falklands. There is no change in their overall approach.”

A British task force drove out an Argentinian invasion in 1982 at a cost of the lives of 255 servicemen.

Falkland Oil & Gas shares plunge as well proves empty

Shares in Falkland Oil & Gas (FOGL) have fallen sharply after the company said it would give up on one of its oil wells, not far off the coast of the South Falklands.

It started drilling the Toroa well at the end of May.

Despite its optimism at the time, it now says it there are no hydrocarbons there and it will plug the well.

Shares in FOGL fell by more than 60% before recovering slightly to trade 45% lower at 110p.

But, it said it still hoped there was oil in the area, which is about 90 miles south of the Falklands Island capital, Stanley.

Several UK oil companies are searching for oil in the Falklands, despite strong opposition from Argentina.

Although they are run by the British, Argentina still claims it owns the Islands which it calls the Islas Malvinas. It has formally asked the United Nations to bring the UK into talks over their sovereignty.

Argentina invaded the Falklands in 1982, before a UK taskforce seized back control in a short war that claimed the lives of 649 Argentine and 255 British service personnel.

Despite the exploration setback, Falkland Oil and Gas will continue to search for oil in the area.

It believes the Toroa prospect, in which it has a 49% interest, has around 1.7 billion barrels of recoverable oil and is now carrying out further assessments.

The company pointed out that development of the field was in its early stages.

"Whilst the results of the Toroa well are disappointing, it has to be remembered that this is the first well in a previously undrilled frontier basin," the firm's chief executive Tim Bushell said.

"We believe that these results have helped to reduce some of the key risks of the plays in the deepwater areas of our licences."

Shares in Falkland Islands Holdings, which has an 8% stake in Falklands Oil & Gas also fell, by 17%.

The Falkland Islands have become a hotbed of drilling activity for smaller UK-listed explorers.

Last month, Rockhopper Exploration said it was looking to raise £48.5m after striking larger-than-expected reserves of oil in the region.

Another well "empty": low oil in the Falklands Argentine Sea

The third well explored in Argentinian waters of Malvinas, usurped by England, was negative, as is anticipated last week. The pit bull "was a failure and have not found sufficient quantities ...

The first well explored during February this year, "Liz" found no marketable quantities of oil. The second well, "Sea Lion" found 200 million barrels, while the last unexplored region east of the islands, was also unsuccessful.

The Ocean Guardian platform is now directed to the well Ernest, to turn the tide in the now disastrous British oil exploration in the South Atlantic.

Another failure for the Falklands Oil and Gas Company, which only adds debt and equity as volatile as the cold wind of the islands.

Although the company has not yet an official statement on the last well explored, This news website had access to the final conclusion of the report on Toro, prior to being published in the media, indicating that there are sufficient quantities of oil to be market.

Fifth joins oil exploration

A fifth British company plans to drill in waters around the Falkland Islands for oil. This is Argos Resources, which has the unilateral license in the UK.

According to the newspaper Financial Times, to begin exploration, Argos need to raise U.S. $ 106 million in the London market.

The licenses for oil are adjacent to those of other British Rockhopper Exploration, which claims to have found crude "average quality" in the area, but still does not show whether this is commercially viable.

The Argos are looking collection is intended to carry out 3D seismic surveys and then to explore, notes the Financial Times, while noting that no it is not clear if this company also will use the platform 'Ocean Guardian 'or if you plan to use another structure.

Oil Tops $80 a Barrel for First Time Since May as Equities Rise

By Margot Habiby - Aug 2, 2010
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2010-08-02/o...ese-growth.html

Crude oil surged above $81 a barrel for the first time since May as a rally in global equity markets increased speculation the economy is strengthening.

Oil jumped as much as 3.5 percent after equities climbed on better-than-expected earnings by U.S. and European companies and the Institute for Supply Management’s U.S. manufacturing gauge fell less than forecast. The dollar dropped against the euro, boosting the investment appeal of commodities.

“Oil is following the S&P 500,” said Adam Sieminski, chief energy economist at Deutsche Bank AG in Washington. “Fundamentals don’t seem to matter. You don’t need to be an oil analyst anymore. You just need to be a stock market analyst.”

Crude for September delivery rose $2.64, or 3.3 percent, to $81.59 a barrel at 11:39 a.m. on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Earlier, it touched $81.72, the highest price since May 5. Futures climbed 4.4 percent in July, the biggest monthly gain since March. Prices are up 17 percent from a year ago.

The Standard & Poor's 500 Index increased 1.9 percent to 1,122.18 following positive earnings reports from companies from Humana Inc. to Oshkosh Corp. It jumped 6.9 percent in July, the biggest monthly advance since July 2009. The Dow Jones Industrial Average strengthened 179.53, or 1.7 percent, to 10,645.47.

The MSCI World Index, a gauge of equities in 24 developed nations, rose 2.2 percent to its highest level since May 13. European stocks touched a three-month high on gains among banks and basic-resource producers.

"Equities did well in July and profits are generally OK, so people are feeling bullish across the board," said Michael Lynch, president of Strategic Energy & Economic Research in Winchester, Massachusetts.

Manufacturing Index

The ISM's manufacturing gauge fell to 55.5 in July from 56.2 a month earlier, the Tempe, Arizona-based group said. Economists had forecast the measure would drop to 54.5, according to the median of 74 projections in a Bloomberg News survey. Estimates ranged from 52.5 to 56. A reading greater than 50 points to expansion.

The dollar weakened by 1 percent to $1.3185 per euro from $1.3052 on July 30 in New York.

"As long as the U.S. dollar is weaker, the U.S. interest rate is lower, people may take the risk of investing money in commodities," said Tetsu Emori, a commodity fund manager at Astmax Co. in Tokyo. "I'm quite positive on the market."

The Reuters/Jefferies CRB Index of 19 commodities advanced 1 percent to 277, the strongest level since May 3. Fifteen of the commodities increased, led by wheat, heating oil, crude and gasoline.

Chinese Growth

Oil also advanced on speculation that China's government will reverse policies aimed at slowing growth in the world's largest energy user. Indexes of Chinese manufacturing dropped to the lowest level in more than a year, two reports showed today. The Shanghai Composite Index gained 1.3 percent.

"The Chinese data can be interpreted as helpful intervention by the government to control and direct economic growth," said Christopher Bellew, a senior broker at Bache Commodities Ltd. in London. "The question is whether oil is having a false break, as fundamentals are not yet sufficiently robust to sustain prices in the $80 area."

Manufacturing in China contracted for the first time in 16 months in July, according to a survey by HSBC Holdings Plc. A purchasing managers' index released today by HSBC and Markit Economics fell to 49.4 from 50.4 in June.

Purchasing Index

The Purchasing Managers' Index was at 51.2 in July, the Federation of Logistics and Purchasing said yesterday. A reading above 50 shows an expansion.

The country's full-year economic growth may be as much as 9.5 percent compared with 9.1 percent in 2009, State Council researcher Zhang Liqun said yesterday.

A tropical depression formed today in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean, according to the National Hurricane Center. The storm has maximum sustained winds of 35 miles (56 kilometers) per hour, 4 mph less than the threshold to be declared a tropical storm and given a name, according to a bulletin released about 11 a.m. Miami time.

August and September are the most active months of the Atlantic hurricane season. Storms can threaten states along the U.S. Gulf of Mexico which account for 31 percent of U.S. oil output and 43 percent of the country's refining capacity.

Brent crude for September settlement gained $2.82, or 3.6 percent, to $81 a barrel on the London-based ICE Futures Europe exchange.

AN ENGLISH SECRET AIRPORT WHICH CONNECTS ARGENTINA WHITH FALKLANDS

http://www.mdzol.com/mdz/nota/211822/

http://www.bolinfodecarlos.com.ar/310710_pista.htm

http://www.malvinense.com.ar/snacional/n01...onia_lewis.html

It is known that it costs big money to Britain to keep supplied the Falkland Islands. Not only military equipment, but medicines, foods etc. A few hours ago a report on a "British" airport in Argentine territory, and the entry of aircraft without customs control without control of the Air Force nor the Navy (without radar), with armed men traveling in a 4x4 and ATVs, catches the attention.

The following intelligence report, is more than concern and suspicion that "Argentina has an airlift to Malvinas." In addition it can be used for more different purposes, ranging from supply, tourism, illegal, or drug trafficking. Since there are no controls at all.

AIRPORT IN PATAGONIA, BUILT BY BRITISH:

In Puerto Lobos, near San Matias Gulf, near the town of Sierra Grande, Province of Rio Negro, has built an airport with a runway 2,000 meters long, located 41 º 50 '34"latitude , 65 º 04 '56"west longitude. This track is already operating since February 23, 2008, when it landed the first aircraft, a Beechcraft King Air B90, Chilean-registered DC-CVZ.

The Air Force of Argentina approved the operation of the airfield, although it is impossible to control, since there is no radar to track the area, so it could land or take off any type of aircraft without being detected.

The track was built by the Company Viarsa SA in a field owned by Nicolas Van Ditmar Bernardo, President and shareholder of Golden Bay SA and Hidden Lake SA, although this is a figurehead, since the property belongs to the English magnate Joe Lewis.

The whole field is protected by a perimeter fence and guarded by heavily armed personnel, moving with 4x4 trucks and ATVs. The signature "Golden Bay Company, CUIT N º 30-70895443-4 30-70895443-4, legal resident Mitre Street No. 86, 2nd Floor, Department" F "of the City of San Carlos de Bariloche, Province Black River, and in Buenos Aires Maipu Street No. 1210, 5th Floor.

The only listed as head of the firm, are Nicolas Van Ditmar Bernardo, National Identity Document No. 17,336,840, and his wife Gloria Venessa Mazza, National Identity Document No. 22,535,523.

The signature "Hidden Lake Corporation," CUIT N º 30-68590523-6 30-68590523-6, legal resident Mitre Street No. 86, 2nd Floor, Department "F" of the City of San Carlos de Bariloche, Province Rio Negro, on the street Liniers No. 2734 of the City of El Bolson, Province of Rio Negro, and in Buenos Aires on the street Marcelo Torcuato de Alvear No. 624, 1st Floor of the City of Buenos Aires. Mentioned as holders: Hemendra Rasesh Thakkar, CUIT N º 23-60205143-9 23-60205143-9, Robert Paul Mangini, CUIT N º 20-20913078-6 20-20913078-6, Charles Barrington Lewis, CUIT N º 20-60205145-6 20 -60,205,145 to 6; Nicolas Van Ditmar Bernardo, and Jefferson Voss.

Actually, who owns this is the English business Charles Joe Lewis, the rest are dummies. The company that operates the runway is "Aviation Tavistock Argentina Sociedad Anónima", CUIT N º 30-70197138-4 30-70197138-4, with headquarters on Maipu Street No. 1300, 10th Floor of the City of Buenos Aires , a subsidiary of Holding Travistock "of American origin, residing in Argentina Maipú Street No. 1210, 5th Floor of the City of Buenos Aires.

Nobody knows what use they give the track that frequency of flights, if they are national or international, with no cargo or passengers are, who controls them, where they pass through Customs or Immigration. The aircraft operates most often in that track is the Dassault Falcon 900, a former American enrollment N158JA, usually by Captain John Zoller, a native of Orlando pilot, United States.

The Company "Tavistock Aviation", he was suspended the authorization to operate in Argentina, in 2005, yet, continues to operate clandestinely in this track:

Ministry of Federal Planning, Public Investment and Services SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION - Resolution No. 193/2005 193/2005

Petrol prices set to soar 8%

09.08.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...ar-8-percent.do

Petrol prices could soar by 8% by the beginning of next year, it was predicted today.

And the cost of filling up at the pumps could rise by 3% by this August Bank Holiday weekend.

The warning to motorists came from the Retail Motor Industry Independent Petrol Retailers Association (RMI Petrol).

It put the blame for the expected rises on currency movements and world oil price increases.

RMI Petrol, which represents around two-thirds of Britain's 9,000 petrol forecourt sites, said petrol prices could rise as high as 125.9p per litre in the new year, smashing the current record high of 121.61p.

This increase would take into account the rise in VAT and the planned hike in fuel duty.

RMI Petrol chairman Brian Madderson said: "The rebound in crude oil pricing is disappointing but not entirely unexpected. It will further increase pressure on independent retailers who are fighting for survival, especially in rural areas, due to the double hit of falling volumes and tighter margins.

"This crude oil increase will feed through the supply chain and could result in prices going up by as much as 4p a litre in the next three weeks."

He went on: "We also need to remember that the coalition Government did not cancel Labour's Budget commitment to raising fuel duty by 1p a litre from October 1 and a further 0.76p from January 1, with both having VAT added.

"Then we have the coalition's emergency Budget proposal to increase VAT to 20% from January 4, so the outlook remains extremely difficult for motorists and retailers alike. As I forecast earlier this summer, we could be seeing new record pump prices within six months.

"All these trends will add to inflationary pressures in our market and across the economy, threatening higher interest rates in the medium term."

More pain at the pumps: Petrol prices to top £1.20 a litre in time for Bank Holiday weekend

By Daily Mail Reporter
Last updated at 12:11 PM on 9th August 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-13...ay-weekend.html

Motorists are set to face even higher prices at the petrol pumps by the end of this month - with the cost of petrol expected to top £1.20 a litre.

The figure - which is close to the all-time high - will mean that filling an average family car will cost £7 more than just a year ago.

The 4p increase on this weekend's average figures will mean Bank Holiday travellers paying £1.21 a litre, with regional variations meaning some drivers will pay much more.

The forecast was made by the RMI Independent Petrol Retailers Association, which represents 6,000 forecourts.

It followed a steady increase in the price of crude oil and comes after warnings that consumers will face much higher food and energy bills in the coming months.

Brian Madderson, RMI chairman, said: 'The rebound in crude oil pricing is disappointing but not entirely unexpected.

'It will increase pressure on independent retailers who are fighting for survival, especially in the rural areas, due to the double hit of falling volumes and tighter margins.

'It will feed through the supply chain and could result in prices going up as much as 4p a litre in the next three weeks.'

Petrol prices peaked in May, with a litre costing 121.6p. In June a barrel of crude oil cost $72, but that has now increased to $82.

Commenting on the rises, AA spokesman Luke Bosdet said: 'Some towns are already charging 6p more than next-door towns because they don't have any competition.

'This forecast is another body blow for these motorists.'

Fuel prices will continue rising because the Coalition Government has not agreed to cancel Labour's pledge to increase duty by 1p a litre in October.

Next year, fuel duty will rise again by 0.76p-a-litre on January 1.

RAC spokesman John Franklin said: 'The future looks bleak for motorists, with rising oil prices and further tax hikes.

'The coalition Government have promised to take a look at options to control the price of petrol. However, the planned fuel duty and VAT rise are likely to add a further 5p a litre.

'If the Government really want to help motorists, they should abandon these planned increases.'

The AA said average petrol prices had now fallen to 116.6p a litre, with diesel at 119.00p.

AA public affairs head Paul Watters said it was unlikely that there would be a sustained rise in oil prices but that petrol prices were 14p a litre higher than they were this time last year.

He added that drivers in south east England and the Home Counties had suffered an 'appalling fuel price lottery this summer', with prices varying by as much as 6p a litre.

Mr Watters said: 'Along the holiday routes, we have seen the drivers hitting back. They arrive at an expensive fuel station put in £10-£15 of fuel and then drive off to find somewhere cheaper.

'Industry sources tell us that sales are down in some areas and we saw prices fall up to 2p a litre last week in some towns, even with wholesale prices beginning to go up.'

religion now the Church of Rome. Who has the control over The City? Society of Jesus soldier, Michael Holman the Provincial working for Antione Kerhuel the powerful regional assistancy. The same Antione who controls north Italy, France, Canada, Ireland, Germany, Belgium, Netherlands, Switzerland, Lebanon and Malta. Remember how the Society of Jesus using their Napolean Bonaparte took Malta off the Maltese Knights then subordinated them, back in 1798 in Russia. Also don't forget how Jesuit Confederate Charles Bonaparte was put into the administration of their U.S by Maltese Knight/Confederate, Theodore Roosevelt. The same Teddy who co conspirated on the assassination of William McKinley which then made him the next President. The Coup d'etat far excelling the trumped up nonsense spread on the slaying of that Knights of Columbus J.F.K who the Church and Spellman detested in the end as a Catholic traitor. While we're on the subject of this cover, we see Henry Kissinger, now what is he? Henry is a Maltese Knight bought about with the help of British Intelligence/ Maltese Tavistock Institute and Maltese Knight, David Rockefeller. Both Rockefeller and Kissinger are subordinate to the Roman control over the sovereign District of Columbia (US), Vatican City and The City. Their subordinate to James Grummer SJ, David Ciancimino SJ, Cardinal Edward Egan, Cardinal Eugene Francis, Matthew Festing & Council, Supreme Primate the Pope & College of Cardinals (Senate), Queen "Guelph" Elizabeth II and the Superior Jesuit General & Assistants. Kissinger is a Papal Adviser working even more in your face for the Supreme Primate and Jesuit General! Yet another example of Hofjuden subordination to the Church of Rome. -CRAIG OXLEY

Now folks remember who Peres is. Peres was trained by the JESUITS in Poland. Peres is a Vatican spy and assassin well educated in the art of the "Cup of Borgia" which he's administered many times. Peres as with all these Israeli "Sabbatian" Labor Masonic Zionists are subordinate to high Sovereign Military Order of Malta Papal Knight and Middle Eastern region commander, King Juan Carlos of Spain. Israel is dominated at the top by VATICAN

Once again folks notice the SERVILITY with the wearing of Black, respecting the POPE being 'Christ on Earth.' Remember these Sabbatians "Have no King, but Caesar!" Notice Peres down at the Aspen Institute, who controls this? The Royal Institution of International Affairs! Who created and controls them through their front Round Tables group and inner cores such as PILGRIM SOCIETY, Order of the Garter? You guessed it, the "Greatest Merchants on Earth," SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA. Loyal to the Vatican.

Oh are we shocked to see Vatican stooge Olmert dressed in Black? I think not.

Funny we should mention the Order of the Garter

Who controls "The Protector of the Holy Sites of Jerusalem?"
Why its 78th Grandmaster Andrew Bertie of course.

Now we see this high SMOM Papal Knight on his knees to the POPE whos officially next up the ladder.

How many get the priviledge to shake this man's hand? This is the PINACLE of control folks. It all ends with the SUPERIOR GENERAL of the SOCIETY OF JESUS period!

The Rothschild dynasty

Guardians of the Vatican Treasury

QUOTE

The Jewish Encyclopedia (Vol. 2, p. 497) admits that:

"It is a somewhat curious sequel to the attempt to set up a Catholic competitor to the Rothschilds that at the present time (1905) the latter are the guardians of the papal treasure."

If this latter statement is true the Rothschilds control in addition to their own fortune the immense liquid resource of the Catholic Church, which is second only to the Rothschilds' in wealth and power.

If you are not an American you will understand why your country is on its present course, as it too is controlled by the Jesuit General through his select Jesuits, Knights of Malta, Shriner Freemasons, the Knights of Columbus, and the Illuminati's Masonic, Cabalistic, Labor Zionist, Sabbatian Frankist (named after the Black Pope's baptized Jacob Frank), Jewish House of Rothschild. For the Order controlled the infamous House of Rothschild since no later than the French Revolution and Napoleonic Wars, after which Jesuit-led Crusade the Rothschild family was surnamed the "Guardians of the Vatican Treasury."

Eric Jon Phelps, „Vatican Assassins", 3rd Ed., p.90

The real power structure

QUOTE

The Treaty of Paris of 1763 designated King George III „Arch-Treasurer and Prince Elector of the Holy Roman Empire." And „according to the Encyclopedia Judaica [sic] the Rothschilds bear the title „Guardians of the Vatican Treasury." The Vatican Treasury, of course, holds the imperial wealth of Rome. Imperial wealth grows in proportion to its victories in war -- as the Jesuit empowerment Regimini militantis ecclesiae implies, the Church-at-War is more necessary than the Church-at-Peace. According to H. Russell Robinson's illustrated Armour of Imperial Rome, Caesarean soldiers protect themselves in battle with shields painted red. Since the soldiery is the State's most valuable resource (the Council of Trent admitted this in preferring the Jesuits to all other religious orders), it is easy to understand why the red shield was identified with the very life of the Church. Hence, the appropriateness of the name Rothschild, German for „red shield." The appointment of Rothschild gave the black papacy absolute financial privacy and secrecy. Who would ever search a family of orthodox Jews for the key to the wealth of the Roman Catholic Church? I believe this appointment explains why the House of Rothschild is famous for helping nations go to war. It is fascinating that, as Meyer Rothschild's sons grew into the family business, the firm took on the title Meyer Amschel Rothschild und Sohne, which gives us the notariqon MARS. Isn't Mars the Roman God of War, whose heavenly manifestation is „the red planet"? There is powerful cabalah here, and there's hardly an acre of inhabitable earth that hasn't been affected by it in some way.

Tupper Saussy: „Rulers of Evil", p. 160-161

QUOTE

„International finance and banking are NOT primarily 'Jewish'. Many of the most powerful banking interests in the world are run by 'Gentiles'. One of the most powerful forces in international banking is the Knights of Malta, a Roman Catholic military order controlled by the Jesuit Superior General. Sadly, even a certain segment of the 'alternative media' helps to propagate the LIE that 'the Jews' run international banking. Interestingly, one of the titles of the Rothschild banking dynasty is 'Guardians of the Vatican Treasury'. 'The Jews', as a people, have been used for centuries as a 'scapegoat' by these international banksters and their secret societies, such as the Jesuit-controlled Knights of Malta. To label 'the Jews' as running banking, Hollywood, etc, is to throw out the proverbial 'red herring' designed to throw us off the scent of the 'real controllers'."

QUOTE

„The Jesuit General has been the most powerful man in the world since Pius VII restored the Order or "Company" in 1814. Because of the Order's suppression by the Pope in 1773, the Jesuits began the Bavarian Illuminati with one of their soldiers, Adam Weishaupt. The Illuminati absorbed the Jewish House of Rothschild creating a colossus of wealth around the world, subject to the Jesuit General. With this financial arm in place the Jesuits then made war on the Vatican including the Pope, the Roman Catholic Monarchs of Europe and the Order of the Dominicans. This Inquisition and Crusade was called "the French Revolution and Napoleonic Wars". For twenty-five years, the Jesuit General's Masonic agents, particularly in the person of Napoleon Bonaparte, conducted war. Bonaparte also punished the Knights of Malta, driving them from their island home to Russia."

Eric Jon Phelps: „Vatican Assassins", 2nd Ed., p. 582

QUOTE

The Jesuits, now formally suppressed by the Pope, were allied with Frederick the Great of Prussia and Catherine II of Russia. The Jesuit General was in control of Scottish Rite Freemasonry and now sought an alliance with the Masonic Baron of the House of Rothschild. To accomplish this he chose a Jesuit who was a German Gentile (not a Jew) by race and a Freemason by association — Adam Weishaupt.

Eric Jon Phelps: „Vatican Assassins", 3rd Ed., p. 401

QUOTE

„The Rothschilds were Jesuits who used their Jewish background as a faûze to cover their sinister activities. The Jesuits, working through Rothschild and [financier Nicholas] Biddle, sought to gain control of the banking system of the United States."

[...]

„The Jesuits used Biddle and Rothschild to gain the upper hand in American banking because they knew they could then control the people and effectively re-write the Constitution according to papal law. Jackson was trying to stop them. "

[...]

„We have already seen that the Rothschilds were the banking agents for the papacy's Church."

[...]

„These three financial families, the Rothschilds, Morgans, and Rockefellers all do the bidding of the Jesuit Order because of Jesuit infiltration in their organizations. They do whatever is necessary to destroy constitutional liberty in America and to bring the pope to world domination. As we look back over the 20th century, we see how successful the Jesuits have been. They have continued to squander the wealth of America and continually attack its great constitution and civil liberties. Daily, the power of the pope in Vatican City increases. One day they will achieve total power again."

Bill Hughes: „The Secret Terrorists", p. 16+17

QUOTE

Seldom is it mentioned: that the Rothschilds, along with other western bankers and industrialists, financed the rise of Hitler as a bulwark against the Soviets. The ultra-right wing falsely describes the Rothschilds as "Jewish bankers" when, in fact, the Rothschilds are interwoven with the Catholic Church, and, jointly with the traditional mafia and the American CIA, interlocked with the Vatican Bank, which was pro-Nazi.

„... the Jesuits were driven to co-operate with the other two international brotherhoods, the Freemasons and the Jews [Rothschild's Illuminati], in the destruction of the Spanish Empire."

Salvador de Madariaga, Spanish Statesman: „The Jesuits", 1820

QUOTE

During the Order's Suppression from 1773 to 1814 by Pope Clement XIV, General Ricci [Eighteenth Superior General of the Society of Jesus, 1758 - 1775] created the Order of the Illuminati with his soldier, Adam Weishaupt, uniting the House of Rothschild with the Society of Jesus.

G. B. Nicolini: „History of the Jesuits: Their Origin, Progress, Doctrines, and Designs", (London: Henry G. Bohn, 1889) pp. 356, 357.

QUOTE

Jesuit Adam Weishaupt, 1748 – 1811
Founder of the Illuminati, 1776

Born at Ingolstadt, Germany, in the heart of Roman Catholic Bavaria from which originated the Order's Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), Adam Weishaupt, a White German Gentile, was educated by the Jesuits; in 1775 he became a notorious professor of the Vatican's murderous Canon Law, including the evil, Counter-Reformation Council of Trent. Since Pope Clement XIV's Bull of Extinction was not enforced in Lutheran Germany, the Order flourished at its University of Ingolstadt, out of which Weishaupt established the Illuminati in 1776 and joined the Grand Orient Masonic Lodge in 1777. He united the magnificent financial empire of the Cabalistic, Masonic, Jewish House of Rothschild, the „Guardians of the Vatican's Treasury," with the opulence of the international and secret, anti-Jewish Race, primarily White Gentile Society of Jesus.

Nesta H. Webster: „Secret Societies and Subversive Movements", (South Pasadena, California: Emissary Publications, 1988; originally published in 1924).

QUOTE

„Weishaupt and his fellow Jesuits cut off the income to the Vatican by launching and leading the French Revolution; by directing Napoleon's conquest of Catholic Europe [as the Order would do with Hitler]; by the revolt against the Church, led by such priests as Father Hidalgo, in Mexico and Latin America; by eventually having Napoleon throw Pope Pius VII in jail at Avignon until he agreed, as the price for his release, to reestablish the Jesuit Order. This Jesuit war on the Vatican was terminated by the Congress of Vienna and by the secret, 1822, Treaty of Verona. . . . Ever since, the Rothschilds have been the fiscal agents of the Vatican."

Emanuel M. Josephson, Jewish American Physician & Historian: „The "Federal" Reserve Conspiracy & Rockefellers", 1968

QUOTE

You'll also find ex British Intelligence officier Dr John Coleman expose how the Rothschilds and even the Rockefellers wealth simply doesn't come close to some of the members of the Committee of 300 which is controlled by the Order of the Garter, Pilgrim Society, all inner cores of the SMOM!

[...]

The Jews were bought into positions of power within Banking back in 1066 by the Norman Anglo-Saxon Monarchs. For this they accepted being controlled. Remember that the Law of Banking is known as International Maritime Admiralty Law. This Maritime Law was based on VATICAN Canon Law. All the "War Banks" known as Central banks get controlled from SMOM controlled Switzerland. The Federal Reserve pays the Bank of England which finally ends up in the Swiss Bank of International Settlements. All you need to do is study the SMOM and its members then look whos who in Banking.

"[FDR's] Ambassador [to the Court of St. James and Archbishop Francis Spellman's most powerful Knight of Malta, the pro-fascist, pro-Hitler] Joseph Kennedy had spoken to fifty of Hollywood's leading Jewish movie makers in a secret meeting (1941) in one of their homes. He had told them sternly that they must not protest as Jews, and that they must keep their Jewish rage against the Germans out of print. . . . As a result of Kennedy's cry for silence, all of Hollywood's top Jews went around with their grief hidden like a Jewish fox under their Gentile vests."

Seems CSIS, Alfred Lambremont Webre is now attacking Eric Jon Phelps with this pathetic diamond smear. They've looked high and low for some dirt on Eric and could not find any. The racism smears do not work as more people keep flocking to our information. So now they have to twist and push this Israel-Diamond issue which is actually meaningless. Amazing how supposedly intelligent people could think they'd get away with this. They know the hardcore researchers of truth wont be swayed by their junk but their aiming all this at the new baby researcher. The ones who long onto these agents and their coat tails. The ones who are being falsely programmed to Jews (Hofjuden Court Jews) ruling the World nonsense. The same information my mother's cats would come out with.

Lets just forget from now on these people completely and continue as usual. They want the bickering and distractions. The Jesuit loves all this! I personally will not entertain debating etc on the subject any more. I will say a big thankyou to the Society of Jesus and their Zionist hating chums, as their simply helping to advertise us all further. Once people with a brain read all our works, links, books etc they will soon see the truth in front of them. So thankyou again, but at the same time death to the Society of Jesus. What makes me laugh is how they claim as if only Eric Phelps has said the Rothschilds are mere pawns. They forget Dr John Coleman speaking of the weak Rothschilds in the grand scheme of things. He spoke of The Fondi of Venice/Italy. Theres others too who've said the same thing. Rothschilds are powerful Hofjudens but their simply that Hofjuden Court Masonic Labor Sabbatean Frankists. Utilising the front of Judism same as the Dragon using Roman Catholism. Both fronts for the Luciferian religion at the top. The more they attack us the more we win, so keep it up!

Alex Jones is Central Intelligence Agency controlled through and through and he's scared of losing his mass funding by them. Yet another phony Protestant who enters Jesuit establishments and praises them. Reminds me of that phony Protestant Rowan Williams! Quote:
Dear Mack,

Thank you for contacting me and for your concern for the truth.

Concerning the earth, I have never said that it hangs by a string. I have said that the sun revolves around the earth and the earth is at rest as per Psalm 19 and a host of other scriptures. True objective science further validates geocentricity which I defend in antithesis to heliocentricity.

Concerning the detonations at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, I have stated in my book that both were ground detonations set up by Jesuits on site. One of those Jesuits was Pedro Arrupe who later became the Jesuit General. The bombs that were dropped by the B-29s were magnesium flash bombs with uranium or plutonium contained therein so as to give the illusion that "atomic" bombs were dropped over those cities. When the flash bombs detonated above the sites, the Jesuits on the ground and shielded beneath the atomic devices, then detonated the atomic devices. First came the flash, then came the detonation on the ground. At Hiroshima, five Jesuits emerged from ground zero unscathed and attributed their survival to "a miracle of the Virgin Mary." I have said nothing about a black magic nuclear bomb.

I trust this is helpful.

Sincerely in faith,

Brother Eric

Obelisks in Rome

Throughout Rome one can venture and see a variety of giant monuments of tapered red granite, piercing the sky. These monoliths are called obelisks, derived from the Greek word obelos, meaning “skewer”, therefore these towering monuments are literally sky skewers. Thirteen of these ancient monoliths dot the piazzas and major areas of Rome. Some have remained in their current positions in Rome since 1586, while others have been moved as recently as 1924. Obelisks are architecturally stunning and they are tall and are often carved from a single block of stone. The material used is usually red granite, although marble has been used as well. All obelisks share a basic structure: square base, four sides that taper and extend into the sky, and are all topped with a small pyramid, called a pyramidion.

The Ancient Egyptians created and designed the first obelisks in the world, but other cultures have since adapted these sky piercing monoliths to fit their own ambitions of power and cultural symbolism. Obelisks exist in several places throughout the world such as in Turkey, London, Cairo, Luxor, and even in the United States. In all of these places, obelisks were erected for religious, celebrative, and/or decorative purposes.

The Egyptian obelisks were built to symbolize a contact between earth and heaven; man and God. This is why obelisks stand so tall and taper to the top. The obelisks were originally part of the cult of the sun god Ra. The hieroglyphics usually mentioned the Pharaohs of that period and their accomplishments. Often the Pharaoh’s names are surrounded by an oval cartouche, and the spellings of names are always changing because nothing in ancient Egyptian is ever spelled quite the same.

During the second half of the 1st century BC, Egypt fell to Rome and became part of the Roman Empire. After many conquests of Egypt by Rome, emperors brought back several of the Egyptian obelisks as symbolism of their triumph and of their power. Romans placed special structures on top of all of the obelisks, usually in bronze, which was unique to Romans. Egyptians made of an alloy of silver and gold and placed in onto the pyramidium in order to reflect the sun rays.

Later, Romans created obelisks in an attempt to emulate the Egyptian obelisks. These Romans tried to imitate hieroglyphs – much of which were done incorrectly. Romans liked to place these obelisks into the circuses and outside of temples or mausoleums for decorative purposes.

When Rome fell, obelisks did as well. Many were lost until Pope Sixtus V devised a plan to re-erect the monoliths and use them as special landmarks across the city to guide the pilgrims through Rome in the late 16th century. Main, straight streets were designed with obelisks linking the large basilicas together. The original plan was designed to see each obelisk from one to another in straight lines, but now you cannot because of the change of building structures and relocation of some of the obelisks over the years.

Map of Obelisks in Everyday Roma

Pope Pius VI in the late 18th century gained an interest in obelisks as well, and he erected several more obelisks, including three popular obelisks: at Quirinal, Trinita dei Monti, and the Montecitori.

Later in the 20th century, Mussolini tried to recreate the ancient Roman grandeur by erecting some of his own obelisks, including the Axum obelisk he had stolen from Ethiopia during the fascist period in 1937. Treaties were signed with the United Nations twice to return the obelisk to its rightful home in Ethiopia, in 1947 and 1997 but Rome was stubborn and the obelisk was not actually returned until 2002.

Vaticano Obelisk

One of the most famous obelisks in Rome is the Vaticano Obelisk, located in the center of St. Peter's square. This obelisk is 25.5 meters tall and is one of only three in Rome that isn't inscribed, which makes an original creation date hard to determine. The obelisk was first moved to Alexandria by Emperor Augustus to decorate the Julian Forum, and it was then moved to Rome in 37AD, from Heliopolis, by Emperor Caligula to decorate Nero's Circus. It remained standing throughout the Middle Ages which was quite the achievement because during this period was when most obelisks fell. Since it had stood for so long, the obelisk became highly important to Romans and the church because it was a witness to all of the martyrdoms (including St. Peter) and transitional periods in the histories of Rome and the Vatican. Pope Sixtus V ordered that the obelisk be moved and re-erected by Chief engineer Domenico Fontana – who later erected several more of Sixtus' obelisks – in 1585 to the center of Vatican Square, in front of St. Peter's Basilica. This assembly took 140 horses and 900 men and once completed, Fontana was carried on the people's shoulders all the way to his home as a tribute to his success.

An interesting rumor spread when the obelisk was in Nero's Circus that Julius Cesar's ashes were stored in the bronze globe that sat on top of the obelisk. However, during the move from the Circus to St. Peter's Square, workers inspected the globe and found that it was cast as a single unit and could not have contained the ashes. While examining the bronze globe, they discovered bullets and bullet holes, leading them to believe it had probably been used as target practice during the sack of Rome. The globe now remains in the Capitoline Museum. The rumor arose because of an inscription at the base of the obelisk. This inscription is now barely legible only during certain times of day when the sun hits the shadows right, and it contains an ancient dedication to Caesar. On top of the obelisk now sits a bronze spire that contains symbols of Pope Sixtus V's family (the Chigi) of three hills and a star. On top of his symbols rests a Christian cross. Pope Innocent XIII added his own symbol, the crowned eagle, to the base later on.

Esquiline Obelisk

The Esquiline obelisk is located in the Piazza dell'Esquilino near the Basilica of St. Mary Maggiore, where it has stood since 1587. It was erected by Sixtus V in 1587 in hopes that it would be a part of Sixtus' plan to connect to obelisks at other locations, which did not work out as he had hoped. The obelisk originally stood outside the Mausoleum of Augustus with a twin obelisk.

Lateran Obelisk

The Lateran, or Lateranense, Obelisk is the largest, best preserved obelisk in Rome. Erected in the Piazza di San Giovanni in Laterano in 1588 by Pope Sixtus V, it's the tallest Egyptian obelisk in the world and the last to be brought back from Egypt. It reaches 32.15 meters (105.6 feet) and weighs over 230 tons, all of which is red granite.

The Lateran Obelisk was originally created by Pharoah Tutmosi in the 15th century BC and was taken from the temple of Amun in Karnak by Constantine the Great who moved the obelisk to Alexandria, a northern Egyptian city that had had grown immensely in importance. Many Roman Emperors had been interested in this obelisk, but it's massive size led to problems in transportation. In 357AD, the giant obelisk was finally transported to Rome by way of a special ship ordered by Emperor Constant I, the son and successor of Constantine, and was placed in the center of the Circus Maximus.

The monolith was struck by lightning once and later broke into three pieces and was lost in the muddy field of the ruined Circus Maximus until Pope Sixtus V order an excavation in the 16th century. This excavation was in thanks to the original discovery of the fragments by botanist and geologist Michele Mercati. Sixtus had Fontana, the same man who erected the Vaticano Obelisk, erect the monolith in its current position. On top of the obelisk rests bronze lions, stars, mountains, and a Christian cross. The base has inscriptions that mention the history of the obelisk, Constantine, and the process of its movement from Egypt to Rome by a ship with 300 rowers. The hieroglyphs mention Egyptian Pharoahs Totmes III and Totmes IV.

Flaminian Obelisk

The Flaminian Obelisk, aka Flaminio, was erected in the Piazza del Popolo in 1589 by Pope Sixtus V and is the second oldest obelisk in Rome. It stands at 24 meters tall and was originally erected at the Sun Temple at Heliopolis by Pharoah Ramses II along with his father Seti I, who carved inscriptions on the monolith in 1300 BC. One inscription reads “the one who fills Heliopolis with obelisks that their rays may illuminate the Temple of Ra"(NOVA). Other inscriptions on the obelisk mention the sun gods Re-Horakhty, Amun, and Khepri. Augustus brought this obelisk back from Egypt to celebrate his triumph in 10AD and placed it in the Campus Martius. When the Byzantines and the Goths invaded Rome, the obelisk fell and was lost until rediscovered in 1587. Bronze mountains and stars and a cross also rest atop this obelisk to represent Pope Sixtus V. Legend has it that this obelisk has a twin that stood with it at the Sun Temple, but no trace of this obelisk has been found. There has been, however, a discovery of an obelisk in the ocean by Qaitbay Fort that mentions Pharaoh Seti I – they are still unsure as to whether it is the twin of the Flaminian or not.

Argonalis Obelisk

The Agonalis Obelisk was erected in Piazza Navona in 1651 by Pope Innocence in an attempt to follow Sixtus' example. This obelisk is not originally Egyptian and was created in Rome sometime during the 1st century in the era of Diocletian as a copy of the Egyptian monoliths. Therefore, it is not surprising that the hieroglyphs are incorrect. Originally it was in the Circus Maximus, but it fell and broke into many pieces. Pope Innocence followed the example that Pope Sixtus V set and fixed the obelisk and placed it on top of Bernini's famous Four Rivers statue.

Minerveo Obelisk

The Minerveo Obelisk was erected in the middle of the Piazza della Minerva in 1667 by Pope Alexander VII. Made entirely of red granite, it is one of the smallest obelisks in Rome standing at barely five and a half meters. This obelisk is actually part of a twin pair that dates back to the 6th century BC. It was taken from the Egyptian town of Sais where it had originally stood outside the Temple of Isis with its twin. It fell and was found again in 1655, fixed, and placed here 22 years later.

Acting as a base to this obelisk up is a statue of an elephant designed by Bernini and executed by Ercole Ferrata. This was the last work that Pope Alexander VII commissioned to Bernini and his assistants. Bernini actually studied an elephant to get a realistic appearance. He succeeded; the statue is almost life size. The inscription, dictated by the Pope and in Latin, states “He who sees the carved symbols on the obelisk of wise Egypt borne by the elephant, the strongest of animals, will understand that it is indeed a robust min which sustains a solid wisdom”(InfoRoma). The rear end of the elephant faces the Dominican Monastery, and rumors have arisen that Pope Alexander VII had the elephant placed that way deliberately.

On top of the obelisk is the insignia of the pope and the Christian cross. This obelisk is an important example of propaganda placed by the church because the symbol of Christianity sits on top of the symbol of the papacy which sits on top of a Pagan monolith which sits on top of a baroque statue. Interpretation of this is that the church triumphs over all. The pope uses his symbols as a type of propaganda as well to show his power and his closeness to God and Christ. On the elephants forehead, the words “zeal and industry” can be read in Latin.

Macuteo Obelisk

The Macuteo Obelisk is just over 6 meters tall and was erected by Pope Clement XI in 1711 in the Piazza della Rotunda, just outside of the Pantheon. The fountain the monolith rests on was designed by Giacomo della Porta in the 16th Century and was not originally designed to hold an obelisk. It originally stood outside the Temple of the Sun God in Heliopolis, Egypt, and was brought to Rome to decorate the Temple of Isis. The hieroglyphs mention Ramses II, who reigned in the 13th century BC.

Quirinal Obelisk

The Quirinal Obelisk, located in the Piazza del Quirinale and erected in 1786 by Pope Pius VI, is a near-twin of the Esquiline Obelisk that sits outside of St. Maria Maggiore. This obelisk contains no hieroglyphics and the origin is not known for sure, but it once stood outside the Mausoleum of Augustus with its near-twin that is a few centimeters different in height. The obelisk fell during the Middle Ages and was forgotten until 1781 when workers, who had been reconstructing houses for a maternity hospital, hit red granite. The obelisk was in four pieces and Pope Pius VI had it fixed and commissioned architect Giovanni Antinori to re-erect the obelisk on a fountain outside Palazzo Quirinale, in between two giant equestrian statues. Antinori erected several of Pius' obelisks and was well respected. This obelisk used to be on the Italian 500 lira coin.

Sallustiano Obelisk

The Sallustiano Obelisk is located directly in front of the Spanish Steps in the Trinita dei Monti, where it has stood since 1789. It was formerly located in the Sallustiano Gardens and was actually built in Rome, not in Egypt. The hieroglyphs on this obelisk are very incorrect and were carved mainly as a decorative and exotic design. The symbols are probably wrong because the workers tried to copy inscriptions from another obelisk that was lying on its side.

Solare Obelisk

The Solare Obelisk (aka Solar Obelisk, aka Obelisk of Monecitorio, aka Campense obelisk) was erected in the Piazza di Monecitori in 1792 in front of Italy's parliament building by Pope Pius VI. It stands at 21.79 meters (72 feet) and weighs 230 tons. Originally from early 7th century Egypt in Heliopolis near Cairo, the obelisk was erected by Pharoah Psammetichus II, the third king of the 26th dynasty of Egypt. The obelisk was made especially for the sun god Ra, as can be read in the hieroglyphics. The inscriptions are quite eroded, but the remaining ones say something similar to "The Golden Horus, 'beautifying the Two Lands,' beloved of Atum, lord of Heliopolis; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Neferibre, beloved of Re-Harakhti; the son of his own body, who seizes the White Crown and who unites the Double Crown, Psammetikos, beloved of the Souls of Heliopolis"(NOVA).

Augustus brought it to Rome to commemorate his victory and placed it in the Campus Martius (Field of Mars) to act as the gnomon (the needle) for a giant sundial called the horologium, designed by Marcus Agrippa, that showed both time of day and the days of the calendar. Bronze markers and notches representing days, months, and years were set into the travertine marble that stretched to 160 meters long to complete the sundial. On the emperor's birthday, September 23, sunlight sent a shadow into the center of the Alter of Peace.

The Solare Obelisk fell around the 11th century and was found in 1748 in five separate pieces and was fixed and moved to its current location by Pope Pius VI, who place a pierced globe on top. At noon, a sunbeam can be seen going through the bronze globe placed at the top and casts shadows of dates on the ground.

Matteiano Obelisk

The Matteiano Obelisk was part of the noble Mattei family collection and was erected in the gardens of their villa on the Celian Hill in 1582 and was moved in 1820 to Villa Celimontana. Rumor has it that a workman crushed his hand during the erection in the gardens and Ciriaco Mattei took care of him and his family for the rest of their lives, a kind act not often practiced by such a powerful family. The obelisk originally was erected in Heliopolis and the inscriptions date back to Ramses II in the 13th century BC.

Pinciano Obelisk

The Pinciano Obelisk, aka Barberinus Obelisk, aka Lunar Obelisk of Antonius, was erected on the Pincian Hill in 1822 by Pope Pius VII. It was originally brought to Rome by Emperor Hadrian and placed east of the Aurelean Wall. It stands at nearly ten meters tall and the hieroglyphs were most likely carved in Rome. The inscriptions say that the obelisk marks the spot where Antonius was buried, but that is mostly speculation. In 1633, the Barberini family removed the obelisk from its location and placed it in their palace. Princess Cornelia Barberini gave the obelisk to Pope Clement XIV and it remained in the Vatican until Pope Pius VI erected it where it now stands.

Dogali Obelisk

The Dogali Obelisk is different than the other obelisks in Rome for one main reason: it represents fallen soldiers instead of the triumph of the church. Found near the church St. Sopra Minerva in 1883, it was fixed and later erected near the Baths of Diocletian in 1924. The pedestal the monolith rests on is dedicated to the many Italian soldiers that died in the battle of Dogali in Ethiopia in 1887 and their names are inscribed in the marble.

Obelisks in Rome are much more than just giant sky skewers, they depict a long history of battle and triumph and above all, they show the importance of propagandized power among Rome and the church. Though they are ancient in creation, many obelisks still remain, standing tall, reminding us to stop and look up every once in awhile.

Theres been some other good anti-Jesuit videos out there which I've liked too. I would say that the more I've gone over my video the more I feel yes I've killed it, as in bam in your face. I like the hard hitting tabloid in me when its arises like Horus in the Zone.

I love the 8-bit music...

But that image of the all-seeing-eye in the Jesuit Church it is not from the Sonsón-Rionegro Diocecis in Columbia, but its from the Church of San Rafael de Velasco, Santa Cruz, in Bolivia which belongs to the Jesuitical Reductions and Missions of South America.

Great video Craig!!!

Super picture showing Panetta's daughter with Chavez, wow. Reminds me of the Black Caucus members flying to Cuba right after Obama elections in April and meeting Castro brothers.

Michael Jackson to be buried without his brain

Organ removed as investigators seek clues to star's death

WORLD EXCLUSIVE by David Gardner in Los Angeles 5/07/2009
http://www.mirror.co.uk/celebs/news/2009/0...15875-21495043/

Michael Jackson will be buried this week– without his brain. As his family tries to finalise details for the King of Pop's funeral on Tuesday they have been told it will be held back for tests.

They faced the grim choice of waiting up to three weeks for Jackson's brain to be returned to them or go ahead and bury him without it – which they have decided to do.

Los Angeles Coroner's spokesman Craig Harvey confirmed that neuropathology tests will be carried out to see if it holds any clues to the exact cause of his death.

But the examination cannot begin until at least two weeks after the death when the brain has hardened sufficiently to slice it open.

Jackson died from a cardiac arrest at his Beverly Hills mansion on June 25 after a suspected overdose of painkillers.

Sources at the coroner's office revealed that his brain was removed before his body was released to relatives the next day.

A forensic neuropathologist will test Jackson's brain for, among other things, past drug use and whether he has suffered overdoses in the past.

The brain can also show any past abuse of alcohol or if the deceased had suffered from any one of a number of diseases. The source said that removing the brain is the "only way to carry out the tests".

"The tissue has to be examined," he said. "I can't tell you how long that is going to take."

One expert explained that the Jackson family could decide to wait and bury the brain with the rest of the body. But it is far more common for the lab to burn the remains once they've been examined or for them to be placed into the grave at a later date.

"It's up to the family. They can bury him and then bury the brain later on," said Dr Cyril Wecht, a former coroner and one of America's foremost forensic pathologists.

But he added: "It's rare for the body to be held back for two weeks or more."

Jackson's body was handed over to his family soon after the three-hour autopsy was completed and the Jacksons went on to order a second forensic examination.

But Dr Wecht said: "The brain cannot be properly examined at the time of the autopsy. You cannot test it while it is in the body. So it is cut off at the spinal cord and removed."

The brain would usually be placed in a plastic bucket, suspended in formaldehyde fluid, and put in a refridgerator at 4C to preserve it.

Dr Wecht went on: "People don't realise how soft the brain is. To do the type of detailed examination required you need to have the brain much harder – and for that you have to wait for at least 10 days to two weeks."

Dr Wecht, who was not involved in the Jackson autopsies, has reviewed and been consulted on many high-profile deaths, including John F. Kennedy, Elvis Presley and Anna Nicole Smith.

"In Los Angeles they have a neuropathologist they work with, and he will be looking at the brain," he said.

It is cut into sections of less than half-an-inch thick and reviewed first by the naked eye and then through a microscopic. "That all takes 17 to 18 days," Dr Wecht added in an exclusive interview.

Dr Wecht, who chronicles his career dissecting more than 16,000 bodies in his best- selling memoir A Question Of Murder, added: "In the 47 years I have been doing this I reckon only about one per cent of families say they want the brain back so they can bury it. In most cases it is incinerated."

The autopsy is expected to show that the 50-year-old singer had drugs in his system when he died.

At various times, he is said to have been taking Demerol and Oxycontin for pain from old back and leg injuries and Diprivan, a hospital anaesthetic, to help him sleep.

- MICHAEL Jackson starred as the Scarecrow in The Wiz, the 1978 musical version of The Wizard of Oz – playing the character without a brain opposite Diana Ross as Dorothy.

HERES SOME CRUCIAL EGYPTIAN DEATH INFORMATION

QUOTE

Egyptian Afterlife Ceremonies, Sarcophagi, Burial Masks

Ancient Egyptian civilization was based on religion; their belief in the rebirth after death became their driving force behind their funeral practices. Death was simply a temporary interruption, rather than complete cessation, of life, and that eternal life could be ensured by means like piety to the gods, preservation of the physical form through Mummification, and the provision of statuary and other funerary equipment. Each human consisted of the physical body, the 'ka', the 'ba', and the 'akh'. The Name and Shadow were also living entities. To enjoy the afterlife, all these elements had to be sustained and protected from harm.

Before the Old Kingdom, bodies buried in desert pits were naturally preserved by desiccation. The arid, desert conditions continued to be a boon throughout the history of ancient Egypt for the burials of the poor, who could not afford the elaborate burial preparations available to the elite. Wealthier Egyptians began to bury their dead in stone tombs and, as a result, they made use of artificial mummification, which involved removing the internal organs, wrapping the body in linen, and burying it in a rectangular stone sarcophagus or wooden coffin. Beginning in the Fourth Dynasty, some parts were preserved separately in canopic jars.

By the New Kingdom, the ancient Egyptians had perfected the art of mummification; the best technique took 70 days and involved removing the internal organs, removing the brain through the nose, and desiccating the body in a mixture of salts called natron. The body was then wrapped in linen with protective amulets inserted between layers and placed in a decorated anthropoid coffin. Mummies of the Late Period were also placed in painted cartonnage mummy cases. Actual preservation practices declined during the Ptolemaic and Roman eras, while greater emphasis was placed on the outer appearance of the mummy, which was decorated.

Wealthy Egyptians were buried with larger quantities of luxury items, but all burials, regardless of social status, included goods for the deceased. Beginning in the New Kingdom, books of the dead were included in the grave, along with shabti statues that were believed to perform manual labor for them in the afterlife Rituals in which the deceased was magically re-animated accompanied burials. After burial, living relatives were expected to occasionally bring food to the tomb and recite prayers on behalf of the deceased.

Egyptians also believed that being mummified was the only way to have an afterlife. Only if the corpse had been properly embalmed and entombed in a mastaba, could the dead live again in the Fields of Yalu and accompany the Sun on its daily ride.

Anubis and Ma'at

Anubis is the Greek name for a jackal-headed god associated with mummification and the afterlife in Egyptian mythology. In the ancient Egyptian language, Anubis is known as Inpu, (variously spelled Anupu, Ienpw etc.). The oldest known mention of Anubis is in the Old Kingdom pyramid texts, where he is associated with the burial of the king. At this time, Anubis was the most important god of the Dead but he was replaced during the Middle Kingdom by Osiris.

Anubis takes various titles in connection with his funerary role, such as He who is upon his mountain, which underscores his importance as a protector of the deceased and their tombs, and the title He who is in the place of embalming, associating him with the process of mummification. Like many ancient Egyptian deities, Anubis assumes different roles in various contexts, and no public procession in Egypt would be conducted without an Anubis to march at the head.

In Ancient Egyptian religion, when the body died, parts of its soul known as ka (body double) and the ba (personality) would go to the Kingdom of the Dead. While the soul dwelt in the Fields of Aaru, Osiris demanded work as payback for the protection he provided. Statues were placed in the tombs to serve as substitutes for the deceased.

The Funerary Scene

Arriving at one's reward in afterlife was a demanding ordeal, requiring a sin-free heart and the ability to recite the spells, passwords, and formulae of the Book of the Dead.

Series Of Triple Eclipses To Occur This Year

Published on 07-06-2009 Email To Friend Print Version
http://www.thenews.com.pk/updates.asp?id=82263

A rare astronomical event, a series of triple eclipses starting from July this year will occur across the world including Pakistan.

According to Pakistan Meteorological Department's (PMD) calculations, a penumbral lunar and a total solar eclipse will occur in the month of July and another lunar eclipse will also be witnessed in August.

However, the penumbral eclipse of the moon is expected to occur on July 07 (Tuesday) will not be visible in the country.

The eclipse will begin at 8:33 according to Universal Time (UT) while it will be visible in Pakistan at 14:33 hrs according to Pakistan Standard Times (PST).

The eclipse will end on 10:44 UT and the greatest eclipse will be at 9:19. The eclipse will only be visible in most parts of Canada, America and Australia. It is so minor and will be completely invisible to the naked eye.

The second eclipse of the series, solar eclipse will occur on July 22 and it will be visible in Pakistan, India, China, Japanese islands and the South Pacific Ocean.

The partial eclipse will be visible from Eastern Asia, Indonesia and Pacific Ocean.

The solar eclipse will start at 23:58 UT that will end on 5:12. The greatest eclipse will be at 8:35 UT.

Penumbral eclipse of the moon will occur on August 06 which will be visible from Europe, Africa and South America. It will not be visible to the naked eye and partially visible in Pakistan at the time of moon set.

The eclipse will begin at 23:01 UT and end on 2:17 and the greatest eclipse will be at 00:39, according to Universal Time.

A partial eclipse of the moon will also occur in December this year which will be best visible from the Northern Canada, Alaska, Australia, Indonesia, Asia, Africa, Europe and the Artic regions and will also be visible from Pakistan.

According to PMD's calculations, there will be six eclipses, two solar and four lunar eclipses during this year.

The first solar eclipse of the year had occurred in January which was not visible in Pakistan. While the deepest penumberal eclipse of the moon occurred in February this year that was partially visible in the country for a very short time.

Please take note that Michael Jackson was born in InDIANA. The State flag utilises the five pointed pentagram of the feminine Venus, the daugher of the Moon Goddess and therefore sister of Apollo! Notice the flame of Prometheus & Chronos the boss of all the Titan Gods. The same torch above Princess Diana's crash site in the city of Isis known as Paris, France. The torch which the Statue of Liberty holds signalling the worship of the bi-sexual God known as Bacchus who was the God of 'freedom from both cares and worries.' Notice the use of the mirror with the feminine Moon Goddess representing her reflection on her waters on Earth she controls. Now notice how the mirror is used often in programming techniques of the mind of feminines and within movies. This is symbolism of the afterlife communication just as Bacchus communicates with the afterlife. Michael even had a single in 1988 called 'Man in the Mirror'. Remember that the State of Liberty is not of a feminine, its of a bi-sexual a hermaphrodite infact. Thus tying in with Both Lunar deity worship and Bacchus worship. Notice that Apollo Eagle like the one which eats Prometheus's liver nightly. That Sun, firebird known as the Pheonix! Now remember how Apollo is a God of plague and disease. This may fit well with the coming A/H1N1 scenario shortly as I spoke about before.

All timed perfectly for Lunar and Solar ritual of this Apollo character. Physicians are always used to kill off their patients when given the order. This has happened throughout time with the likes of the Jesuits especially. Plato always said if you wasn't your own physician by the age of 40 you were a fool. It should infact be a long time before that. Never utilise the medicial industry, be prepared to die if you have to because they'll certainly kill you and enslave you prior to death. Jackson had to die when he did it was perfect occult ritual. It's all tying into the end of the age of Pisces and the moving into Aquarius. This is a very big event as we not only change a whole age we actually now start a complete new Mazzaroth itself from scratch. Expect even more rituals shortly wether you see them or not. -Craig

Michael Jackson's death could be homicide, say police

By Mail Foreign Service
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-11...say-police.html

Police probing Michael Jackson's death revealed today that charges could be filed against the doctors who allegedly administered the tragic singer's medication.

Detectives, who have spoken with the star's numerous former medics about his prescription drug history, are waiting for the results of toxicology tests before they make a decision.

But they conceded today that his death could be homicide.

Los Angeles Police Chief Bill Bratton told CNN that officers are waiting for the coroner's report before ruling out any possibilities in their 'comprehensive and far-reaching' investigation.

It is hoped the report will finally determine the cause of the 50-year-old's sudden two weeks ago.

Chief Bratton said: ‘Based on those we’ll have an idea of what we’re dealing with.

‘Are we dealing with homicide? Are we dealing with an accidental overdose? What are we dealing with?’

He said detectives are gathering evidence, including items seized from Jackson’s rented home and arranging interviews with his many physicians, but the police chief deferred to the coroner to determine the cause of death.

He added: ‘The next move really is his. We’re not marking time waiting for his report.’

The Drug Enforcement Administration and the state attorney general’s office, which keeps a database of prescription drugs, are assisting investigators.

An attorney for Dr Arnold Klein, the dermatologist who is rumoured to have fathered Jackson’s children, told the Los Angeles Times that his client was subpoenaed for medical records, which he turned over to the county coroner’s office.

Chief Bratton refused to discuss details of the case.

Jackson, who died June 25, had a well-known history of using prescription medications, especially painkillers.

ollowing his death, Cherilyn Lee, a registered nurse who had worked for Jackson, said she repeatedly rejected his demands for the potent anesthetic Diprivan, also known as Propofol.

Jackson had multiple doctors, friends and staff who came in and out of his life.

Which people were being interviewed by police was unclear because the LAPD has said virtually nothing about the probe.

Police towed a doctor’s car from Jackson’s home hours after he died and said later it could contain medication or other evidence.

Coroner’s officials also said Jackson was taking prescription medication but declined to elaborate.

Michael Jackson's Former Lawyer Dead

11:03am UK, Saturday May 01, 2010
Damien Pearse, Sky News Online
http://news.sky.com/skynews/Home/Showbiz-N...parent_Suicide_

Michael Jackson's former music lawyer Peter Lopez has been found shot dead in an apparent suicide.

Mr Lopez, 60, who was married to Dukes Of Hazzard actress Catherine Bach, was found dead at his home in the Encino Hills in California.

A neighbour reported hearing a shot and someone at the home found Mr Lopez's body, coroner's officials said.

Ms Bach, who played Daisy Duke in the 1980s TV series, and her two daughters suffered a "tragic personal loss", said her publicist, Steve Rohr.

I'd known Peter for 20 years. I can't think of a nicer individual. He was a good guy. I'm just so shocked.
Raymone Bain

Mr Lopez was Jackson's music lawyer for several years. He also represented The Eagles, Andrea Bocelli and Michael Buble.

"We are deeply shocked and saddened by the unexpected loss of our friend and partner," a spokesman for Mr Lopez's firm Kleinberg Lopez Lange Cuddy & Klein said.

Raymone Bain, Michael Jackson's former general manager, said she hired Peter Lopez in 2006 as Jackson's entertainment attorney.

"I'd known Peter for 20 years," she said. "I can't think of a nicer individual."

She added: "He was a good guy. I'm just so shocked."

She said Mr Lopez travelled with her and Jackson to London for the World Music Awards and that he spoke to the singer quite often.

Tony Blair attacks Iraq Inquiry as part of Britain's 'obsession with conspiracy theories'

By Jason Groves
Last updated at 9:38 AM on 09th February 2010
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-12...-theories.html#

Tony Blair yesterday launched an extraordinary attack on the Iraq inquiry - as the chairman warned that he and others could be recalled over 'gaps' in their evidence.

In an outspoken interview in the U.S., the former prime minister dismissed the inquiry as part of a ' continual desire to sort of uncover some great conspiracy'.

Speaking on Fox News he said critics of the war were obsessed with conspiracy theories, and refused to accept that his motives were 'genuine'.

Asked about why the inquiry was being held he said: 'There's always got to be a scandal as to why you hold your view.

'There's got to be some conspiracy behind it. Some great, you know, deceit that's gone on, and people just find it hard to understand that it's possible for people to have different points of view and hold them reasonably for genuine reasons.'

His attack came as the chairman of the Iraq inquiry hinted that members of Mr Blair's government may have given misleading evidence or even lied.

In an ominous closing statement yesterday Sir John Chilcot said high-profile evidence from Mr Blair, Alastair Campbell, Jack Straw and others would form only 'one element' of the inquiry.

Sir John said his team was now studying tens of thousands of secret government documents which he said revealed 'what really went on' in the build-up to the 2003 invasion.

He said the documents suggested there were 'gaps' in the evidence the inquiry had heard so far.

Sources yesterday said the inquiry panel was now weighing up whether to order a sensational recall of Mr Blair and other witnesses later this year.

Sir John's comments suggest he is meticulously matching the claims made by witnesses against Government documents.

They are likely to alarm several former members of Mr Blair's government who have already given evidence.

Justice Secretary Jack Straw yesterday looked taken aback when he was asked detailed questions about official notes of conversations which apparently showed the U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell had told him the U.S. would invade Iraq 'come what may'.

Mr Straw initially said he could not 'recollect' such a conversation but later agreed to consult his records after members of the inquiry made it clear they knew the conversations had taken place.

Sir John yesterday said the documents would form 'the great bulk' of the evidence considered by the inquiry.

He added: 'They allow us to shine a bright light into seldom seen corners of the government machine, revealing what really went on behind the scenes before, during and after the Iraq conflict.

'Over the next few months we shall examine all the evidence that we have received, including those documents. That will enable us to see where the evidence joins together and where there are gaps.'

Sir John said the inquiry also hoped to hold talks with former members of the Bush administration.

Sources said the inquiry panel may travel to Washington this year in the hope of meeting senior figures including Colin Powell, former National Security Advisor Condoleezza Rice and Judge Alberto Gonzales, who helped persuade Attorney-General Lord Goldsmith to change his mind over the legality of the war.

Gordon Brown and David Miliband will give evidence to the inquiry in the next three to four weeks, after which public hearings will be suspended until after the election.

Release of economic data delayed by storm

By Rex Nutting, MarketWatch

WASHINGTON (MarketWatch) -- Government statistical agencies delayed the release of some economic data as the second severe winter storm in less than a week moved into the Washington region Tuesday.

The latest forecast from the National Weather Service called for 10 to 14 more inches of snow in Washington through Wednesday, on top of more than 2 feet that fell on Saturday. Transportation is still disrupted in the metro area, and most government offices have been closed since Friday.

Some parts of the government were working, if only at half speed. President Barack Obama held a lengthy meeting with congressional leaders earlier Tuesday. And the Treasury planned to go ahead with its scheduled sales of government debt.

The Senate was meeting Tuesday, and hoped to hold votes on Thursday, Senate Majority Harry Reid said Tuesday.

The House of Representatives was out of action until after the weeklong Presidents Day recess ends on Feb. 22.

Several hearings scheduled for Wednesday were postponed, including testimony by Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke on how the Fed plans to normalize its policy. The Fed will release Bernanke's prepared testimony at 10 a.m. on its website, however.

Other government agencies, including the Federal Communications Commission, postponed meetings scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday.

Here's the updated schedule for economic data releases:

The international trade report for December will be released on time at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday on the Commerce Department website. The usual hour-long lockup for reporters was canceled.

The monthly budget statement for January will be delayed until Friday at the earliest, the Treasury Department said.

The Energy Department will delay the release of its weekly reports on crude oil and natural gas supplies from Wednesday until Friday.

The retail sales report for January, due to be released on Thursday morning, will be delayed, possibly until Friday, the Commerce Department said.

Rex Nutting is Washington bureau chief of MarketWatch.

Former First Lady Barbara Bush Hospitalized

Barbara Bush was hospitalized in Houston to undergo routine tests but doctors don't suspect anything serious.

March 28, 2010
http://www.foxnews.com/politics/2010/03/27...test=latestnews

HOUSTON - Former first lady Barbara Bush was hospitalized Saturday in Houston to undergo routine tests but doctors don't suspect anything serious, a family spokeswoman said.

Bush, 84, was being treated at Methodist Hospital and should be released in a day or two, spokeswoman Jean Becker said late Saturday.

"She hasn't been feeling well for about a week, and the doctors thought she should come in and undergo a battery of tests," Becker said. "It's not serious. She just hasn't been feeling herself and they're just trying to figure out why."

Becker declined to provide details, but said former President George H.W. Bush drove his wife to the hospital Saturday morning after consulting with her doctors. A hospital spokeswoman declined comment, saying information was only being released through the family.

Mrs. Bush was hospitalized for nine days after undergoing heart surgery in March 2009, for a severe narrowing of the main heart valve. Doctors at the time said the condition was common among people her age. She also was hospitalized in November 2008, when she underwent surgery for a perforated ulcer. Doctors said the two ailments were unrelated.

MANAGING DIRECTOR OF THE ABU DHABI INVESTMENT AUTHORITY [SCAMMED BY BUSH]
Ahmed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, the Managing Director of the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, was reported by the Morrocan official news agency MAP to be 'missing' after his 'glider' crashed into a lake in Morocco on Friday 26th March 2010. The pilot of the craft was rescued 'in good condition'. Sheikh Al Nahyan was the younger brother of Sheikh Khalifa, Ruler of the United Arab Emirates.

The glider went down near the Sidi Mohammed Ben Abdullah Dam, which forms the lake, located in the Atlantic coastal region near the town of Skhirat, about 35 kilometres south of the Moroccan capital, Rabat. One of the Moroccan royal palaces is located in Skhirat.

Although the AIDA issued its first-ever annual statement literally last week, the document contained no information on the entity's balance sheet or on the overall size of the fund's holdings. That's not surprising because its balance sheet is stuffed with worthless derivative assets, AIDA having been exploited by the Bush Crime Family's Fraudulent Finance operations.

Whether Al Nahyan was pushed out of the craft over the lake may never be known, of course.

Mrs Bush, who underwent surgery to replace her aortic valve in March 2009, was expected to be released 'in a day or two'.

The couple were admitted to the nearest hospital with minor injuries but are expected to recover fully. In a report to a colleague, Mr Maguire said that his car was rammed, apparently deliberately, by a vehicle that rushed out of a side road. The rogue driver was caught by police after a chase in which police helicopters were deployed.

Japan issues Tamiflu warning after child deaths

Times Online and Richard Lloyd Parry, Tokyo
March 21, 2007
http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/worl...icle1549260.ece

The Japanese government has warned doctors that Tamiflu, the drug being stockpiled around the world as a defence against a bird flu pandemic, should not be prescribed to teenagers for fear that it can lead to bizarre and self-destructive behaviour.

Tokyo's Ministry of Health and Welfare today instructed the Japanese distributor of the drug to include a warning not to give the drug to patients aged between 10 and 19, after reports that at least 18 Japanese children taking Tamiflu have died as a result of irrational behaviour.

Concern over Tamiflu will complicate international preparations for a catastrophic bird flu pandemic, against which it is seen as the final line of defence. A

However, the European Medicine Agency (EMEA), which licences the drug in Europe, said that there was no equivalent warning in Europe as they had not found any link between the drug and any deaths.

Japan consumes 60 per cent of the world's Tamiflu, the drug also known as oseltamivir, and manufactured by the Swiss pharmaceutical company Roche. Britain has purchased enough courses of the drug to treat 25 per cent of the population if there was an outbreak of a bird flu pandemic.

Despite scores of deaths in south-east Asia, there have been no cases of human bird flu in Japan, and the 8.6 million people who receive the drug every year are suffering from the common form of human influenza.

But for the past three years, there have been alarming stories of young people succumbing to fits of self-destructive behaviour while receiving Tamiflu.

Relatives who believe that their children were adversely affected by the drug have formed a lobby group to demand its withdrawal from sale.

One of the most disturbing cases was in February 2004 when a 17-year old boy took one capsule of Tamiflu at his home in Gifu prefecture, central Japan. No one was at home to witness what happened next, but he appears to have left the house in his pyjamas, walked barefoot through a snowstorm, climbed over two fences and stepped in front of an oncoming truck. The driver told police that he was smiling at the moment of impact.

At the end of last month, a fourteen year old boy in the city of Sendai told his mother that he was going to the toilet, but then walked out of the front door of his eleven storey apartment. His mother ran out to see him straddling the four foot guard rail and despite her cries of warning he fell to his death in the car park below. He had taken two Tamiflu capsules, the first day of a five day prescribed course for influenza.

According to Japan's health ministry, most of the 54 Japanese who died after taking Tamiflu by October last year, succumbed to liver or other organ failure, most likely caused by influenza. But 16 of them were children aged 16 or under, several of whom had exhibited “abnormal” behaviour.

The drug is already sold in Japan with a general warning that users may have psychological side effects including abnormal behaviour and hallucinations.

Proponents of the drug, however, argue that this is more likely to be caused by the flu itself, than by Tamiflu, and that there is no scientific evidence of any link between the drug and the violent deaths.

“Tamiflu has now been used in over 45 million influenza patients worldwide and treatment with Tamiflu has proven successful in reducing the duration and severity of the disease,” Roche said in statement today.

“Reports of such events leading to death are extremely rare, occurring in around 1 out of every 5 million influenza patients treated. No causal link between such events and Tamiflu has been established."

The statement said that US health insurance records in 1999-2006 indicated that psychiatric symptoms were lower in influenza patients taking Tamiflu than those not taking Tamiflu.

Eduard Holdener, Roche's Chief Medical Officer, said: "Patient safety is a primary concern for Roche and since the introduction of Tamiflu, Roche has continuously monitored and reviewed post-marketing safety information and provides regular updates to the regulatory agencies."

Anti-Tamiflu campaigners criticised today's decision to provide “safety information”, but not remove the drug from sale for being an inadequate and irresolute step.

“The government has kept saying there is no link between Tamiflu and the deaths,” said Ryuko Hatano, whose son died after taking the drug. “I cannot understand the ministry’s attitude in which they cannot move a step nor a half step until they see the next victim.”

Last month the European Agency for the EMEA, which licences the drug in Europe, including Britain, recommended that advice be given to doctors stating that psychological disorders have been reported in users of Tamiflu in Japan.

However, a spokesman for the EMEA said: “There is no warning equivalent in Europe for Tamiflu. The current situation is that we see there is no causal relationship between Tamiflu and these events.”

craig-oxley - May 3, 2009 11:14 PM (GMT)

"This Swine Flu event to me looks like a beta test run. A test run for what you say? Well some might think for a new Virus to be spread which will work for sure. I personally believe its a beta test more of the mind control and controlling power. They want to see how easy the Knight of Malta media system can really dominate the people. What they're doing is seeing how easy a full lock down is on Mexico City. The same way they trial different parameters around the World. Such as testing electronic currencies in Singapore etc. When they have their data its all fed into those Oak Ridge Cray computers for simulation on grand scales. They simulate their wants too prior to beta tests and then see how they make up with the virtual simulations.

Right now what they've done is sent a shock wave through the global populance. For around seven years now they've used the Bird Flu scam as a first conditioner of the global village. Roman Orsini Papal bloodline controlled Hollywood has released numerous films like Outbreak to pre-programme the minds of the flock. This also allows for a cover if a real virus was layed down via the MEDCOM Chemtrails program through the Open Skies Treaty. They don't actually need a virus at all and this Swine Flu event proves this clearly. So now they've put conditioner #2 down which is this Swine Flu. The next conditioner has come the last couple of days which is the scare tatic about the fall. The scare of this Swine Flu mutating with the fall flu and even hiv. This hiv one is the biggest joke as no one has ever isolated hiv and never will, it does not exist. Its pure mind control! Only the AIDS exists and always has done in man as much causes of AIDS are actually old diseases like Syphilis and Malnutrition etc. Mind control!

So their now hinting at what they have planned for the fall. What this is folks is the planned shut down of Global cities during TOTAL 100% ECONOMIC COLLAPSE in September 2009. I've been warning people for a long time they'd most likely use a pandemic or fear of one to cover up their doings in the collapse of the economy. They'd trump up the markets and economy on the media system all day long. Mind control! They'll keep telling you its heading for recovery as they have been. Then when the U.S has to start defaulting you'll see the markets maybe still faked or start to go down somewhat. You'll then have a major announcement that a new super flu is global and Pandemic. The media hype will make this beta run look like chicken feed. The whole Western World at least will go on full scale lockdown. Their will be martial law on the streets but in some cases not totally needed for an initial period. Why? Simply everyone will be too scared to leave their homes in fear of getting the flu. Its such an easy way to get major control over people whilst everything breaks down. You'll find like a miracle that once the new economic system is bought in slowly, that immediately the pandemic will be phased out!

This is a 100% psychological operation by the Knights of Malta. I do believe they want to wipe out the populations of Africa, South America, Eastern Europe and parts of Asia shortly and may do so from the fall. They can utilise the deaths on the TV in those countries to create panic in Western nations. Also the regular high death rates from the regular flus in our nations can be trumped up on the media spin system. This will just grip our nations in utter panic. They will make sure you have to accept vaccines and ID systems to get foods etc from them. Stock up on your own foods for twelve months worth at least. The Knights of Malta in control of the financial system with their Casanova Family of Switzerland know how little us guys have in savings. They know most people have only eleven days savings (11=Judgement and disorder - Saturn). They know most people wouldn't have a week's worth of food. I don't know the Maltese's timeframe for bringing in the new economic system. So go on caution and stock for twelve months.

This has been one of the biggest hoaxes ever along with the Lunar landings, 9/11 and of course the big dangerous hoax of hiv. Don't let the opposame paid agents tell you otherwise. The likes of Bill Deagle aiding the agenda by building fear up whilst flattering your ego with amazing sounding clade versions of flu. The likes of Len Horowitz who himself is a Knight of Malta and promoting hiv virus etc. Their all tied to the intelligensia and giving you what they want you to have. Bill Deagle is a fraud and a Denver programmed up mind slave of these people. He's there like most of them to woo you with his photographic memory. Giving you many truths but sneakily manipulating your thoughts on others to suit the agenda he claims to be against. He may even actually believe he's a good guy through the intelligensia programming techniques given him. His clade scare mongering fits well with the stunt which may be pulled in September remember. All these opposames push the official hiv story except they tickle your ego with stories of it coming out of a labratory. Perfect way to keep you on board with the need for dangeorus drugs and safe sex etc. Mind control! Can you see it? This event shows you how far they can go." -CRAIG OXLEY

Students were bound, gagged and stabbed more than 200 times but the motive for attack is a mystery

Police baffled by horrific end of Laurent Bonomo and Gabriel Ferez
Students were bound, gagged and stabbed more than 200 times but the motive for attack is a mystery

As two talented biochemistry students and close friends, Laurent Bonomo and Gabriel Ferez had come to London to develop their skills as specialists in infectious disease and environmental engineering.

Instead the two became the victims of an attack that, even by the standards of a city battling against the blight of knife crime, is among the most horrific in living memory.

The bodies of Mr Bonomo and Mr Ferez, both 23, were found late on Sunday evening, bound, gagged and with hundreds of stab wounds and other injuries. They had been tortured and beaten repeatedly with a blunt instrument.

Yesterday officers described the killings, which took place in Mr Bonomo's flat in southeast London, as the most vicious they had seen.

Mr Bonomo, a student in the proteins that cause infectious disease, had been stabbed 196 times, with up to half the wounds inflicted after he was dead. Mr Ferez, who hoped to become an expert in ecofriendly fuels, had 47 separate injuries.

Police said that their ordeal had lasted a considerable time before the flat, and possibly the bodies, were covered in accelerant and set alight.

"This was a frenzied, brutal and horrific attack - I have never seen injuries inflicted to bodies like this before," Detective Chief Inspector Mick Duthie, of the Homicide and Serious Crime Command, said yesterday as he called for public help in finding the killer, or killers.

"Everyone working on this case, including myself, senior detectives and support staff, has been deeply shocked by what we have seen."

Officers admitted yesterday that they were at a loss to explain so incomprehensible a crime. Theories include a burglary gone wrong, a ritualistic killing or a case of mistaken identity. All police could confirm was that it was not suspected of being a professional hit, simply on the ground of the sheer, extraordinary, brutality of the killings.

Residents living near the smart block of flats in New Cross, in a cul-de-sac known to be less intimidiating than some surrounding neighbourhoods, said last night that they could not come to terms with what had happened. One said she had sent her eight-year-old daughter to stay with friends.

“We are so petrified, we don’t know what to do,” said a woman who would give her name only as Veronica. “You couldn’t imagine it. My daughter is simply too scared to stay at home.”

Neighbours said that they had initially believed there had been a fire, and had shouted inside the building in case there was anyone trapped. “When we heard no response, we presumed no one was there,” one said. “It’s just so shocking.”

Mr Bonomo and Mr Ferez were in their second year of masters degrees at the Clermont-Ferrand Polytech in the Auvergne region of central France, home to the country’s most promising young scientists. Both had been selected for the Undergraduate Opportunities for Research Programme, a three-month project on DNA, in the life sciences department at Imperial College.

Mr Bonomo, from the medieval town of Velaux, near Aixen-Provence, was described as a dedicated research scientist. A brilliant chess player and keen tennis fan, he was engaged to be married. A former president of the student union, Mr Bonomo had campaigned to reduce binge drinking.

Mr Ferez was known as an exceptional polymath and one of the brightest students in his year. He had already been awarded a place on a chemistry masters course at a university in Amiens, a gateway to a doctorate in his specialism. A fan of history, tennis and rock music, Mr Ferez had also worked as a technician at the Phillipe Pinel Hospital in Amiens.

Stephen Matthews, Mr Bonomo’s supervisor at Imperial, paid tribute to the two men yesterday. He said that their tightly knit research team was in total shock. “They were both very likeable chaps. Laurent was particularly mature, well-rounded and liked by the other students in his group,” he said. “It is inconceivable that anybody could have a vendetta against him.”

Professor Matthews said that Mr Bonomo was frequently the first researcher in the laboratory in the morning, while Mr Ferez’s lecturer praised his grasp of a wide range of complex subjects.

They said that both students spoke excellent English and, with a shared love of travelling, had come to London to broaden their horizens and improve their research skills.

The two, who arrived in the capital at the beginning of May, were due to return to their homes and families at the end of the month. Instead the Bomono and Ferez families yesterday flew to London to identify the badly burnt bodies formally.

Sir Roy Anderson, Imperial’s Rector, said: “Laurent and Gabriel had bright futures ahead of them and it is dreadful that their lives should end so soon. I would also like to offer my support to the Imperial community as we mourn the loss of two young members."

Addressing a press conference at Scotland Yard, Mr Duthie admitted yesterday that his team had no leads as to why the two visitors, who had never been in trouble with the police in France or England, had been targeted.

One strong line of inquiry is a break-in at the flat six days before the murder. Detectives are exploring whether the burglar, who escaped with Mr Bonomo's laptop, may have returned, possibly with a set of keys, allowing him to enter the building undetected and surprise the men.

Officers added that it remained unclear whether both men were in the flat at the same time. They said that Mr Bonomo may have opened the door, thinking his friend was there, and had then been overpowered. Mr Ferez, who was also living in South London, might then have been attacked when he arrived at the door, giving one possible explanation as to how one person might be able to subdue two fit young men.

It is thought that one or both of the students were playing computer games when they were attacked. One sighting has so far been reported of a white man running from the flat after the fire started.

Officers are awaiting the results of toxicology tests to see if the pair were drugged. Mr Duthie said that forensic examinations at the "extremely complex scene" were also continuing.

"Yesterday I had to spell out the heartbreaking details to the grief-stricken families about the way their sons died. One victim was stabbed more than 100 times," the officer said.

"I do not know why they were killed or who killed them but I believe the person or persons responsible would have been blood-stained as a result. I need to build up a picture of the two young men and what they were doing in the hours leading up to their murder."

Mr Duthie said that police knew that Mr Bonomo had spoken to his fiancée at 1am on the day of his death, but had little further details of the men's last hours. He appealed for anyone who saw anything suspicious to contact police.

Facts and theories

What we know

- Laurent Bonomo and Gabriel Ferez, French bioengineering students, were on a three-month exchange from Clermont-Ferrand, France, to Imperial College, London

- The two, both 23, arrived in May. Mr Bonomo rented the one-bedroom flat in Sterling Gardens, New Cross. They were due to return to France this month

- Mr Ferez, a friend, was visiting and they appear to have been playing computer games when the attack took place The flat had been burgled six days before and Mr Bonomo's laptop stolen. The theft was reported to police

- Both students were bound and tortured. They were stabbed in the head, neck, back and torso

- A fire accelerant was sprayed around the flat, which was set alight after the assault. There were no signs of forced entry

- Neighbours heard several loud bangs. A woman who lives opposite says she saw two men in hats banging on the windows

- A white male seen running away is currently the only suspect

The unanswered questions

- What was the killer or killers' motivation? The strongest line is that it was a burglar returning to the scene

- Who were they? At the moment the police have no idea who the assailant or assailants were although witnesses reported seeing a the man running away

- Could it be a case of mistaken identity? Police are looking at who used to live in the flat to check for connections to criminal activity

- Were the students deliberately targeted? There is nothing to suggest they were involved in crime. Neither had been in trouble with the police before. It is possible that the killing could be linked to their life in France but they were unknown to French police

- Why the high level of violence? It could be the killer or killers were on drugs or were psychopaths. David Holmes, a senior lecturer at Manchester Metropolitan University, said they may have been victims of a "demonstration killing", designed to send out a warped message. Officers are also looking to see if it was a ritualistic killing

Swine Flu

Friday, May 1, 2009
http://simplehealthytasty.blogspot.com/200.../swine-flu.html

I hesitate to post this because I don't care for all the hype the media puts on things like this. But I thought some of you might be interested so I'm going to share a few of my thoughts maybe quote a couple of "experts" then give you some recipes!

I personally do not like the way the media tends to sensationalize pretty much EVERYTHING! And I REALLY don't like the way Big Pharma always seems to benefit! Did you know the risk here is really low? About 30,000 people die every year of the regular old flu or complications with it. (And yes many of them RECEIVED the flu shot! Something I am NOT a fan of!) So far I think the amount of confirmed cases world wide for Swine Flu are ummmm SEVEN! I'm not trying to devalue life and say it isn't important it of course is! I am just asking you to look at some stats and use a little common sense. Here is what Dr. Mercola has to say.

"Please remember that, despite the fantastic headlines and projections of MILLIONS of deaths, the H5N1 bird flu virus killed a mere 257 people worldwide since late 2003. As unfortunate as those deaths are, 257 deaths worldwide from any disease, over the course of five years, simply does not constitute an emergency worthy of much attention, let alone fear!

Honestly, your risk of being killed by a lightning strike in the last five years was about 2,300 percent higher than your risk of contracting and dying from the bird flu. I'm not kidding! In just one year (2004), more than 1,170 people died from lighting strikes, worldwide.

So please, as the numbers of confirmed swine flu cases are released, keep a level head and don't let fear run away with your brains."

If you want to read more of what he has to say you can do that here!

I really think your BEST defense is a strong healthy body with a very strong immune system! How do you make your immune system strong? Well first off you eat healthy and drink lots of good water you get plenty of rest and just basically live the laws of health! Then you DON'T do things that would actually thwart or lower your immune function like taking stimulants and drugs, flu shots, pretty much anything that will block immune function. REFINED SUGAR is a big one. I love to use herbs because they are food and they actually assist the Immune system and help make it stronger instead of weakening it. I believe we should work with our bodies NOT against them!

Here is a quote from Paul Nison!

People's immune systems are declining throughout the world, causing ill health and new outbreaks of viruses like the Swine flu. It is a real concern, but the larger issue should be addressed. We are not as healthy as we could be. Our immune systems are weak and getting weaker. Fear does not help the issue. Someone emailed me the other day and asked what I suggest to help protect against the Swine Flu.

Here they are:

1. Eat healthy
2. Exercise
3. Get enough rest
4. Take four thieves essential oils
5. Don't go to Mexico right now

That sounds simple enough doesn't it? Paul Nison recommends Four Thieves I have the recipe below for both the essential oil and the vinegar! I'm sure both would be excellent to not only help heal the flu if you get it but to actually help keep you and your family from getting it in the first place. I just placed an order with Mountain Rose Herbs (moving picture you can click on and get to on my side bar) for ALL the ingredients to make BOTH!

Also I always have Anti-Plague on hand which is a wonderful formula that I have used a lot and seen it cure all sorts stuff. (I don't know if I have told you this but we have not needed a Doctor in over 9 years!) If you would like to hear what David Christopher has to say about all this go here! Very interesting stuff worth listening too! Also if you want to know how to make Anti-Plague I have a good friend who is a pro at making it and posted how on her blog you can check that out here!

FOUR THIEVES VINEGAR

1 part lavender, dried
1 part sage, dried
1 part thyme, dried
1 part lemon balm (melissa), dried
1 part hyssop, dried
1 part peppermint, dried
1 handful garlic cloves
Raw (unpasteurized), organic apple cider vinegar

• In a glass jar, place all dry ingredients.
• Add raw (unpasteurized), organic apple cider vinegar to cover
• Place jar in a cool place and let sit, at room temperature, for six weeks.
• Strain off herbs and garlic, and decant to a glass bottle or jar with a tight fitting lid.

HOW TO USE FOUR THIEVES VINEGAR
• Take a teaspoonful several times daily.
• Add to salads either directly or in a salad dressing.
• For personal protection, add a teaspoonful to bath water.
• Use as a topical spray for disinfecting surfaces and/or skin

FOUR THIEVES OIL

1 part eucalyptus
1 part rosemary
1 part cinnamon
1 part clove
1 part lemon
Carrier oil (olive, jojoba, coconut, or your choice)
Mix
I put 50 drops of each oil in a 2 oz. bottle and then top it off with the carrier oil.

OR

An alternative recipe:

200 drops Clove Bud Oil
175 drops Lemon Oil
100 drops Cinnamon Oil
75 drops Eucalyptus Oil
50 drops Rosemary

Mix with carrier oil.

APPLICATIONS:

• Apply 1-2 drops of Four Thieves on the bottoms of the feet and on the nape of the neck.
• Apply under the arms and on the chest.
• Diffuse for 20 minutes or less at work or at home.

I really hope that this post was informative and helpful! I DO NOT like making decisions based on fear and I hope I helped alleviate some of yours! It's really all about looking at the source of your information and seeing if they have anything to loose or gain. Then you see if the benefits outweigh the risks and then..... well I always pray about it and do what feels right and what works for me and my family!

Hi,

Just making sure your aware of Boneset (Eupatorium perfoliatum) this is a must with the coming Pandemic situations. You must also have plenty of Raw Garlic cloves at hand. I'll also promote Olive Leaf. You can check out my other information on my site but heres a few links for now:

http://z10.invisionfree.com/The_Unhived_Mi...?showtopic=9098
http://z10.invisionfree.com/The_Unhived_Mi...showtopic=15319

Protect yourself Ideally with an fresh organic 1:1 fluid extracts or 1:2 tinctures.

You might be wise to purchase strong Garlic supplements like ALLIMAX as it can be stored for a few years just incase you do not have anywhere to purchase your Garlic from. Start growing your own as its very easy to do.

In the mean time start eating two large servings of fruit daily and ideally the high Vitamin C fruits. Start utilising the real powerful fruits like Pomegranate, Pineapple, Papaya and so forth.

Ozone, Hydrogen Peroxide & MMS are highly needed for the high singlet oxygen oxidisation.

Then of course theres the Colloidal Ionic Silver and Citricidal.

You may wish to have a large 500gram tub or more of Vitamin C powder at hand, ideally Ascorbic Acid. Maybe some Magnesium supplementation for what its worth due to poor assimilation. That will be used to help try to prevent Cardiac Arrest from Hypo-Magnesia Cytokine Storm. Just as the Vitamin C is used to counter rapid Hypo-Ascorbia from Cytokine Storm.

Theres of course Lugol's Iodine, Green Blackwalnut for rich sources of powerful Iodine. The later is he natural of course. Lugol's must be for those who gradually build into dosages. Not recommended for rapid use straight off. By all means if your dying then take Lugol's at the higher drops, what do you have to lose? Lugol's is highly powerful.

Start eating goji berries daily and other super foods. Keep away from mucus forming foods especially bread, dairy and meat. Keep away from acidic foods, soda, dairy and meat. Keey well away from refined sugar which lowers immunity for up to 4.5 hours after ingesting. Mind you if we think about it, during Cytokine Storm refined sugar may actually aid if it reduces the immune system which is attacking the system. If you smoke then make sure your smoking more but only of organic tobacco with no added crap.

Correct levels of hydration are a must as layed out by Dr Fereydoon Batmanghelidj.

Theres no way to hide from these viruses being unleashed. Only today I had someone ask why they have had the flu hit them twice recently considering their far better diet etc. The reason being is that viruses need a weakened cell. Until a virus enters a weakened cell, it is infact dormant and dead so to speak. No one has zero weak cells as we're being attacked in a bio-warfare attack daily from many angles. So this is why we're always at risk. Your only safeguard is to be as clean as possible and have the tools around you. An ozone generator is a must have tool and regular useage of Ozone water during troubled times is very important for life and recovery time increase. The use of Cinnamon & Honey drinks with some unpasteurised Apple Cyder Vinegar 2-3 times daily is another must.

One last thing, do NOT load up on Vitamin D3 like many tell you. Theres reasons for this but remember only use vitamins in desperate times. They do unbalance the system as their not whole complex foods like God provided. Many are poisons from pharmaceutical manufacturers and all of them are DEAD products that do not live. Remember what Dr Christopher say "THEIR DEAD!! PLANT THEM IN THE GROUND AND ALL YOU'LL GET IS MOLD!"
What happened to him for highlighting this? He was thrown out and banned from conferences he was a highly prized guest speaker at. No one wants to hear the truth. Garlic cloves are life, they sprout quickly and birth more cloves. Eat them either brand new and very potent or during sprouting when that nice green shoot developes. Don't forget those raw cooking onions neither, wonderful anti-pandemic food and cheap as chips.

Theres a few quick tips for you all.

Remember in my audio when all this Swine Flu panic first started? What did I tell you to stock up on? Yes white vinegar and pump spray bottles etc to cleanse your surfaces, hands etc. These old well known ways of defeating illness will work forever and work better than anything else. Don't forget the chopped up onions and garlic in your rooms. - Craig

Vinegar Kills Swine Flu Virus Say German Scientists

Tuesday, 15 December 2009 15:40

Scientists at the Institute of Virology in the Philipps University, Marburg, Germany, have shown that vinegar is able to inactivate the swine flu H1N1 virus.

The researchers found that vinegar essence killed viruses rapidly after performing a series of experiments.

A cupful of vinegar mixed with three cups of water was adequate to disinfect surfaces safety and effectively by wiping, they said.

Vinegar essence costs about 1.19 euro in stores and so is a low cost way of staying protected against any swine flu virus.

Egyptian billionaire accused of spying for Israeli intelligence service found dead in London

Last updated at 12:03pm on 28th June 2007
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/pages/live/arti...in_page_id=1811

An Egyptian billionaire who feared assassination after being labelled an Israeli double agent has been found dead outside his London flat.

Financier Ashraf Marwan, 62, the son-in-law of former Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser, had been named by Israeli officials as a source for the country's intelligence service Mossad.

Scotland Yard is treating his death in Carlton House Terrace in St Johns as 'unexplained'.

Mr Marwan, 62, who was married to Mr Nasser's daughter Mona, had been living in London for many years after leaving Egyptian government service in the late Seventies.

His widow is set to fly to London today after travelling from Beirut to Cairo yesterday where she was met at the airport by family members.

Essam Abdel Samad, the head of the Union of Egyptians in Europe, said he had spoken to Mr Marwan's maid, who said she was the only other person in the fourth floor flat at the time.

"She said she was working in the kitchen and he was in his office and the first thing she knew was when someone came to the door and said he had fallen," Mr Samad told Egyptian satellite TV station al-Youmin a telephone call from London.

The former shareholder in Chelsea FC had spoken about his fears of being killed after he was accused three years ago of being an agent during the Yom Kippur war.

Israeli media claimed that on the eve of the war of October 1973, Mr Marwan told Mossad that Egypt and Syria were about to attack Israel.

However, some members of London's Arab community believe he might have committed suicide after he was diagnosed with a serious illness.

Mr Marwan associated with some of Britain's wealthiest people. His contacts included former Chelsea chairman Ken Bates, arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi, the late Tiny Rowland and Libyan leader Colonel Gaddafi.

He was identified as an agent in the book Eve Of Destruction by Vanity Fair writer Harold Bloom.

According to journalists in Israel, Mr Marwan first walked into the Israeli embassy in London in 1969 and volunteered to give information but he was turned down. He was allegedly later recruited by Mossad.

Military historian Gad Shimron, a former Mossad officer, said: "We know now, from testimony-given by Israeli spymastersand made public years after the Yom Kippur war, that Marwan was the man who tipped off the Mossad."

He gave the warning just hours before the Egyptian attack on Israeli forces on the east bank of the Suez Canal but Israel decided not to order a general mobilisation, Mr Shimron added.

"Later, the chief of Israeli military intelligence justified the inaction by saying Marwan was suspected of being a double agent planted by the Egyptians," he said.

Mr Marwan worked as a senior information official for both Mr Nasser and his successor, Anwar Sadat, but it has been claimed that he also had an Egyptian intelligence service role.

He acted as an envoy to Arab countries and between 1974 and 1979 he headed the Arab Industrialisation Organisation, an Arab-financed project to develop arms industries in Egypt.

Mr Marwan is survived by his wife, two sons, Gamal and Ahmed, and five grandchildren.

As far as I know about Egyptian intel, its completely controlled by the black pope:

Jesuit's CIA helped to built Nasser's Egyptian intellegence networks i the 1950's.
Here the Jesuits founded PLO. They worked with Masonic Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, the aristocratic elite agitator Hajj Amin al-Husseini, who was inserted by the British (Rothschild?) as Mufti of Jerusalem in the 1920's (and given the newly invented title of Grand Mufti...) and he immediately started formenting Jew hatred in Palestaine spreading lies about Jewish agitation and Jews burnings of Mosques.

One might say that he is the father of Palestinian anti-semitism. He went on to work with and visited Hitler and helped with the 1941 Nazi coup of Bagdad and learned much anti-semitism technique from the Nazies.
He also helped recruit muslims for the SS.

His young impressionable nephew was a great fan of him and looked immensely up to his uncle when he was trained as Palestinian PLO terrorist by CIA Nazi SMOM Otto "Scarface" Skorzeny under Nasser's CIA Egyptian intel with Hajj Amin al-Husseini.

This nephew later changed his name to Yasser Arafat.
Arafat's other uncle raised in his house a young Masonic-to-be Saddam Hussein.

SMOM Otto Skorzeny was also a close friend of Argentinian President SMOM Juan Peron and they also both gained alot with SMOM's Vatican ratlines "Operation Paperclips" fiasco.

BBC Accused Of Biased Climate Change Coverage

09-28-2008
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-10...d-polemic.html#

The BBC is being investigated by television watchdogs after a leading climate change sceptic claimed his views were deliberately misrepresented.

Lord Monckton, a former adviser to Margaret Thatcher, says he was made to look like a ‘potty peer’ on a TV programme that ‘was a one-sided polemic for the new religion of global warming’.

Earth: The Climate Wars, which was broadcast on BBC 2, was billed as a definitive guide to the history of global warming, including arguments for and against.

During the series, Dr Iain Stewart, a geologist, interviewed leading climate change sceptics, including Lord Monckton. But the peer complained to Ofcom that the broadcast had been unfairly edited.

‘I very much hope Ofcom will do something about this,’ he said yesterday.

‘The BBC very gravely misrepresented me and several others, as well as the science behind our argument. It is a breach of its code of conduct.

‘I was interviewed for 90 minutes and all my views were backed up by sound scientific data, but this was all omitted. They made it sound as if these were just my personal views, as if I was some potty peer. It was caddish of them.’

Ofcom confirmed it was looking into a ‘fairness complaint’ about the documentary.

A BBC spokesman said: ‘We stand by the programme.’

Lord Monckton, 56, a former journalist and Cambridge graduate, says scientific data shows the world is cooler today than in the Middle Ages.

He appeared alongside other sceptics including distinguished Florida-based meteorologist Professor Fred Singer, John Christy, a climate change expert and adviser to the U.S. government and the climatologist Dr Patrick Michaels, of the University of Virginia.

All their interviews, he claims, were heavily cut so that they appeared as personal views.

‘We do not dispute that there is more carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, but we do dispute its effects’, he said. ‘The data shows that 2008 is the same temperature as 1980 and that the effects of these changes in the atmosphere are not negative but more likely to be beneficial.’

Lord Monckton played a key role in a legal challenge heard in the High Court in October 2007 in an effort to prevent Al Gore’s film on global warming, An Inconvenient Truth, from being shown in English schools.

Israeli's bid to buy Al-Jazeera from Qatar

Thu, 08 Oct 2009 17:16:21 GMT
Haim Saban
http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=10816...ionid=351020202

An Israeli media tycoon has offered to buy the pan-Arab Al-Jazeera satellite television network from the government of Qatar.

Haim Saban, has submitted an offer to the Qatari government in a bid to purchase half of the Doha -based Al-Jazeera satellite network.

The Egyptian newspaper al-Mesryoon reported Wednesday that the Israeli billionaire is currently engaged in negotiations with Qatar's emir, Sheikh Hamad bin Khalifa al-Thani, over the partial purchase of the media outlet. The talks are said to be conducted through an Egyptian mediator.

The account comes amid reports that the largest and most controversial Arab news channel in the Middle East is grappling with a terrible financial crisis at present. Saban had previously made an offer to purchase al-Jazeera in 2004, but it was turned down.

The Israeli-American magnate has supposedly made an offer of $5 billion for the popular Arabic-language news channel, in an attempt to get a hold of it and to broadcast a pro-Israeli message so as to influence the Arab opinion in favor of Tel Aviv's hawkish regime.

Al-Jazeera spawned a media revolution in the Arab world after it was founded in 1996. The network is reliant on state financial largesse, estimated at over $70 million a year, but does not broadcast shows critical of the Qatari government. Al-Jazeera, however, does air programs leveling criticism at all other Arab governments.

Seban made his fortune by buying the rights to market the Japanese kids show, “The Power Rangers,” in America. He is a prominent supporter of Israel and the right-wing Netanyahu government. In addition, the Egyptian-born Jewish businessman is well known for his under-the-table dealings.

Dear Mr. xxxxxx,

Thank you for contacting me.

Your email brought tears to my eyes.

I will send you a cd-ebook of Vatican Assassins III if you will share the info with your Cuban brethren in South Florida. Until then I will tell you this:

Fidel Castro was trained by Jesuits for seven years. His Jesuit advisor and right hand was Jesuit Father Armando Llorente. Castro was groomed in New York City as I have a picture of him in Central Park before the revolution in a nice, three-piece suit. And why was he in New York City? He was there to take his orders in person from the Archbishop of New York, Francis Cardinal Spellman, later the mastermind behind the JFK assassination.

At this time in 1959 just prior to Castro being given Cuba, it had been decided that Cuba must be isolated from the American Empire, the Empire under the command of the Archbishop of New York and directed by the Jesuits at Fordham and Georgetown Universities. (Jesuit Georgetown University is the capital bringing its national and foreign policies into the White House West Wing. The Capitol buliding is not the capital.) Cuba was and is intended to be a staging base for the coming Sino-Soviet-Moslem invasion of America. To make this possible, the pope's international press must be given a reason to be shut out of Cuba via the justification of "communism." Remember, communism was perfected by the Jesuits from 1609-1759 on their 59 communist reductions in Paraguay. Therefore, the Black Pope Pedro Arrupe gave the order to foment the Cuban revolution in 1959 using his CFR-controlled Press to paint Batista as a horrible, brutal tyrant thus enabling certain press lords like Ed Sullivan, a New York Roman Catholic Knight of Columbus, to back Castro. CIA director Allen Dulles, a Knight of Malta and Nazi-protector, backed Castro calling him "the Abraham Lincoln of Cuba" creating more sympathy in the hearts of the deceived and ignorant American people for "the liberator, Fidel Castro." The CIA gave Castro guns and millions of dollars during and after the revolution knowing full well that he was a tool of the Jesuits---the very Jesuits who ruled the CIA via Knight of Malta Allen Dulles and later Knight of Malta John McCone who oversaw JFK's assassination in 1963. The revolution would never have succeeded had not the Jesuit-ruled CFR-controlled US government backed Castro in every way possible---just as it had backed Jesuit-trained Joseph Stalin during Lend-Lease and after the world war giving the Soviets all of America's high technology, be it aircraft or naval or electronic, while also giving the KGB supremacy over the CIA.

During the revolution, Castro's headquarters was Havana's Hilton Hotel, remembering that Knight of Malta Barron Hilton owned that hotel. Pope Paul VI, with his Black Pope Pedro Arrupe, was the power behind Castro for which reason we understand why Castro was openly backed by the CIA and openly opposed by the KGB before the revolution. (The USSR had been controlled by the Black Pope since the success of the Bolshevik Revolution in 1920, aided by President Warren Harding for the tune of $60 million worth of food and other supplies. Rome pretended to oppose Soviet Communism so as to deceive the anti-communist West while the intelligence agencies "on both sides" secretly worked together.) After the revolution, the KGB openly backed Castro while the CIA secretly backed him, yet both the CIA and KGB worked together during the entire Cold War, another hoax put upon the peoples of the West. To FURTHER ENTRENCH CASTRO IN POWER BY ELIMINATING TRUE CUBAN NATIONALISTIC PATRIOTS, the Bay of Pigs invasion was planned for 1961. President Eisenhower, Cardinal Spellman's Knight of Malta and Crusader during WWII, had planned the FAILURE OF THE INVASION with his brother Knight of Malta Allen Dulles of the CIA.

At the time the invasion was to begin, President Kennedy gave his consent and permission for the operation to proceed the day before the attack. JFK was fully behind the plan to eliminate Jesuit and Freemason Fidel Castro because JFK refused to take his orders from the pope of Rome as he had declared at a meeting of Protestant and Baptist ministers in Houston, Texas, late in 1960. Thus, JFK did not cancel the air support. According to Colonel L. Fletcher Prouty in his book JFK, it was Skull and Bonesman McGeorge Bundy, JFK's National Security Advisor, who canceled that air cover. Bundy even admitted it seventeen years later, as Prouty proves in his book. Kennedy was furious! He fired CIA Director Allen Dulles and CIA Deputy Director Charles Cabell as well as CIA Director for Plans Richard Bissell. JFK made plans for another invasion of Cuba: the date; December 1, 1963. This fact can be verified in the book Ultimate Sacrifice authored by Lamar Waldron and Thom Hartman. To prevent that invasion, he was killed nine days before on November 22, 1963.

The assassination of Kennedy sealed Cuba's fate. No longer would the pope's CIA pretend to attempt to overthrow Castro. With his most dangerous enemies eliminated thanks to Bonesman Bundy and the KOMs Dulles'/McCone's CIA, Castro could now proceed to kill every Cuban patriot and reduce that once prosperous and beautiful island to poverty, crime and tyranny. The CFR-controlled US government even gave Castro $60 million in food and medical supplies "in exchange" for Cubans captured and tortured after the failed invasion. This blessing to Castro further removed his enemies from Cuba while he received aid to benefit his Jesuit-ruled government. During the Cold War, Castro would secretly work with the CIA via Cuba's DGI, both agencies being arms of Rome's secret "Holy Office of the Inquisition." All the military supplies necessary for arming arriving Chinese and Moslem invaders from Africa would be stored awaiting the day of invasion. Arms would secretly be brought into Guantanamo Naval Base for years by the US Navy under the protection of the CIA/NSA. Ultimately Gitmo, with its precious deep water port, would be given back to Cuba---which event is now in the making. Further, there is an underground tunnel from Cuba to Miami with a mag-lev, high-speed train that will be used to transport invading, front line troops into Florida to kill the second largest Jewish population in North America resident on "the Gold Coast." Meanwhile, China's huge shipping company, COSCO, will deploy its ships to transport Moslem and Chinese invaders into Miami for its invasion of the once White Protestant and Baptist Old South. The Russian Navy will escort the invasion from Venezuela now being put in place.

This is why Jesuit Castro was put in power. This is why thousands of your people risked shark-infested waters to escape Castro. This is why thousands of Cuban nationalists were tortured and murdered in Inquisitor Castro's underground prisons. This is why Cuba will never be free. And JFK tried to stop this plan of the Black Pope for which he was adjudged "a tyrant and a usurper" and "extirpated" according to Jesuit-directed Canon Law. He was murdered by the CIA, the Secret Service, the Mafia, the FBI along with Army and Naval Intelligence---all working together.

I trust this helps Brian, although it is a most bitter and sorrowful story, for both my people and yours.

Sincerely in faith,

Brother Eric

Opel 'should consider insolvency'

Friday, 6 March 2009
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/business/7927924.stm

German carmaker Opel should consider entering insolvency, the country's interior minister has said.

Modern insolvency law was "not set up for the destruction but for the preservation of economic assets", said Wolfgang Schaeuble.

The comments came as executives from Opel and its parent General Motors (GM) met government officials and promised more details on a restructuring plan.

Opel has calling for a cash injection from Germany to help its survival.

But Mr Schaeuble said that insolvency was a better option for Opel than relying on a state handout - and that such a move would not mean that it would have to go bust.

"The public perception is that insolvency is associated with going bust or bankruptcy," he said.

"But that is wrong. We must grasp that to survive such a crisis, modern insolvency rules are a better solution than the state taking a stake."

'No business plan'

Like most global carmakers, Opel is suffering from a slump in sales.

The company announced last week that it needed the money to avert plant closures and job losses among its 26,000 employees in Germany.

Media reports suggest that the German government was angry that the bail-out proposal - which asked for 3.3bn euros (£2.93bn; $4.16bn) - was simply a glossy 217-page brochure which read like an advertisement, rather than presenting any viable business plan.

Finance minister Peer Steinbrueck said the plan was "no basis" for the government to make a decision on whether to grant state aid.

However, after an hour of talks on Friday, which German economic minister Karl-Theodor zu Guttenberg said were "open, good and constructive", the government said it was ready to review proposals.

GM Europe's president, Carl-Peter Forster, who is also head of the Opel supervisory board, said GM and Opel would endeavour to supply all the information which the German government had requested.

Cutbacks

German media have also reported MPs saying, off the record, that they were "shocked" to learn that Opel did not have any assets - with all factories being owned by GM in the US.

Separately, there is confusion about whether Opel owns the intellectual property (IP) information about its vehicles.

Deputy economic minister Dagmar Woehrl told parliament on Wednesday that GM had pledged the IP of Opel as security against capital injections it had received from the US government.

Trade union leader Armin Schild, who is on the board of Opel, said that both firms could use the IP without having to pay royalties.

But it has raised concerns that it could be sold on by GM.

GM Europe proposed last week that Opel should be partly separated from its parent company's US operations.

Such a move would require financing that GM is unable to provide.

The US carmaker, which was toppled by Toyota as the world's top-selling car firm earlier this year, is trying to wind down some of its European operations as part of a massive cost-cutting exercise.

HR 875 Would Essentially Outlaw Family Farms In The United States

Thursday, March 5, 2009
http://shepardpolitics.blogspot.com/2009/0...law-family.html

I get a lot of e-mails each day and one today (hi Cheryl!) pointed my attention to HR 875, a bill introduced into the 111th Congress for consideration. SO, I went and did something that members of Congress rarely do and actually went and read the bill, or more accurately, at least glanced through it which is still more than they ever do. It was introduced by Rep. Rosa DeLauro (D-CT 3rd) and has around 36 co-sponsors including Congressman Andre Carson (D-IN 7th) as of this writing. It immediately strikes me as being terribly bad legislation.

Under a heading described as protecting the public health and ensuring the safety of food it creates a "Food Safety Administration" within Health and Human Services. Oddly, not just adding regulations to the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) which is also under HHS. And don't we have the USDA as well? The bill applies to all manner of "Food Establishments" and "Food Production Facilities" (note the following excerpt).

(14) FOOD PRODUCTION FACILITY- The term ‘food production facility’ means any farm, ranch, orchard, vineyard, aquaculture facility, or confined animal-feeding operation.

The bill would appear to even cover fishing boats and your downtown hot dog street vendors. In fact, the bill probably would also apply to your family garden since no exemption is apparent.

What it essentially does is place a tremendous regulatory burden on all of these organizations and individuals by requiring them to have "food safety plans", consider all relevant hazards [note: I wish Congress would consider all "relevant hazards" or unintended consequences of everything THEY did], testing, sample keeping and to maintain all kinds of records. The bill also allows the government to dictate all manner of standards related to fertilizer use, nutrients, packaging, temperature controls and other items.

This massive bloat in government regulation (and taxpayer expense to support it) would add additional cost and headache to every farm, fishing boat, restaurant, slaughterhouse, processing plant, CO-OP and anyone else associated with growing, storing or processing food. The bill authorizes fines of up to $1,000,000 (one million) dollars for "each act" and for "each day" of a violation.

We'll skip over the concern over how important food production and distribution, largely recession proof, could be if our economy continues to decline and inflation takes hold and just address this on the apparent lunacy that it is. As those familiar with history know, large dominant corporations often will use government to demand industry regulations that force the small competitor out of business or introduce barriers to entry that prevent new companies from starting up to compete. In the early part of the 20th century a tremendous amount of regulation was written by the industries themselves to be enacted into law.

In this case, I think this bill could do tremendous harm to family farms or independent food operators. Only massive companies have the ability to meet these regulations and imagine the legal expenses that could be incurred to defend oneself? Never forget, the government has near unlimited resources where you might have to cough up $200 to $500 an hour for a good attorney to defend yourself, your farm, boat, truck, restaurant, orchard, vineyard or hot dog stand. And what about the increased cost of food associated with the cost of compliance, it's not unreasonable to think that many places would have to hire staff or outside assistance just to comply with the law.

We have an excellent history in the United States of safe food, but as Obama's Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel suggested recently, "You should never want a serious crisis to go to waste." He spoke those words relative to looking for opportunities to do things that people would not otherwise accept without some crisis. We should be very careful not to let the very rare instance of something like the recent peanut problem be used as such a "crisis". There is no impetus to point the bureaucrats of government and the guns they control, their ability to not only deprive someone of life or freedom but to destroy whole families, careers and reputations, at everyone in the country who might be involved in ensuring we have stuff to eat.

We're doing just fine without this legislation.

Obama sets tight auto aid terms

Monday, 30 March 2009 21:26 UK
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/business/7972464.stm

US President Barack Obama has given US carmakers General Motors (GM) and Chrysler strict deadlines to restructure before getting more aid.

General Motors will be given 60 days and Chrysler just 30 days to submit new plans for recovery.

Soon after ordering the resignation of GM chief Rick Wagoner, Mr Obama said bankruptcy protection could speed up the restructuring process.

But he also offered conditional assurances about the industry's future.

Government guarantees

"We cannot, we must not and we will not let our auto industry simply vanish," said Mr Obama.

KEY POINTS

GM has 60 days to submit new recovery plan
Chrysler has one-month deadline for a merger with Italy's Fiat
If merger is successful, Chysler will receive up to $6bn
Bankruptcy protection is an option
US government will guarantee vehicle warranties

Incentive scheme being considered to boost car sales

US media on Obama's car firm plan
Chrysler's decline comes full circle

"But our auto industry is not moving in the right direction fast enough to succeed."

He said the car firms had run into trouble because of a "failure of leadership - from Washington to Detroit".

Restructuring plans may "mean using our bankruptcy code as a mechanism to help them restructure quickly and emerge stronger", he said.

This could make it easier for the firms to "quickly clear away their old debts that are weighing them down so they can get back on their feet and on to a path of success".

Mr Obama said this would not have to involve breaking the companies up.

Stocks slide

Talk of bankruptcy unsettled investors and US stocks fell sharply.

The leading Dow Jones index ended down 3.3% at 7,522.02 points in New York, with GM shares down 25% at $2.71.

Richard Lister, BBC News, Detroit

The cold and grey in snowy Detroit is an accurate reflection of the mood here as people wake up to the idea that their industrial landscape has changed again. President Obama has swept aside one of the pillars of the car industry here.

Mr Wagoner was a GM veteran, so on local talk shows his resignation was met with some incredulity that he could be forced out by Washington, with one caller insisting he was the victim of and not the creator of the global recession.

Both in urban Detroit and surrounding rural Michigan there is a deep set conservatism that instinctively dislikes this level of government intervention.

But there is mounting nervousness too. Mr Wagoner had already pledged to cut a fifth of GM's global workforce and close 14 factories. By forcing him to go, President Obama is clearly saying is, that's not enough.

End of the road for Rick Wagoner

Mr Obama reassured would-be buyers of vehicles made by Chrysler and GM that after-sales support would not be affected by the restructuring plans.

"If you buy a car from Chrysler or GM, you will be able to get your car serviced and repaired. Your warranty will be safe," he said.

"Because, starting today, the US government will stand behind your warranty."

Mr Obama said the restructuring plans submitted by the carmakers did not go "far enough to warrant the substantial new investments that these companies are requesting".

GM and Chrysler are looking for more than $20bn of government aid.

"My administration will offer GM and Chrysler a limited period of time with creditors, unions, and other stakeholders to fundamentally restructure in a way that would justify an investment of additional tax dollars."

The president also said he would work with Congress on a programme to encourage consumers to replace old, less fuel-efficient cars with newer, cleaner vehicles.

Germany and others have adopted such schemes, thus boosting vehicle sales.

'Far too slow'

GM has been told to come up with a new, more radical restructuring plan within 60 days in order to qualify for further funds.

The auto task force set up by the US administration to oversee the government bail-out of the carmakers said in a written report that GM "could be a viable business with a more aggressive restructuring plan".

The carmaker has already announced tens of thousands of job cuts and a number of factory closures in order to cut costs that have spiralled out of control as sales have slumped during the economic downturn.

But the task force criticised GM's progress on current restructuring efforts for being "far too slow".

Fiat alliance

In Chrysler's case, the task force questioned whether the company could survive alone and demanded a merger with Italy's Fiat - the two firms created a strategic alliance earlier this year - or another carmaker.

After President Obama's speech, Fiat and Chrysler announced they had reached the framework on a global alliance.

The US government would provide working capital for a further 30 days while a merger was discussed, it added.

If a merger is successful, then the government will consider investing up to $6bn.

The two carmakers have already received $17.4bn (£14.4bn) in bail-outs. Chrysler has requested a further $5bn, while GM says it needs $16.6bn more.

On Sunday, President Obama ordered the resignation of GM's chairman and chief executive, Rick Wagoner.

Kent Kresa will take over as interim chairman, while current GM President Fritz Henderson will serve as chief executive.

GM also announced that a number of new directors would be appointed to the board.

craig-oxley - April 16, 2009 03:07 PM (GMT)

Gm, Ford, and others are purposely sabotaging their own industries 'to fire their old manufacturing employee's' and create new plants for 'hydro-run cars'. This chaos and propaganda was necessary in order to get rid of a manufacturing base, which today is obsolete, since ALL future vehicles will be hydrogen-based. It was done deliberately with help of the US-tax-payers and foreign governments, and the green movement. Look at the deception in the US media, which claims - GM had bad sales, planning, etc..... PURE BULLSHIT! Gm has always been the richest car manufacturing. They produced arms for the Iraq War, HOW THE FUCK COULD THEY EVER HAVE BEEN BANKRUPT. WAKE UP PEOPLE!

PURE LIES!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Alleged Bankruptcy, gives them the power to do all of this. It is a hidden plot, like everything else. I couldn't even believe I was hearing this. They are complete PSYCHOPATHS! Why can't they just tell the people we want to build the hydro-cars. What is with all the drama? Its all about free money and legalized theft.

GM 'unlikely' to make June debt payment

Published: Wednesday, April 22, 2009
http://www.financialpost.com/news-sectors/...html?id=1522866

DETROIT -- General Motors Corp is unlikely to make a US$1-billion debt payment due June 1 because it expects to be in the process of restructuring its debt through a voluntary exchange or bankruptcy court by that point, a spokeswoman for the automaker said on Wednesday.

GM (GM/NYSE) has been given until June 1 to win sweeping concessions from creditors, including bondholders and the United Auto Workers union, under the terms of its U.S. government supervised restructuring.

Spokeswoman Renee Rashid-Merem said GM was working to offer a bond exchange that would reduce the US$28-billion in debt owed to bondholders. Such an exchange could still be in progress as of June 1, precluding the bond payment, she said.

"Should we be required to finish our restructuring within the court process, the June 1 bond payment would be unlikely as well," Ms. Rashid-Merem said in a statement to Reuters.

GM chief financial officer Ray Young earlier was quoted as telling the Wall Street Journal that the company was not planning on making its June 1 bond payment.

Sources: GM to shut most US plants up to 9 weeks

GM to close most US factories for up to 9 weeks this summer to reduce inventory

Tom Krisher, AP Auto Writer
Wednesday April 22, 2009, 7:09 pm EDT
http://finance.yahoo.com/news/AP-SourcesGM...04037.html?.v=2

DETROIT (AP) -- General Motors Corp. is planning to temporarily close most of its U.S. factories for up to nine weeks this summer because of slumping sales and growing inventories of unsold vehicles, two people briefed on the plan said Wednesday.

The exact dates of the closures are not known, but both people said they will occur around the normal two-week shutdown in July to change from one model year to the next. Neither person wanted to be identified because workers have not been told of the shutdowns.

GM spokesman Chris Lee would not comment other than to say the company notifies employees before making any production cuts public.

One of the people briefed on the plan said a few plants that make more popular models could remain open for part of the shutdown period, but at reduced assembly line speeds.

Thousands of workers could be laid off but would still get most of their pay because their United Auto Workers union contract requires the company to make up much of the difference between state unemployment benefits and their wages.

GM is living on $13.4 billion in government loans and faces a June 1 deadline to cut its debt, reduce labor costs and take other restructuring steps. If it doesn't meet the deadline, the company's CEO has said it will enter Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

UAW officials at several factories said they have meetings scheduled Thursday and Friday with plant managers and GM human resource officials to discuss production changes.

The automaker's sales were down 49 percent in the first quarter compared with the same period last year, and GM had a 123-day supply of cars and trucks at the end of March, according to Ward's AutoInfoBank. That's down from 162 days worth in January.

But as of March 31, the automaker had a more than six-month supply of several models including the Pontiac G5 compact and Chevrolet Silverado hybrid pickup truck. The lengthy shutdown likely means that GM doesn't see its sales rebounding anytime soon, said Tom Libby, an independent Detroit-area auto industry analyst.

"They must be forecasting a sales level that is low enough between now and the summer that they see their inventories building," he said. "It's sort of an ominous comment on what they see for the industry."

The company could be seeing sales decline because of talk about a potential bankruptcy, Libby added.

GM CEO Fritz Henderson has said the company would prefer to restructure outside of court, but it is preparing for a prearranged bankruptcy as well as one in which good assets would be separated from underperforming ones.

"Just using the word bankruptcy, their (market) share is down a lot just because of this talk," Libby said.

"They may be counting on a further decline."

Libby, however, said GM should be applauded for not building too many vehicles and then having to spend big on rebates and other incentives to move them, something the Detroit Three have been guilty of in the past.

Some GM dealers said a shutdown of up to nine weeks is jarring, but not unexpected given the sales slump.

"Nine weeks seems like an awful long time, but the way business is, not an awful lot of cars are being sold anyway," said George Tasker, fleet manager at Martin Chevrolet in Torrance, Calif.

Tasker said the move wouldn't affect business, as dealers would "get together and trade more easily" to find the exact car a customer wanted.

Earlier this year Chrysler LLC, also subsisting on government loans, closed all 30 of its manufacturing plants for a month in an effort to counter the auto sales downturn. The Auburn Hills, Mich.-based automaker extended its traditional two-week holiday shutdown period further into January in order to adjust production to slowing demand and conserve cash.

U.S. Is Said to Push Chrysler to Prepare for Chapter 11

DETROIT — The Treasury Department is directing Chrysler to prepare a Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing that could come as soon as next week, people with direct knowledge of the action said Thursday.

The Treasury has an agreement in principle with the United Automobile Workers union, whose members' pensions and retiree health care benefits would be protected as a condition of the bankruptcy filing, said these people, who asked for anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the case.

Moreover, Fiat of Italy would complete its alliance with Chrysler while the company is under bankruptcy protection.

The only major question that remains unresolved is what happens to Chrysler's lenders, who hold $6.9 billion in company debt. The government's most recent offer, presented Wednesday, would give the company's lenders about 22 cents on the dollar, or $1.5 billion, and a 5 percent equity stake in a reorganized Chrysler. Earlier this week, a steering committee of the lenders proposed that they receive 65 cents on the dollar, or $4.5 billion, and a 40 percent equity stake.

If no agreement is reached between the government and Chrysler's lenders, a nasty legal fight could emerge in bankruptcy. The creditors' claims are backed by most of the company's collateral, including plants, brands and equipment, and the senior lenders will argue that they have first claim on those assets — even over and above the government's debt.

"In a negotiation like this, everything is speculation until there's a deal," said an administration official who did not want to be named because the talks are private. "It should surprise no one that the administration is planning on contingencies, but we remain focused on the goal and engaged with all stakeholders to bring Chrysler and Fiat to a working partnership."

A Treasury spokeswoman declined to comment.

A bankruptcy filing by Chrysler would be the first among Detroit's troubled automakers, who have been mired in a devastating sales slump since last fall. Treasury is also working with General Motors to prepare a possible bankruptcy case, and the terms of a Chrysler filing might offer a glimpse into the shape of G.M.'s own filing.

Some analysts questioned whether the Treasury's steps to prepare a bankruptcy case were an effort to put more pressure on lenders, with which it has exchanged proposals meant to reduce Chrysler's debt. Chrysler faces an April 30 deadline from the Treasury, while G.M. faces a June 1 deadline in its own efforts to draft a new restructuring plan.

Under the most likely assumptions, Treasury will provide the financing that Chrysler needs to operate while under bankruptcy protection. The Canadian government is also expected to participate in backing the company.

The Globe and Mail of Toronto reported the Canadian government's role on Thursday.

Last month, the Obama administration told Chrysler it would provide up to $6 billion in financing if Chrysler and Fiat could complete a deal by the end of this month. Fiat originally agreed to take 35 percent of Chrysler, but the stake was subsequently reduced to 20 percent. The administration said it would provide up to $6 billion in financing if the two companies agreed, on top of $4 billion in federal assistance that Chrysler has already received.

Although the two companies have been holding discussions on an out-of-court agreement, a bankruptcy case would allow Fiat to more easily select the assets of Chrysler that it wants to preserve, such as dealerships, factories and the company's product development operations, these people said. The approach, which relies upon Section 363 of the federal bankruptcy code, is somewhat similar to what the government is planning in the case of G,M..

Then, Chrysler could sell or jettison any assets it does not want to keep, and cancel franchise agreements with superfluous car dealers.

“Chrysler has consistently said that its viability will be enhanced through an alliance with Fiat, as it represents a change in the company’s business model that expands its global competitiveness,” said Lori McTavish, Chrysler’s vice president of communications. “As we move forward in this process, we believe it’s important to keep all options open.”

Ms. McTavish said Chrysler would continue to work through the end of the month, based on direction given by the President’s auto task force, “to secure the support of the necessary stakeholders and reach a successful conclusion that the administration and U.S. Treasury deems appropriate.”

The U.A.W., Chrysler and Treasury have reached agreements in principle that would protect workers’ benefits, people with knowledge of the negotiations said, and a similar agreement is expected to be reached as soon as this weekend with the Canadian Auto Workers union.

Once Chrysler emerges from bankruptcy protection, it would largely be owned by Fiat, the U.A.W., the Treasury and its lenders, these people said. A bankruptcy filing would likely wipe out existing equity stakeholders, notably Cerberus Capital Management, which took over the carmaker from Daimler in 2007.

Ron Gettelfinger, the U.A.W.’s president, issued a statement on Wednesday saying that the union was “continuing to work toward an agreement that will be in the best interest of Chrysler workers, retirees and the communities where the company does business.”

People close to the talks said Wednesday that the U.A.W. had tentatively agreed to accept Chrysler stock to finance half of the company’s $10.6 billion obligation to the health care trust. The balance would be paid in cash over the next decade. That money presumably could come from either the Treasury, or from Chrysler’s profits, once it emerges from bankruptcy protection.

Chrysler has a $9.3 billion pension shortfall, or 34 percent of its total liability, according to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. The agency said earlier this month that it would assume $2 billion of the shortfall in the event Chrysler terminates its pension plans.

If that happened, retirees would receive sharply lower benefits than they normally would expect. But Chrysler is not obligated to terminate its pension plans while in bankruptcy, particularly if it received federal assistance to fund them.

It was not clear Thursday where Chrysler would file its bankruptcy case. On Wednesday, Mike Cox, the attorney general of Michigan, urged General Motors and Chrysler to consider filing in the state, rather than Delaware or New York. He said a locally administered case would be more convenient for creditors in Michigan.
